Intercollegiate Gridiron Squad Prepare for Coming Encounters

Les Blackwell Has Many of Last Year's Mainstays
On Hand

KEITH HEADS LIST

Numerous Newcomers Will Fill Depleted Ranks of Players

By T. A. Fleming

With an exhibition game against Argos on the cards for Saturday and the opening of the Senior Intercollegiate race a week later, the main interest around the campus just now lies in the prospects of the football squad. Les Blackwell, the new pilot this year, is serving his second term as Senior coach. In 1928 Les was hampered by lack of sufficient material and never really had a chance to show his wares. The tall mentor has the reputation among those who know football of being a clever tactician and the coaching assignment is certainly in capable hands this year.

When the first call went out for candidates early last month a small army of recruits turned out. Since then the weeding out process has been in order and when Coach Blackwell last swung the axe he reduced the squad to twenty-three, with probably more to go.

Among the list of players are many of last year's men. Captain Johnny Keith, the best snapback in the union, heads the list. The 1929 rearguard is represented this year by Jack Sinclair, the punting wizard, who is going better than ever and will be one of the mainstays of the team again. Jack takes a back seat to none of them when it comes to booting and it will be a treat when he hooks up on Saturday with Frank Turville, the Argos ace.

Billy Bell, the mighty atom, will again team up with Sinclair on the backfield, and since Don Wood is definitely out, will also call the signals. Johnny Fitzpatrick of track fame, adds the speed factor to the half-line and is expected to be a big ground gainer now that he has learned to break fast. The rotund Jimmy Sinclair climbed into a uniform this week and is out after his old berth at flying wing. He is making his presence felt in practice and when the rounds into condition will be as big a threat as last year. Along the line can be seen some old familiar faces, notably "Long Jaw" Harrison, the bonecracking line plunger, "Skin" Dewar, Bob Galloway, Bill Adams and White. George Gooderman and Elson will be the regular outside wings. Charlie Ruddel is also after a berth.

The newcomers are numerous with a standout in the person of Richardson of last year's Orphans. This boy will be hard to keep out of a backfield job. He is a great broken field runner, a sure catch and in addition can be called upon to handle the kicking assignment. Big things can be expected of Rich this year. Al McCulloch has also graduated from the Orphans and is understudying Keith at snap. Henderson, Bennett, Don Traynor and Scott are also attempting the leap from the second team to the higher company.

With an array of gridiron talent like the above and a capable coach it looks like a big season for the Blues before the moleskins are hung up. Queen's as usual will be the team to watch, with the redoubtable Howard Carter, Gilmore, Davis, Stuart, Hamlin and Co. back on the job. Western are favoured to put up some real opposition and should cause a few upsets as Joe Breen has a well-drilled squad of players ready to step out on the field. Old McGill are the dark horses of the union, but are rumoured to be much improved over last year.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS HAS BEEN POSTPONED

Sir Robert Falconer Will Not Address Student Body
Until Spring

HEALTH MUCH IMPROVED

Owing to a slight indisposition, Sir Robert Falconer was unable to deliver his introductory address as scheduled for yesterday afternoon. The President of the University has unfortunately not enjoyed good health since spring. Although Sir Robert's physician has not ordered him to take a rest, he has advised him to leave the more strenuous work of public speaking until a more convenient date. The President is only attending to the absolutely essential work of his office at present. "A public address is so much more trying," said Lady Falconer, when interviewed by "The Varsity" last evening. "Sir Robert must not do any really intense work. His opening address will be postponed until the beginning of the Easter term in January."

"We went up north the third week in August and returned the end of September," Lady Falconer said, when questioned about the President's summer activities. "He has returned to his office, but the doctor has advised him to leave alone the taxing duties which are not entirely necessary."

Reporters Wanted

All men desirous of joining the news staff of "The Varsity" are requested to meet the News Editor at the News Office, Hart House, on Monday afternoon at five o'clock. First year men are eligible for positions on the staff as well as those of other years.

IMPORTANT CHANGES HAVE TAKEN PLACE IN UNIVERSITY STAFF

Dr. Brebner, for Many Years
Registrar, Has Now Retired

PROF. W. A. IRWIN RESIGNS

Prof. W. J. Loudon Receives Title of Professor Emeritus

Many important changes in the personnel of the Staff of the University have taken place since last term. Chief among these is the retirement of Dr. James Brebner, who was for many years Registrar of the University. Dr. Brebner's post is being filled by A. B. Fennell, formerly Assistant Registrar and for the past year Acting Registrar. At the same time, A. T. Laidlaw has been made Assistant Registrar.

The title of Emeritus Professor has been conferred upon Dr. H. A. Bruce, formerly Professor of Clinical Surgery, Professor J. P. McMurrich of the Department of Anatomy, and Professor W. J. Loudon of the Department of Mechanics. Dr. Loudon has long been well-known to the men of the University through his interest in athletics. He is a member of the Athletic Directorate, Coach of the Rowing Crew which recently won the Eastern Championship, and Commanding Officer of the C.O.T.C.

Another change which will be noted with interest is the resignation of Professor W. A. Irwin of the Department of Oriental Languages. Professor Irwin, upon announcing his resignation last term, was the author of a strong condemnation of certain aspects of the government of the University. Professor Irwin has accepted a position on the staff of the University of Chicago.

Professor H. J. Davis of the Department of English of University College, is at present visiting Europe on leave of absence. He is accompanied by his wife, formerly Miss G. I. Wookey, also of the English Department, who resigned from the Staff last term. Professor R. B. Thompson of the Department of Botany has been granted a year's leave of absence, due to illness.

Dr. J. C. McLennan of the Physics Department, formerly Director of the Physics Laboratory, has been appointed Dean of the School of Graduate Studies. Dr. McLennan is particularly well-known for his work in connection with the liquefaction of air, helium and other gases.

Recently appointed members of the Staff include E. W. Macdonald, Lecturer in Philosophy; J. C. B. Grant, Professor of Anatomy; Lorne Morgan, Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Economy; Bernard Debye, and A. Laflamme, Lecturers in French; Otto Van der Sprekel, Wynne Plumtree and Jacob Finkelstein, Lecturers in Political Economy; F. L. Kay and Miss M. Ferguson, Lecturers in Latin, and J. R. MacGillivray, Lecturer in English.

Numbers of university graduates registered at the Ontario College of Education this year have exceeded by about forty the figures for any year previous. The lists are not yet complete, but over 300 embryo high school teachers are already on the rolls.

HART HOUSE THEATRE REGAINS PROSPERITY UNDER EDGAR STONE

Re-appointment of Director for Three Years is Significant

SIX PRODUCTIONS ON BILL

Several Other Appointments of Theatre Staff Announced

This year promises to mark the renaissance of Hart House Theatre, judging from the announcements issued by Edgar Stone, who has just received the appointment of Director of that Theatre for the next three years. Mr. Stone, who last year became Hart House Theatre's first part-time Director in a determined attempt to place the concern back on a self-supporting basis, has been so successful in his labours that he has been entrusted with the full-time job of guiding Toronto's little theatre back to its once proud position among the little theatres of the world.

Six productions are on the Hart House bills for the coming year—four of which, at least, are of a decidedly experimental nature.

For the entire week beginning October 27, Jules Romains' "Dr. Knock" will grace the boards as the initial offering. The translation used will be that of Harry Granville Barker.

Frederick Coates, who has been engaged as Art Director of the Theatre, will do the sets for "Dr. Knock," as he will for all six productions, but will concentrate the major portion of his efforts in staging a challenging production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," which is slated for the week beginning November 24 and which will mark the hundredth production of Hart House Theatre.

ENROLMENT FIGURES SHOW SOME CHANGES

Limitation of Registration
At Victoria College Has Effect

U.C. FIGURES UP

A man for every woman—fulfillment of the maiden's prayer—is a reality for Victoria College this year. Owing to increasing pressure of applications and last year's 540 women to only 404 men, the number of women entering this year has been limited, resulting in approximately equal male and female quotas. No applicants for honour courses have been refused, but in the pass course preference has been given to the women with highest scholastic qualifications. Victoria has a higher percentage of women in honour courses than any other college, but even so, last year's total of 160 women in first year has been cut to 130.

Men and women have an equal element of entering Trinity's portals, limitation at that college being made according to priority of application. (Continued on Page 2)

All women who wish to join "The Varsity" news staff are invited to report at the women's office, Room 42A, University College, on Thursday or Friday mornings.

UNIVERSITY EMBARKS ON SCHEME OF FAR-REACHING DEVELOPMENT

Present Construction Schedules Combine With Finished Projects To Roll Up Grand Total Far in Excess of Other Years

IMPOSING STRUCTURES WILL GRACE COLLEGE DISTRICT

Residence Construction Will Not Be Neglected, With Other

For Future

By J. C. Bowes

Major building and constructive activities of the University of Toronto, running into the millions of dollars, mark the present as a year of super-activity in expansion and construction. While actual figures are, as yet, mere round estimates, some idea of the enormity of the undertaking which the University has shouldered may be gained from a survey of the more recent accomplishments and the present schedules laid down.

Students' Directory

Every University student is reminded that his correct Toronto address and telephone number should be entered on his registration card either in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

GRADUATE YEAR BOOK WILL APPEAR EARLIER

W. F. Payton Announces Policy
That He Will Follow
This Year

"Torontonensis will be run this year along the same lines as last year's issue," W. F. Payton, editor-in-chief, told "The Varsity" last night. "The general consensus of opinion among the students seemed to be that last year's Torontonensis reached a height never before attained."

"It is the intention to continue the use of the same cover and a special feature section consisting either of etchings or some similar product of the art department."

"The current issue will be produced, it is hoped, at a much earlier date and in order to make that possible we are anxious for the co-operation of all graduating students and executives in the matter of class pictures. It is essential that this should be attended to without delay in order to ensure an early production in the spring."

The University College women's residence (now under construction), will cost at least $500,000 before its completion for occupancy with the opening of the 1931-32 term. The recently opened Banting Institute required $800,000 for its completion, while an addition to the Provincial Museum, extending its boundaries to Queen's Park, begins immediately a $2,000,000 project. Other enterprises such as the new Emmanuel College building, the Mill building extension, the Hart House addition and the acquisition of the McMaster University property on Bloor Street, combine to roll up a grand total, far in excess of the combined development of the past seven years. A year of the most feverish activity in University real estate and construction projects has been experienced.

In this respect, the University of Toronto is pursuing the same policy that governments, public utility corporations and private companies are following, that of pushing ahead schedules of construction to relieve unemployment and lend assistance in a period of economic depression. In the case of the University of Toronto, however, officials point out that present construction has been anticipated for some time and due also to the ever increasing demands of a growing university.

FUTURE OF LIT. ASSURED

Blue ruin talk of pessimists regarding the future of the society, and continued belief in the ultimate success of the University College Literary and Athletic Society was expressed by speakers at the opening meeting held last evening in the U.C. Common Room.

With D. B. Murray in the chair, the inaugural meeting got off to a good start, for its sixty-second year. J. McCulley and Professor H. G. Jackson were the principal speakers. "You young fellows sitting here will some day be the leaders of our country," said Professor Jackson. "Prominent men in Ontario's politics once sat in your places and you have the same opportunities." Continuing, the speaker said the University College Literary Society had achieved some notable work and refuted the statement made some time ago that the Society needed a regeneration. He stressed the point that the present organization was "very much alive." He (Continued on Page 3)

GAUNTLET

Divided allegiance is the problem that confronts the new "Varsity" staff at the opening of a new scholastic year.

With the increasing importance of undergraduate dailies on this side the Atlantic during the past decade, the position of the editors of these dailies has become more and more difficult. Many of those who enter the field of college journalism during their student days do so with an eye to the wider field of journalism as the scene of their life's activities. The journalistic code becomes to them a thing of paramount importance. An honest desire to get as close to the truth as circumstances permit must be the centre of a newspaper man's creed. Independence becomes to him the very raison d'être. It is the one thing he holds more precious than life itself. If it is threatened, he will turn and do battle more fiercely than a she-wolf at bay.

But—as the editors of "The Varsity" have had brought home forcibly enough during the past two years—an undergraduate journalist must never forget that there are times when his allegiance to his code conflicts with his duty to the community which he serves.

Two years ago the story of an embattled "Varsity" staff blazed from the columns of the daily press from coast to coast. What was gained by that battle cannot be underestimated. Those who guided "The Varsity" last year showed by the united front which they presented to the forces threatening the paper's independence that they were not willing to surrender any ground.

The time has come when the difficulties which have provided the points of contention must be solved once and for all. The prestige which "The Varsity" has gained by the courage of its former editors will only be sacrificed if the present staff does not show its willingness to meet the authorities half way in the solution of the problem.

To outside censorship no self-respecting paper can ever submit. Least of all should a muzzle be placed upon the spokesman of university students. Historically the university has always been the seat of free speech, the source of new ideas. After the press, the chief concern of the muzzling reactionaries of the last century was the university. It would be a sorry twist to see the leading undergraduate publication of the largest university in Canada reduced from the position of having the right to express free opinions and publish facts as they exist to a lifeless rag useful only as a bulletin board for campus clubs.

But the present "Varsity" staff realizes that it sacrifices nothing of its independence when it agrees to eliminate from its columns such items as would seem to reveal internal sores for the delectation of thrill-seekers outside the University without at the same time serving any useful purpose.

We feel that all that is to be gained by fighting has been gained and that now is the time to test the authorities' avowed desire to solve the difficulties which beset the undergraduate newspaper by making our own gesture in the direction of compromise. Having said which, we can say little more in the face of those little green beads which bespeak the first faint encroachment of the mildew of discretion.

ENROLMENT FIGURES SHOW SOME CHANGE

Large numbers are turned away. Some of course, must undoubtedly turn to University College as second choice.

At University College the proportion of women to men has never risen as it has at the denominational colleges. This is perhaps due less to women having more religious tendencies than men, than to the fact that in its early days University College gave a cold reception to co-eds.

At St. Michael's undue pressure of applications is not being felt, and the numbers of men and women continue to be fairly evenly balanced. Here, as at Victoria, there is an influx of students into the second year of Pass Arts, probably indicating that the new General Course which will affect third year students next year is only a response to public demand. University College's higher 1930 registration, which is not likely to go beyond 500, against 472 in 1929, may also be due to the new honour matriculation requirements for the General Course, as more students may now be taking upper school subjects at high school. A peculiar situation may arise next year, for unless provision is made before then for "repeaters", those who fail may be obliged to return to High School to obtain their subjects.

The effect of economic pressure on university registration is dubious. It has been rumoured that college education for women is a luxury which is curtailed in hard times; but there is also the fact that men often enter college when they fail to get jobs. None of the colleges at the University of Toronto report any apparent effects of the present economic depression.

CHAMPUS CAT

The cat—like the poor, and professors who continue to gloat over last spring's term marks—we have with us always.

C—C

A feeling of feline embarrassment appears to overcome the cat as she makes her first bow of the season. Three days of emmeshment in the red tape of wry-mouthed registrars and that first awful shock one gets on returning to residence meals have conspired to reduce her to little more than a fur-piece and a meow.

C—C

The Tely assures us that there are more cars on the campus this year and that the only living male clothes model in Canada has returned to Wycliffe to study theology.

C—C

The sun also rises.

C—C

"The Varsity" is assured that there is no truth in the rumour that Wycliffe will send W. A. ("Hap") Gilbert as missionary to Hollywood.

C—C

"What the modern student needs," asserted the only male clothes horse in captivity, "is a philosophy of life and somewhere to go after dark."

C—C

The annual crop of starry-eyed freshmen who have suddenly blossomed forth in our midst reminds us that, after all, the university is a great cultural force and that something must be done about the pretty freshette before the W.C.T.U. and the Purity League get in their initial meetings up at Victoria.

C—C

I think that I shall never see
A fair freshette beneath a tree
But I shall murmur: "You for me!"

A freshette looks at profs all day
And wonders how they got that way;

She wears a beret on her hair
And makes the tree seem dull and bare.

Freshettes are made by saps like me—
But only God can make a tree!
—André.

Iowa Football Players Attain High Standards

Summarizing statistically, the squad with which the University of Iowa enters its forty-second season of football contains nine major letter men, all seniors but one; 16 winners of the minor letter; 43 numeral men from the 1929 freshman squad, and about a dozen miscellaneous players.

But there is little significance in the fact that nine major letter men are returning, for only three were strictly regulars on the powerful team of last fall. The others, with the exception of one junior, are grounded in valuable knowledge of Ingwersen's football system because of their two seasons of in-and-out service.

HART HOUSE THEATRE REGAINS PROSPERITY

23 respectively, a play of George Bernard Shaw and one of A. A. Milne will be offered. Due to delays in securing production rights, the announcement of the names of these plays has been withheld for the time being.

The final regular offering will open on March 30, and will be Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors". Due to the difficulties of producing two sets of twins on the stage at the same time, this comedy is rarely offered, but Mr. Stone has announced that this problem has been solved by Hart House in an interesting manner and should form the basis for an interstige production.

The Canadian Bill will be presented some time in the spring and will be an invitation performance.

The Subscription List of Hart House Theatre—in the heyday of the Theatre, one of the leading features of the institution and its real mainstay financially—has this year been resumed. Details regarding it may be secured at the Box Office, where the familiar figure of Mr. O. A. Mitchell will be found to be in charge again this year.

H. E. Hitchman, long prominent in Hart House Theatre and other little theatre groups throughout the city, has been re-appointed as Business Manager. Miss Eleanor Barton, two years ago a leading figure in the University College Players' Guild, is the new Secretary of the Theatre, while J. R. Barber returns as Stage Manager.

During the summer, extensive construction changes have been taking place in the interior of the Theatre. In addition to numerous alterations in the office quarters and the Costume Department, the entire fore-stage has been remodelled so as to conform more nearly to the original plan as used by Roy Mitchell and Bertram Forsythe.

ORPHANS MEET CAMP BORDEN IN O.R.F.U. OPENER SATURDAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

(By A. C. C.)

"Men may come and men may go . . . et cetera may be equally as true of a daily newspaper as it is true of a brook. And so writers, new to this column, will be responsible for its contents throughout the forthcoming academic year. It is our desire to maintain the standard of sports writing that was set last year under the direction of Larry Dawson and, if possible, to make improvements which to us seem fitting. It is our purpose to give to our readers, the undergraduates of the University, unbiased accounts of sporting events and to allot to the various sports the space which their news value demands and not what the representatives of any particular sport feel they deserve.

Football is in the air! For many weeks now the Varsity grid-ders have been pounding themselves into mid-season condition and Coach "Les" Blackwell and his side-kick Duncan have been drilling the intercollegiate to their plays from the start. Last Saturday's game with Balmy Beach revealed the first fruits of their labours when the encouraging feature of the game was the machine-like execution of their plays and the faultless catching of the Blue and White backfield. Jack Sinclair again demonstrated his ability to lift the pig-skin high and far and his kicking accounted for four singles against the Beaches. Together with a safety touch they were sufficient to give the U. of T. squad a 6 to 5 win.

Sinclair and Billie Bell composed the regular backfield in Saturday's fixture while Bernie Hodgetts and Richardson did the relief work. These latter two are going to be hard to keep off the line-up. Both kick well and Richardson's open field running caught the fancy of the spectators. Last year Hodgetts broke into prominence with the juniors by his kicking and running.

Frank Turville, former Western U. star and considered one of the outstanding performers in Canadian football, was elected captain of the Argonauts last Tuesday evening. He will lead his team-mates into battle with the Blue and White intercollegiate on Saturday at the U. of T. stadium for their annual pre-season clash. Last year the Argos managed to down the Varsity hopefuls, but it is hoped that the Rowers will catch a crab Saturday. The Argos stack up like a stronger team than the Balmy Beach crew and should provide Les Blackwell's men a real test of their ability on the gridiron. Undoubtedly one of the high-lights of the game will be the punting duel between Sinclair and Turville.

Three years ago "Les" Blackwell was assistant coach to Ronnie McPherson. Two years ago he was the head coach, and though the team lost the trophy to McGill, they performed to the credit of the coach. It was thought that Blackwell deserved a second year with the intercollegiate under his wing. But last year McPherson again received the appointment. Now we find Les at the helm with another opportunity to bring the honours to the U. of T. Here's hoping that he can turn the trick with the material with which he has to work.

The "Orphans" play the opening game of their schedule at Camp Borden Saturday. Dave Harding, the mainstay of the aviators in the past, is no longer with the team, having joined the Ottawa Senators. At this early date Camp Borden doesn't seem to measure up to the Beaches. Taking into account the Orphans' efforts against the intercollegiate and last Saturday's game with Balmy Beach, the Varsity seconds should dispose of Camp Borden in the opening fixture. The Orphans have had a dire need of a strong kicking half and it was definitely learned last night that "Bernie" Hodgetts, who has been turning out with the seniors will do the booting for them. Hodgetts will get more work to do with the Orphans than he would with the first squad and a year with them will do him no harm.

George Morgan, captain of last year's intercollegiate team, is now coaching the University of Alberta outfit. Wallie Sterling, '27 Vic., handled the U. of A. squad for the last two years and is now in charge of the Calgary Tigers. The Collegians and the Tigers are billed to play a game shortly, the outcome of which should be of more than passing interest to local followers of the fall pastime in view of the fact that two former Varsity players will be on the sidelines directing the play.

The Lachine canal on Saturday will be the scene of the mighty struggle between the Varsity and McGill rowing eights for the annual intercollegiate honours. Many Toronto sculling enthusiasts are expected to make the trip to Montreal to see the race which will be rowed over a two-mile course. A Blue and White victory would bring honour to the University in a sport which, though deserving of much, receives little support, due chiefly to the fact that it takes place during the vacation period. Saturday's event will bring to a close the rowing season.

(By W. A. L.)

Co-ed tennis enthusiasts have little time to lose in preparation for college tournaments. With six girls only entered in the inter-faculty play-offs competition in each college promises to be very keen. No exact dates have been set for the interfaculty tournament, but these will be announced very shortly.

Bea Symons, III St. Hilda's, last year's University champion, has been playing hard all summer and has been extremely successful in Ontario and Dominion matches. She won the Central Ontario singles championship and was runner-up to the Canadian champion in the club tournament. In the doubles, paired with Mrs. Bickell, she won the Central Ontario, Ontario, and Eastern Canada titles, and was runner-up in the Canadian finals. This is certainly an impressive record, and she will be hard to beat for the interfaculty title this fall.

Varsity's Orphans Open Their Season

Snyder to Probably Play Quarter, with Hodgetts Backfield

FRESHMAN RULING ASSISTS

The Varsity Orphans open their schedule Saturday with a game with Camp Borden. This year the Eastern group of the senior O.R.F.U. is comprised of Varsity, Balmy Beach and Camp Borden. The last named team does not appear to have the class of the first two teams, but they can always be counted on to make a gallant bid for victory. Camp Borden will miss the services of Dave Harding, who this year will be seen in an Ottawa uniform.

Last Saturday the Orphans took an 8 to 3 beating at the hands of the St. Thomas grid-ders, last year's Canadian junior champions. Lou Carroll trotted out two complete teams which, had they been molded into one might have made a different story. He has plenty of excellent material to work with. Hodgetts, Copp and McLeod will likely look after the backfield duties. Art Snyder, whose plucky playing with the Orphans two years ago made him famous is in line for quarter, although nothing at present is definite. Several players have stepped up from junior ranks. The Orphans stand to gain

RED AND WHITE BERETS DISTINGUISH FRESHIES

Gaudy Decorations of Days of Old Replaced by Caps

The University College initiations for women have taken on a subdued and ladylike tone. These fair young recruits about to enter upon their various college careers are conspicuous around the campus only by their partially becoming red and white berets.

Gone are the Japanese umbrellas of yesteryear, gone are the wild Indian feathers, gone are the red and white stockings. In this new era, freshies are fragile little curiosities. Braid their hair and tie it up with ribbons? How could you, Sophomores?

In Victoria College, conditions are not quite so favourable for newcomers. That insignificant insect, freshie, must wear chic green neck ribbons and every time she meets a superior sophomore, she must retreat three steps. What a time she has getting to lectures!

All is quietness in the other faculties. They are no doubt meditating some drastic measures for the humiliation of the first year.

when the intercollegiate squad is cut down.

In scrimmages with the seniors the Orphans have shown to a good light recently. The freshmen ruling which forbids a footballer from playing with the intercollegiate in his first year is calculated to strengthen the Orphans.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SQUAD PREPARE FOR ENCOUNTERS

The Argo-U. of T. game on Saturday should be much more than the usual exhibition as there is keen rivalry between these two teams and a real struggle should result.

The opening tea of the Students' Christian Movement will be held in the Women's Union from 4-6 to-day. Plans for study groups, supper parties and autumn camps will be discussed. All University College women will be heartily welcome.

denounced the blue ruin talk of certain pessimists regarding the future of the society. Replete with witticisms, Professor Jackson's speech was very much enjoyed by the members.

Songs and yells aroused enthusiasm in the earlier part of the evening. A particularly facetious song by Bill Jacobi and "pal" delighted the members. Refreshments brought the evening to a close.

Quality creates goodwill

Notwithstanding the constant growth of our business, we have preserved that quality, service and standard of ideals on which this business was founded over 100 years ago.

The ever-increasing sales of Dack's Shoes justify our policy that the excellence of to-day's product makes to-morrow's goodwill.

QUEEN'S PRINCIPAL TAKES UP NEW DUTIES

Dr. W. Fyfe, of Oxford, Will Not Instal English System There

The new principal of Queen's University, Dr. William Hamilton Fyfe, took over his duties as head of the Kingston University yesterday. Dr. Fyfe received the appointment as Principal following his visit to Canada with a party of Headmasters of British schools a year ago, and succeeds Dr. R. Bruce Taylor, who has retired.

Dr. Fyfe, while an Oxford man, has no intention of trying to force Oxford systems on Queen's, but intends rather to make the best of the more general system now in vogue there.

HARRIER COMPETITION WILL BE STRENUOUS

Course Will Be Run For Brotherton Cup in Four Weeks

The best competition for a long time is foreseen in Brotherton Cup Harrier Races this fall. With eight former Harrier "Colours" in hard training, the five men who will represent the university this year at Kingstons must show remarkable form. This old guard of Wally Graham, Hap Gilbert, Don Smith, Al Walters, Fred Lee, Howey McLennan and Seaborn are all showing improved form. When some promising newcomers are added to this list, it will be seen that the race will be a hot one.

All Harrier men at the university are reminded that they have less than four weeks to get in shape before the gun sends them on their way in the best Brotherton Cup Race in years.

A practice run over the course is being planned for a Saturday morning in the near future. Watch "The Varsity" and the Bulletin Boards for further notices.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD FOR PRESENT SQUAD OF INTERMEDIATES

JUNIORS FIXING SERIES

Many Freshmen Seek Positions
As Squad Prepared To Go Into Action

The Intermediates turned in a stiff practice yesterday under the direction of Coach Doug. McFadden. For over two weeks the crew has been working every afternoon. With a profusion of material in every department, prospects for a good Intermediate team are the best in years. Many hyre men turn out than will be required. Only half the present squad will remain for the first game the Intermediates play. "Doug." is whipping the boys into shape for their tussle with R.M.C. on Oct. 11. The Central group also includes Queen's. The crew is mostly comprised of new men and the difficulty is to pick the best of a large group of men who take the game seriously.

The Junior outfit has been working out under Coach Harry Bales. Over forty freshmen are looking for positions. The culling process will produce a team within two weeks. The Coach has been drilling the boys into form for the double schedule they will play with St. Mike's, who have been out of Junior rugby for two years. No definite dates have been set for the Juniors, but it is expected that the series will be arranged to-night.

VARSITY AND M'GILL EIGHTS WILL BATTLE

Varsity Crew Already Holds the Eastern Canadian Championship

WILLINGDON TO ATTEND

Two-mile Course Is Longest Ever to Be Run in Canada

The great annual battle for the intercollegiate rowing honours takes place Saturday on the Lachine canal, Montreal, when the Varsity and McGill eights race over a two-mile course. National interest is shown in the race, which will be attended by His Excellency Lord Willingdon and is sponsored by E. W. Beatty, president of the C.P.R. Cars will follow the progress of the race along the picturesque course. Already 24 buses have been engaged to accommodate the crowd which promises to be on hand to witness the two college crews cover the gruelling two-mile course, the longest ever to be run in Canada.

The Varsity crew has been whipped into excellent condition by Coach "Tommy" Loudon, and have enjoyed a most successful summer with the blades. On July 19th the U. of T. senior eight captured the Eastern Canadian championship at Ottawa, defeating the Leanders of Hamilton. At the Canadian Henley at St. Catharines the Blue and White team eliminated the Wyandottes of Michigan, but the Leanders turned the tables on their rivals and scored a decisive victory. The Hamilton squad will represent Canada at the next Olympic games.

McGill is reported to have a light, fast eight with plenty of experience behind them. Four of their men took part in the British Empire games at Hamilton and took second place in their event. The Varsity team is heavier and lacks the experience that the Red and White possess, but is counting on their stamina and superb condition to head their rivals off at the finish of the long course. The locals commenced training again the first of September and have been hard at it every evening down at the waterfront.

Many Track Men Graduated
But Newcomers Will Replace Them

SPRINT TEAM WEAK

Dennis and Hymmen Varsity Hopes for Pole Vault and Broad Jump

With the Interfaculty Track Meet taking place on Oct. 15 and the Inter-collegiate on Oct. 24, at Queen's, a number of aspiring candidates for the team are turning out daily on the Stadium track. From present indications Varsity's chances look bright and the Blue and White ought to retain their championship won last year.

Graduation has, as usual, removed a number of the Blue's prominent track men, but there is a strong nucleus this year from which to build upon. Bill Finlayson, last year's track captain, has graduated and so has Gord Jernyn, stellar middle distance runner. Don Smith, fleet Blue miler, is ineligible this year, having failed to get his year. But Jack MacLennan, a good distance man, who was ineligible last season, is out again. "Hap" Gilbert has forsaken the stage again and returned to Varsity and once more is pounding the cinders. Jack Vila is out again for the mile and Wally Graham, this year's track captain, and Walters, Intercollegiate 3-mile champion, round out a very strong distance contingent.

Coach Halbus will have a little more trouble completing a good sprint team but if Fitzpatrick and Adams can be lured away from football there will be no need to worry in this department.

In the field events a number of performers have turned out and Bob Dennis has been rounding into form in the pole vault, while Eddie Hymmen is showing to advantage in the broad jump. Although Coach Martin has lost a number of good men he ought to be able to round out a strong squad.

With the Interfaculty and Inter-collegiate meets so close at hand all aspirants for places on the Blue track teams should report at the Stadium as soon as possible to the track manager, Brock McMurray.

EXECUTIVE HAVE TROUBLE

The largest first year in the history of Victoria College attended en masse yesterday afternoon for the purpose of organization. The largeness of the meeting necessitated the holding of the gathering in the College Chapel. Due to continued interruptions on the part of the Sophomores, who were on hand in a fighting mood, the Executive of the Victoria College Union had difficulty in handling the excited meeting.

The "Frosh" were the butt of many practical jokes. Some of their numbers are expected to carry the traces

The most humorous note sounded at the event was when H. Dighton, in nominating a fair Freshette, said: "This has no sentimental attachment whatsoever."

"The Varsity", on interviewing the President-elect, was greeted with the remark: "I have nothing to say."

At the close of the gathering a spirited scrap ensued which necessitated the intervention of several Seniors before a truce was declared.

PERFECT FRESHMAN AT KANSAS STATE

Seventeen Year Old Specimen Displays Abnormal Dimensions

Harley Volkman, 17, of Lyons, has been selected by Dr. James Naismith as the most perfect physical specimen among the men of the freshman class of the University of Kansas.

Volkman is six feet tall, weighs 200 pounds, measures 43.6 inches around the chest, has a chest expansion of 5.4 inches, and registered 425 on the lung capacity machine for a new school record.

He played four years of high school football at tackle position and is out for freshman football there.

The remainder of his measurements are: Neck, 16 inches; waist, 35.2 inches; right bicep, 14 inches; right forearm, 12.2 inches; left bicep, 14 inches; left forearm, 11.6 inches; right thigh, 25.4 inches; left thigh, 24.9 inches; right calf, 15.2 inches; left calf, 15.2 inches.

WOMEN PRACTISING FOR EARLY GAMES

Basketball and Baseball Practices Beginning Immediately

MANY COMPETITORS

Practices for girls' interfaculty basketball and baseball teams will begin almost immediately. No schedules have been drawn up yet, but it is likely that the league games will commence around the first of November in order to have the interfaculty championships decided before Christmas.

There are ten teams entered in the basketball tournament, and this year there are no outstanding teams. St. Hilda's, last year's champions, will be as strong as ever. The U.C. teams are an unknown quantity so far since last year's junior U.C. team, runners-up to St. Hilda's, is broken up. Victoria always have two strong teams and can be relied upon for a real battle. St. Michael's also, lose no one through graduation, and should be much better this year.

Practices for intercollegiate basketball do not begin till after Christmas. This year there is a real opening for defence players, since all the regular guards on last year's team graduated. The forward line—Wilma Hazlett, Louise Crouch, and Eleanor Sedgewick is intact, while Sally Ballard, who was sub forward and Jean Allen, sub defence, are also eligible again. This year the intercollegiate tourney will be held at Queen's around the first of March.

There are only three teams, University College, Victoria and St. Michael's entered in the baseball league. Last year, U.C. won the cup, after some closely contested games with Vic. It is to be hoped that this year St. Michael's will provide some real competition, and make U.C. and Vic. extend themselves.

Interfaculty and intercollegiate hockey does not get under way until after Christmas. The intercollegiate hockey team loses only two players, Joyce Muirhead and Helen Hillard, so should have a good chance to repeat last year's successes over Queen's and make a better showing in the city league.

Death of Miss R. M. Treacey Casts Gloom Over Loretto

The sudden death on July 17, of Miss Ruth Mary Treacey, 32 Loretto, after a few months illness, came as a tragic surprise to her many friends and acquaintances. Besides covering her academic work, Miss Treacey was made president of her year, and in spite of constant ill-health was prominent in literary and debating activities. Her passing is sincerely regretted by her friends and those with whom she worked.

Changes Sadden Returning Undergrad Whom Dons Bore and Sophs Annoy

Well, here we are! Seems funny to be back. See everybody. Crossing the old campus, and you see everybody you are supposed to know, and lots that you don't. And people are so changed after four months. Women with their lengthened tresses, and gents with a shadowed lip. You can hardly recognize anyone.

First lectures! They are even more boring than second or third ones—or last ones. Wonder if the prof is really glad that he is back? Maybe he is bored too. And how dreadfully sarcastic the faculty is when you have to go through the enrolling business. After the pains one takes to get through a subject they calmly tell you that you didn't deserve it. Registering and enrolling are a nuisance anyway.

Wonder what the poor frosh think of it? They'll be imagining that is all a university is for. Poor things, they look so wretched in their straggling ties and petit berets. But what is a little thing like that? They even seem to have a little spunk. At least a soph lost his collar in one event. Of course, perhaps it was only an accident. The old sophs think they are pretty good, selling "Varsities", but then what can you expect?

Wonder what . . . I say, listen to the lecturer, he might be saying something. Anyway it seems queer to be back. And next year it will be queer to be back, and next year . . . Well, what's the use? Better eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow . . . Well, anyway, here we are!

RECORD YEAR BEGINS FOR BOOK EXCHANGE

Volume of Business Shows Definite Increase
This Year

BOOK TURNOVER HEAVY

The volume of business done at the S.C.A. Book Exchange this year should show a definite increase over last year's business, according to C. W. Leslie, who is in charge of the Exchange this year. When questioned by "The Varsity" yesterday he pulled a large roll of bills from his pocket and after some mental calculations announced that about $750 had been taken in already; the Exchange will remain open for business till Oct. 11.

Last year the Exchange totalled about $2,000 worth of books sold, on which the Student Christian Association collected a ten per cent. commission. Leslie explained, however, that the Association cleared a very small profit after paying all the expenses incurred.

So far this year the Exchange has been very busy. Yesterday the line-up of students waiting to deposit books to be sold was practically continuous from 9.00 till 5.30, and for the greater part of the time the services of two men were necessary to keep track of books bought and sold. About 200 students have placed books with the Exchange already, averaging about six books per student.

ADDITIONS TO GREAT HALL

Hart House has experienced an interesting, if not a busy summer season during the recent vacation. Owing to the addition to the east side of the House being in course of construction, activities were necessarily somewhat limited. This applied particularly to the Great Hall and the Servery, where extensive additions and extensions of service are under way. Nevertheless, a great many unusual functions took place in the House.

On May 27, the House was host to the convention of the Canadian University Association. The annual graduation dance of June 5 was followed by an alumnae dinner and gathering on June 6th.

The team representing Australia at the British Empire games, held in Hamilton, marked the occasion of their visit to Toronto by visiting Hart House. This was on July 23rd. Late in August, three hundred members of the British Medical Association were entertained in Hart House. Coincided with the opening of the Banting Institute a dinner was held in Hart House on September 22nd.

In addition to these functions mentioned, many others were held of a more routine nature.

STUDENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETS

Vital Problems Discussed At Annual Elgin House Conference

TORONTO GROUP LARGEST

"The Christian Purpose and the Modern World" was the theme of the 9th annual Student Christian Association conference held at Elgin House on Lake Joseph, Muskoka, from September 15 to 24.

Under exceptionally fine leadership about 125 students from all over Canada studied through addresses and informal group discussions, the vital problems of religion and life, and discussed and compared the problems of S.C.A. on the campus.

Dr. Bruce Curry of New York gave a series of addresses on the theme subject. Discussion groups on "What a Modern Christian Can Believe" were led by C. F. Angus of Cambridge, England, and F. J. Moore, head of the S.C.A. at Toronto. Other leaders were Dr. Henry Hodgkin, recently of China, Mrs. Induk Kim, of Korea; Professor N. Mieklem of Queen's; Professor E. A. Havelock of Victoria College, Toronto; Dr. E. Thomas, of Toronto; and Dr. H. M. Cassidy of the Social Service Department, Toronto.

Earl Davison, of Victoria College, was elected chairman of the conference, and Miss Marjorie Beer, also of Victoria was appointed director of music for all programs.

Golf, tennis, swimming, paddling, baseball, were enjoyed by everyone, with the fine and inimitable Muskoka atmosphere of September forming a splendid background. There was plenty of fun, and no complaint of any over-balance of work.

University of Toronto had about 35 representatives, by far the greatest delegation, with Victoria College well in the majority. As well as delegates from Queen's, McGill, Western, Ontario Agricultural College, Universities of British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, McMaster and Western Hospital, there were student representatives from India, China, Japan, and the negro population of the Southern States.

WEEK END PARTIES ENGAGE THE FRESHIES

University College Entertains the Newcomers to Their Ranks

COLLEGE RECEPTION HELD

University College women brought to a close on Tuesday night a most successful house-party for the freshmen. "The house-party was an innovation at University College," said Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick, Dean of women, "and the results were gratifying." Miss Kilpatrick introduced the idea last spring and with the help of the Women's Undergraduate Association and the seniors of the college the plans were carried through.

The out-of-town freshmen were welcomed to the residences by the seniors on Friday and entertained at informal parties. Professor Hutton spoke to them Friday evening. Miss Kilpatrick and Jean Robertson, president of the Women's Undergraduate Association received and on Saturday afternoon the seniors gave a tea, in the Junior Common Room, in place of the Garden Party that had been planned and the in-town freshmen joined their out-of-town sisters.

The Players' Guild presented a play "Our Kind", at the Women's Union Saturday night, and after the play the freshmen were introduced to the executives of the various college societies. On Sunday evening there was a tea and vesper service at the Union and Dr. Wallace said a few words to the new members of the college.

Miss Isabel McKinnon, a freshette, thanked the seniors for the house-party on behalf of the women of her year and said that they had had "a wonderful time".

Tuesday night's yearly reception of the freshmen by the University College Faculty brought the house-party to a close.

Principal Wallace in his address gave the new students an interesting outlook on university life. "The essential purpose in university education," said Dr. Wallace, "is the organizing of ideas. The collecting of information belongs to the first stage, but to acquire power of generalizing and using ideas, is the most important purpose of the university. By no means," continued Dr. Wallace, "abandon the childish idea that study is a delightful, romantic adventure. If you lose that old delight in knights and dragons, that pleasure in the imagination, your learning cannot take you far."

Another student was offered a position in a highway barbecue. After her interview with the proprietor, she calmly told him that she did not think she was the type he wanted. There are just variations of the usual waitress work at Bigwin Inn and other summer resorts.

One co-ed started on her journalistic career by working on "The Hamilton Spectator", and managed to be in on all the excitement of the Rocco Perri case. Another edited her sorority convention paper so successfully that it paid all its own expenses and those of the editorial staff besides.

One well-dressed young woman who is a wonder with the needle is paying her expenses by clothing Toronto, and increasing the number of dressmakers.

Yet another took lessons in voice culture and has taken part in some plays over the radio.

There were not so many office clerks as in former years, according to the Alumnae Bureau of Appointments, but there were just as many camp counsellors and dramatic and swimming instructors, mothers' helps and ladies' companions and playground workers. One classmate student very ambitiously took charge of the "Ambitious City's" playgrounds and her only complaint seems to be that she was at the telephone too early in the morning and too late at night.

Men's Council Find Rooms For Three Hundred Students

Rooms for over a thousand men students have been registered by the landladies of the district with the bureau of the men's council under the management of T. M. Marsh of 4th year Dents. "The supply exceeds the demand this year," Mr. Marsh said when interviewed by "The Varsity," "for less than three hundred men have been directed to rooms by the bureau."

CO-EDS FIND JOBS IN SUMMER VACATION

Many Pursuits Followed in Lure of Cash or Thrills

"Does advertising pay? Well, for some people," a co-ed confessed while bemoaning the subject of "Summer Jobs". "I answered an ad. in a Toronto paper and was engaged to go up north to a little hick town as waitress in a commercial hotel. The morning after I arrived the rest of the dining room staff quit and I remained as waitress, assistant and dish-washer. I quit, too, when it was hinted that I was to be chief floor-scrubber as well."

Another student was offered a position in a highway barbecue. After her interview with the proprietor, she calmly told him that she did not think she was the type he wanted. There are just variations of the usual waitress work at Bigwin Inn and other summer resorts.

One co-ed started on her journalistic career by working on "The Hamilton Spectator", and managed to be in on all the excitement of the Rocco Perri case. Another edited her sorority convention paper so successfully that it paid all its own expenses and those of the editorial staff besides.

EXCHANGE STUDENT HERE FROM GERMANY

Victor Lange First Student Under Davis Plan of Exchange

INTERESTED IN POLITICS

The youthfulness of the average undergraduate and the rigidity of university courses on this side of the Atlantic are the points that have impressed Victor Lange, the first German exchange student to a Canadian university since the war, during the first few days of his year on the local campus.

Mr. Lange is the first student to come out from Germany under the new Davis Exchange Scholarship, instituted by Professor H. J. Davis of University College, Toronto. He has studied at the Universities of Munich and Leipzig, has resided for a considerable period in London and Paris, and is now enrolled here in fourth year English and History. He is an accomplished musician with a passion for the classical masters and has brought two fine violins with him.

Mr. Lange, on being interviewed by "The Varsity," was not impressed with the Canadian newspapers, particularly in their handling of European politics. Keenly interested in politics himself, he expressed regret that the press of this country made little or no attempt to present full accounts of political conditions on the continent of Europe, and particularly those of his own country, Germany.

The fact that national politics did not seem to appeal to the Canadian university student, Mr. Lange laid partly to the youth of the undergraduate and partly to his pre-occupation with sport. Politics dominated the university scene in Germany to an almost "ridiculous" extent, he said, the students taking a very real and active part in the political manoeuvring of the various parties. Leipzig, for example, he pointed out, was strongly socialistic, while Munich was Fascist to an extreme.

A few months spent in New York City before coming here had impressed Mr. Lange with speed-mania which dominated the scene in that New World Metropolis. Canadians, he felt, knew better how to enjoy life and to take their ease; but, while they were essentially pioneers in spirit, they preferred to progress along "slow but sure" lines rather than to rush headlong into radical changes.

ARGYLL HOUSE HISTORY TOLD BY MRS. WALLACE

Historic Property Was Formerly Private Grounds

"In reference to the confiscation of Argyll House by the museum," stated Mrs. Malcolm Wallace yesterday, "all the houses on that side of the park are university property in accordance with the royal charter granted in 1877. The land was leased for building purposes, but will eventually revert to the university. Even before the War it was recognized that there was a crying need for a women's residence other than Queen's Hall. During the war years Miss Wrong, head of the University College Women's Union, was trying to secure a suitable place for a new women's residence. Argyll House was then the Campbell residence, and Mr. Campbell offered it to the committee in charge for use as a residence, with the stipulation that women medical students compose half the personnel of the new residence. In 1917 the new residence, under the name of Argyll House (in honour of the Campbell family), was opened, with the committee under Miss Wrong furnishing the house and supervising the finances."

Members of the board of regents of the University of Michigan and a group of faculty members will give the new University golf course its first baptism of fire Friday. It is unlikely that the course will be opened for general use before next spring.

Free Lancers Organize To Assist in Employment

The Free Lancers are a group of co-eds who seek to assist in financing themselves at college. Miss Margaret Lee, 313 Trinity College, is the president this year. The members co-operate in the matter of locating employment and although this club does not guarantee positions it puts the members in touch with possibilities. The girls meet in the autumn to discuss their varied experiences and decide which type of jobs prove most profitable. During the winter some girls do part time work, such as coaching and work in stores during the holidays.

Definite notice of the Free Lancers' first meeting will be given within a few days.

FRESHETTE SEASON BEGINS AT VICTORIA

Senior Girls Entertain the Freshies and Break Them In

SCHEDULE IS INTERESTING

Annesley residences were again the scene of the annual Victoria freshmen house-party, staged successfully last week-end when the senior girls entertained their freshmen, with the aid of executives of all the years, on hikes, cocoa parties and all manner of interesting diversions.

Afternoon teas and the discussion of year plans by the senior year took place Friday, the opening day of the house-party, while the executives of the second and third years became acquainted with the incoming year. On Saturday the schedule was complete with a well-organized hike for the afternoon, and cocoa parties at night. A welcoming chapel service was held for the freshmen Saturday morning in Victoria chapel, when Chancellor Wallace gave a brief address. Sunday morning all the guests of the party assembled in a body at Eaton Memorial Church, Dr. Trevor Davies giving an appropriate sermon, much appreciated by the university students. Sunday evening a vesper service was held in Wymilwood, with the singing of negro spirituals.

The party was well organized and carried through without a mishap, and freshettes began to feel as if they belonged to their college. Olive Ives, head of Victoria W.U.A., Marjorie Dicht, president of S.C.M., and Marion Haugh, were some of the leaders under whom the party was so efficiently run.

sidences now in process of construction, will be ready for occupancy by the opening of the 1931-32 term. Work on the corner of St. George Street and Hoskin Avenue has been going forward for some time, and the three units of the residence will be in Georgian style. The cost, it is estimated, will be about $500,000.

In the same style of architecture the recently opened Banting Institute on College Street, opposite the General Hospital was an $800,000 contribution for the advancement of medical sciences.

An addition to the Mill building is going forward immediately, according to officials. This includes a general rehabilitation and expansion of all the services and facilities offered by the older building. In tune with the spirit of the year a large addition to the servery and accompanying facilities of Hart House is being completed. This is designed to improve the service in the Great Hall, since the old servery was overtaxed by the increasing number of students dining there.

The Provincial Museum will be greatly enlarged, the entire corner between the present property and Queen's Park being allocated for the purpose. The wrecking of Argyll House is involved in the $2,000,000 scheme which, when completed, will create a much larger structure facing on Queen's Park.

Erected at a cost of $500,000 the new Emmanuel College building will include class rooms, library and a gymnasium. Trinity College is planning an extension, while St. Hilda's College has also taken over several houses immediately to the north.

Paving has not been neglected, the drive south of Hart House having been widened and curbs erected.

The acquisition of McMaster University rounds out the University of Toronto property facing on Bloor Street. Part of the science wing of this property has been renovated and is being used as a chemical laboratory and lecture room.

Plans are being prepared for a new Botany Building, construction to proceed this fall on a central site.

With the wrecking of several houses on St. George Street in order to make way for the new University College women's residence, the Graduate Women's Federation found it necessary to move to other quarters. The property on Hoskin Avenue, formerly occupied by the Kappa Alpha Society, has been renovated and occupied for this purpose, while Dr. Gordon, the women's medical advisor also has her offices located in that house.

Several houses on St. George Street have been taken over by the University and used for various purposes. The athletic field of the University is being provided with a new fence in the form of a brick wall at the south side.

STUDENT HANDBOOK BEING DISTRIBUTED

Copies are Available to All College Clubs and Faculties

The New Students Handbook of the University of Toronto being distributed is of slightly different binding to those of former years. The size has remained the same, since, in the opinion of officials it has been found the most popular.

About 6200 copies of the handbook are printed. In addition to the regular distribution, there have been a few extra copies sent to the Ontario Veterinary College this year. Pharmacy was, of course, included last year in the list.

The new features of note are incorporated this year except that the binding is slightly different.

The distribution of the handbook's carried out through the medium of the college organizations. According to A. Gordon Burns, no complaints have been filed this year except in University College, where there has been some dissatisfaction expressed. Student officials in charge could not be reached late last evening.

PERSONNEL WORK PLANNED TO AID STRUGGLING FROSH

Activity Director of Ohio College Sponsors Work

Personnel work among freshmen will be the primary interest of Wallace W. Hall, the activity director of Ohio Union of Ohio State University for this year. Hall outlined his plans recently.

"We are deeply interested in the freshmen, especially those who do not belong to fraternities," he said, "because so many of them do not know how to enter extra-curricular activities. In doing personnel work we hope to cooperate closely with the junior deans, who interview all freshmen in their respective colleges."

A new feature in the year's program will be a series of travel talks

ZUPPKE WRITES BOOK FOR FOOTBALL FANS

Veteran Football Coach gives Advice for Coaching

TREAT ILLINOIS SYSTEM

Typical Zuppke sayings abound in the "Coaching Football," which is being issued as the veteran coach prepares to open his eighteenth season in charge of the football fortunes of the University of Illinois.

"Don't exaggerate the ability of your opponents," says Zup. "Your players will think they are up against supermen."

"Tell to them as tersely as possible. The best practice is against human beings, not 'rag dolls.'"

"Power and deception in the offense educate the defense to be fooled."

"Don't let the small size of the squad whip you."

"Don't let your imagination destroy your courage."

"Coach everybody to get off their marks quickly and stay low."

"You do the player an injustice when you put him in the wrong place."

"Don't think that high school boys can't learn what college men can."

"Coaching is a fight against them."

Although the new book is devoted entirely to the Illinois system, the author-coach does not consider any particular way of coaching supreme.

"It is a good thing for the game that there are often several ways of doing the same thing successfully," says Zuppke. "All coaching systems represent so many complicated interrelations that it is sheer foolishness to say anyone is the greatest."

REPORTERS NEEDED

There are several vacancies on the sports staff of "The Varsity". All those desirous of writing for the paper should apply at "The Varsity" news office, Hart House, Monday morning.

by members of the faculty who have travelled extensively. In addition to these there will be the usual intramural teams for those students who have no other means of engaging in intramural activities.

Throughout the fall, winter, and spring quarters tournaments will be sponsored in pool, bridge, ping pong, and various other contests will be held for the fraternity men as well as the independent group.

Tush! The Scourge of the Lord

By P. A. Gardner

(In deference to puritan protestations from palpitating puritans regarding the previous moral tone of this column, we present this week a series of riddles, none of which could possibly bring a blush to the cheek of the coyest chaperone. From henceforth our motto shall be "Pure—and weak—as water.")

Q. What is black and white, and red all over?

A. The Toronto Star—according to the Telegram, whose own rather ruddy hue is never, of course, permitted to exceed a demure old rose.

Q. What makes more noise than a pig under a gate?

A. Two S.P.S. men at a movie.

Q. When is a door not a door?

A. When a member of the peerage from Tush is using it as a window.

ADVICE TO FRESHMEN

Do not purchase any raffle tickets for the S.P.S. building. The raffle story is simply a hoax, as the building is actually going to be auctioned off on Christmas Day. Incidentally, there is a rumour that the Communists are planning to buy it and call it "the little Red schoolhouse". (As this goes to press we learn that the authorities have been offered a generous allowance for it on the purchase price of a slightly used radio, and are considering the offer.)

No matter how good you have been at carrying off pranks in high school, we advise you not to rush into a lecture at half-time, shouting FIRE, and after a moment producing a lighted tin of Sterno from behind your back. We doubt if anyone except Dean DeLury would think it was very funny.

Also, no matter what the sophomores tell you, Professor Tracy is not likely to guffaw very heartily at your entering your office to enquire if he has traded in his Ethics for a Lincoln. However, do not hesitate to interview President Falconer in his home at midnight regarding the relative cultural value of Pee Wee Golf, Military Studies and Theology. He will be quite disappointed if you don't.

BULLETIN BOARD

All announcements for insertion in this column must be brought in to the men's "Varsity" office in Hart House, or the women's "Varsity" office inside the west entrance of University College, before 5 p.m. of the day previous to publication. No announcements will be accepted over the telephone.

If you should decide to join a fraternity, it is better not to march in and say, "Well, fellows, here I am", unless you can flash a pretty nifty roll. In fact, you may find two or three fraternities which will reject this type of advance anyway. So you had better just flash the roll as often as possible around the campus. You'll be a pledge in no time.

If you have literary ambitions, why not try starting an intelligent magazine? You are sure to receive enthusiastic support from both faculty and students; in fact, from the six thousand odd members of our University you can easily count on fifty or sixty subscriptions. And if you can make the price about two cents an issue and arrange to give away a copy of Liberty or Detective Story Magazine with each number, you'll have everybody, even the professors, buying it.

If you are radical in your opinions, be very careful never to voice them outside the privacy of your room. A sort of aggressively contented optimism is the desirable attitude. Be very chary of using the words "traditionalism" and "hide-bound". There are many sensitive people about, and they can do things to you, too.

University College Freshmen, you simply must take in a meeting of the Literathletic Society. There are refreshments.

CLOTHES FOR THE COLLEGE MAN

We have to admit the college man is keen in his selection of clothes . . . quick to appreciate it when clothes are really well tailored . . . equally quick to reject those of not quite such "good form".

To meet this rigid appraisal of college men, EATON'S have a diversified range of clothing and accessories styled in the fashion centres of the world . . . clothes which meet with approval in any gathering.

And value is important too. At EATON'S you will find not only good style but truly good value as well.

WYCLIFFE PRINCIPAL IMPRESSED BY FINE SITE OF UNIVERSITY

Dr. McElheran Is Gratiified By Co-operation Between Colleges

POLICY OF STEADY ADVANCE

Changes in Pass Course Will Perplex Theological Colleges

"To begin with," said Dr. R. B. McElheran, the new Principal of Wycliffe College, in an interview with "The Varsity" yesterday, "my first impression on coming here from the city of Winnipeg was how highly favoured the city of Toronto is with regard to the location and equipment of the University. In Winnipeg we have a fine University, but the size is totally inadequate. After waiting for thirty years, during which a policy of temporizing has been followed, they are going to have to move the University to a site several miles outside the city. Here in Toronto you have a splendid location with ample accommodation for studies and sports in the very heart of the city. The government has been more than generous in providing money for building, equipment and maintenance. All this puts Toronto in a very enviable position.

"Then I was struck by the way in which the revised plans concerning the management of the University have worked out. I was an undergraduate when the famous Commission of Enquiry did its work. It is evident now to anyone who is at all informed about the working of the plan that it has been a great success. The relationship of the various bodies to the Board of Governors appears to be a very happy one, and it must be most gratifying to the fathers of this re-organized plan to see it working out so smoothly.

'PRIVATEER' DEFUNCT NO REVIVAL PLANNED

Disillusioned Editors Resting from Educational Labours

DECRY GOLDEN MEAN

"The Privateer," an independent magazine published last year by a group of undergraduates, is now defunct.

"The Privateer" is dead," said Paul Gardner, one of the former staff. "As far as I know, none of the old crew are planning either a revival or a new venture. After all, why should they expend a great deal of time and energy on producing a periodical report for the sole delectation of themselves, unassisted, unencouraged, and practically unread by more than one per cent. of the professed intelligentsia of this centre of education?

"The few brave souls," he continued, "who plunged their all on a subscription have received the balance of their money—if any have been overlooked we request them to notify us. Our affairs are in respectable shape, and we are resting from our labours, a trifle disillusioned perhaps, but with memories of a thrill which not everyone has experienced.

"My advice to anyone contemplating a similar venture is, be intelligent and count on a tiny but solid circulation, or be cheap and splurge plenty and your success is assured. Never attempt the golden mean, because you will find it isn't golden in any sense."

A Message From The President

October 2nd, 1930.

To the students of the University of Toronto:

It is a great pleasure to me to accept the invitation of the Editor of "Varsity" to give a few words of welcome to those who are now returning to the University and those who are entering for the first time. May you enjoy happiness, prosperity, intellectual pleasure, and fellowship, which will enable you fully to realise the best that you hoped for in coming to the University. It is an old saying that blessings come to us in return for toil. You will only profit by what you work for. Disappointments you are sure to have, but remember that disappointments are often opportunities for success. Never allow your idealism to be quenched by untoward circumstances. Youth has the gate open before it. It depends upon yourselves as to whether this gate will lead you. The past year has been a successful one, and I believe that the University has never been more prosperous than it is to-day. Visitors who come to us, and those whom we meet when we go abroad invariably have a good word to say for the reputation of your University. I congratulate you again on becoming members of this great institution. With best wishes for one and all,

I am, Yours sincerely,

ROBT. A. FALCONER,
President.

The Editor,
"The Varsity",
University of Toronto.

First Year Men Suffer Much at Hands of Cruel Sophomores

ploing the fact that the younger generation is becoming alarmingly sophisticated. As far as can be learned, no enterprising seniors have yet succeeded in selling library seats to unsuspecting youths from the country, but according to reports, about half the Vic freshmen and a certain number of those at U.C. have obligingly contributed to the education of certain sophomores by paying for subscriptions to "The Varsity".

At the residences, too, pleasant social calls are being paid in the dead watches of the night to those who are dreaming of home and mother. At one well known residence the visitors were horrified to discover no less than three "worms" attired only in night-shirts. And it is said that those three and some more spent a very enjoyable time chasing one another under the tables and also in running races under the carpet. In this same residence it is common knowledge that at least one junior and one professor have al-

The election, which is expected to be in the near future, will be by ballot.

VALUABLE NEW BERYL DEPOSIT DISCOVERED

Professor Walker Describes Forms of Beautiful Rare Mineral

MINING CONTEMPLATED

When Professor T. L. Walker was interviewed yesterday afternoon by "The Varsity", he stated that the deposit of beryl discovered in Manitoba recently was of good quality and of considerable quantity. This metal was formerly quite scarce, but now that a new deposit has been discovered, there will be a greater abundance of it in use in the world.

The mining of beryl in Manitoba is still in the contemplative stage. Before mining operations can actually be begun, there is a great deal of drilling to be done in order to find out the exact size and quantity of the deposit. If this quantity is large enough to warrant digging it out of the earth, mining operations will certainly take place.

Beryl is found in many beautiful and rare forms as well as a variety of colours. The emerald and the aquamarine are two of its forms which make very beautiful stones for jewelry. The usual form of beryl is a metal of rather light weight. It is a silicate of beryllium and aluminum. The metal does not occur in its natural state and so after mining, it must be extracted from the ore.

When Professor Walker was looking around for specimens of minerals for the Ontario Museum, he visited the scene of the discovery and, to use his own words, "was treated with the greatest respect" by those in charge. The deposit of beryl is situated about five miles from the Ontario border on the Winnipeg River.

On account of beryl's being such a rare mineral, it is not used a great deal at the present time. But if the quantity of the metal is great in the Manitoba deposit, some use will be found for it which will greatly increase its commercial value.

Reporters Wanted

All men desirous of joining the news staff of "The Varsity" are requested to meet the News Editor in the News Office, Hart House, on Monday afternoon at five o'clock. First year men are eligible for positions on the staff as well as those of other years.

EXTENSION OF HART HOUSE IS COMPLETE IN EIGHTY-ONE DAYS

Architects Designed Kitchen Addition to Blend with Building

COSTS HOUSE $100,000

Newly Equipped Kitchens Will Serve 1,800 Meals Daily

By G. G. Brooks

The continuously increasing popularity of the Great Hall of Hart House as a place to have lunch necessitated the expenditure of $124,429 on a considerable extension and enlargement of the Hart House kitchens and servery which has just been completed. The addition is being financed by the House itself, with the aid of a gift of $25,000 from the Massey Foundation.

The architects of Hart House, Sproatt and Rolph, designed the extension, which blends completely with the older building.

Demolition began on June 23 and the building was brought so nearly to completion by September 16 that on that date a banquet was served in connection with the opening of the Banting Institute. This expedition has been due to the efforts of Thomson Brothers, the General Contractors, and the Department of Buildings and Grounds, under Col. A. D. LePan, which handled the Mechanical trades.

With the new addition, Hart House possesses one of the best equipped kitchens in Toronto, to serve 1,800 meals daily. The interior equipment has been designed under the supervision of the Superintendent of the Great Hall, A. Gunn, and is intended to give the utmost speed and convenience in serving.

Refrigeration plants, stock rooms, bakery, dish washing rooms, milk coolers, ice cream counter and First Aid rooms are included in the new equipment which has been installed for the service of the male undergraduates.

MENORAH ACTIVITIES RETURN TO CAMPUS

Varied Programme Is Planned By Executive of Society

PUBLISH MENORAH PAPER

There will be a decided attempt, this year, to bring the activities of the University of Toronto Chapter of the Intercollegiate Menorah Society back to the campus again. The programme as planned by the executive under the leadership of Mr. Sydney Hermant, includes a speaker's forum, teas, musicals, open meetings, the publishing of a Menorah paper and the production of the "Dybbuk" with shorter and less ambitious plays. The speakers who will address the forum will be men of outstanding calibre. It is planned to bring a number of speakers from the United States and to give a forum to certain local thinkers who otherwise would remain articulate. Debates will be carried on with the Menorah societies of McGill, Detroit, Chicago and possibly New York. The paper will be an organ for Jewish students to express their ideas about the Jewish panorama. The programme outlined will tend to stimulate Jewish culture which in the past has lain dormant among the Jewish students of the University.

Tears for Audience, Chaucer and Corpses for Publishers

A figure of Falstaffian proportions with hair flying and clothes carelessly worn walked into the St. Michael's College library last night. Bowing to the dozen serious looking young men in the room he sat down. Mr. G. K. Chesterton was about to be interviewed by the Toronto press.

In the interview that followed there were a great many good jokes made and a great deal of laughter. G. K. made all the jokes and his deep laugh dominated the sounds of the lesser laughers. It was reminiscent of the story of his Fleet Street days, when he used to sit in the Cheshire Cheese, reading his own proofs and waxing uproarious over his own jokes.

The virtues of distribution, the main or underlying theme of all his books, he explained in a short parable of the Production of Turnips.

"If a farmer living on his own land were to say to himself, 'I will produce only as many turnips as I personally need, and his neighbour were to say likewise, there would be no overproduction, for the simple reason that no man wants to be overworked."

"The present mass production concept of business is almost bankrupt by over-production. It can't go on much longer."

PRESENTS MOB SCENE

When a "Varsity" reporter called into Room 82, University College, yesterday morning, the scene presented to the eye was worthy of a Roman mob. Freshettes and their more dignified sisters were clamouring around a table littered with books and on banded knee were peering into dim crowded book-cases.

"Yes, this is a very popular room," said Miss Parkes. "By the way, have you any change?" she added.

When the line-up dwindled down Miss Parkes found breath to tell "The Varsity" that "Representative Poetry is one of the books most eagerly sought, with French dictionaries, a close runner-up. If books remain uncalled for they are sent to the Salvation Army. In spite of the warning to put as many books on one card as possible, one young lady brought in fourteen books and presented Miss Parkes with fourteen cards to swell her already bulging files. The first day Miss Parkes sold an amount worth eighty-five dollars, but due to the overwhelming numbers coming in she has since been unable to give an estimate per day.

All women who wish to join "The Varsity" news staff are invited to report at the women's office, Room 42A, University College, on Thursday or Friday mornings.

ADDITION TO LIBRARY BEFORE COMMITTEE

Ten Thousand New Books This Year for Use of Students

ENQUIRY DESK PROVIDED

"I cannot yet give you any definite information regarding building plans for an addition to the library," stated W. S. Wallace, University librarian, to "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon. "Proceedings have been held up by the President's illness. The matter is now before the property committee of the Board of Governors. When building will be commenced I do not know."

Mr. Wallace went on to say that the addition of a new stack in the stack room would take care of some 7,500 of the 10,000 new books to come in this year. "What we will do with the other 2,500 I don't know," he remarked.

"I have one thing to say that may be of interest to the students," Mr. Wallace added. "Last year I had cataloguers on duty in the catalogue slip to interpret the system of shelf-marking and to aid the students in their search for books. They often were asked as many as 150 questions daily, so that this year I am going to continue the practice. Someone will be on duty at a desk in the catalogue slip most of the day to answer questions. If 150 questions are asked them it will surely be worth while."

MEETING FOR WOMEN ORAWS LARGE CROWDS

PUERILITY

Since this is the open season for freshmen and the "Advice to Freshmen" vogue has taken its annual fall grip of the campus, we feel that a few paternal platitudes from the Inner Sanctum might not be unseasonable.

Our advice to freshmen is: If you have any illusions, lose them within ten days. For example, if you still entertain any illusions about the dignity of the so-called "college man", you are seriously advised to study carefully the antics of your seniors during the next week or so. Of course, if you feel that it is a fitting occupation for a rational being to dash madly about the campus with a knife and a pair of scissors, bent upon clipping an inch or two off the end of a bilious cravat which a day or two before was draped forcibly about the neck of the unresisting uninitiated, then all we can say is that your illusions are safe for all time. Even a course in Religious Knowledge couldn't shake a faith like that.

Horse-play in the form of bed-tipping, tapping, tubbing, and other quaint customs have the sanction of time, dear frosh. Yours but to do or die; yours not to reason why supposedly intelligent human beings have failed to find something a shade less puerile to hallow with tradition. If you are despatched on a nude nocturnal excursion about the campus, you are not expected to entertain any doubts as to the whole affair's being for the good of the dear old Alma Mater and your immortal soul.

In a few short weeks you yourself will be a full-fledged college man; in a few short months it will be your turn to perform the ancient and honourable rite of tie-clipping; and in a few short years you will be going out into the world to provide a walking exhibition of the beauties of a liberal education.

But if you can lose a few illusions in the meantime, you will have an armour which not all the childish capers of business men and politicians nor the measured mouthings from across the tea-cups of the intelligentsia will be able to penetrate.

4 A.M.

This may not be very funny, but trust in God and keep your powder dry, as the co-ed said in the rainstorm. The only reason we are writing bunk like this because somebody blundered and there's not enough copy to satisfy the authorities. This night-editing job is no joke. What with answering telephones, rewriting stuff because the linotype man can't read it, running downtown to get pictures of Mr. Chesterton, etc.,—but who cares anyway.

Wonder what G. K. Chesterton thinks about when he's not laughing at himself. (We are now about to render an imitation of Andre in lighter mood.) Webster tells us something about one meaning of "render" is to purify a thing or something. That's not exactly what we mean. To return to G. K. we're putting his picture in the paper. We like his whiskers. Wonder what he does when he's drinking soup. What does anybody do when they drink soup? Name thirteen things to do while drinking soup. You might imitate a thirteen piece brass band. Don't like brass bands. They make too much noise. Don't like English lecturers. They make too much noise. Don't like co-eds. Don't like professors. Don't like anybody. They all make too much noise, and I wanna go to sleep. I wish I was asleep. I wish I was asleep and dreaming. I'd dream I was still asleep.

People think funny things when they stay up all night. Sometimes they don't think at all, judging by what's in "The Varsity" sometimes. Sometimes they think of funny things to do. Like spelling the varsity that way without capitals or anything. The editor doesn't like that. Naughty, naughty, mustn't. Burny—burn. Wouldn't it be fun to ring up everybody you know and ask them if they slept well.

People look funny when they sleep. Sometimes they snore. Wonder if G. K. Chesterton snores. Wonder if the Editor snores. Wonder if the King of England snores. Wonder if I are demanding a fresh batch of corpses.

"I don't like lecturing. I always feel a little nervous. But then I think of the sufferings of the people in the audience. At the end of the third quarter of an hour I feel that my feelings for them must find vent in a gush of tears.

"I am afraid that my suspicions are inclined to be a little aroused by the Empire Trade policy. And I am afraid that if I ever did leave free trade for protection I should be one of those deplorable people who wish to protect England, being a narrow nationalist of the old type."

Mr. Chesterton will speak on "Culture and the Coming Peril", in Massey Hall to-night.

snores. Wish I was snoring now. I shouldn't be doing this. I should be writing heads. STUDENT COMMITTEE MEETS. PROFESSOR SAYS U. OF T. IS A FINE PLACE TO LIVE. VARSITY TEAM PLAYS ARGOS TO-MORROW. PROFESSOR SAYS BERYL IS VERY BEAUTIFUL. Wonder who Beryl is. Maybe she's his daughter. Wonder if professors have daughters. Maybe they only breed Fellows. Pun. Ha-ha. Nasty. Skatology. Wish I was skating now. Go round and round and round and round and round and round and round and round. Like a merry-go-round at the Ex. Were you at the Ex? Didja see the fireworks? I like fireworks. Next best thing to being drunk. Ha-ha. You think I like to get drunk. Well, I've never been drunk. But I've seen a man drunk. He wobbled. Why do drunk men wobble? Why do—hurray!! He says he has enough. He doesn't want any more. Neither do you. Neither do I. I'm not going to write any more. You're not going to read any more. Hurray!!! Let's all go out and get drunk. Squiffy. Tight. Pickled. Let's get blind drunk so they have to carry us home on shuttles. Hurrayhurrayhurray.

CHAMPUS CAT

THE RETURN

There was a hush, and then a whisper went around the campus, "Gaspard has come back!" And the murmur was taken up on all sides and passed from mouth to mouth like so much stale gum, "Gaspard is back, Gaspard—"

Joe College came rushing up with outstretched hand, "Hello Old Man. Howareyuh? D'yuh have a nice summer?"

There was a little crackling noise as the boot heel was slowly forced into Joe's mouth; his eyes rolled and then stayed fixed in a north by east direction. The dawn came. And as the first little sunbeam strayed across the body, a bat from the Peace Tower belfry chanted this lay—

C-C

"A pious young fellow from Knox Was darning his holiest ksox Though repairs were extensive They still were offensive So he buried them all in a kbox."

C-C

It was Sunday.

C-C

We will now go to the study of the lesson.

C-C

After quietly editing this column last year and taking care to be very diplomatic and not tread on anybody's trips, we have decided to come back this term with the idea of raising healthy howls and smacking about us in all directions for the good and welfare of the downtrodden masses.

But the chief difficulty here is the fact that there are no downtrodden masses and no grievances to air, or even ventilate.

C-C

But we are going to make the eat an editorial column for a while so that we can say what we likht without getting hauled up for it, as we are not supposed to be taken seriously.

C-C

We thus will become a powerful political influence on the campus.

But first we must attract attention. This can be accomplished by taking a swat at each faculty and organization in turn—

The School Men are a big bunch of Racketeers.

Meds think that they are superior to the School Men.

Honour Arts people think that they are superior to both.

Dents are very particular about their good name and threaten not to take "The Varsity" if they are exposed.

Household Science women can not cook.

Varsity Plan to Wear Out the Lighter McGill Team in Long Race

SIX BEST PLAYERS CHOSEN

The test matches to decide a golf team to play in the Intercollegiate Golf Tournament for the Ruttan Cup will be held next week at the Rosedale Golf Club. Through the courtesy of the Club, Varsity students who have ambitions of making the team may play there Monday or Tuesday mornings of next week. Everyone is welcome to try out, and must hand in a signed score card for at least 18 holes, to either Captain Jim Sihler or to the Athletic Office. The team of six players will be selected from those handing in the best scores. Former tournament play and handicap will also be considered.

The tournament this year will be held in Montreal on October 17 and 18. It is hoped that many will turn out on Monday or Tuesday next in order that a good team may be selected to retain the Cup, which Varsity won last year.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. B. W.

The Orphan-Camp Borden game originally scheduled to be played on the Airmen's home grounds, has been changed, and will now be played at Varsity Stadium as the first part of a double-header to-morrow afternoon. The game is called for 1.45.

It ought to be a good afternoon for rugby fans for the contestants in both games appear very evenly matched. Camp Borden, since they lost Dave Harding, are not the same and the Orphans have a royal chance to make their first league fixture a winning effort. The exhibition affair will see Varsity endeavouring to show Argos that the victory over Balm Beach last Saturday was no fluke.

This season Coach Blackwell was handicapped by the graduation of both of last year's regular insides and middles, but the switching of Harrison from flying wing to middle has helped give the needed strength.

The U. of T. senior eight have left for Montreal, where they will row a two-mile race against McGill to-morrow for the Intercollegiate honours. The Blue scullers have been very successful this summer and should be able to give a great account of themselves.

By W. A. L.

In view of the mix-up in women's interfaculty sport last year, over the question of eligibility, every girl who intends to compete in any game should make immediate arrangements with Dr. Edith Gordon, medical adviser for women, for the physical examination necessary before the certificates of eligibility can be obtained.

Basketball and baseball at University College got off to a bad start this year, since managers for these teams were not appointed in the spring, as is customary. As a result nothing has been done about practice periods or coaches. However, since Adele Statten, of hockey fame, is now vice-president of the W.U.A., it is probable that this oversight will be remedied shortly.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Applications for the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament, which will take place on Monday, October 8, should be handed into the athletic office by Saturday. The entry fee will be one dollar. The draw of the matches will be published Monday.

GRIDDERS PRACTISE FOR ARGO BATTLE

Blue and White Team Expects to Down Double Blue To-Morrow

SINCLAIR INDISPOSED

Last night Coach Les Blackwell put the Intercollegiate gridders through a fast practice session in preparation for to-morrow's encounter with Argos. Due to the proximity of the game no scrimmage work was indulged in. Blackwell contenting himself with putting the finishing touches on the plays with which he expects to down the Double Blue to-morrow.

The only notable absentee from the practice last night was Jack Sinclair, who is slightly indisposed but will be ready to start to-morrow.

In his absence Richardson filled in and has the appearance of a very capable relief man. The latter and Fitzpatrick were getting lots of speed in the end runs which were working pretty smoothly. Billy Bell was again calling the signals and got the plays away nicely. Bell, although he has been used on the rearguard the past two years, has had plenty of experience at quarter and should fill up the gap left by the departure of Don Wood.

This game will be a good chance for the Blue coach to try out the team which will most probably represent Varsity in the Intercollegiate series.

Although definite selections have not yet been made the Blue and White team will probably line up as follows: Flying wings, Ferguson and Traynor; backs, Sinclair, and Fitzpatrick; quarter, Bell; snap, Keith; insides, Galloway and White; middles, Dewar and Harrison; outsides, Gooderham and Elson.

Sports Writers Attention!

Any women wishing to join the sporting staff of "The Varsity", please come to the women's "Varsity" office between 11 and 1 on Friday, October 3.

CHANGE IN SCHEDULE FOR ORPHANS' GAME

Camp Borden Tussle Part of Double Header Here To-Morrow

BLUE TEAM CONFIDENT

A change has been made in the Orphan-Camp Borden opener of the local football season in as much as it will be the first game on a double bill with the intercollegiate and Argonauts Saturday at the stadium instead of being played at Camp Borden. The double header should be productive of plenty of good football with the Argos providing the major attraction.

Lou Carroll's men are likely to take the aviators into camp. Carroll has plenty of men out of which to build a strong contender in the Eastern group of the O.R.F.U. Balm Beach may be counted on to provide a greater opposition but the airmen have a fighting spirit which has carried them through many a struggle. Undoubtedly the loss of Dave Harding will be felt by the Camp Borden team. Since Bernie Hodgetts has been relegated from the intercollegiate to the Orphans, Lou Carroll is assured of a capable kicker. Copp is a newcomer from U.T.S. whose play in the city high school league last year was sensational. Art Snyder who two years ago was with the Orphans is back again and he is practically sure of a place on the line-up. Last night, however, Britnell and Heintzmann were calling the signals for the two squads that were being drilled in the plays. The men were in earnest and the pep they showed at the stadium bodes ill for the Flyers.

Coach Lou Carroll has a small army of players out of which to choose a team and as yet the personnel of the regular squad is not known.

TENNIS DRAW

The draw for the interfaculty tennis tournament will be in the downtown papers Monday morning. All contestants must be on hand when drawn or they will be defaulted.

The Time Is Come, The Walrus Said, That Rules For Freshmen Must Be Read

By C. L. Coburn

The following rules and regulations governing the conduct of all freshmen attending the University have been laid down by the Jointed Executioners of the S.C.A.:

1. Due to the high cost of newspaper and gingerbeer every freshman is required to pay an additional fee of ONE DOLLAR toward the upkeep of the staff of "The Varsity", payable in the "Varsity" office, Hart House, or to any sophomores who claim to be agents of "The Varsity".

2. Every freshman passing along the thoroughfare between the Medical Building and S.P.S. shall remove his collar and tie (in the order named) and devote two minutes to silent prayer for the souls of the inhabitants.

3. No freshman shall wear a yellow tie in Physics lectures. In fact, the wearing of a gaudy necktie of any colour is strictly forbidden to members of the first year.

4. No freshman is entitled to use his registration card till he has paid all his fees in full, or even to admit that he owns such a card. Any freshman blatantly flaunting his registration card in the Bursar's office will be expelled ipso facto.

5. By a special edict, freshmen are no longer required to wear the honorary cravats, conferred upon them by the upper years, in the bathtub.

6. Freshmen are forbidden in any way to cut or clip their neckties.

7. Every freshman in University College is required to put on his hat and shoes before entering the College halls.

8. Freshmen of other faculties entering the corridors of S.P.S. do so at their own risk. Due to the pressure of work, rescue parties cannot be sent out oftener than once a week.

9. A freshman meeting a professor or member of the staff on the campus shall place the thumb of his right hand upon his proboscis and wave his fingers as a gesture of respect.

10. No freshman at Victoria College shall partake of intoxicating liquors in the halls or class-rooms of the College.

43. All interference on the part of student with the personal liberty of another by arresting him, or summoning him to appear before any unauthorized tribunal of students, or otherwise subjecting him to any indignity or personal violence, is forbidden by the Caput.

Any student violating any of the above regulations renders himself liable to a penalty of two hours fatigue duty rolling the University College tennis courts.

BULLETIN BOARD

All announcements for insertion in this column must be brought in to the men's "Varsity" office in Hart House, or the women's "Varsity" office inside the west entrance of University College, before 5 p.m. of the day previous to publication. No announcements will be accepted over the telephone.

TO FRESHMEN!

WYCLIFFE PRINCIPAL IMPRESSED BY SITE

"I am once more impressed by the happy relations existing among the various federated colleges. In my time as an undergraduate the students of University College, Knox College, Victoria and Wycliffe worked together with unanimity and sincere friendliness. It is a fine thing to see the same spirit of co-operation in the group which has now been enlarged by the addition of Trinity."

Referring to accusations made last spring that Wycliffe theology was twenty years behind the times, Dr. McElheran said, "Wycliffe College will not be content to be behind the times in any detail. We are taking immediate steps to raise the educational standard. The freshman class this year will be smaller than has sometimes been the case. The reason for this is that we are not going to be able to accept men who have not reached Matriculation standing. We cannot do everything at once, but we are going to pursue a steady policy of advance and progress in every department."

In connection with the decision to abolish the first year of the Pass Course, Principal McElheran continued, "We are very perplexed about it. I have no doubt the University authorities knew their own business and the decision was very necessary and wise. It is going to make changes, however, in the work of the theological colleges."

Dr. McElheran then explained that men who decide to enter the ministry rather late in life often manage to obtain Junior Matriculation standing by working at home and attending night school. For most of these, however, it would be very difficult, if not impossible, to do Honour Matriculation work in this way, and these men would thus be unable to enter the theological colleges unless some means were provided.

yesterday when he suddenly appeared in their midst armed with a large, evil looking hunting knife and proceeded to cut off ties uncomfortably close to the wearer's neck. The situation wasn't helped at all by the fact that the gentleman in question appeared to be under the influence of thirty-nine of the well known forty beers.

Up at U.C. the sophs are still chuck-ling over the fact that they succeeded in selling a good number of their red and white ties to members of Victoria College. How the innocent buyers felt when they were also requested to purchase the yellow creations which adorned first year Victoria men has not been learned.

Nevertheless, Nat Shaw, popular president of second year U.C., is already being "accidentally" dumped out of bed by roaming sophomores.

Perhaps the best joke of all, however, is the fact that no freshman at U.C., who might have been Irish, but probably wasn't, attempted to bargain with Sid Hermant and offered him $2.25 instead of the $2.75 which was demanded in payment for certain articles indispensable to 3T4 men at that college. One irate gentleman absolutely refused to buy such nonsense for his young son.

BLUE CREW CONQUER MCGILL IN CRUELING RACE

CULTURE IMPERILLED BY RIFE VULGARITY STATES CHESTERTON

Vulgarity Being Irreverence for the Beautiful and Sacred

BOLSHEVISM IS NO MENACE

Famous Writer Avers Utopias Finally Cut Their Own Throats

Bolshevism does not menace the modern world and in all probability is on the wane in Russia itself, G. K. Chesterton told a capacity audience in Massey Hall on Friday night.

"Perhaps the only final way to kill a Utopia is to establish it. And this is what has happened to Communism. In the same way it is not likely that the world will make any further experiments in prohibition," he said.

The lecture dealt with "Culture and the Coming Peril", and the "coming peril", he said, was not Bolshevism, for the simple reason that, though it would be a peril it is definitely not "coming". The peril was the great spread in modern times of the thing called vulgarity. And this vulgarity he defined as "the familiarity with beautiful and sacred things, without the accompanying sense of reverence for them."

"In fact I may define vulgarity as the familiarity that breeds contempt," he said.

Culture, he thought, could be properly divided into two departments—"agriculture and bacteria culture." "Agriculture is the production of fruits by labour from the soil, whether it be the soil of the earth or the soil of the soul or intellect. Bacteriiculture is the spreading of the germs of disease, whether the disease

Varsity Line Gives Backfield Stonewall Defence to Show Their Wares

SINCLAIR WINS KICKING

Fitzpatrick and Traynor Are Prominent for College Team

Going through their first real test of the season in fine style, the Intercollegiate seniors took Argonauts into camp, 9 to 1, up at the Stadium Saturday afternoon. Although billed as an exhibition the contest at times had all the earmarks of a real struggle in the way in which the players went about their business. Both coaches gave everybody a chance to show their wares, but the regulars saw just about as much action as they would in a league fixture. After the first quarter the Big Blue team shaded their aquatic rivals in almost every department. The "T" backfielders performed much better than any of the combinations which Buck McKenna tried out, while the line for the most part showed up as well, if not better, than that of the Scullers. The punting duel between Frank Turville and Jack Sinclair went to the latter by a wide margin as the Argos ace was considerably below form. "Lawing Jawn", kicking from behind perfect protection, hoisted them in mid-season form and was largely responsible for keeping the Oarsmen on the defensive.

YOUNG VARSITY GRAD ATTAINS PROMINENCE BY PUBLISHED WORKS

Nathaniel A. Benson Wins Fame by Publication of Books of Poetry and Drama

ONCE EDITED CHAMPUS CAT

His Anthology is First Attempt to Group Younger Poets of Canada

From Champus Cat to a foremost position in the Canadian Literary Ranks is the story of Nathaniel A. Benson, one-time columnist of "The Varsity", who—coincident with his recent marriage—announces the publication of three new volumes of poetry and drama.

"The Wanderers", which is now off the press as one of the Ryerson Poetry Chap-Books, is a sequel to Mr. Benson's "Twenty and After" with which he won the Jardine Memorial Prize in his undergraduate day, here and is his third published volume of verse. Included in the book are several shorter poems.

"Three Plays for Patriots", which is shortly to appear with the imprint of the Graphic Publishers of Ottawa, contains three of Mr. Benson's one-act plays founded on incidents in Canadian History, including "The Pat-

Varsity Romance

MR. AND MRS. NATHANIEL A. BENSON, whose marriage in Hart House Chapel on Saturday afternoon came as the result of a romance which had its inception while the couple were students at the University of Toronto. The bride, who is the former Miss Emma Wright of Dundalk, Ontario, is a graduate of Victoria, '29, and of O.C.E., '30. Mr. Benson, who met his future bride while he was taking graduate work in modern languages, was—during his undergraduate days—Drama Editor of "The Varsity" and writer of the Champus Cat. He is a graduate of University College, '28. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. Douglas Kendall of Deer Park United Church, also a former member of "The Varsity" Staff. The best man was Charles G. D. Roberts, M.A., LL.D., F.R.S.C., Canada's most famous living poet. Miss Kay Mearns, B.A., a classmate of the bride, was the bridesmaid. The reception was held at the Royal York, after which the couple left for a honeymoon in the United States.

SIR WILLIAM MULOCK TOP OF PEACE TOWER TO HELP CANON CODY UNDERGOING REPAIRS

Parade of Governors and Staff to Take Place from 79 St. George

NO U.C. LECTURES AFTER 3

"Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, will be the speaker at the laying of the cornerstone of the new University College Women's Residence, on Monday, Oct. 6th," said Principal Wallace, when interviewed by "The Varsity".

Members of the Board of Governors and College Staff will meet at a quarter of four at Women's Union, 79 St. George Street. There they will proceed to the north east corner of the new building on Hoskin Avenue. The corner stone will be laid by Canon Cody, Chairman of the Board of Governors, after which the Chancellor will speak.

"In order that the student body may have an opportunity of being present, we have decided to cancel all lectures in University College at 3 p.m.," stated Principal Wallace. Tea will be served in the Women's Union after the ceremony, where all students will be welcome.

The work is proceeding up to schedule at present, but it is not known when the building will be completed.

Considerable Damage Was Done When Struck by Lightning Last Summer

ONE PINNACLE DESTROYED

During an electric storm which occurred on August 23rd last one of the pinnacles of Hart House tower was struck by lightning and between four and five thousand dollars will be required for its repair. Although stone loosened when the tower was struck, fell on the roof of the building, no other damage was done.

In an interview with Col. A. D. LePan, Superintendent of the university buildings, "The Varsity" was informed that building operations would be comparatively slow. It has been necessary to tear down what remained of the tower and an entirely new base will have to be erected.

Sproatt and Rolph, the architects of Hart House, designed the plans for repairing the pinnacle. The work will be extended over quite a period of time, it is expected. Owing to the accuracy which the work demands, also the necessity of the repair completely blending with the older building, the Department of Buildings and Grounds are directing the activities. No contract was let for the work, but skilled workmen are being employed to make the new as closely corresponding to the old as possible.

Edgar Stone, Theatre Manager Weds Quietly in House Chapel

In Hart House Chapel, at half-past ten on Saturday morning, Miss Agnes Mulrew was married to Mr. Edgar Stone. So secret were the arrangements and so quiet the ceremony that even the secretary of Hart House Theatre, Miss Eleanor Barton, was not aware of it until afterwards.

This wedding was the fruition of a romance which has been ripening for several years, during which Mr. Stone and Miss Mulrew have been associated in dramatic work. Mr. Stone as director, designer of settings, and actor, Miss Mulrew as actress. Mr. Stone's connection with Hart House Theatre dates from its earliest days, and culminated in his present engagement as Director. As an actor On their return from a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Stone will be plunged at once into dramatic activities. Mr. Stone to direct "Dr. Knock", the ninety-ninth production of Hart House Theatre, and Miss Mulrew to play the lead in the forthcoming production by the University College (Continued on Page 4)

Thrilling Finish of Hectic Two-Mile Struggle Fascinates Spectators

RECORD IS SHATTERED

Blue Clips off 12 Seconds from Famous English Crew's Time

Special to "The Varsity" by Bob Bowman, Sports Editor of "McGill Daily" Montreal, Que., October 4—Toronto Varsity's crack eight oared crew, rowing marvelously down a gruelling two mile course on the Lachine Canal Saturday afternoon, stroked McGill's hopes into submission winning by a length in the annual epic of intercollegiate oarsmanship. The race was witnessed by thousands of wildly excited spectators who lined the banks, or who followed the speeding shells down the course in buses and even aeroplanes. They saw the Blue and White crew gradually creep past the men from James McGill, after being left by a few feet at the start. McGill were using a faster stroke, and it was not till the first mile had been covered that Cox Chambers accelerated the Varsity oars. Soon it was plain that the Queen City men would be victorious, for the McGill boys could not stand the gaff as well as their heavier rivals. At the three quarter mark Varsity were leading by over a length and it was only through a super-human, and game effort that the Red crew closed the gap between the boats to trail Varsity close to the tape.

The time for the two mile grind was 11:42, which is considered by experts to be exceptionally fast. The Oxford-Cambridge crews time for the same distance is over 12 minutes, and the well conditioned Canadian intercollegiate crews have only added to their prestige by their excellent showing in Saturday's tussle. The Varsity win over McGill gives them a victory margin of three wins to two in the event, and it was also the third successive time that the Blue and White have beaten McGill to the tape.

It was a splendid finish to an exciting race, and McGill and Varsity college yells were much in evidence all during the hectic twelve minute struggle. As soon as the losing crew crossed the line they drew over to the Toronto boat, and shook hands all round. The intermingled Red, White and Blue tipped oars greatly added to the already colorful scene on the water front.

ORPHAN CREW CLICKS SEASON'S FIRST WIN

Dadless Ones Ahead in Three Quarters of Group's First Tilt

FINAL SCORE WAS 29-11

The Varsity Orphan football team demonstrated their superiority over the Camp Borden gridders in no uncertain fashion when they let the visitors down 29 to 11 in the first game of a double bill at the U. of T. stadium Saturday. The game was the first of the Eastern group of the senior O.R.F.U. Only for a short period in the third quarter did the Orphans falter when the Airmen counted their eleven points in a hurry. Then the local twelve settled down to the work in front of them. The Orphans counted five points in the first frame and six (Continued on Page 3)

VICTORIA CREATES DEBATING SOCIETY

Keen Interest is Awakened Amongst Victoria Students Over Idea

STRICT FORMAL PROCEDURE

The Victoria College Debating Society, a recent innovation in the annals of Victoria, is enthusiastically preparing to hold a debate which will take the form of a parliament, both men and women participating, and to observe all the formalities of a parliamentary session.

The realization of this event has been the culmination of the efforts of both the men and women students for a number of past years, and its success is heralded with fervor, especially as the form of the society is unprecedented by any example in the university. The Society is an amalgamation of the Women's Debating Society, which formerly had been carried on under the Literary Society, and of the former Students' Parliament. This has been a thriving organization for the men students, under which they carried on all their debating. Last year they were very active, and felt that to make a real college society under the new Victoria College Union, the union of the men's and women's organizations would be desirable. Debates will still be held independently from the parliament, in which the men or women will be able to join in other university debates irrespective of one another. In such cases the president, Earl Lautenslager, and the Vice-president, Miss Marion Haugh, would be the respective heads.

The formal opening of the parliament will be Thursday, October 9, in Alumni Hall, of Victoria College, with two parties, the leader of the Government being Miss Haugh, with Mr. Lautenslager, heading the opposition. James Gibson will be the speaker. Every formality in procedure is to be observed, from Governor-General to page boys and sergeants. After the first session, there will be regular monthly meetings on the first Monday of the month, and although it is a new organization, it is hoped that by next year it will be a major society taking a prominent place in college events. At present it is an experiment for the participation of both men and women in parliamentary debate, but already there is a large amount of enthusiasm among the students.

PARADOX

"Humanity," G. K. Chesterton told his audience at Massey Hall the other night, "is not natural until it is artificial."

On the face of it, this most ingenious paradox smacks more of the Beardsley period than of the reactionary mediaevalist. A Wilde or a Whistler might have paused to lean elegantly against a marble mantelpiece while he delivered himself of that very aphorism an instant before going on to point a languid finger at the fact that, after all, fiction was so much truer to life than—high ho!—life was itself.

But then, the inimitable G. K. C.—like the inimitable G. B. S.—is to be remembered as just as much a product of the fin de siècle school as Aubrey Beardsley's bookplate or "Dorian Grey". The difference in the symptoms between the two initiated gentlemen probably arises from gastronomic proclivities and early environment.

We were not in Massey Hall ourselves, but from the press accounts of Mr. Chesterton's lecture we gather that his paradox was meant to convey the idea that humanity reached naturalness only after a long period of careful culture.

To Mr. Chesterton, culture is not something superimposed, but something which germinates slowly from within. Mass culture and high-pressure methods constitute the supreme menace in his eyes.

"Give the individual more opportunity for detachment, for solitude," he urged.

The coming peril is the danger of the world's suffering not only from economics, but from moral, intellectual, artistic, and philosophical snuffing with non-essentials. Overdoing things is the immediate danger of the moment," he claimed.

This strikes home. The days are gone when students walked up and down in their groves or sat in their quiet cloisters, deliberately thinking out or discussing the questions which we to-day gobble up in fifteen minutes at the University Library. We get our stuff on the fly, cram for a degree—and then go out to sit at a desk during the day, sprawl before a radio or over a bridge table half the night, and talk about the World's Series in between times.

"Stunned, deafened, and bewildered by the clatter of external culture," we clutch madly at something concrete and material, and relegate the realm of pure thought and ecstatic contemplation to the limbo of philosophical cant to be unlimbered only when it becomes necessary to impress the simple outsider who still reveres the arts degree as meaning something more than merely four years of physical proximity to a campus and a collection of college yell.

Mr. Chesterton, heir of the mauve decade and champion of the middle ages, was more concerned with what he termed the "ordinary people" than with the university product. Perhaps he felt his position as the guest of St. Michael's College and resolved to be discreet. But if he ever cares to add to his paradox, we suggest something like this:

A university is an environment which makes art safe for the naturals and makes nature the oyster of the artful.

Wilde or Whistler might have said that from their marble mantelpiece, too. . . .

riot" which appeared in last week's Star Weekly. "Nat" Benson was a prominent figure in the University College Players' Guild when he was at the University of Toronto, and was closely associated with Hart House Theatre.

"Modern Canadian Poetry", which is the third of Mr. Benson's trio of fall offerings, is also published by Graphic and is an anthology containing the work of 20 young Canadian poets from coast to coast. All the Jardine winners are included—Edgar McInnis, R. D. C. Finch of the French Department of University College, Frank Burton and Dorothy Livesay. It is the first attempt to group in one volume the best work of Canada's younger school of poets.

Art and Drama

Thirty-two Toronto artists are represented in the opening exhibition of the new season in the Hart House Sketch Room. It is an exceptionally well-balanced collection of pictures.

Undoubtedly, the most important exhibitors are A. Lismer, J. E. H. MacDonald, F. S. Haines, and F. H. Bridgen, the first two representing the Group of Seven, and the last two a school which is in direct contrast to the Group of Seven. Mr. Bridgen's water colour technique and his delicate handling of colour are almost unexcelled in Canada. His "Northern Lake", one of the best units in the exhibition, shows a skilful handling of the cooler colours, and conveys a clear impression of the solemnity and peace of the North Country. Mr. Haines' "The Birch Tree", shows a successful use of brilliant colour, and an exceptional knowledge of tree anatomy. Mr. Lismer's "Summer Haze, Georgian Bay", does not seem to me to be up to his usual standard, and has an unexpectedly crude and unfinished look. From J. E. H. MacDonald's "October Shower Glean", we are more easily able to recognize the difference between the style and feeling of the Group of Seven and that school with which Mr. Bridgen and Mr. Haines are associated. The effectiveness of "October Shower Glean" lies more in the general impression that is conveyed, than in the power of technical skill. That is generally true of the whole school of which he is a member.

Of the other paintings in the exhibition, Dorothy Stevens' portrait of a little negro girl, Owen Staple, Flowers, are excellent studies, in still life. M. E. Winch's simple but effective, "Birches and the Lake", and Hallams' "Road through the Woods" are particularly worthy of mention. Lastly, Mr. Franz Johnston's painting shows remarkable technique in Tempera.

MY INTERVIEW WITH G. K.

By R. E. NOLAN

I found in his clothes closet this morning at his hotel, the universal genius called G. K. Festersome.

Mr. Festersome is a great figure, in many ways, and his fame such that I was sent to interview him myself. The novelist, writer, author, poet, figure skater, tree sitter extraordinary, was in the middle of a canteen tossing out seeds in all directions when I entered the room, but with that versatility of which he is such a master, switched to a sofa and a cigarette with a celerity wonderful for a man of his appetite, and had eaten half of each before I could begin my questions.

The time being short, I did all the talking. "Mr. Festersome," I began, "would you sooner be the great writer you are or the little eater you are trying to be?"

The first response of one of the greatest celebrities was a long resounding hunk. "I really can't say," he said, gathering his nightshirt modestly about his nether limbs, "you see I have yet to take a meal in Hot House."

"Have you yet decided what you will talk about in Classy Hall?" I inquired.

"I was thinking of telling my audience how favourably I have been impressed with Toronto," was the reply. "That usually gets across splendidly in this town."

"Do you sleep while you think, Mr. Festersome?" The great man dozed off for a few moments over the question. "Always," he finally answered, waking with a start.

"What in your opinion is the greatest literary name in England to-day?" "I believe that on the whole I would say 'To Be Continued', the serial writer," he replied, after a short nap.

"Tell me this Mr. Festersome, what are your ideas regarding birth control?"

The great man tapped his belt emphatically. "I believe that that is a waste of time," he said. "I am perhaps one of the most outstanding examples of its failure in our world to-day."

"Still, it has made you an all round success," was my witty reply, as I helped myself to some bacon and eggs. (Continued on Page 4)

ARGOS AND CAMP BORDEN LOSE TO BLUE AND WHITE GRIDDERS

SPORTSWOMEN

By W. A. L.

Varsity women will send a team of four players to compete in intercollegiate tennis at Queen's on the seventeenth of this month. This early date means that college and intercollegiate play-offs will be hurried, so that the Blue and White may have the best possible representation at Kingston.

Invitations to compete have also been extended to McGill and Western, and it is to be hoped that both will send a team. Both singles and doubles matches will be played.

Varsity were victorious last year, with Bea Symons, the St. Hilda's star, winning the individual title. Jessie Gray is the only other member of last year's team still eligible, and although she has not played much this summer, should provide some keen opposition.

The tennis club is meeting the first of this week to decide definite dates for intercollegiate competition and it is probable that these will be announced for next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. College teams must therefore be named within the next few days.

MULOCK CUP MANAGERS

A meeting of Mulock Cup Managers to elect a Committee of Management and arrange groupings and schedule, will be held in the Athletic Directorate Room, Hart House, to-morrow, Tuesday, at 1.30 p.m.

Presidents of Athletics of the various colleges and faculties are asked to see that their manager or another representative is in attendance.

in the second. They added six more shortly after the beginning of the second half. It was then that the Flyers came to life.

Lalonde, Camp Borden's diminutive backfielder, raced 35 yards through a mass of tacklers. He took the ball for 5 more yards, to put his team on Varsity's ten yard line. He made a gallant effort to carry the ball across the line on the third down, but the Blue and White line held firm. There was an exchange of kicks and Partidge made a major score for the visitors on an onside kick. It was not converted. Then Garbig, who did the booting for the Aviators broke into the line-light. He broke through for a gain of 20 yards and not content with that he ran around Varsity's right end for a touch after a dash of 25 yards. It was converted. But it was a flash in the pan and from then on Camp Borden looked anything but a championship contender.

The game was a typical season's opener with plenty of fumbles and loose play. In the first quarter pretty gains by Copp, Hodgetts and Solandt in succession put the locals on Camp Borden's 10 yard line. Solandt bucked the remaining distance for the initial tally which Snyder failed to convert. The Blue got a lucky break in (Continued on Page 4)

SPEAKING OF SPORT

"Give yourself a pat on the back, we've had a good day to-day", Coaches Les Blackwell and Lou Carroll must have felt something like that Saturday night. Plenty of the experts were willing to call Argos to repeat their victory of last autumn in the annual exhibition tilt. Instead the Blue and White scored a decisive 9 to 1 triumph over the Rowers. In the preliminary fixture Lou Carroll's men rubbed it into the Camp Borden squad with a 29 to 11 whipping.

The great Frank Turville wasn't great Saturday. He made two long runs in the early stages of the game, one for 50 yards. From then on he might just have well have gone to the showers. The Varsity wings nailed him hard and fast before he could hit his stride and Jack Sinclair clearly outkicked him in a mediocre kicking duel. Sinclair was in the best of form, baffling the opposing halves with a mixture of long and short spirals. Seldom did he give the ball to Turville and undoubtedly these tactics on his part were largely responsible for the success of his team.

Coach T. R. Loudon and his triumphant crew have brought special honour to the University of Toronto by their victory over the McGill eight. They covered the two miles in the exceptionally fast time of 11.48 which is faster than that made by the Oxford-Cambridge crews. They have been clocked at over 12 minutes. The annual epic struggles of the two famous English universities have attracted world-wide interest in the past and will continue to do so in the future. There is no reason why the annual Varsity-McGill boat race should not become the Oxford-Cambridge classic of this side of the Atlantic.

Coach Les Blackwell's castoffs were a big help to Lou Carroll's Orphans Saturday afternoon. Hodgetts, Solandt and Peacock were evidently striving to prove that their former mentor had made a mistake in letting them go. They certainly were impressive. Hodgetts uncovered his wares with his kicking and open field running. His kick for a rouge in the third period was a beauty. The line-plunging of Solandt and Peacock, the husky middles, left little to be desired.

Art Snyder, Orphans' plucky quarterback, seems to have brought back to the team the fighting spirit it had two years ago, but which it so noticeably lacked last year. Two years ago he gave a courageous exhibition against the Hamilton Tigers in the playoff for the provincial title. His tackling last Saturday was again one of the high-lights of the game.

Copp, who last year starred with U.T.S., champions of the city High School League, made an auspicious entry into college football circles with the Orphans. He is a freshman with a bright future before him on the gridiron.

half-line. The former Ridley star, who incidentally, is a brother of our own Billy Bell, dropped behind his own line and the everready Johnny Keith leaped on it for a Blue and White major score. Sinclair converted.

The second quarter saw plenty of kicking and was featured by one or two long runs. Sinclair got the ball out to Fitzpatrick on an end run and the Olympic speed merchant tore off 40 yards before he was downed by C. Bell and Turville. Unfortunately he was injured in the tackle and had to retire for the balance of the game. Richardson replaced him on the half-line. A line fumble gave Argos the ball on Varsity's 25 yard line. Turville attempted a placement kick but was wide of the mark. Sinclair returned into touch 40 yards out. From there the Argo captain tried another which also failed and Richardson ran it out. Clever work by the two Varsity backs averted a point on each occasion. The Blues got a break when Turville passed wide to C. Bell in running back a kick. Three Varsity players fell on the ball and secured possession. Sinclair then tried a drop but missed and C. Bell ran it out.

A bad snap gave the Blue and White the ball in Argo territory to start the second half. Sinclair's drop from ewtny yards out went for a point on touch-in-goal. Varsity 7, Argos 1. Line plunges by Palmer and other double blue stalwarts put them in a scoring position. Sinclair saved a point again when he returned C. Bell's kick from behind his own line while surrounded by tacklers. The pint-sized Johnston appeared on the Argo backfield and Richardson replaced Sinclair for Varsity. A kicking exchange gained ground for the Blues and Richardson booted over the Scullers' line to Johnston, who was grassed for a single. Varsity 8, Argos 1.

Don Traynor who shaped up as Varsity's most effective plunger on the day, broke through the Oarsmen's line to open the final period and galloped 40 yards before he could be stopped. This gain put the Blue and White in position for another score and Richardson hoofed a long one over to Johnston behind the Argo line. After his usual exhibition of footwork the mid-gut backfielder was pulled down for another rouge and Varsity's last point. Turville continued to find trouble in getting his kicks away and messed up one or two just when the Scullers appeared to be in position for a score. Traynor returned to the game after an injury and continued to shine both defensively and on the offensive. The game ended with Varsity on the top of a 9 to 1 score.

the second frame when the oval was snapped over Garbig's head into touch. He recovered and tried to run it out but kicked, Varsity gaining possession on the opposing 10 yard line. Snyder took the ball himself and went over for a touchdown which Hodgetts converted. To commence the second half the Orphans got possession at mid-field on a Camp Borden fumble. The locals marched down the field enabling Peacock to score. At this point Camp Borden garnered their points. Bernie Hodgetts, Varsity's brilliant half, added another point in this period on a beautiful hoist.

The last quarter was featured by some long runs by Hodgetts and Solandt, enabling the latter to score a touchdown which Snyder converted. The final count was made after the team had driven Camp Borden back to their two yard line. Snyder accounting for his second touchdown of the game. Hodgetts, Copp, Solandt, and Peacock were the outstanding performers on the Blue and White squad while Lalonde and Garbig were prominent for the losers. The line-up:

Bored Doctor Shot by Heartless Lad in Brawl in Examining Room

By Vincent Geller

Doctor (to patient during physical examination): "Well, young man, I'm happy to say that your heart is in the right side."

Student: "Uh?"

Doctor: "Sure!"

Student: "Oh, doctor, don't kid me. The right side is the wrong side."

Student: "Then, the left side is the wrong side, and the wrong side is the right side."

Doctor: "Now, now! Your heart, being in the left side, is in the right side. But the right side is the wrong side, and your heart is therefore in the wrong side. However, your heart is not in the wrong side because it is in the left side. And so it is in the right side."

Student: "Aw, say it all over again."

Student: "Well, how can it be in the right side without being in the wrong side?"

Student: "I'm still listening."

Doctor: "In other words, the left side is the right side, and the wrong side is the right side."

Student (taking a revolver from his pocket): "Come on, Hippocrates, where the hell is my heart?"

Student (furiously): "Shut up! My left side is my right side, and my inside is my outside! I'd hate to hear you tell me where my stomach is. Oh, how the waiter will laugh when I tell him I shot you in the left side."

(Fires.)

Doctor (weakly): "The joke's on you. You shot me in ... the ... right side."

be moral, intellectual, artistic or physical."

The root of culture in the human scheme, he said, was the need of humanity for something beyond the needs of the body in order to be complete. In fact he put it in one of the famous Chestertonian paradoxes—"Humanity is not natural unless it is in a large measure artificial."

Many were the forces in the modern world that G. K. thought were hastening the approach of the peril of vulgarity. His dislike for the modern newspaper, although he served his own apprenticeship to letters in Fleet Street, was constantly though humorously alluded to. Another bete noir, for him, was modern advertising. These two were mainly responsible for the modern "overproduction in things artistic, intellectual and aesthetic," an overproduction that subjected the modern mind to a ceaseless hail of things good in their places and in proper amounts, but in the present state of things bewildering and keeping the men of to-day from thought and appreciation of them.

Questions submitted in writing at the end of the lecture were answered. For instance, "Do you think that H. L. Mencken will retard or accelerate the coming of the peril?" G. K. seemed almost surprised by the question. He said, "Why, I shouldn't think that he should have any effect whatever."

DREAMS NEAR REALIZATION CANON CODY LAYS CORNERSTONE

"This Cornerstone Marks the Result of the Pertinacity of Women"

FIRST UNITS COMMENCED

New Women's Residences Owe Much to Generosity of E. C. Whitney

"This cornerstone marks the result of the pertinacity of women," remarked Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the new University College women's residence yesterday. "It is all the more interesting to me in that only the sterner sex was allowed within the sacred walls in my own undergraduate days."

"For a long time the faculty and Board of Governors regarded residences as a luxury and extravagance whereby the gilded youth of the land might live in the manner to which they were accustomed. It was realized that the value of residence life as a potent means of developing manner, character, morals, and love of beauty was incalculable. This residence, as it is being erected in its three units, is due in a very large part to the generosity of Mr. E. C. Whitney, donor of one of the men's residences."

"On behalf of the Ministry of Education," stated Col. Price, attorney-general of Ontario, when introduced by Dr. Wallace, the spokesman of the occasion, "I congratulate the women undergraduates on the fact that they have achieved such an official token of welcome as this new women's residence."

CHANGED POLICY REDUCES GROUPS

Dr. Pratt Will Address Victoria Women's Literary Society

A change of policy, involving fewer study groups and more open meetings, was announced by the Victoria College Women's Literary Society at its annual fall tea yesterday afternoon in Wymilwood. It is hoped that a greater number will be reached in this way.

Dr. E. J. Pratt has been secured to speak on the subject of his own poetry and the writing he has done during the summer, at the first open meeting early in November. Other meetings with music, art, and current events as their themes are being planned for December, January and February.

Study groups in the usual subjects are being started, with special groups in interior decorating, arts of other lands, and current events.

ONE CHEER LEADER PER ROOTER IS NEW RATIO

rooters	11
police (to control crowds)	2
reporters	1

Grand Total	27

Sold to the man with the red nose for thirty cents. Next lot. Particularly admired the Swedish exercises of the leaders, and the bright young voices of the happy freshmen—especially the falsetto from S.P.S. The noble "C'mon, Varsity!" sounded more like a cow-calling contest than ever.

Opportunities Offered Embryo Journalists

There are still plenty of vacancies on the sports staff of "The Varsity". All those desirous of writing sports are advised to apply at the news office of "The Varsity", Hart House, in the mornings from 10 to 12 o'clock. A good opportunity to gain experience in journalism!

TICCU WILL HEAR F. N. PALMER TODAY

Will Continue With Programme Which Concluded Last College Year

All those interested in the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union, especially the men and women of the first year, are urged to attend an open meeting to-day at 5 p.m. in the East Hall of University College. The speaker will be F. Noel Palmer, a leader of the evangelistic movement among students in England, who is rapidly becoming known in the colleges in Canada. This year Mr. Palmer is to be General Secretary of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship of Canada, of which "Ticcu" is a part.

The Union was formed about two years ago by a group of students from nearly all the faculties in the university, that it might enable them more adequately "to witness to the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and God, and to seek to lead others to a personal faith in Him"; and that it might "deepen the spiritual life of members and strengthen them in a life of faith, by a study of the Bible and by worship".

The Ticcu committee aims to continue practically the same programme as was carried out at the end of the last college year, and would welcome any newcomers to the meeting.

SOCIAL WORKERS ASSEMBLE AT VIC

Social Service Plans for Year Are Made by S. C. M. at Dinner

The Victoria women's S.C.M. entertained last evening at dinner in Annesley Hall a number of social welfare workers prominent in this city. Over coffee served in the common room, an outline of the new group, to be called a social service group under the S.C.M., was drawn, and the guests, who are to be speakers during the year, were introduced.

This group has been arranged by Miss Hamilton of the Social Science department of the university, and Miss Jennison of the federation of community service, both of whom are vitally interested in social welfare work, especially where it concerns university students. Miss Hamilton spoke of the new course, A History of Social Effort for the Past Hundred Years, which is being planned by her department as an optional subject for university courses, and Miss Jennison briefly outlined the endeavours of the new group, explaining that it was to be a study of the way a community lives. During the course of the study, there are to be discussion groups, as well as occasional visits to the districts vitally connected with the subjects under discussion.

Work is to be started immediately on a fine new Arts building for the University of Manitoba and it is expected that this will be completed by the fall of 1931.

Soporific Chorials Wake Midnight Echoes

Pushing their spark-clustered way to a debatable victory, South House won by a narrow margin in the annual midnight classic, the residence bed race, run off last night. Three mighty sophomores upon their chariots, (beds unswathed to the springs), rode to the bitter end down a gruelling course from Hoskin Avenue to Wilcox Street, propelled by arduous freshmen.

Inspired by the fall of the South House soph from his swaying perch, denizens of East House claimed a technical victory. The outcome is still bemuddled in the haze of darkness and shouting.

On the homeward march, beds were borne aloft, a veritable necessity, where even the best lubricated easters lighten the course with sparks and are worn to a frazzle.

FINISH EMMANUEL FOR EASTER TERM

Expect to Complete Building by Christmas; at Three-Quarter Mark

DIGNIFIED MAIN ENTRANCE

Structurally splendid, yet tempered with a modesty in keeping with the high nature of its purpose, Emmanuel College, the new training centre for candidates for the ministry of the United Church, presents a practically complete appearance, so far as the exterior is concerned.

Located at the western end of the Victoria University campus, the imposing grey stone structure arouses the unqualified admiration of passers-by on Queen's Park Crescent. It is joined to the southern end of the Victoria library, and extends toward the fence at the lower boundary of the campus. With the erection of the new building, the Victoria quadrangle is well-filled and the latest addition to the many buildings harmonizes perfectly with the remainder of the structures. Both the new library and the students' common room have stone fireplaces, the latter with an elaborate oak screen.

The main entrance is to be possibly the greatest beauty spot of Emmanuel College. It has not yet been built, but work on it is under way. Light (Continued on Page 4)

Impartial School Sophs Souse Frosh in Red School House

S.P.S. is at it again. All has been ominously quiet on the "School" front up till now. Of course, tapping, tie-cutting and lessons in discretion to freshmen green enough to wear such monstrosities as plus fours or moustaches had, of necessity, taken place. But the skies generally seemed blue. School frosh (shades of '23) even complained of it.

Yesterday at noon, however, the old Soph-Frosh rivalry flamed up and wholesale tapping was the order of the hour. Unsuspecting frosh, on nearing the Science building, were surprised to find themselves whisked away and given a thorough cleansing in the dim interior of the little red school.

Some freshmen, who scented an ambush and lingered on the northern edge of the campus, were raided and the prisoners carried back to a head first introduction to aqua pura. Even the embryo architects, peacefully draughting on the third floor, were ferreted out and baptized by the blood-thirsty Sophs.

It was an impartial party too. Innocent Vic freshmen suddenly found themselves in the clutches of those "wicked men from S.P.S.", and un-

Dr. R. B. McElheran Takes Over Principalship of "Missionary College"

HONORARY DEGREES GIVEN

Bishops of China, Japan, and Yukon Assist in Impressive Ceremony

With oratory of rare quality and with that wit and humour with which Anglican colleges celebrate their solemn occasions, Wycliffe College last night installed its new principal, Rev. Dr. Robert B. McElheran. At the special convocation in honour of the event the honorary doctor of divinity degrees were conferred upon Rev. Dr. S. Gould and Very Rev. Dr. L. N. Tucker.

Seldom have dignitaries of the church gathered in such numbers and from such far-flung corners of the earth as were assembled for the Wycliffe special convocation to celebrate "a glorious new page in the history of the college" as one speaker so aptly phrased it.

"The truth of the matter is that Wycliffe College is a missionary college. Wycliffe College has blazed a trail from Canada to the foreign mission fields. The page of Wycliffe's history has been made glorious by the illustrious names of her graduates in the mission fields of to-day," said the newly installed principal in drawing attention to the fact that the far-flung fields of service were represented by (Continued on Page 4)

EURYTHMIC DANCING AT ANNESLEY HALL

Vic Co-eds, Under Mme. Lasserre Give Fine Interpretation of New Art

An exhibition of Eurythmic dancing was given yesterday afternoon to a group of interested spectators at Annesley Hall under the direction of Mme. Lasserre. A small number of girls, including Marion Scott, Gertrude McIntosh and Florence Martin of Victoria, illustrated by various motions of both hands and feet an amazing ability to move in harmony with the music played by Mme. Lasserre.

In order to obtain the greatest possible freedom of arms, and legs, the girls were dressed only in dark bathing suits with no slippers or shoes and (Continued on Page 4)

LARGE REGISTRATION AT NEW McMASTER

Increase of Hundred Students Said to be Effect of Move to Hamilton

U. HAS EXTENSIVE GROUNDS

McMaster University has entered on a new period in its history with the opening of the 1930-31 session in the new buildings at Hamilton. One of the striking effects of the move is an increase of registration over last year of one hundred. This is largely due to a large local registration from the city of Hamilton.

The new buildings are located on a site of one hundred acres in the Westdale subdivision of Hamilton. Immediately adjoining the university grounds is a park area of some 260 acres owned by the city of Hamilton, where it is proposed at a later date to lay out botanical gardens which will be used by McMaster for study.

The buildings so far completed are University Hall, Science Hall, the Rectory, and men's and women's residence units. Of these the first two are built of Credit Valley sandstone, trimmed with Queenston limestone, and the rest are of red brick, harmonizing with the sandstone of the other buildings. These are only the first units in an extensive building programme.

With the change in location McMaster has a new crest, and new university colours.

The formal opening of the new buildings will take place in November, and the annual convention of Baptist churches in Ontario and Quebec will be held in the new assembly hall this autumn.

S.C.A. ANNOUNCE VARIED PROGRAM

Discussion Groups and Lectures Promise Interesting Year for Students

"We are starting our activities for this year with a setting up conference in Hart House and at Centre Island on next Saturday night," stated the Rev. Mr. Moore to "The Varsity" when interviewed on Saturday regarding the S.C.A. programme for the year. Throughout this term a very extensive and interesting programme has been arranged for the students.

The first series of lectures has been arranged for, with the exception of the speakers. Mr. Moore has some very fine speakers in mind and will let these be known later. The schedule is as follows:

Nov. 5—Christian Socialism
Nov. 12—Christianity and Unemployment
Nov. 19—Christianity and Politics.
Nov. 26—Christianity and Nationalism.

Discussion groups are already in process of formation in the various colleges.

Arrangements have been made for Professor C. F. Angus of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, to be with us the week starting November 30. He is to give his opening lecture on Sunday evening. Throughout the week he will meet study groups of men and women discussing such topics as: Life and Teaching of Jesus, Industrial Questions, Problems of Belief, and Science and Religion. Professor Angus was with us in conference two years ago and this last summer was a very popular speaker at the Elgin House conference.

GRIT MEETS TORY TO INITIATE HART HOUSE DEBATING

Vote of Confidence Will Be Taken on Present Govt. at Ottawa

PROMINENT MEN TO SPEAK

Freshmen Will Be Introduced to Open Floor Debates System

Plenty of excitement is assured for those who can jam their way into the debates room at Hart House on October 29th. As the subject of the initial debate of the year, the debates committee has chosen the topic, "Resolved, that this house has every confidence in His Majesty's Government at Ottawa."

Since the debate comes on the heels of a hotly contested general election and the recent special session of Parliament, it is expected that the merits and demerits of both parties and the record of the Conservative Government thus far will be very thoroughly discussed.

It is well-known that many of the university undergraduates are very keen supporters of the different political parties and it is certain that they will have a great deal to say on the matters that have occurred in the last few months. Further colour will be added to the discussion by the fact that at least one cabinet minister and one member of the former King cabinet are expected to be present and speak from the floor of the house.

Hart House debates in past years have attracted a great deal of attention and, since the defeat of this motion would amount to an expression of lack of confidence in the present government, the result will be regarded with interest.

For the benefit of the first year it may be said that these debates, which are attended by undergraduate members of Hart House and guest speakers only, are conducted on the Parliamentary style. Over all debates a speaker presides and the house is divided, those who wish to support the motion being on the one side and those who oppose it on the other.

The discussion is opened by speakers "on the paper", there being two of these on each side. After these men have finished, anyone may speak who is able to catch the eye of the speaker. At the conclusion of debate, the members present vote on the motion.

The Debates Committee assures "The Varsity" that a splendid series of debates has already been arranged for this year. A good many men prominent in public life have already signified their desire and willingness to attend future debates.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Due to an oversight, "The Varsity" neglected to credit Charles Aylett for the photograph of Miss Emma Wright, which appeared in yesterday's issue, and George Freeland for the photograph of N. A. Benson.

Waco, Texas—Believing that parents, when notified of the deficiency of their sons and daughters in courses at Baylor University, will be able to aid these students in passing their subjects, the faculty of the university adopted a recommendation submitted by Dean W. S. Allen that he be given the authority to notify the parents of students of their failure in one or more courses.

BUDGET!

The phrases "hard times" and "business depression" have passed so swiftly into our present-day conversation as to be already mealy-mouthed platitudes. As is often the way with that which is bromidic they have a truth which is stranger, nay, more realistic than fiction.

Frequently a university is accused of leading its members a cloistered existence. Though the results of the present economic situation may not yet appear to have seriously advanced within our walls, yet certainly there are signs which reveal to the keen observer that our college world is far from cloistered in this respect.

Truly, line-ups at meal hours in Hart House and the Women's Unions are "bread lines" in a far different sense from those processions of hungry people down in the heart of the city. Our campus presents a far from shabby picture as we cross it in sartorial splendour; we do indeed number more cars than ever on our college grounds. But despite these superficial signs of luxury, there is a definite feeling prevalent to indicate that, on the whole, the average student has returned this year with less money in his pocket than usual, and that he is facing the realization that, having less money to spend, he must therefore be wiser in his choice of how he will spend that which he has.

How are the various college organizations, societies, etc., going to meet this economic situation which is undoubtedly in our midst? Meet it they must if they are to serve their members legitimately and fairly. In many cases, it may not be possible for fees to be reduced, but surely each executive as it budgets for the new year should take into consideration the significant decrease in many a student's pocket book. To these organizations which depend on student contributions, we would not be over-discouraging. Indeed this is a year when the student might more keenly realize how dependent are certain organizations on his support, and in revising his own budget, place his mite in their boxes rather than in others less needful.

We do not wish to be presumptuous, nor to give advice which is frequently more obnoxious than acceptable and so we rank these words under the caption of Taftful Suggestions. Students who attend colleges where the academic life is obviously secondary to the extra-curricular activities are often scornfully labelled "unemployed". To those who are on the verge of graduation this year this title has a more realistic ring in it than ever before. It behooves us to be "employed", and in that employment we, in co-operation with all college societies in which we are members, must co-operate to readjust our budgets to fit our straightened pockets.

Papa Paradox Disappoints

The Editor,
Dear Sir,

May I be permitted space for a few remarks on Mr. G. K. Chesterton's lecture of last Friday?

Papa Paradox was surely not in top form; I found him very disappointing. As a whimsical entertainer he cannot compare with Groucho Marx; in fact he is seldom so uproariously funny as the Rev. Mr. Shields or Canon Ward-White at their merriest. As a practical philosopher—well, he has his points, but his attenuating of a ten-minute lecture into an hour's discourse was not impressive, despite the embellishments, occasionally witty, rarely brilliant.

"Mass production and the state of mind that consorts with it, which repels culture and breeds vulgarity—they are what is wrong with the modern world." Mr. Chesterton said little more than that, and his lengthy explications and elaborations became a little tiresome.

I was amused by the easy inconsistencies with which the great man asserted that "there are too many books" and reiterated that "there are far too many lecturers", forgetting conveniently that he is soon to return home to write a new lot of detective stories, and preening with pride in paradox at the magnificent contradictoriness of his present platform position. Though perhaps G. K. believes he is a "lecturer to end lecturers".

Much the most interesting part of the evening, to me, was the answering of questions, in which Mr. Chesterton showed a delightful facility, if no great profundity. He obstinately refused to be drawn out on the question of Bolshevism, about which a number of queries were posed.

Looking back, the high spot of the evening seems the delicious "profane" joke about the sweep who entered St. Paul's, but tarried not overlong. And in all fairness I must say I was never continuously bored for many moments, as apparently were the many of both sexes (some of them university people) who took their lumbering leave while the lecturer was speaking. Of course, Mr. Chesterton gets paid for lecturing, and one need not trouble to be courteous towards menials.

CHAMPUS CAT

Those particles of solid material in the Hot House soup this year are not bits of mortar from the new kitchen extension according to the authorities.

C—C

"They were in it last year, too," the chef is said to have stated, "so they can't very well be debris from the new addition. No, I don't know what they are."

C—C

Several Schoolmen in Civil Engineering have averred that the doubtful substance is Portland cement.

C—C

But if this were true the origin of the mysterious fragments would go back to a much earlier date.

C—C

Let's see now, how long is it since Hot House was built?

C—C

However, it is highly improbable that it is mortar from the original foundations because the soup is not aged that long.

C—C

It is rather discouraging to think that the new addition to the kitchens simply means more of the same kind of soup, more of the same kind of beans, spaghetti, etc., as in former years.

C—C

Taking meals in Hot House is a habit, like eating salted peanuts. After the first flavor has worn off you just go on eating until you become an addict and simply can't stop even if you want to.

C—C

Something ought to be done about it.

C—C

And then there is the same old blue berry bush pie. Someday they are going to find out that people don't like the stems and then they will have to use something else as a filler.

C—C

But indigestion is cramping our style so we are choking off.

Gaspard McGuffey.

Another example of exquisite taste was the salvo of applause which greeted the eminent's rather heavy explanation of Dean Inge's gloominess—"because he fears the Roman Church is winning in the modern world."

Thank you,
P.A.G.

With the Theatres

SHEA'S

On the whole, the stage show at Shea's this week is well worth seeing. There are portions of it that might not win the whole-hearted approval of '30 Vic or the Puritan, and other parts that may have been somewhat diluted by the censor, but for the most part the action is really funny and the pace fast.

The juggling act is clever, though an added dancer reminded us vividly of Percy Williams. The alleged singing of Marge and Teeps Lucille is terrible, but their Topsy and Eva characterization is really funny in spots. Bob Hall walks away with the applause in hat as an extempore poet, but his Optimist Club sermonizing is distinctly boring. The "star turn" of the evening is the one that smacks of the censor, and is — adequate.

"The Sea God", the picture, is only fair. It's a tale of the Solomon Islands, with the usual cannibals, etc. Fay Wray as the heroine is a wash-out, but the hero and villain are well played, and the direction is fine.

PLAY COMMENCES IN ANNUAL INTERFACULTY TENNIS TOURNAMENT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. Luckett

Once again the managers of the different baseball and basketball teams are having their annual scramble for practice periods in the one gymnasium conveniently available—the floor at U.T.S. This year the problem is complicated by the decision of the O.C.E. authorities to use this floor on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7-10. How to crowd two hours for each of three U.C. teams, one Vic, St. Hilda's, St. Michael's and Occupational Therapy into 8 available hours, is the problem which will confront the Basketball Club at its next meeting.

The only other floor is the Lillian Massey gym in the Household Science building, which is so small that it is to hold a practice there is an aggravation to both players and coach. It seems too bad for university teams to be going all over the city, seeking accommodation in different churches, a situation which it seems impossible to avoid under the present conditions.

St. Hilda's are fortunate in again securing as coach Miss Athol Wesley who piloted them to the interfaculty championship last year, and as far as the finals the year before. Some of the other colleges are not so lucky. University College has no coach as

VARSITY TENNIS OFF TO GOOD START

Interfaculty Games Disclose Good Intercollegiate Prospects

Under ideal weather conditions, the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament got off to a flying start on the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club yesterday. With Walter Martin, last year's stellar captain, lost through graduation, Varsity will be forced to the limit to hold the Intercollegiate championship won last year, but the steady work of the seeded players in to-day's matches augurs well for the retention of the title. The two winners of this tournament will play singles in the Intercollegiate series at McGill on October 16, and the next two will engage in a try-to with Western. The doubles champions will be decided later.

Few upsets features the day's play, but the double victory of Bronstein, of Graduate Studies, was a notable effort. The probable semi-finalists seem to be Bill Noyes, Art Balfour, Griffin, Shortly and Hermant, but any one of the twenty remaining players may furnish a surprise. Play continues to-day, and the draw follows:

At 10 a.m.—Balfour vs. Marshall, Drury vs. Shortly, Griffin vs. Martin, Maclean vs. Davidson, Leibel vs. Messenger, Iredale vs. Meighen, Noyes vs. Wilson.

At 11 a.m.—Hamer vs. Kane, Medcalf vs. Boland, Paterson vs. Reid, Rooke vs. King.

At 12 noon—Remaining third round matches.

TRACK AND FIELD PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Don Smith, Reported Ineligible, is Available for 880 and Mile Events

The U. of T. has every chance to once more win the Intercollegiate Track Championship. Although Finlayson and Jermyn have graduated while Fitzpatrick is playing rugby; yet, and it is not yet certain whether Miss Marjory Walsh, 217, who led St. Michael's last year, will be able to take up her duties again.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Although prophesying at this time of the year is pretty risky, we don't mind saying that we favour the chances for a Blue and White Senior Intercollegiate title this fall. IF Blackwell's boys continue to show the same brand of stuff that they uncorked against Argos, the opposition are going to find the going pretty tough. No matter who wins, however, there are certain to be some epic gridiron struggles when the season gets under way.

Johnny Fitzpatrick, who received a wrenched knee in Saturday's exhibition, is still out of the practices, but is expected to take his regular place on the backfield against McGill on Saturday. He is the only real casualty so far.

* * *

We notice that Ralph St. Germaine, Red and White backfield star, has returned to McGill for post-graduate work and will line up with the rugby team. The addition of "the Saint" and Swabey, last year's snap, who has also decided to return, certainly boosts the Montrealers' stock. The elongated half back is rated one of the best in Canada and only injuries prevented him from starring last year. His return to McGill will be a blow to M.A.A.A., who expected to play him on both their football and hockey teams this year.

* * *

Don Woods, quarter on last year's Intercollegiate, has changed his mind about leaving school and was out with the Orphans last night. Don failed to make the grade last May and is barred from intercollegiate football. The O.R.F.U. squad will certainly benefit by his addition.

* * *

The practice rounds for the Varsity golf tournament were in full swing up at Rosedale yesterday. The medal round will be held to-day and the team chosen for the intercollegiate trip to Montreal.

The loss of Walter Martin, sixth ranking player in the Dominion, and captain of the university team last year, has weakened this year's tennis squad considerably. Still the first and second rounds of the Interfaculty tournament on the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club yesterday demonstrated the fact that there is still plenty of first class tennis material in the university. The intercollegiate matches will be played at McGill on October 16th.

still there are many good men remaining. Freshmen, as usual, have a splendid opportunity since the first for men in all the races are chosen to make up the two intercollegiate track teams. Ralph Adams is the only old-timer left in the 100 and 200, but young Eddie Dore, who came here this year from Hamilton is expected to help Ralph out in these events. Don Smith, our stellar half miler, was erroneously reported to be ineligible. This is far from true and Don is making fast time in the mile and 880 in his tryouts at the stadium.

Plenty of last year's men are in training, including Connolly, MacLennan, Carm King, Sas Vile, Wally Graham, Ford, Hal Collins, Hal Williams, Ed Peaker, Hal Smith, Walters, Duff Thompson, Eddie Hymmen and Bob Dennis. Amongst the most promising of the new men are Homestead, the Upper Canada record-breaker in the quarter mile; Fred Peart, of Central Y; Austin, a young high jumper; and the versatile Eddie Sinclair who is doing a long broad jump.

The Interfaculty Meet on the 15th should be exciting and new records are bound to be made. S.P.S. is going to try hard for a new relay record while Thompson stands a good chance of setting a new mark for the javelin throw. This meet will surely merit the half-holiday which has been granted for it.

RIFLE ASSOCIATION HAS PLANS FOR SEASON

Local Sharpshooters Will Use Long Branch Ranges for Fall Shooting

The University of Toronto Rifle Association met on Monday, October 6th. A programme for outdoor shooting on the Long Branch ranges was drawn up.

Practice rounds can be shot Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Saturday morning of each week. Range Officers will be present to issue rifles and ammunition and assist new members in the use of the 303. The Intercollegiate match is expected to be held on October 24th. Every member is entitled to shoot, the highest ten scores comprising the university team. All members and those wishing to join should avail themselves of this opportunity to practise before the Intercollegiate match.

SCARLET AND GOLD SUPPLIES THRILLS

King and Davison Fight Thrilling Duel in 440 Yard Dash

The track season of the University of Toronto opened with a bang yesterday when the Victoria College track meet was held at the University stadium at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Due largely to the earliness of the season the times and distances of the meet were not as outstanding as is usually the case, but the events were all hotly contested, particularly in the 440 yard dash when Carmen King, one of the leading middle distance runners of the university and Earl Davison, U. of T.'s popular cheerleader, fought it out from the back stretch, with King first, nosing out Davison in a thrilling finish.

In the half mile a sophomore, Ken Stewart, almost created an upset by leading the field until near the tape when King and Ames both passed him in a well timed sprint. When Stewart learns to regulate his speed he will be well worth watching.

In the field events, as was rather expected, Alex Munro, sensational Central Y athlete, had much his own way and it is disappointing to learn that he will be ineligible to compete in the intercollegiate meets as he would well fill the gap left by the graduation of last year's track captain, Bill Finlayson.

An amusing feature of the afternoon was the freshmen's steeplechase, which was a part, we believe, of the initiation of these frosh, to the joys of Vic.

PLAN TO ENLARGE VARSITY KITCHENS

"We are very crowded, and have been promised an enlargement in the spring, but until then we can only hope," was the reply of Miss Van Allen, head dietician at Wymilwood, when interviewed regarding plans at Wymilwood. "It is too soon yet to know what to expect for this term, and the promise for alterations is only very vague."

VARSITY GOLFERS TO MEET M'GILL

Practice Flights Yesterday and To-day Decide Personnel of Team

Tryouts for the University of Toronto Golf Team started yesterday morning at Rosedale where the candidates for this year's team had practice flights over the beautiful Rosedale course. J. C. T. Sihler besides being the President of the University of Toronto Golf Club is the captain of the team and from the practice flights of those who are candidates for the team, he will undoubtedly have a team that will compare most favorably with those that have represented Varsity in the past.

The tournament with McGill this year takes place in Montreal on October 17th and 18th. Varsity has won the tournament for three years in succession and are out to add a fourth this year.

A second practice flight is being held at Rosedale this morning and from the results of it and the one held yesterday, the team will be chosen.

no jewellery. Part of the time they walked in rhythm with the music, forming a small circle. At other times they were led by one of the girls using her arms and hands to direct, as an orchestra leader who could call in the various instruments as he wished.

This study of rhythmic movement put to music proves to be an excellent education for the faculty of concentration. Mme. Lasserre pointed out that it had even more effect on the mind than the body, as the dancer must interpret almost instantaneously the bar Eurythmics has increased greatly during the past few years, and Mme. Lasserre expects to form a class at Annesley for students who would care to learn the art.

WYCLIFFE PRINCIPAL INSTALLED IN OFFICE

Principal, he said, "seemed to possess all the qualifications for this high position."

Sir William Mulock, in greeting the new principal remembered the days when the University of Toronto had been called a "Godless institution," saying that it had indeed been non-denominational, but had ever been a great power for Christianity.

"The great theological colleges have rallied around Toronto University," said Sir William, "to keep on a firm foundation the Kingdom of God." The Lord Bishop Stringer of the Yukon, Bishop Tsen of China, Bishop Hamilton of Japan, and the further fact that the two recipients of honorary degrees had both seen their great service to the church in the work of the Missionary Society of the Church in Canada.

Rev. Canon H. J. Cody in installing Principal McElheran, said that the heads of the theological colleges hold the key positions in the church and that the "sacred office" of bishop was not more important, and the new principal.

cornerstones very often," stated Dr. Wallace, principal of University College, in his opening speech. "Our one other building, University College, finished in 1859, is rumoured to have no cornerstone. For the forty-six years since women were admitted to University College the need for adequate residential accommodation has been recognized, particularly by the women students. In 1900 the opening of Queen's Hall was made possible by their co-operating with the university. Since 1920 women undergraduates and alumnae have collected a sum somewhat in excess of thirty thousand dollars, which will take care of the furnishing of the three new units.

"University College has been unique in the university as the one faculty which lacked really adequate accommodation for its women students," remarked Canon Cody, chairman of the Board of Governors. "The present government has been more than generous to the university, but the need had to be met by private means. When this residence is opened officially next October a new chapter in University College history will have been started."

The actual ceremony commenced when Mr. Mathers, of Mathers and Haldenby, architects, presented Canon Cody with the trowel for laying the cornerstone. Principal Eakin of Knox College, a graduate and former faculty member of University College, dedicated the stone with a few words of prayer.

In concluding the ceremony, Dr. Wallace spoke of the fact that the presence of Sir Robert Falconer on the platform was his first return to official university life. A reception was held at University College Women's Union, where the faculty and guests were received by Dr. Wallace, Miss Kilpatrick, and Miss S. Boyd.

Among those who assisted were Lady Falconer, Mrs. Wallace, Miss Agatha Leonard, president of the Alumnae Association, and the executive of the University College Women's Undergraduate Association.

is to be admitted to it by a window in the west porch through a stone arcade. "We expect the main entrance to make that building," explained Mr. Sproatt. "It will be the focal point."

The new college has a gymnasium in the basement. There are five lecture rooms to accommodate 216 students. The wings are so arranged that the north side has two stories, the south has three, and the east, four. This arrangement provides a mezzanine floor and gives the lecture hall a gallery. On this mezzanine floor there is a kitchenette and a ladies' sitting room.

The Emmanuel College buildings are expected to reach completion by Christmas. According to Mr. Henry Sproatt of Sproatt and Rolph, architects of the new buildings, construction is now approximately at the three quarters mark, and it is hoped that the Easter term will see them ready for occupation.

The style of the buildings is Collegiate Gothic to harmonize with the present library. "We hope to finish off the grounds with landscape gardening, but we have first to persuade the authorities to spend the money," stated Mr. Sproatt.

There are many beautiful details. For example the main entrance is lined with stone. The main staircase is equipped with a bronze railing. The library, on the second floor, is also lined with stone and has a patterned terrazzo floor. Incidentally, the present library, which is on the same level, is connected by a door with the new building.

The special rate to students is $1.00 for the five concerts. The University of Toronto is unique in that its student body has the privilege of enjoying a special series of chamber music by a quartette famous both in Europe and America. Dr. MacMillan of the Conservatory of Music will be present at the concerts and give a historical introduction to the various numbers. This is an added feature which is not included in a similar concert given at Hart House Theatre during the season. The quartette will also be present at the first Hart House Sunday Evening Concert, October 26.

Dr. Moore will give ten organ recitals during the year. Beginning Oct. 14, and fortnightly thereafter, they will take place in Convocation Hall from 5 to 6 o'clock. This will be the 19th year that the students as well as many of the city people have enjoyed these recitals, gratuitously given by Dr. Moore. They have filled an irreplaceable gap in the musical programmes offered by the university. In the summer of 1929 the organ was rebuilt and very much improved so that in the hands of Dr. Moore it offers the students the best in organic music in the city of Toronto. Programmes for the recitals can be obtained at the latter's office in Simcoe Hall.

CHURCH CONFERENCE SETS SELF-CONTROL VS. BIRTH-CONTROL

Increased Divorce Facilities Deplored by Bishops at Lambeth

MANY TOPICS DISCUSSED

Home Life Must be Preserved by All Communities of Mankind

Mainly and womanly self-control as the road to all happiness was urged upon members of the Anglican Church by the bishops assembled at the Lambeth, according to Dr. R. B. McElheran, newly appointed principal of Wycliffe College in a recent interview. Continuing, he also stated that the church was greatly alarmed at the conditions of home life, and were disturbed beyond measure at the tremendous increases and facilities of obtaining divorce. He pointed to a passage which appeared in the encyclical letter, "Holy marriage is part of God's plan for mankind; any community disregards this at its peril. Impious have perished because of laxity and corruption in home life. Artificial means to limit the size of families are not ordinarily approved of and were only resorted to under very special circumstances."

In concluding, he stated: "That although numerous topics had been discussed at the Lambeth this subject of birth control had received a great deal of publicity and many believed that it was the one thing under consideration, but it was not so, rather it was a very minor detail."

PLAN NO NEW BUILDINGS

"The place must be seen to be appreciated." This is Colonel LePan's very brief but descriptive summary of the former McMaster University, now part-time home of the Chemistry Department of the University of Toronto, which is using the science wing for laboratory and lecture purposes. When questioned as to the government's policy as to remodelling or substitution of a suitable structure, the Superintendent expressed complete ignorance of such a situation.

Major Cowles, Registrar of Education for Ontario, was unable to furnish any information regarding the department's hopes or aspirations and Mr. Rogers, acting deputy minister, though reported to have been in conference with Dean Machy of Hamilton, stated that he had nothing to impart for publication.

NOVELTIES ARE PLANNED FOR HART HOUSE MASQUE

The annual Masquerade Ball at Hart House will be held this year on the evening of November 14, it is announced, after the Hart House Committee meeting yesterday. Plans are forthcoming which will make this year's event one to be long remembered in the annals of the university. The orchestra has not as yet been chosen, but it is rumoured that it is to be one of an entirely new and novel nature.

Rudy Vallee Gets Official O.K. To Croon U. of T. Song on Air

It's only a matter of days now before "The Blue and the White" will rival the Maine Stein Song as a household word throughout Canada and the United States.

Rudy Vallee, crooner and orchestra leader, who put the University of Maine on the map by setting her Stein Song to fox trot rhythm, wrote to W. J. Dunlop, University of Toronto Extension Director, saying that he had received numerous requests for the university's songs and asking for a copy of the song book in order that he might include the songs in a future radio program.

Mr. Dunlop passed the letter on to R. J. Hamilton with the remark that it seemed to be "justifiable publicity" and asking him to send the copy to Rudy. Mr. Hamilton charged the book to the Department of University Extension.

Vallee was refused permission to sing three of the Harvard University songs some time ago.

MANY CONVEYANCES SEEN ON CAMPUS

Cars of All Types Appear As Fall Term Opens

STUDENT DRIVERS CAREFUL

At least as many cars as last year are roaming the roads and drives on the university grounds, Colonel A. D. LePan, Superintendent of the University of Toronto, told "The Varsity" yesterday. The repairs to College Street make it more difficult to judge the number of automobiles.

"We have experienced little trouble from the autos on the campus," said Col. LePan. "The students usually observe carefully the regulations in regard to driving. A little confusion would be avoided if the students would take more care by parking their cars close to the curb and so increase the parking space."

The campus presents a varied array of cars. Autos of old and new vintage vie with their fellows in colour schemes, horns, and other equipment. Eight cylinder monsters rub noses with those of more lowly make, and even a motorcycle or two has put in an appearance.

IMPRESSIVE RITES MARK INVESTITURE

St. Hilda's Make Freshettes
True Members of College

EACH GIRL TAKES OATH

The annual investiture ceremony of St. Hilda's College took place Monday evening at 99 St. George Street. Thirty-one members of the first year received gowns, and were formally made members of the college.

Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, president of the St. Hilda's Alumnae Association, presided at the ceremony. Mrs. Kirkwood, in extending a message of welcome to the girls of the incoming year said that a college was an institution which bound together all its members, both before and after graduation. Miss Margaret Zambly, Head of the College, read the rules of St. Hilda's.

Each member of the first year, before receiving her gown, defined the word honour, and repeated the oath: "I promise on my honour, God helping me, to be a true and faithful member of St. Hilda's; to obey its laws, to guard its traditions, to fulfil its standards in honour, work, and fellowship."

In the New York playhouses they "wash" the air before they let it into the auditorium, and may eventually do the same thing with the plays.—Worcester Telegram.

U. OF T. SETTLEMENT DOING GOOD WORK

Undergraduates Have Mistaken Ideas About Activities There

GRADUATES TAKE INTEREST

What is the University Settlement? It can be defined as a group of students who share the life of the Ward district, and by their creative efforts contribute to its development. It is not what one student on the campus said, "an institution which brings the riff raff of Queen Street to Hart House every Christmas for a free meal."

It is a neighbourhood house on Grange Road in the Ward district ten minutes walk from McCaul Street. It was begun by President Falconer and a group of interested graduates several years ago. Like the famous Toynbee Hall of East London, University House was originated by university men who wished to share their advantages of education and culture with the people of a district who were so busy with the struggle for existence that they didn't have time to know that beauty and art were an integral part of life.

Graduates and undergraduates who have ideas that they wish to work out, or who are interested in knowing the problems of the district, have been coming to University House, and have taken a prominent part in directing the activities of the House. In recent years their interest has led to the forming of a music school, and this past year to a Little Theatre.

UNION DIETITIANS BUSY WITH TEAS

University College freshettes were entertained at a tea by Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick at the Women's Union on Friday afternoon. Nominations for the '34 year executive were introduced to the class and made brief speeches as part of the election campaign which ends Tuesday.

At the Union Friday afternoon dietitians were frantically dashing hither and yon preparing for the tea after the laying of the cornerstone and for three or four minor functions. Friday and Saturday.

School Sophs Unite With Frosh In Concerted Attack On Meds

S.P.S. was again the scene of turmoil yesterday noon as the sophomores continued to impress their freshmen with the rites necessary for them to become bold Schoolmen.

Passive spectators watched as the usual scene of freshmen being dragged within the dread portals went on. But as more and more wet beads with a draggled green tie gathered together a spirit of resistance sprang up. This culminated in a short but sharp skirmish in which blows were traded free-

States

"Canada is no field for the legitimate stage," said L. Solman, manager of the Royal Alexandra, to the representative of "The Varsity" in a brief interview yesterday. "Nevertheless I am a strong believer in the real stage, else this would be a different theatre."

The interview was the result of a rumour to the effect that there were to be no road shows in Canada this winter, a subject of vital interest to university students. It seems the Famous Players Canadian Corporation control the leading houses from Halifax to Vancouver, including the legitimate stage, with the exception of Toronto and Montreal, each of which has retained control of at least one theatre. As these film moguls are in competition with the legitimate stage a ban was issued in August excluding any touring stage attraction from any of the theatres in this Canadian chain. If this act had been successful it would undoubtedly have wiped out the Canadian stage, and eliminated all London attractions. However, the news leaked, retractions were made, and though road shows are to be allowed in the various centres affairs at present are at a standstill.

According to Mr. Solman the subject has not affected the Royal Alexandra in the least, contrary to rumors, and already five English companies, including Luber and Hampton are booked. Also, "Street Singer" which is now playing in New York, will soon make its appearance. As for the talkies, he said that there were not enough road shows to complete the season, and moving pictures are of

VICTORIAN CHIVALRY VANQUISHES SOPHS

The freshmen's "Bob" practice at Victoria nearly suffered a rude interruption Monday night when a band of sophomores attempted to break up their meeting at St. Paul's church. Had it not been for the far-sighted chivalry of 3T4 in providing three policemen to defend the freshettes, a struggle might have taken place. As it was, however, the arm of the law prevented the entrance of the sophomores, who judiciously retreated to the steps of the Household Sciences building, but were expelled from even that asylum. It is understood that terms of from six months to a year will be meted out to sophomores who again try to break up a meeting of this nature.

By. But the freshies were outnumbered and forced to retreat for reinforcements. The sophomores gathered in the front doorway and dared the first year men to come on; but although their numbers increased their valour did not. However, the honour of School was satisfied when all present gave a lusty yell directed against the Meds buildings, the students of whom answered in kind.

MANY ENTER FROM U.S.A.

St. Augustine Seminary Not Affected by New Ruling

"The abolition of the Pass course will virtually exclude all Americans from the theological course," stated Rev. E. J. McCorkell, Superior of St. Michael's College, to "The Varsity" yesterday. "In my opinion that is the only case in which there will be a difference. They take only a four year high school course in the United States and therefore cannot enter an Honour course here," he explained. "A student would not want to come over here and go into high school again before proceeding to university."

"Do you have many American theological students at St. Michael's?" asked "The Varsity".

"Yes, for the last 60 years a considerable percentage of those training for the priesthood have been Americans," the Superior replied.

Dr. R. B. McElheran, principal of Wycliffe College, had complained that with the Pass course gone those who decided to enter the ministry later in life would be excluded through the necessity of securing honour matriculation standing. Referring to this view, Rev. McCorkell said, "We have few mature students here. They take their training at St. Augustine's Seminary and as the entrance there has always required a number of honour matriculation subjects the abolition will not have any effect."

When approached on the same subject, Dr. Thomas Eakin, principal of Knox College, replied, "I have not thought very much about it. I can see certain disabilities and yet I can see certain advantages. There may be disabilities to a certain class of student. But I should like to consider the matter more fully before I give a concrete opinion."

Faculty

MEDS VS. SCHOOL?

Registration figures for the Faculty of Arts are greater this year by seven, with many registrations yet to be made. This news was gathered from interviews with the registrars and secretaries of the various colleges.

Trinity College at present are about nine under last year's total, but results of the interview showed that several more students were expected before registration closes. St. Michael's College is at present in approximately the same situation; but the registrar, Father Sullivan, was confident of a few more students. Trinity's present total is 310 as contrasted with last year's final total of 319, with 347 yet to be reached to equal last year's registration.

MAN MUST ENJOY WORK TO SUCCEED

Reasonableness of Bible Is Meeting

OPEN MEETING HELD

"To make a real success of life, a man or woman must fulfill four conditions," said F. Noel Palmer, B. A. (Oxon.), B.D., at an open meeting of the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union yesterday afternoon. "He must be adapted to his life or work, he must understand it, he must enjoy it and be 'sold out' to it."

"Hospitals of human wreckage and the history of decayed empires bear mute testimony to the fact that man is not adapted to a life of sin. Experience has proven that he is adapted to the standards of Christ," declared Mr. Palmer. "People who reject the Bible doctrine as unreliable," he continued, "do not understand it, because they do not read it intelligently."

"The reasonableness of the Bible message will appeal to any honest enquirer's intelligence," he stated, and added, "Spiritual regeneration brings with it new peace, new cleanliness, new aims, new hopes, expanding vistas. Man cannot help enjoying the Christian life."

The Michigan legislature has passed a law prohibiting the wearing of fraternity pins by anyone but their owners. Officials deny the rumour that this law will also apply to the clothing of fraternity members.

WYCLIFFE LIBRARY NOW ACCESSIBLE

Many Theological Volumes for Reference Use Are on Shelves

ARCHITECTURE IS GOTHIC

The new Wycliffe College library is now open for the use of the seventy five students registered in the college. Many new books have been added during the summer and the library now comprises upwards of fifteen thousand volumes. These books all deal with theological subjects and provide an excellent source of reference, being placed on classified open shelves. The Arts students in the college use the university library, as none of the books in the Wycliffe College library cover general subjects.

The library building itself is constructed of limestone in the Gothic type of architecture, and seems almost to be a continuation of Hart House. It is one of the newest edifices on the campus, having been completed in June of this year. The reading room, which provides accommodation for fifty students, is finished in oak, the wainscoting having biblical inscriptions embossed in red, blue and gold. Two means of access are provided, one through the main college building and the other from the street entrance.

Beneath the reading room are the college offices, which are finished similarly to the reading room.

WHAT PRICE VALLEE?

Rudy Vallee wants to sing "The Blue and White" over the radio. He has written to W. J. Dunlop, Publicity Director of the University of Toronto, asking for a copy of the song and permission to use it in his broadcasts.

Mr. Dunlop thinks it is "justifiable publicity" and has given instructions that the required copy and permission be forwarded to the famed New Haven saxophone crooner who put Maine on the map and made the Stein Song a thing to tinkle and an annoyance forever.

The eminent Mr. Vallee, since the success of the Stein opus, has made a specialty of cramming down the throats and into the ears of the great and eager unpolluted, university songs and college songs and fraternity songs and sorority songs and "pep" songs and marching songs and hundreds of miscellaneous songs more or less associated with the Great American Campus. Only a few of the older and more conservative universities in the great arid area to the south were ungrateful for the free publicity which Mr. Vallee offered them and refused permission to use their songs. It is not long, for example, since the press carried reports that dear old Harvard had flatly declined to allow Rudy to radio any one of her three official chants.

Mr. Vallee—having crossed for a limited engagement into the wilds of Canada this summer—has decided to give at least one of the Dominion's leading universities something which might be described as a "break". He wants to croon our song.

While we are making valiant efforts to retain some faint fragment of our British background by choring peacocks to our "Alma May-ter", the renowned Rudy will introduce his fox-trotting fans to Toronto's Americanized "Alma Mah-ter".

Mr. Dunlop thinks this is "justifiable publicity". Perhaps it is, but we don't think so. Perhaps there is nothing to prevent Mr. Vallee from using "The Blue and White" whether he gets permission or not, and perhaps Mr. Dunlop is merely making a gracious gesture. Perhaps the Board of Governors will think it "justifiable publicity", too, and will grant its seal of approval just as it did last year when—in the face of a strong body of student opinion—it permitted a certain local restaurant to use the Varsity crest in its advertising.

But we shudder at a mental image of the Vallee head tilting at an angle of thirty degrees, the Vallee eyes closing, and the Vallee larynx permitting itself to utter and intone "The Royal Blue and White". We feel we should suffer both aesthetically and morally.

We feel that what is "justifiable publicity" in the eyes of the University's Publicity Director may not be justifiable anything in the eyes of the undergraduates. And after all "The Blue and White" is the students' song. Surely they have a right to express themselves on the subject before any authority gives official sanction for a foreign dance-band leader to use their battle-cry.

As the printed organ of undergraduate opinion, we suggest—gently but firmly—that the matter be tabled for a day or two in that particular part of the mazes of Simcoe Hall in which it happens to find itself at the moment and that opportunity be given through the columns of "The Varsity" for the students to express themselves.

The question before the undergraduate body is: What price Rudy Vallee and "justifiable publicity"?

Art and Drama

Players Guild

With the opening meeting of the U.C. Players' Guild in the Women's Union at 4 o'clock this afternoon, that organization enters upon another year of activity, and one which promises to be significant in the history of what is generally conceded to be the most daring and experimental of the undergraduate dramatic societies.

The possibility of a Hart House production of the Guild this fall is in the air, it is understood, and a definite announcement regarding the matter is promised at the tea this afternoon. This will be the first time the University College thespians have ever deserted their band-box stage at 79 St. George Street and should be an event of outstanding interest. The audacity of the Guild in the selection of plays has never been questioned. On the wider boards of Hart House Theatre it will be interesting to see what will be done by this organization.

A special effort is being made to increase the membership of the Players' Guild in view of the expanded programme. For the benefit of freshmen and others who have never attended Guild meetings, it is pointed out that entrance to the Hall in which the society meets is by the side door of the Union. Both men and women of University College are invited to attend. There will be, as in previous years, plenty of opportunity for students to gain experience both backstage and in the glare of the footlights in the regular weekly one-act productions.

Tatterdemalion

Editor,
"The Varsity",

Dear Sir—
I was much interested in the eustatic remarks on the childishness of our great University's initiation traditions. How one human does love to make fun of another!

But to my point. In my day a young poet by the name of Francois Villon was much in vogue. If we can believe the movies and R. L. Stevenson, not to mention a few of our most respected professors, this young man was very tatterdemalion. (You won't find this word in the dictionary, so don't look it up.)

He loved to live in rags, it was the privilege of poor students in his day. The brain, and not the exterior was his concern. If custom now compels us to spend time and thought on our exterior, I say lay not the hand of ridicule upon those sport-loving sophs who wreak their vengeance upon innocent frosh, for quite possibly it is only another case of the "Revolt of the Oyster" against hard and fast rules. And who shall say revolvers may? Not I at least.

QUIET ELECTIONS HELD BY WOMEN

As a contrast to the hotly contended spring contests, the University College women's elections yesterday were calm and restrained. Not a single inducement in the form of lollipops, kewpie, chocolate bar, or lipstick was in evidence. The Freshies in the running were all blissfully unaware of the intricacies of electioneering as practised by their seniors. Not more than a quarter of the women entitled to vote took advantage of that privilege.

Irene Fitzsimmons was elected president of fourth year in a keenly contested match and Margaret Anderson was chosen president of third year. In the first year the results were as follows:

President, J. Hunnisset; vice-president, K. Talm; secretary, M. Armstrong; treasurer, M. Rutherford; S. A.C. representative, H. Marriott and M. B. Clarke (tied); Social Service representative, E. Pratt.

MUSIC CLUB GIVES "THE GONDOLIERS"

Co-Operation is Keynote of Club's Success, Says Crawford

PRODUCTION IN FEBRUARY

"Co-operation! That's how we got through last year and how we're going to get through this year," Dr. Crawford, last year's director, said at the Victoria College Music Club at its organization meeting at Wymilwood last night. The enthusiasm and ambition of this, the largest permanent musical organization on the campus, was apparent in the welcoming speeches of the president, Harold Stafford, Dr. Wallace, Chancellor of Victoria College, and Miss Addison, Dean of Women.

It is reported that "The Gondoliers", the ambitious production planned for this year, will exceed the popularity of "The Pirates of Penzance", which was so well received last year.

The Music Club is a purely vocal club, which for six years has worked (Continued on Page 4)

INTERFACULTY TENNIS TOURNAMENT REACHES FOURTH ROUND

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Baseball at St. Michael's got off to a flying start this year due to the fact that Marion Shadle, who last fall starred in the box for U.C., is this year registered at St. Mike's. The weak spot of the Double Blue team has always been the pitching, and with this position so ably filled, the rest of the team should fall right into line.

This is, of course, a severe blow to the Red and White, who won the cup last year. Indeed, just now it looks as though they will have difficulty in fielding a team at all, due to the graduation of so many of their regulars. Vic will probably have their usual strong team, led by Daisy Quance, their steady twirler.

Last fall, for the first time, University College entered a freshman team in the basketball series as well as their regular Junior team, which is composed of first and second years. There are always enough girls in the junior years to make up two teams, and it is to be hoped that U.C. will be able to continue this practice, as it keeps the girls who do not make the junior team in their first year interested and in touch with the game.

UPSETS FEATURE TENNIS TOURNAMENT

No Spectacular Matches
As Third Round Finished

FINAL GAMES ON FRIDAY

Yesterday certainly proved a day of upsets in the interfaculty tennis tournament which is taking place at the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club. Meighen, who was expected to have a good chance of getting to the finals, was defeated by Leibel in two straight sets. This match, although not very spectacular, was featured more or less by the steadiness of Leibel. Meighen on the other hand was extremely erratic and a weak back-hand stroke proved his nemesis.

The other grave upset was Griffin's defeat at the hands of Hubert Martin, a university student from Hamilton. Griffin was a seeded player and a great deal was expected from him. However, as was in the case of the former upset already mentioned it was a case of steady playing as opposed to flashy but erratic playing.

Sydney Hermant, who has been a finalist in both the Junior Ontario Tournament and in the Junior Toronto Tennis Club Tournament, is playing a very good all round game and has now reached the fourth round in the lower half.

Noyes and Balfour are both progressing steadily without much difficulty. Noyes' game, however, is not up to the standard of last year, but he has been putting in some hard practice during the past three weeks and perhaps may yet regain his old form. If he does there is very little doubt that he will not reach the finals.

The weather yesterday was ideal for tennis, even better than the first day, the sun which bothered so many players being almost completely hidden by a thick blanket of clouds. The courts are in perfect condition and barring rain, the finals should be played on Friday. The fourth round has now been reached and the remaining matches should prove very interesting.

Draw for to-morrow:

10.00—Noyes vs. Armstrong; Leibel vs. Martin.

11.00—Hermant vs. Abraham; Balfour and Noyes vs. Hamilton and Reid.

12.00—Balfour vs. Drury; Remaining doubles matches.

TRINITY LOSE BACKFIELD STAR IN HEAVY PRACTICE

Trinity College interfaculty rugby team suffered a severe setback yesterday afternoon when George Sweeney, backfield candidate, had the misfortune to break a bone in his right ankle while plunging in practice. The loss of Sweeney means that the Red and Black will be minus a star booter and a promising halfback for the coming Mulock Cup series.

(By A. C. C.)

Reports of the recent Varsity-McGill boat race on the Lachine Canal are indicative of the big way in which this event is featured in Montreal. The members of the local crew were impressed with the extensive advertising which was employed to herald the advent of the great struggle. The Montreal papers played it up for days in advance and even bill-board signs were used. And the result? A crowd of approximately 20,000 people was attracted which dwarfs the Canadian Henley into insignificance. The progress of the race was followed by people in busses and even airplanes. McGill has gone wild over rowing which annually provides a most colorful spectacle on the Lachine.

* * *

Unfortunately, unless the Brule Lake project is pushed through, the race will continue to be held in Montreal and the Royal City will gain the advantages derived from this event. At present there is no site in Toronto suitable for a race of this distance. It is a poor commentary on the foresight of the City of Toronto to permit this annual college classic to go to a more enterprising municipality.

* * *

At present there is no regatta course in Toronto and no definite prospects of there being one in the city which has boasted of its famous oarsmen for years. Any course on the lakefront would be out of the question as the shells would be at the mercy of the wind and weather. The only logical location is the Humber river from the Lakeshore to Bloor Street which would give a stretch of smooth water for a mile and a half. This is the site of the so much talked of and so little done about Brule Lake course.

* * *

Brule Lake has become a political football! Indecision and procrastination, so characteristic of civic affairs, have again hampered this project. We are hearing much these days about unemployment. We are also being told about huge sums that are to be spent by governments and municipalities to alleviate this business depression. Why not commence the construction of Brule Lake course at a time when it would have the two-fold blessing of providing work for the workless and giving to Toronto a regatta course famous the world over?

* * *

Of course, we will be informed that "it will take time".

SOCCER MANAGERS!

A meeting of the Managers of the interfaculty soccer teams to elect a committee of management arrange groupings and draw a schedule, will be held in the Athletic Directorate Room, Hart House, to-morrow at 5 p.m. Presidents of athletics of the various colleges and faculties are asked to see that their manager or other representative is in attendance.

LACK OF ROOTERS FELT AT PRACTICE

Hap Gilbert May Give Supply of Local Colour for Games

DENTS AND SCHOOL SKITS

"We have not decided yet whether to have another rooters' practice this year or not," said Earl Davison, one of the squad of cheer-leaders, in an interview with "The Varsity" last night. The poor attendance at Monday's practice has been attributed to lack of interest and the difficulty of providing inducements for the freshmen to attend.

The cheer-leaders, however, say they are working harder than ever this year, and intend that the games shall lack nothing in local colour. The men on the squad are Earl Davison, III, Vic, Frank Davies, O.C.E., Bill Jacob, III, U.C., and two others yet to be chosen. It is possible that the notorious Hap Gilbert may be enticed to help out.

This year's skits are in charge of B. A. R. Dignan, and are well under way. The Schoolmen are putting on one, and First Year Dents another. It is planned to have the Frosh in a separate section to help the cheering. The C.O.T.C. band may also be in action in the second game, if not in the first.

The ban on parking in front of Hart House still stands. A motion to remove said ban was referred to a sub-committee.

BLUE GOLF CAPTAIN TO NAME TEAM

Three Points to be Considered in Choosing the U. of T. Players

TOURNAMENT AT MCGILL

The personnel of the University of Toronto intercollegiate golf team is expected to be made known this afternoon. While there were some good scores made yesterday morning at Rosedale there are still some cards to come in before Captain Jim Sihler can announce his team.

In choosing his team, Sihler will consider three points. First, past tournament experience; second, handicaps, and third, scores made on the test matches which were played on Monday and Tuesday.

The golf team is composed of six members and following the announcement of its members to-day, it will hold practice flights in preparation for the Intercollegiate tournament in Montreal against McGill on October 17th and 18th.

ROOTERS SHOW LACK OF PIKERS

Season Tickets Go On Sale at Hart House and U. C.

NO TRICKERY TOLERATED

Students' season tickets went on sale Monday at noon in the west common room in Hart House. The sale continued steadily for two hours and T. A. Reed reports that 459 books all told have been sold.

There was a poor attendance at Monday's rooters' practice which was held in Examination Hall, only 14 being present, but evidently no pikers were there for 14 books were disposed of. The sale will be continued Wednesday and Thursday in the west common room starting at 12 o'clock and students are urged to make their purchases early. The books, which contain tickets, not only for the rugby games, but also for hockey games, may be bought for four dollars each. Last year an enormous number was sold and there was a noticeable increase in attendance at the rugby games. There is no reason why the attendance should not be increased this year. After Thursday of this week, tickets will not be obtainable at the west common room, but must be purchased at the office of the Students' Administration Council in Hart House.

Of the five hundred tickets available for women two hundred and thirty-five have already been sold and it was necessary to close the book room until 11.30 yesterday morning.

"There is not the usual rush for Students' Season Tickets this year," said Miss Parkes when interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity".

However, the trickery in human nature is bringing forth the usual attempts to secure more than one ticket to a registration card. This is forestalled this year by the signing of a slip. It is absolutely necessary to present one's registration card before a ticket can be obtained. Miss Parkes finds that the students have become more sensible in regard to crowding Room 82, U.C., and put forth no arguments when regulations are explained.

LEGITIMATE STAGE NOT ELIMINATED

necessity added to fill in. He regretted the need of having to install a sound machine.

Mr. Solman also stated that there would be few musical comedies, most of which were adopted almost immediately to the screen, such as "Nina Rosa", which made its first appearance in Toronto last spring. Also he said that it was purely coincidence that no big shows were appearing at present, as often has occurred lately in other seasons, but that the season would develop and probably the attractions would come at the end. He mentioned that it was difficult to say anything definite, for New York officials give only short notice.

The legitimate stage, in his opinion, is the only worth while stage, but its possibilities in Canada are limited, except for one or two eastern cities and Winnipeg. The remaining part of the west is entirely devoted to the talkies.

Practices commence in October for the presentation, which for the second time is to be given at Hart House Theatre, this year from February 7 to 12, including one matinee and four evening performances. Under the able direction of Dr. Crawford, the club prophesies an even better record than that of last year's five packed performances.

Cultured Moths Gorge at Hart House Are Intoxicated in Library Stacks

By Jocelyn Moore

"Stop me if you've heard this before, but it seems there were two travelling moths who..." No. No. Terrible. Try again. Perhaps the sensational or tabloid style? You know. "Suicide Pact Foiled." Opening of Varsity saves moths sworn to die in each other's arms rather than waste slowly away through starvation. Pictures of emaciated bodies on page three. "H'm. Not too bad, but doesn't suit the aesthetic temperament. Bracket. Id est, Aht for Aht's sake, and asterisk all Big Butter and Egg Men, Stock Brokers, Communists, and Rigid-Carvers. Another bracket. Note delicacy and purity of language, Whom-It-May-Concern. Two brackets, different kinds, like in Algebra. Tut. Progress is what we need, my boy, progress. Ah... No. AH. All in capitals. The comfortable, highly respectable bed time story method. By all means. Mayhap 'twill lull for a brief period the anguished freshman's yearning for the motherly hand that no longer soothes his fevered brow. Reach me a clean handkerchief, please. Thank you. That's better. Draw closer, just a little closer, boys and girls, and I'll... Now go to sleep."

no, and grandma Elsie will tell you a story about the two little moths, Rudie and Mamie. Now Rudie and Mamie were good, well brought up little moths, for moths. But you know moths, my dears. Absolutely no sense of decency—tush! Bracket. No, Grandma Elsie does not refer to that infamous column featured by a well-known college paper, nor to any other unmentionable publication. How could you. Oh. Oh. Grandma Elsie is all of a twitter. Bracket. Now last year Rudie lived extremely well at Hart House, all among the overcoats, while Mamie found the co-eds' chiffon stockings toothsome and good for her girlish figure. (Adv't). In the Easter Holidays tragedy threatened. Being slightly intoxicated at a party at the library, they were locked in the stacks. But fortunately someone from fourth year English and History was there too, so calamity was averted—for our hero and heroine, that is. Grandma Elsie, were they stacks of plates with ice cream and cake on them? No, they were chimney stacks and they were there because it suited them. Now go to sleep.

The S.C.A. Book Exchange closes Saturday, October 11th at noon. Accounts will be settled the following week in S.C.A. library. No old books received after to-day (Wednesday). Watch for further notices.

ARTS ENROLMENT GREATER BY SEVEN

year's grand total of 1468, with 1475 already registered and some 75 to 100 more expected before registration ends. In the first year, the men total 277 compared with 224 women, the men also have the majority in second year with 246 and 181 women, and in third year with 172 of their number and 135 women. But in fourth year, the women outnumber the men by 128 to 112 men.

Victoria College also expects to add a few more to their total of 903 at present to go well over last year's total of 883 which is already well passed. In Victoria the freshmen and freshettes number 281, the sophomores 289, with juniors and seniors at 172 and 181 respectively.

The little red school house boasts a registration of 835, of which 325 are now wearing remnants of green ties. The figures for the other years were not available at the time of going to press and cannot be at present published.

The registration of the Faculty of Dentistry this year totals 204, as well as 13 graduates and 24 dental nurses. The total of 204 consists of 33 first year men, 40 second year students, 31 third year, 34 fourth year and 66 fifth year tooth-extractors.

The faculty of Medicine boasts a registration of 809 this year. The total is divided up fairly consistently between the six years, with 138 new students, 137 in the second year, 130 in third, 121 in fourth, 154 in fifth and 129 optimists in sixth year. With this number School of Science should have some opposition this year.

The registration in the faculty of Forestry totals 61 men this year, with 18 freshmen, 14 sophomores, 4 juniors and 18 senior wood-cutters.

In the College of Education this year, there are 340 registered, of whom approximately 120 are men and 220 are women.

FOREIGNERS LACKING AT HYGIENE SCHOOL FOR PRESENT TERM

Turkish Doctor is Expected to Arrive Soon from New York

SIX FRENCH-CANADIANS

Toronto Offers Best Field Work in Hygiene in Canada

The registration of foreign students at the School of Hygiene this year is somewhat different to other years.

"In former years," explained Dr. Eva Rader, assistant in Hygiene and Practical Medicine, "there was quite an interesting group of strangers at the School, doing post graduate work in research. We had hopes this year that a Turkish doctor, who has been studying at the Rockefeller Foundation in the United States, would come to us to do research work in bacteriology. However, he was due on October 1, and has not appeared yet."

"We have six French-Canadians enrolled, but they could certainly not be called foreigners. They understand English, though they do not speak it. Once their work is over they will return to Quebec as directors of county health units."

"One thing that I hope will be appreciated this year," added Dr. Mader, "is the work done by our field course. It is the best of its kind in Canada, and gives a splendid opportunity to fifth year students for practical work before and after the college year."

The total enrolment in the School has not been verified as yet. It is thought that owing to the increase in medical students the number will be greater than last year.

Public Health Nursing registers 49 students, an increase of six over last year. There are 22 graduate nurses in Course I, 27 undergraduates in Course II.

FLAPPER'S MANNER A BUSINESS ASSET

Vocational Bureau Director Advises Chisness in Appearance

PICK LESS OBVIOUS LINES

There is no objection at all to the flapper type in business, co-eds will be relieved to hear. In fact, that the smart looking and smartly dressed girl has a decided advantage over her dreamy or frowsy sister, is the opinion of Miss True Davidson, of the Vocational Bureau, under the direction of the Canadian Federation of University Women.

Miss Davidson stressed the importance of deciding definitely on one's intentions in the first year, and taking those subjects of greatest value. Also, to find out what professional courses are available as post-graduate work—such as nursing, social service, library work.

The activities of undergraduates are also of importance in their future careers. Working in a store during Christmas would help in a selling career, tutorial work in teaching, "Varsity" reporting in journalism, etc.

The co-ed is strongly advised to think of less obvious lines of work—to be original in her choice. This year the field is flooded with dieticians and teachers whom it is hard to place, whereas secretaries and sales positions offer greater opportunities.

BENEFIT RECITAL WILL AID FORMER CARILLONEUR

Mr. Skillicorn, Injured in the Ottawa River, is Still in Hospital

Mr. Skillicorn, assistant carillonneur at Ottawa and formerly of Hart House, is still quite ill in a Toronto hospital. It will be remembered that Mr. Skillicorn met with an accident last summer in the Ottawa River. As a result of diving into the river which happened to be very shallow he struck his head and became paralyzed. His condition is still serious although he is able to move his arms. He will not be able to play for at least two or three years. In the meantime Mr. Richardson has been playing here at Hart House.

There will be a special recital on the Hart House carillon in aid of Mr. Skillicorn. It is hoped that Mr. P. Price, carillonneur in the Peace Tower at Ottawa, will be present to play the bells on that occasion.

Mr. A. G. Burns hopes to make a further announcement in "The Varsity" this week.

ADDITION TO MINING BUILDING UNDER WAY

New Laboratories and Lecture Rooms to be Finished in March

GRANT OF $225,000 MADE

"The new building which is being erected immediately to the north of the Mining Building is to be used exclusively by the Department of Mining," stated the superintendent of grounds and buildings, Colonel A. D. LePan to "The Varsity" in a short interview yesterday.

For some time past the Mining Building has been too small and classes have been held in various buildings about the campus. This new building will house laboratories and lecture rooms which will be used by the students studying Mining Engineering and its branches.

The building is expected to be completed some time in March. A part of the new building will be the continuation of the present one story building; the addition being two stories in height. The other section, a little to the north, will be an entirely new building of four stories.

The cost of this building will be in the neighbourhood of $225,000, the money being supplied by the government.

OXFORD COMMISSION MAKES INSPECTION OF LOCAL LIBRARIES

Sir Henry Mier is Favourably Impressed by University Library IN SEARCH OF NEW IDEAS

Bodleian Committee Visiting Leading American Libraries

Have the University of Toronto and the Toronto public libraries any ideas that may be new to the University of Oxford?

The answer seemed to be that they have yesterday, when the six members of the Bodleian Library Commission visiting the Public and University Libraries of America inspected the University and College Street Libraries under the direction of the Librarians, W. S. Wallace and Dr. George Locke.

"Of course we have only looked through the libraries, and so I can't really give you any impressions. The university library seems to be dealing with the same problem that we have at Oxford—an old building that is very hard to add to and a very pressing lack of space," Sir Henry A. Mier, Fellow of Magdalen College and chairman of the commission told "The Varsity," after the commission had been through the university library.

The commission is visiting the university and public libraries of Canada and the United States to inspect modern scientific library methods under operation and to choose the most suitable for application in the new wing of the Bodleian that is being planned. Sir Henry explained the position of (Continued on Page 4)

"Poplars" Chosen by House Committee from International Exhibit

The picture over the fireplace in the west common room in Hart House is one of the best examples of the work of F. S. Haines, the Canadian artist. It was selected from all his other work in the important exhibition of Canadian artists held during last summer in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other leading North American cities. It represents a Canadian woodland scene and is entitled "Poplars".

The picture was chosen by the 1929-30 House Committee and was purchased for Hart House in the spring of this year out of the profits of last year's Hart House Masquerade.

PLAYERS' GUILD PLANS HART HOUSE PRODUCTION

Will Present Congreve's "Way of the World" in December

At the opening meeting and tea of the Players' Guild of University College, held in the Women's Union yesterday afternoon, it was stated that in all probability the Guild will produce Congreve's "The Way of the World" in Hart House on the fifth and sixth of December, with a matinee performance on Saturday the sixth. It is intended to make this the most outstanding piece of dramatic art ever produced by an organization of the Guild type. This will, however, in no way interfere with the weekly plays which this Guild puts on in its own little theatre. The first rendering of "The Way of the World" will take place on the stage of Hart House Theatre this Friday afternoon at 3.

The Guild will attempt more than ever before to put on original plays, that is, plays written by members of the Guild, and it is giving a special invitation to embryo playwrights to attend its meetings.

NEW MUSEUM WING IS NOT MEMORIAL

Official Unaware of Gift of Thousand Dollars to Museum

PLAN NOT CONSIDERED

Rumour that the new wing of the Royal Ontario Museum would take the form of a war memorial was emphatically spiced by James O'Brian, K.C., chairman of the museum trust in an interview with "The Varsity" yesterday.

"I can't say that the suggestion was any more than made. It was never seriously considered," he said.

When told that there was a story circulating that the gift of $1,000 in the hands of the Ontario Government for the carillon in the Parliament Buildings may be applied to the museum he said, "What thousand dollars? I haven't heard anything about it. There was talk of making a war memorial but never any of making the new wing a memorial."

"The Varsity" was unable to reach Dr. W. A. Parks, but Miss Greenaway, of the department of Archaeology, said that it had been mentioned two years ago, but that nothing had resulted.

WOMEN'S LITERARY SOCIETY HOLD ANNUAL ELECTIONS

"First Duchess of Newcastle" is Topic of Paper Read Before Society

An unusually large number attended the first meeting of the U.C. Women's Literary Society, held Tuesday night, October 7th, at the Women's Union. The executive for the year consisted of: Miss Aileen Turner, president; Miss Patricia Godfrey, vice-president; Miss Maureen McCowan, treasurer; Miss Sophia Buckingham, secretary; 4th year representative, Miss Margaret Douglas; 2nd year representative, Miss Primrose MacLean. The first and third year representatives have not yet been elected.

The topic of the evening was a paper on the "First Duchess of Newcastle", by Miss Patricia Godfrey. Lady Newcastle was one of the most individual characters of any age, who evoked both criticism and praise. At the next meeting, which will probably be held Tuesday night, Oct. 21, a paper on the poetry of T. S. Eliott will be given by Miss Buckingham. Further notice will be given in "The Varsity".

C.O.T.C. Will Commence Season's Activities; An Option for Physical Training

Plans are under way for the immediate commencement of the activities of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps. This is a university organization, which allows physical training credit for all drills, parades, etc. Band music plays a considerable part in the C.O.T.C., and undergraduates who are musically inclined may obtain practical experience under the distinguished leadership of Capt. John Slater, Bandmaster of the 48th Highlanders.

By means of academic Military Studies or by special lectures, members of the corps may qualify for Certificate "A" (Lieut.), and Certificate "B" (Capt.). This is the only method by which officers' qualification may be gained without first registration. (Continued on Page 4)

PROF. HAVELOCK TALKS TO VICTORIA COLLEGE S. C. M.

"S. C. M. Groups Students in Search for Finest Life Possible"

"The thing that S.C.M. does is to group students together to search for the finest life possible," stated Mrs. Jean Hutchinson, addressing the Victoria Women's Student Christian Movement last Friday evening at Wymillwood. The Victoria S.C.M., she explained, is one of sixty groups across Canada, all linked together by a federal council. This in turn is one unit of the World's Student Christian Federation, including students from 31 different countries in every part of the globe.

Professor E. A. Havelock of Victoria College spoke informally on "The Place of Religion in Student Life". "In college those who take religion seriously know that it stands to provoke a need quite as much as to fill one." At college we should learn to think, to detach ourselves, he declared, from our petty circles, and become more than merely a cog in the wheel.

"No wonder there is a slump in religion," he continued. "We have lost the old direct way and few of us want (Continued on Page 3)

"CHEAP ENTERTAINER"

Co-Eds Remain Unfriendly to the "Crooning Troubadour"

Varsity should not follow the lead of Maine and permit its anthem to add to the entertainment provided by "the crooning troubadour" for the delectation of American radio audiences, was the opinion expressed strongly to "The Varsity" by undergraduates yesterday. Of a representative number of undergraduates questioned only three expressed even faint approbation of Rudy's project. Among the ladies there seemed to be a considerable antipathy to the inimitable Rudy, but even so, their reasons for objecting were not based on personal opinions.

A Rudy Hater, Stobie of U.C. I, trying hard to stifle his anti-Vallee feelings, scoffs at the idea of publicity. "Why not get Sir Robert's picture in the paper as the star of an all-night drinking bout? That would get the same kind of publicity which Mr. Dunlop intends to give to the Alma Mater."

Marian Draper, I Vic.: "Vallee sings only for professional gain. I really cannot see him singing our 'Royal Blue and White'."

Charles Norris, I U.C.: "It is merely commercializing our song and should not be permitted."

B. D. Park, III S.P.S.: "It would only cheapen our song to have it sung in the dance halls of the continent."

M. Pulver, III S.P.S.: "I fully agree with Harvard."

PLANET X NOW NAMED PLUTO BY SAVANTS

Man's Mind Can Comprehend Aspects of Universe, Says Collins

ASTRONOMY SOCIETY MEETS

"No matter how far you thrust back the universe the mind of man can touch it," said J. R. Collins, president of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada at the first meeting of the term in the Physics Building last night.

"We estimate the most distant stars that we can observe to be two million light years away and light travels with a speed of 186,000 miles per second. And yet there are those who say that we are wasting our time studying the stars," he said.

Planet X has now a name. It has been called "Pluto" by the little daughter of an English astronomer, and the name has been accepted by the Lowell Observatory men who discovered the new planet. The little girl thought it should be called after the god of darkness because it was so far out.

In his diagram illustrating the orbit of Pluto, Mr. Collins showed how it swung out beyond the orbit of Neptune in almost the whole of its circuit which takes 200 years to complete. However, in 1989 it will in its orbit swing closer to the sun than the Neptune orbit.

"Lowell certainly deserves the great credit for the discovery of Pluto," concluded Mr. Collins.

VALLEE DICTORY

The students of the University of Toronto don't want their song drooled over the ether by Rudy Vallee.

This conclusion was made fairly obvious on the campus yesterday as undergraduates discussed "The Varsity's" stand on the matter. On all sides the action of the Publicity Director was roundly criticized. The view was generally voiced that the undergraduate body—either directly or through its elected representatives—should be given opportunity to express itself on the question before "The Blue and White" was relegated to the realm of torch ballads and sentimental fox-trots.

It seems reasonable, at least, that the matter be held over by the Simcoe Hall bureaucracy until the S.A.C. has had a chance to deliver itself of an opinion. The S.A.C. is theoretically the body elected to supervise student activities and look out for the interests of the undergraduates. Whatever Simcoe Hall may think, "The Blue and White" is generally regarded as a song peculiarly the property of the undergraduate, and he is quite within his rights when he insists on being given a chance to say whether or not his property is to be handed over, in the interests of "justifiable publicity", to the unholy hands of radio crooners and dance-hall potentates.

What is Mr. Dunlop going to do about it? Is the matter to go through on the well-oiled wheels of officialdom, or are the students to be given their say?

BRULE LAKE COMEDY

Like many another sane and legitimate project, the Brule Lake course has been permitted to degenerate into a shuttlecock to be batted between the opposing camps of civic political blocs. Meanwhile, a splendid opportunity is being missed to put the City of Toronto back into the rowing limelight where it belongs, to give concrete encouragement to the valiant hearts of University of Toronto rowing circles who have trained faithfully and well for years to go annually down to Lachine and beat McGill in an Intercollegiate race which surpasses in colour any other event of its kind in Canada.

Varsity has taken the Intercollegiate rowing title in foreign waters for three years, while the home rosters haven't even been permitted a glimpse of their crew in action. Montreal has been permitted to feature an event which is already on its way to become the Oxford-Cambridge boat race of this country. Toronto politicians play their politics and to block all efforts to put through the Brule project.

It is time the comedy was ended and the sane thing was done.

VICTORIA PARLIAMENT OPENS THIS EVENING

Complete Procedure to be Employed in Debate on Value of Courses

The formal opening of Victoria College parliament this evening in Alumni Hall institutes the commencement of the debating season of that college. The ceremony will be carried on with a great amount of parliamentary procedure, as it is felt that the new union which is still somewhat of an experiment, is a training centre for the purpose of adding traditional features, and familiarity with the form of procedure. Accordingly there will be present the representative of the Governor-General in the person of Chancellor Wallace, the speaker and parliamentary leaders in formal dress, a sergeant-at-arms, and even some freshmen, who, dressed in Eton collars and shorts, will act as page boys. The subject of the debate is to be in the form of a bill, briefly, that the university at present does not recognize dissimulation in the capacities of men and women for learning, and that some courses should be exclusive to men or to women as the case might be. The government will recommend that women be refused admittance for study in such courses as applied science and theology and the men from such as dental nursing, modern languages and household science. The greater part of the meeting will be given to short speeches from the floor of the house. Not a few senior students who are recognized as capable debaters, are expected to address themselves to the speaker, James Gibson.

There is complete party organization, from the premier, Miss Marion Haugh, and the leader of the opposition, Earl Lautenslager, down to the party whips, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. The debate promises to be close and full of spritely interest, and already the Whigs have chosen a cabinet in anticipation of the overthrow of the government. Also general enthusiasm at Victoria indicates that there will be a full house at 7.45, at which time the Governor-General appears.

CHAMPUS CAT

N.York, Oct. 9.

W. J. Dunlop,
Dir. of Ex. and Pub.,
University of Toronto.

Dear Sir,—

We are in receipt of your letter accepting our offer to give your University the publicity it thus far has failed to receive in the ears of the Great American Public.

You will no doubt be delighted to learn that Mr. Valet has made the necessary changes in the verses of "The Blue and White", in order to popularize the song with the American people.

In fact Mr. Valet has translated the entire composition from the original Canadian dialect into intelligent American.

Unfortunately the tune of the chorus has been found inadequate for modern orchestration, so Mr. Valet has seen fit to replace it with that of a Negro spiritual not yet on the market.

Because of the fact that the tempo of your university hymn is not of the type popular with his one hundred and ten million radio admirers, Mr. Valet has decided to change it to either Fox Trot time, Waltz time or Spring Time.

We feel sure that you will be glad to co-operate with us in our work as it will result in profitable advertising for your university and will draw the attention of the American Public to the fact that there are facilities for education in Canada.

In order to endear the author's name to all 100 per cent. Americans we would also like to make public the idea that the composer was formerly a professor of American History at the University of Toronto.

The foreign name "Toronto" has been found unsuitable for crooning so Mr. Valet is changing it to "Terre Haute" in order to impart the necessary American atmosphere.

Copies of the improved version of the song will shortly be on sale at all music stores.

I remain,

Yours truly,

Pancho Squoot,

See Valet Inc.

P.S.—We would welcome any further contributions of Canadian, Cree, or Eskimo folk-songs.

P.S. Gaspard McGuffey.

Vallee's Insipid Nonsense

Editor,

"The Varsity",

Dear Sir:—

I view with the utmost apprehension and alarm the decision of Mr. W. J. Dunlop to permit that illustrious(?) musician, Rudy Vallee, to croon the "Blue and White" to an eager and waiting world over the radio.

Let us first consider that Mr. Vallee, with intrepidity in keeping with his dynamic personality, last summer ventured into the wilds of our native land, during the course of which visit he saw fit to voice some very derogatory (not to say impolite) remarks regarding the quality of Canadian womanhood. Now the fact remains that in spite of the decision of Mr. Vallee, whom we will admit is an authority, we are very fond, yes and proud, of our Canadian girls. In fact, nearly all of us, during the course of our lives, have known many Canadian girls who have not only measured up fully to Mr. Vallee's standards of pulchritude, but have displayed a pleasant combination of sensibility, sweetness and fellowship which I, at any rate, in my, perhaps limited, experience, have found sadly lacking in the feminine representatives of the drinkless union. In justice to the co-eds of this university, who with their Canadian sisters, have been subjected to Mr. Vallee's scorn, I think we should at least request this crooner of insipid nonsense to leave our Alma Mater in a condition in which we can still respect it.

Next let us look for a moment at the "Blue and White" itself. We are proud of our song, and glad to say that in times past it has been the battle cry of strong men and brave women, sung in a frank, straightforward Canadian manner. How will Vallee treat it? Undoubtedly it will be sung with a tilt of the Byronic head, with sleepily closed eyes, and drawled forth in a sentimental, unctuous voice. Can you not hear our "Velut arbor aeo" as it glides from the Vallee left nostril? The thought is not a pretty one, nor, I believe, is it one which the undergraduates of this university will tolerate. This song has been written and sung to cheer men on to victory, not to produce biological tremors in the hearts of a million sentimental shop-girls.

And there is yet another danger. If our "Blue and White" should capture public fancy Mr. Vallee may take the liberty of immortalizing it through the medium of the gramophone record. This will make the song deplorably well known. All countries and all classes of life will have it upon their lips from morning till night. Office boys will whistle it to the annoyance of stenographers; the ditch-digger will swing his pick to its stirring beats; the lowly farm hand will shout it to the skies as he feeds the swine; and the convict will chant it softly as he paces to and fro in his cell. Mr. Vallee's exploitation of the Stein Song has made the University of Maine the butt of every cheap joke and the ridicule of two nations. It is not for nothing that Harvard refused Mr. Vallee's request. Are we to walk into what may prove a dangerous and embarrassing position without voicing a protest?

I must apologize, Mr. Editor, for the length of the letter, but it is a big subject. I believe, as do many others, I think, that (as Mark Twain would have said) "something should be done about it."

Yours sincerely,

JT2 VIC.

Job for S.A.C.

The Editor,

"The Varsity",

Dear Sir:—

We notice that ghastly statement in "The Varsity", this (Wednesday) morning that "Rudy Vallee gets official O.K. to croon U. of T. song on the air". Words cannot describe my utter disappointment in the judgment of the University Extension Department. "Justifiable Publicity" is given as the excuse, and excuse it must be. The "Blue and White" is the students' song and should be sacred to every graduate and undergraduate. We will now hear "The Blue and White" crooned and played by everyone, whether they have ever been to Varsity or not. We may just as well say that the University of Toronto has no individual song as give it up for radio broadcasting.

Furthermore, Sir, we notice that local dance emporiums are using the "Blue and White" as a dance number. On the rugby field when the "Blue and White" is played everyone stands at attention in due reverence to "Our Song" and University. Sir, if I may use the word, is it not rather sacrilegious in relation to our time-honoured tradition to use the "Blue and White" as a common jazz number? Are we to have our beloved "Blue and White" reduced to the degrading standard of modern jazz? I think it is high time that the Board of Governors set their foot on this cheapest form of advertising. Varsity students will give their Alma Mater more publicity in their academic and post-academic achievements than Rudy Vallee will ever accomplish with his croaking on the air.

We notice that Harvard refused to have their songs used as static in the air. But yet the "Blue and White" has been released by those who very seldom use it. Should not this question of the students' song be settled by the S.A.C. as the official student organization rather than by the Extension Department?

I sincerely hope that my fellow students will take exception to this hasty action of the University Extension Department so that we may reclaim our "Blue and White".

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE TRACK AND FIELD MEET POSTPONED

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The tennis team which will represent University College in the inter-faculty series will be announced this morning after the second and final round of the college tourney has been completed. Twenty-one girls entered the competition, and of these Jean MacIntyre, Jean MacLeod and Marge Conboy are particularly noteworthy. Jed Gray, last year's star, had a bye in the first round and should make the team without any difficulty.

The tourney at Vic has reached the third round, and the personnel of the team should be announced by Friday night. The Red and Gold have lost practically all of last year's team through graduation, and it is rather difficult yet to predict just how their team will stack up. However, Margaret Swartz, who played last year, and Eileen McDermott, of two years ago, will form the nucleus.

St. Hilda's team is practically the same as last year. There was little good material among the freshmen, but the Saints have a strong team, and are expected to go far. Bea Symons, Sally Ballard, Betty Carter and Ruth Harrison are all playing again and the final selection will be made to-day.

Some of the members of St. Michael's last year's team are back again

DRAMATIC INITIATIONS AT ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE

Freshettes Entertain Sophomores with Amusing Skits and Operettas

The annual initiation of St. Joseph's College took place in the college common room last evening when staff and students were entertained by the delightful and original plays given by the freshettes. One produced by the freshettes in residence depicted a scene in a railway station waiting room. This introduced characters of every description from grandma and her fussy granddaughter to a book seller and a coloured gentleman who sat on the ginger snaps. The play given by the day pupils was an operetta entitled "The Effect of Civilization on Over-Production", during which a quartette rendered suitable music.

A court composed of sophomores tried and sentenced refractory freshettes in an able and efficient manner. The delightful evening was brought to a close by refreshments and dancing.

Principal W. H. Fife of Queen's University was given what he termed a "most gratifying" reception by the student body on his arrival in Kingston recently.

and going better than ever. Lorraine Patterson and Loretta McGarry have been playing hard all summer and are going great guns. The Double Blue tournament will be over by Friday night.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Last night the intercollegiate football team worked out in the rain and on a soggy field, concluding their practice with a scrimmage with the Argonauts. Both teams mixed it freely. No downs were counted and for awhile the Blue and White took the offensive and then the Argos took a turn. At first the locals had things their own way and broke through the opposing line with regularity. The Rowers came to life and had the Varsity squad on the run. Darkness forced the cessation of hostilities.

Coach "Les" Blackwell stated last night that he had not decided upon the line-up for Saturday's game with McGill, but intimated that it would be announced to-day. One thing is certain, however, that Johnny Fitzpatrick will not be in uniform due to the injury to his knee incurred during the Argonaut-U. of T. fixture of last Saturday. Fitzpatrick had the ligaments of his knee badly wrenched when tackled after making a pretty run. Ruddell or Jimmy Sinclair will probably replace him on the half line.

Bill Adams is another player who will be unable to get into the opening game of the intercollegiate series. He had his little finger spiked and nearly torn off in a practice some time ago. The injury has not yielded to treatment as quickly as was expected.

The R.M.C. intermediate footballers defeated McGill 19 to 13 right in Montreal Saturday in an exhibition match. Indications are that the cadets have an unusually strong aggregation, but it was hardly expected that they could go up to senior class and topple the Redmen. Perhaps McGill was experimenting. Since then St. Germaine and Swabey have been added to the Red and White squad and they will undoubtedly bolster the team both offensively and defensively.

The intermediate intercollegiate season opens in the Limestone City Saturday when the Blue and White lock horns with R.M.C. The Kingston twelve is known to have strength in view of their unexpected victory over McGill. As for Varsity, they are an unknown quantity, composed mainly of green players. The intermediates will be strengthened by five of the Orphans, who will be released to-day. One thing the Varsity team has and that is a coach who has the absolute confidence of his men. Doug MacFadyen is at the helm and he is certain to get the most out of his team.

INTERMEDIATE TEAM TENTATIVE LINE-UP FOR GOLF MATCHES

Work-Out on a Wet Field Brings to Light Some Excellent Material

DOUG MACFADYEN COACH

The Blue Intermediate rugby team worked out on the back campus yesterday afternoon and despite the slipperiness of the ground and ball the kicking and catching was pretty. Those may be as green and inexperienced as they are rated, but what they lack in experience they sure make it up in effort and earnestness. Doug MacFadyen is their coach and the boys have every confidence in his ability and leadership.

The intermediates are the university's third team and the boys are for the most part graduates from inter-faculty and junior teams, a few, however, have come down from the Orphans, and more are expected next week when Coach Lou Carroll makes his ent in the Blue's second team.

The intermediate team is grouped this year with the Royal Military College and Queen's. The strength of these teams is indicated by the fact that R.M.C. defeated McGill's senior team 19-13 last Saturday. The Blue team tangles with the Soldiers this Saturday in Kingston, and are not in the least intimidated by reports but have high hopes of forcing the Army to retreat quite often to their own end of the field. The boys have a fast moving machine and have every confidence in the result. The personnel of the team is: DeMille, Riggs, Winrow, Freidfeld, Spott, Wetherspoon, Longstaff, Gibb, Kelly, Kress, Gregory, Pugsley, Cwerling, Walker, Strimer, Kingsbury, Sheppard, Jackson, Buchanan, Reid, Blackford, King, Hume and Litowitz.

Four Players for McGill Match on Saturday Already Picked

FINAL PLAY-OFF FRIDAY

Four of the six members of the Varsity golf team, who will play in the series of matches against McGill and Queen's, in Montreal, on or about October 17th, have been decided upon. Heading the list is J. Sihler, president of the golf club, a steady low-scorer with considerable tournament experience. Next is D. Anderson, secretary of the golf club, a member of the team for several years past, and R. Wilkinson, a fine match player who, for the past three years, has never lost an intercollegiate contest. The fourth man is M. Payne, who has been a serious contender for the team for several seasons.

The remaining two places will be decided by a play-off over the Rosedale course, Friday morning, between the following: J. Anderson, A. Brant, G. Edwards, W. Flett, L. Fraser, T. Loundsborough, J. Prince, J. Stothers, J. Sinclair and P. Robert.

These contestants all turned in scores within five strokes of one another and it was thought unfair to eliminate some of these without a further trial.

It is noteworthy that over 70 players participated in the qualifying rounds, several promising young players, of which the 10 above are a few, taking part.

Three experienced players of past seasons were unable to qualify owing to the examination rule, namely, Geo. Boeckel, Jack Nash and Bill Eckhardt, and while their experience and ability will be missed, we are certain that the above team will continue to hold the trophy Varsity has guarded for the past three seasons.

RAIN AGAIN FORBIDS THE U.C. TRACK MEET

Standish, Laughlin, Smith, Vila, Peart to be College Hopes

FROSH, DARK HORSES

For the second year in succession the track meet of University College was postponed because of unfavourable weather.

The meet was attracting considerable attention amongst both the general student body and also the track enthusiasts of the college who are regarding the U.C. a little uncertainly this year.

It is feared that due to the loss through graduation of Bill Finlayson, Gord Jermyn and Bob Eagel, the U.C. team will not measure up to past standards but U.C. still have plenty of strength. In Ralph Standish, captain of U.C. track team, they have a quarter miler who can chase anyone around the cinder track, and be right up there at the finish. George Laughlin is one nice hurdler and Don Smith must not be forgotten. Don is a good miler and is noted for his terrific sprint at the finish of his runs. Bob Dennis is expected to take Bill Finlayson's place as chief point getter. Then there's Fred Peart, who's going to be up there when the 880 is completed and Jack Vila is also back to form for the mile and it is general knowledge in the college that Jack knows how to pick them up and lay them down. With a good crop of frosh, all longing to spring a black horse on the veterans, old U.C. is more apt than not to have just as interesting a meet as any and maybe more so.

to bother thinking the thing through." Dorothy Bishop led a singsong, and Margaret Gairns gave an outline of the year's programme. The latter includes a field large enough to give all the students opportunity for their special interests. She stated the need of volunteer workers for University Settlement, Church of All Nations, etc., and the benefit derived from such work. Ruth Sparling told of the different study groups which had been arranged for the year, and the meeting was thrown open for informal discussion. Refreshments were served.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY SPENDS TWENTY MILLION

Construction of Stadium and Buildings Increases Value

Special to "The Varsity"

Columbus, Ohio.—An investment of $21,175,981.40 at the close of the University's fiscal year, ending June 30, was shown in the annual report of Carl E. Steeb, business manager of Ohio State University.

This figure, representing Ohio State's investment in education, is a gain of more than $2,800,000 over last year's of $1,780,695.74, which was added to the University's balance sheet for the first time, accounts for the greater part of the increase.

When the Stadium was completed in 1922 the athletic department assumed the indebtedness outstanding against it. The University through its board of trustees was not authorized to accept the Stadium until all the obligations were paid. The payment of $118,000 in notes during the last year wiped out the entire debt.

The value of buildings, ground and equipment is now placed at $20,042,882.20, as compared with $17,188,011 for last year.

Completion of Derby Hall, expenditures for the new Pharmacy and Bacteriology Building, completion of the new chemistry laboratory, more than $40,000 for additional land, about $45,000 for roads, walks, etc., as well as the addition of the Stadium, comprise the chief increases.

Tush!

The Scourge of the Lord

By P. A. Gardner

FLAMING FABLES

The taxi-driver was about to pay the death penalty. His last request was "Hang me by the telephone!"

A certain Scotsman was introduced to a lady whom he discovered from her thinly veiled allusions to be of scarcely impeccable character. On being invited to visit her he replied diplomatically, "Well, when ye hae a free evenin' I'll come ower."

"Oh, baby, be careful with those eyes!"

"Well, papa, if you'd loosen up and buy me some marbles I wouldn't have to play with the stock!"

ONLY FANCY!

(Society stuff and such)

So rigid are the social requirements in Malaya that recently a man was ostracized for not having a kris in his trousers.

Rudolph (Sleepy) Vallee, a local boy, (no, no, not from Ontario!), has at last consented to croon the Hejaz University Song in his own indescribable manner over the well-known Air (formerly of Free as Air). Hejaz authorities are preparing for a frenzied rush from all parts of the Universe to enrol in the University that gave the world "Doowaka Dreemghal Hejaz", as the song, especially revised by Rudy Himself, is called. Rudy will be known as the man who put the Jazz in Hejaz.

Rudy is the Special Premium in God's Great Radio Package.

Mr. Chesterton mentioned on Friday night that he fancied he had seen a statue of Robert Burns while driving about Toronto. No, no, G. K., that's Sir John A. Macdonald.

Had Shakespeare been wise to Papa Paradox's methods he might have saved poor Hamlet all that worry by writing, "To be is not to be; there is no question!"

We distinctly heard G. K. say, "This evening I am performing a double roll," and we were so disappointed that he didn't do it after all.

With practically every other possible wisecrack made by someone or other, it seems odd that no one thought of shouting, "Three chairs for G. K. Chesterton!"

It strikes us as rather ironical that after all the leagues of nickels which have gleamed hopefully in the suns of succeeding years the new building should turn out to be not the crucially needed "Hart House for Women", but just another residence.

From all reports, the Schoolboy Sophs consider freshmen of all faculties grist for their mill; none within miles, in fact, seem to have been missed from their grill. No other faculty, probably, displays such magnificently indiscriminate benevolence. They cordially welcome all the little froshes in just like Alice's crocodile.

Tush announces with deeply moral delight that all of the gentlemen referred to in this column last week have returned to their spouses with commendable alacrity. May we remind these broad-minded gentlemen that Tush-money to the amount of fifty dollars each is forthcoming at once. Should any of those in question be so careless as to overlook this obligation, next week's issue will contain a list headed RETURNED FROM A BROAD.

J. Enlow, II S.P.S.: "The far funniest broadcast of our song by Mr. Vallee will be invaluable publicity to the university."

Miss I. Fitzsimmons, IV U.C.: "It's too good a song to be wasted on an interpreter of dance music."

S. Ball, Pres. II S.P.S.: "Rudy is only a cheap entertainer and won't last long. We don't want to hand our song over to him."

J. Hinchcliff, I Trinity: "I agree with the editorial. I think the song would be wasted on Rudy's audiences."

Steve Legate, III Meds: "I don't think Varsity needs that sort of publicity."

Eleanor Hollinger, Public Health: "I am rather undecided, but inclined to agree with 'The Varsity'."

Joe Gold, III U.C.: "I think we should let Rudy sing the song. It would be a good way to have the students learn it."

Sophomore President Assures Freshmen of Friendliness of Lecturers

"I have learned in the past year to trust my professors as I would a dog," said "Nat" Shaw, popular president of second year U.C., at the annual Soph-Frosh banquet of that college held in Great Hall last night. In proposing the toast to the college, he informed the first year that they would find at Varsity not only a friendly attitude on the part of their lecturers, but also the existence of a real U.C. spirit which they should endeavour to assimilate.

In reply, Principal M. W. Wallace also emphasized the friendliness of the college, although he suspected that most of the freshmen would still be "rather overwhelmed by the immensity of things" at the university. "Most of you will form associations here," he said, "that will be a delight and satisfaction to you throughout your lives."

In the course of a very witty and entertaining reply to the toast to the (Continued on Page 4)

ALOERMAN JOE WRIGHT FAVOURS BRULE LAKE

Ample Accommodation Provided on Proposed Course for Onlookers

"If the plan they showed me is carried out, Toronto will have the greatest course in the world, and I have seen most of them," was the comment of Bob Pearce, world's amateur sculling champion, in reference to the proposed Brule Lake Regatta Course. The above quotation is taken from a statement issued to the "Varsity" by Alderman Joe Wright.

In his statement, Mr. Wright refutes various attempts by the down town press to discourage the Brule Lake project. One paper mentioned that there would be a shortage of accommodation for spectators, but the facts, as presented by Mr. Wright, show that more than 100,000 could easily be accommodated.

The recent defeat of McGill University by Toronto Varsity, for the third successive year, brings the matter to a head. The proposed course, to extend from the mouth of the Humber to Bloor Street, would be one of the finest on the continent. Students of Varsity, producing some of the finest oarsmen in Canada, should be given the opportunity to see them in action.

Yankee Crooner May Infringe Copyright of College Anthem

Although University Officials Sent Copy of Song Book to Rudy Vallee, the Official Song is Copyrighted

AUTHOR, C. E. BUSH, LEAVES MATTER TO STUOENTS

Copyright was Offered to University in Letter to the Chairman of Board of Governors, but No Action Taken

Copyright law may be the means by which Rudy Vallee, crooner and orchestra leader, will be prevented from jazzing up Varsity's "The Blue and White", for radio purposes, although the University Extension Department has sent him a copy of the song book.

C. E. Bush, who graduated in 1907, author of the music of the anthem, and holder of the copyright which was taken out shortly after composition, told "The Varsity" last night, that as far as he was concerned it was entirely for the students to decide whether Vallee was to use the song or not.

"If the students want him to sing it, it's all right with me. If they are opposed to his singing it, I am with them," he said.

He explained that he had written to Canon H. J. Cody, Chairman of the Board of Governors, last spring offering the copyright to the university through him. Although Canon Cody replied at the time, thanking him, the transfer of the copyright had not been as yet made.

W. J. Dunlop, who had the copy of the university song book sent to Rudy, said that he had never heard of Rudy Vallee and thought that the name was some sort of abbreviation of Rudolph Valentino, in a press interview yesterday.

The members of the faculty who were interviewed yesterday, seemed very reluctant to state their views in the matter. However, in general, they all seemed to think the publicity given to the song would help the university very little, if at all. A few seemed to think the matter was not serious enough to deserve so much attention.

"I should hate to think that the reputation of the University of Toronto depends on the musical ability of Rudy Vallee," stated Professor W. V. McAndrew, Registrar of University College. "The reputation of the university depends on the hard work of the individual student and it is up to them to maintain the standard. I am utterly indifferent as to whether Rudy Vallee sings our songs or not and think he can do little harm or little good either."

"There will be a regular monthly meeting of the Students' Administrative Council this noon and the subject will probably come up there," said A. Gordon Burns, Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C. "It would probably be best not to say anything until then as the whole question will probably be aired at the meeting."

Professor A. T. DeLeury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, claimed that he had not been asked to sing over the radio and so had nothing to say about the question. As he was utterly unversed in the whole matter Dean DeLeury thought it best not to give a (Continued on Page 4)

Women

FIRST DELIGHT WEARS OFF

Among the women of the university, the general war-cry seems to be "Down with Rudy Vallee"—and the farther down the better! This is the result of Rudy's request that he be allowed to make use of our university anthem to express some of his syncopeing rhythm. Although exclamations of delight were heard from all sides when the announcement first appeared, nevertheless opinion soon veered to the side of the opposition when the more serious aspects of the case were presented.

In spite of the seemingly general annoyance at the orchestra leader, opinion is divided among some of the co-eds. The main argument advanced by Rudy's loyal supporters is that no harm would result, and it might promote the interests of the college throughout the continent. One fair (Continued on Page 2)

Revellers Recourse To Religious Rites

A strange procession made its way along St. George St. in the dim watches of last night. Preceded by a number of ghostly figures clad only in white surplices and followed by sixty or seventy shadowy forms, there appeared what seemed to be a very corpulent bishop in all the regalia of office. Directly in front of him were two acolytes, sprinkling water on the imaginary faithful who lined the route. In dead silence the column made its way to 103 St. George. Then, with all the traditional pomp and ceremony of the Anglican church, a service was begun in which the whole throng reverently joined. The learned bishop, in the light of two tapers held nearby spouted Latin from his book. The Latin sounded suspiciously like "Arma virumque cano . . ." but the attentive listeners intoned loud "amens" at frequent intervals.

ARTS REGISTRATION WILL BE DECREASED BY PASS ABOLITION

Possible Reduction of Five Hundred Foreseen Officially

PASS COURSE SHORTER

First Year Pass Students
Failing This Year
Cannot Return

A possible reduction in registration in Arts of five hundred and the necessity of university students returning to preparatory schools, will be the effect of the abolition of First Year Pass Arts according to reports expressed around the registrar's office.

The new ruling demanding Honour Matriculation for entrance to an Arts course and reducing the prescribed course of study to three years, entails many difficulties and presents many problems. The Honour courses remain at a four year period. However, according to the curriculum for matriculation 1930-31, "it will be no longer possible to enter the second year of the Honour courses in Modern History, Political Science and Economics, Law, Philosophy and Psychology on Honour Matriculation certificates."

What effect will it have on the registration of students in Pass Arts? In 1929 there were 485 in the first year of this course. While the number for this year has not as yet been compiled, 500 would be an approximate figure. Now under the new regulations another 500, who would normally enter university next fall, will be held back for another year. It will mean a severe reduction in the total registered in Arts.

There is one matter about which there is no doubt. Any student who fails to obtain standing next spring in his first year Arts will be required to leave the university. If he desires to continue his educational career, he will have to return to school and remain there until he has obtained his Honour Matriculation. Then and then only will he be allowed to return to his Alma Mater.

Harrison, Fitzpatrick and for Saturday

Everything is in readiness in the Varsity camp for the opening of the Intercollegiate Rugby Union to-morrow afternoon at the Varsity Stadium when the big Blue team opposes McGill.

Varsity will start the contest minus two of her regulars, as neither John Harrison nor Johnny Fitzpatrick will be in uniform. Harrison has been troubled by a strained ankle for some time and in last night's workout he wrenched it so badly that he will be on the injured list for the McGill game. Fitz has been out of the practices since the exhibition game with Argonauts last Saturday when he tore a ligament in his right leg. He was up at the stadium last evening but not in uniform.

DISPUTE IS SETTLED IN GENTLEMANLY WAY

Champion Challenged by Ignorant Freshman to Bout

CRASHES TICKET QUEUE

Settling a dispute in time honoured fashion with a brief fistie encounter in the boxing room, less than six minutes were required by a university welterweight champion to quell the ardour of a Medical freshman.

Blissfully ignorant of what he did, Sturgeon, the frosh, challenged another Medical student, J. D. MacLennan, to single combat.

Ominous rumblings arose when Sturgeon, the frosh, broke the line of students purchasing rugby tickets and refused to be ousted from his position. Challenging any one of the loudest objectors to single handed combat, he was accepted by one of those present. The two huskies hid themselves later to the big gym where gloves were doled.

In lofty disdain, Sturgeon refused the suggestion of two rounds of two minutes each and demanded three rounds of three minutes each. Coach Martin refereed the conflict, which in the opinion of those present, was a smashing good fight, although disastrous to the frosh.

In less than two rounds, the fight was over. It happened that J. D. MacLennan, although weighing but 148 pounds against Sturgeon's 160, is the welterweight champion of the University of Toronto. According to one spectator, MacLennan showed a great deal of mercy to Sturgeon, although he beat him roundly in less than two thirds of the agreed time.

Medical Frosh Elect Officers
With Extra Large Vote

With over a 90 per cent. vote the freshman year in Medicine yesterday elected the following officers for their executive: President, Hank Doyle; Vice-President, John Copp; Secretary, Miss Harcourt; Treasurer, Bill Oiler; S.A.C. Rep., Frank McNelis.

With plans for initiation and Soph-Frosh Banquet under way already enthusiasm in the year is running high. Medical freshmen are off to a good start.

OR. HUTTON ADDRESSES
KNOX COLLEGE STUOENTS

Advices Intelligence and Honesty as Virtues in Ministry

Modern Agnosticism and the widespread devotion to commercial pursuits though they are themselves hostile to religion may indirectly act in its favour in that they keep the man seeking wealth and socially ambitious out of the ministry and leave the field open to the man with a real vocation.

Dr. Maurice Hutton, principal emeritus of University College, told the students of Knox College last night at the formal opening of the College in the College Chapel.

Honesty as one of the greatest virtues and one of those least practised to-day, he advised the theological students to emphasize in their preaching. "There is a bad time ahead for Canada and the rest of the world when honesty is only practised because it is the best policy," he said.

"Practical Christianity though it is possible to-day will not long continue to be possible without spiritual Christianity, or the love of Christ," he said.

He advised them to speak to "the heads of their congregations as well as their hearts or the intelligent will drift away from the church even more than they are doing now. You must adapt yourselves to the spirit of the age and the spirit of the age is intellectual."

Dr. Hutton was introduced by Principal Eakin of the College.

FOR A MESS OF PUBLICITY

The composer of "The Blue and White" definitely stated to "The Varsity" yesterday that it was up to the students to decide whether or not their song was to be entrusted to the tender mercies of the crowning Rudy.

Quite obviously the students don't want their song so entrusted, and it now remains up to the S.A.C.—which meets at noon to-day—to go on record in the matter. Mr. Vallee has our song book, but we still have the copyright. If the S.A.C., acting on behalf of the student body, decides that it is opposed to the use of the University song in dance halls and radio broadcasts arranged to advertise the merits of somebody's gum drops or arch supporters, there can be no doubt that the Board of Governors—to whom the control of the copyright has been so generously tendered by the composer—will uphold the action.

If "The Blue and White" is to continue to mean anything at all in the life and tradition of the University, its use should be so restricted that in the future it will only be heard at University functions. That the students are wholeheartedly in favour of such restrictions has been made obvious enough during the past two days. The S.A.C. will be doing well to give a definite token of its respect for this sentiment and to align the University of Toronto with Harvard and the handful of American universities which have held their traditions higher than a handful of paltry publicity.

We cannot help feeling that the University's Publicity Director has done little to enhance the reputation of his office by terming "justifiable publicity" the handing over of an intimate article of the University's property to be bleated on the same waves with bucolic blarney about somebody-or-other's tooth paste. At exactly what date in its history did it become necessary for the University of Toronto to sell itself to the Great Unpolluted in the same breath with liver salts and canned prunes?

And to make matters worse, the Publicity Director claims he didn't know who the redoubtable Rudy was.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

"Insult to Student Body"

Editor,
"The Varsity".
Dear Sir:
Permit me to congratulate you upon your timely editorial in to-day's issue pertaining to our friend Rudy of "Stein Song" fame.

So the beloved "Blue and White" is to be served up to the jazz crazed American with his insatiable desire for novelty—and all for a little "justifiable publicity". Must the university resort to a synecopated song crowned throughout the country by the Creator's newest gift to women for its publicity?

Mr. Dunlop, in condemning the "Blue and White" to the ignominy of a jazz tune has taken what belongs to the students. It is an insult to the student body. Before it is too late I would suggest that steps be taken to ascertain student opinion on this subject.

Yours,
FRED PARKER.

Thinks "Stein Song" Uplifting
Dear Editor:

It occasioned me a great deal of delight to read your heart-rending appeal to our love for the song entitled "The Blue and White". Your fear Editor of "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

co-ed was heard to remark that the opinions expressed by the men were exaggerated. "Of all the university songs crowned by Rudy Vallee, the Maine "Stein Song" is the only one which has suffered at his hands. I do not think that our song is the type that would last more than one night if it gets into Rudy's hands."

Yet it cannot be denied that the women have set their stamp of disapproval on the whole idea. The publicity given by Rudy Vallee is a distinctly American characteristic, and to allow him to use the "Royal Blue and White" would be stooping to commercialism. So runs the prevailing opinion throughout the university.

Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Sec-Treas. of the S.A.C.: "I think the girls are too sensible to be troubled about such a petty matter. I am amused at anyone feeling that it is a matter worth making a fuss over."

"Dot" James, IV Meds.: "No indeed—I wouldn't even give Rudy Vallee space for publicity in 'The Varsity'."

Mary Lackie, I U.C.: "Personally, I would prefer to hear Buddy Rogers."

Marg. Conboy, Pres., II U.C.: "I don't see any harm in it. The result might mean valuable publicity for the university. In any case, how can it be prevented? There is no law against buying a university song book."

Beth Foster, IV U.C.: "I think it's absolutely the bunk, and it should not be allowed. The idea is purely commercial and I don't see why our song should be sacrificed."

VICTORIA DEBATERS DISCUSS CO-EDUCATION

Should Allow Both Men and Women in Any Course

By a vote of 137 to 30 the principle of co-education was upheld last night at the opening session of the Victoria College Debating Parliament. The Bill in question began, "Whereas co-education as now practiced in the University of Toronto is not a success . . ." and proposed the closing of such courses as Medicine, Dentistry, Theology and Applied Science to women, and the prohibiting of such courses as Household Science, Modern Languages and Dental Nursing to men. Each party charged the other with believing that women are inferior to men, and at the same time disclaimed the belief for itself.

The Government reasoned that the presence of women in lectures menaced the men's powers of concentration; the Premier particularly lamented the fate of a solitary curly-headed gentleman among many other young ladies in IV year English and History. She claimed that woman should still concentrate her attention on the gentle arts of home-keeping, beautifyabuse visited upon the head of the unfortunate Mr. Vallee, I may only hope for kindly contempt and disdain from those ardent spirits who so strenuously oppose his rendition of "The Blue and White" and who so patently let their dislike of his "Byronic attitude" and left nostril get the better of their common sense.

I had hoped better from R.V.C. of Trinity. His condemnation of the Maine Menace savours too much of the green-eyed monster. Having heard R.V.C. render the "Blue and White", I can recall the intense emotion with which it was received, emotion of a peculiar nature. Mr. Vallee being of Canadian blood, a fact that is not generally recognized, will probably excite other and saner emotion in our loyal blood. Mr. C. will hear the broadcast, I hope. It will compare favourably with his own.

In reading Vic 3T2's effusion, I was amazed that such power of ridicule existed. Vic should apply his manifest talents to the intricacies of party struggles, not to the unworthy object of a mere sob singer.

So let us get away from this jingoism about the dear old "Blue and White". Mr. Vallee can do no more harm to it than can several hundred undergraduates conducted by C.R.V. and Vic 3T2 singing in unison and glorious discord at the McGill game to-morrow. If you don't believe me, then listen for yourself. You'll prefer Rudy's effort.

C.C.K., Trinity 3T1.

CHAMPUS CAT

In a statement to a daily paper yesterday W. J. Dunlop said that he had never heard of Rudy Vallee. Lucky devil.

C-C

This startling bit of news gives one something to think about. If a university press agent is unaware of the existence of such a familiar household noise as Vallee, what state of mind must some of the members of the teaching staff be?

C-C

Has Principal Wallace ever heard Helen Kane sing, "Do Do Something"? Has Provost Cosgrave ever seen Lillian Roth do a negro can-can? Does Edgar Stone like Joe E. Brown? Does Professor John Satterly know who Winnie Lightner is?

C-C

A private investigation among various members of the faculty was rather discouraging. In answer to our query, "Do you know who Rudy Vallee is?" one prof. said he wasn't interested because he always used Benson and Hedges shaving lotion. Another prof. said that he was not quite sure, but he thought he was one of his wife's cousins. The last man we approached said that he already had an oil furnace and was having more trouble with the dam* thing than with coal.

C-C

Altogether the outlook is very encouraging.

The Opposition contended that if women wished to become civil engineers or men dental nurses, it ought to be their privilege to do so. The cultural effect of a large female registration in S.P.S. and the right of women to enter theology were hotly contested and finally upheld.

The meeting closed with the overwhelming defeat of the Government by the Opposition forces on a confidence vote.

VARSITY-McGILL CLASH IN SENIOR INTERCOLLEGIATE OPENER

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Play in the interfaculty tennis tournament will begin Monday morning. It will be impossible to make the draw until to-morrow, but every girl entered will have to play sometime Monday morning. Miss Molly Cook, president of the Tennis Club, announced yesterday that each win would count one point in reckoning team scores. This was decided upon in order to avoid the confusion which arose last year.

The ten teams entered in the interfaculty basketball series have been divided into three groups, as follows: Group I—St. Hilda's, Occupational Therapy, Senior Victoria, U.C. Freshies; Group II—St. Michael's, Meds, U.C. Juniors; Group III—U.C. Seniors, Household Science, Junior Victoria.

The schedule will be announced shortly. Games are expected to commence around the first of November, in order to have the championship decided by the middle of December. U.C. Seniors have been fortunate enough to secure as coach Miss Edith Blackwell of intercollegiate fame in 1927 and 1928. Miss Blackwell has had a lot of experience coaching and U.C. should go far under her tutelage.

In the current issue of "The Nation", both the lecture and recitation systems in use in American colleges and universities are termed failures in whole or in part by Hamilton Hill, President of Rollins College.

At Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey, non-fraternity men averaged 4 per cent. higher than fraternity men in examinations last year.

SINCLAIR CHAMPION DENTAL TRACK MEET

Competes in Twelve Events
Yesterday Afternoon at Stadium

Dents held their annual track and field meet at the Stadium yesterday. Owing to a heavy track the times recorded, with the exception of the 100 yard dash, were slow. Eddie Sinclair, of swimming and water polo fame, secured enough points in the field events, plus a few on the track to beat out Eddie Dore, flashy track man, for the individual championship. Sinclair had a total of 21 points against Dore's 14 and Jim Peterson's 13. Eddie's performance was remarkable. He placed in eleven of the fifteen open events and also ran as anchor man for the winning relay team. Dore showed up remarkably well in the sprints and is a good prospect for the intercollegiate team. His time in the century, though unofficial, was 10 seconds flat. After a lay-off of over a year Jim Peterson is also showing to good advantage as a middle distance man. He won the 440 and the 880 yards handily.

By way of diversion a 440 yard race for frosh only was on the card. After the race the freshmen posed for the photographer and then had an early shower provided by the sophs with the aid of a hose. The frosh had their revenge, however, when they defeated the second year in the tug-of-war.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

(By T. A. F.)

Injuries to the squad have necessitated Coach Blackwell making a few changes in the line-up which will take the field against McGill in Saturday's intercollegiate football opener. Jack Harrison, star middle wing, is out of the game. His place will be taken by Don McQuigge, who has been out with the team last season. Fitzpatrick and Bill Adams are definitely out, of course, and Solandt and Peacock who got in some effective plunging for the Orphans last Saturday, have been moved up to the big team.

Even at that the team looks like a sure bet to take the Redmen without too much trouble. Major Forbes has been switching players around in an effort to get a winning combination and the results remain very much in the dark. The McGillmen were somewhat of a doormat for Queen's and Varsity last season and so far this year have shown little in the way of championship form. However, reports from the Montreal institute of learning are optimistic and they expect to put up some strong opposition.

Although Ralph St. Germaine is once more in the pursuit of knowledge at McGill his name is not included in the starting line-up for to-morrow's contest. The presence of the "Saint" on the back-field would vastly improve the chances of the Red and White.

Coach Forbes may be counting on springing him as a last minute surprise.

Tennis Tournament Finals
Will Be Played To-day

Noyes defeated Armstrong yesterday in the interfaculty tennis tournament held on the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club. Although Armstrong has a slashing overhead return he was unable to overcome Noyes' burning service and was forced to concede the round. Noyes will meet Abraham to-day in the quarterly final. These two players were seeded when the series was drawn up. In the second half of the quarterly finals Balfour will meet H. Martin.

Following is to-day's schedule—
10 a.m.—Noyes vs. Abraham.
11 a.m.—Balfour vs. Martin.

DOUBLES

11 a.m.—Meighen and Hermant vs. Coles and McVein; Armstrong and Hamilton vs. Boland and Boardman.

CHALLENGE ROUND
10 a.m.—Leible vs. Shortly; Armstrong will play the winner.

11 a.m.—Drury vs. Coles; Hermant vs. Zintcan; Griffin vs. Meighen.

CROONING DENTAL FROSH THROWN OUT BY SOPHS

During a valiant attempt to croon a lullaby at the Dental Freshman Banquet in the Pompeian Room of the King Edward Hotel last night, freshmen entertainers were bodily ejected by the music-loving sophs.

Following a stirring address by Dr. Cowling of the faculty, the members of first year presented a skit which culminated in a near riot.

During the song the second year president, (prompted), it is said, by a faculty member, rose to his feet and ordered the instant removal of the bodies. A lively tussle ended in the removal of the offending parties.

A presentation of medals won at the Dental track meet yesterday was made by Mr. E. G. Sinclair, president of Athletics.

ARRIVE HERE TO-NIGHT

Don Young Has Been Shifted

Position

Special to "The Varsity"
By Bob Bowman, Sports Editor of the McGill Daily

Montreal, Oct. 9—Blue and White rugbyists may expect a real battle on their hands when Captain D'Arcy Doherty pilots the good ship McGill on to the Varsity oval Saturday afternoon for the intercollegiate curtain-raiser. After a disappointing pre-season exhibition when the Big Red Team was utterly routed and quelled by M.A.A.A., 14 to 3, and by R.M.C., 19 to 13, Coach Stuart Forbes' men have at last found themselves, judging by this week's final practices, and they expect to anchor back in Montreal next Sunday with the Varsity colors pinned to the mizzen mast.

The Red Team has been almost completely re-vamped after last year's dismal showing, although six of the Old Guard remain to form a nucleus of speed and experience, while exactly a baker's dozen of the 1929 outfit are again holding positions this year. The new found strength of the team comes, however, from the acquisition of several new men and a re-adjustment of positions amongst those returned.

For some time Coach Forbes' greatest problem was in securing an efficient kicker, for Kritzwiser and Doherty were both put out early in the season with water on the knee. This trouble was solved when Al Swabey, former snapper, decided to return to college, and "the Sailor" is now lined up with Doherty and Hammond on the half-line. Swabey, always noted as a great tackler, can also boot the pigskin 50 yards with great accuracy and regularity.

Hammond, the new partner for Doherty, is a newcomer, and a regular speed-merchant. Capable of breaking very fast, several times he left the M.A.A.A. and cadet tacklers flat-footed as he tore 30 or 40 yards down the field to put the Red and White back into a threatening position after they had been hopelessly outclassed. He is also a safe catch, cool, and can lace the ball great distances. McGill students expect that he will be the intercollegiate sensation this year.

The most notable change on the McGill squad was made this week when Don Young, for many years recognized as one of the best outside wings in Canadian football, being a member of the Ottawa Canadian champions of 1925 and 1926 and the McGill cham-position on the rear division with Jack Sinclair will be Don Traynor. Jimmy Sinclair is back at his old place at flying wing with Charlie Ruddell playing the other one. "Tubby" Bennett's performance last Saturday and during the week at practice has earned for him a regular outside wing berth. He replaces Elson. Solandt and Peacock, the Orphan middles, have been added to the roster for Saturday's game.

The line-up for the game is as follows: snap, Captain John Keith; insides, Galloway and Whites; middles, Dewar and McQuigge; outsides, Gooderham and Bennett; quarter, Billy Bell; flying wings, Jimmy Sinclair and Ruddell; halves, Jack Sinclair and Dinny Traynor; substitutes, Richardson, Twiltes, Ferguson, Peacock, Henderson, Solandt, Scott and Elson.

hard to determine. Their defeat at the hands of R.M.C. last Saturday marks them as being rather weak. Since then, Al Swabey has returned to McGill and his addition should bolster the strength of McGill greatly. Numerous shifts have been made in an effort to bolster up the team.

Billy Bell will team up with Jack Sinclair when Varsity is on the defensive. Bell and Sinclair worked perfectly together against the heavy tackling of the Argo outside wings. Sinclair is in good shape and if given the same protection that he was accorded a week ago, he should again dominate in the booting.

This looks like the start of a big football year for the Blue and White and high hopes are held for an intercollegiate championship.

university, Dean Arthur DeLury remarked that, although there was always something to be gained by attending lectures, "the great end of a university education is the acquisition of an independent personality." He mentioned the many sides of student life and the fact that allegiance is due to the university as well as to the college. The freshmen were also welcomed to the university and particularly to Hart House by Warden Biekersteh, who described the many features of this undergraduate institution.

Innumerable U.C. and Varsity yells were given with vigour during the course of the evening. Well over 250 men were present and a fine atmosphere of camaraderie prevailed. At the close of the dinner, the following results of the first year elections were announced:

Assistant Secretary of U. C. Lit. C. M. Jarvis; First Year President, Jack Corrigan; First Year Secretary, Bruce Draper; First Year Treasurer, J. W. Beattie.

pionship crew of 1928, was shifted to the quarterback position. It is possible this change that has put new life into the wavering Red team, for Young's long experience in the game and his ability as a line-plunger has given McGill a powerful new weapon which may sepper many a rival ship before the curtain is drawn.

Hal Chard, filling in at Young's vacated position, and Urquhart, make a pair of hard-tackling outside wings and have been going well all season. Both men played last year and the latter was a member of the intercollegiate championship team two long years ago. Granger, who was on the pivot position last season, is now holding down flying wing, while Halpenney has been moved to snap. McTeer and Church, hard-hitting middles, and Wilson and McMoran, flank the snap.

Coach Forbes believes in changing his men as often as possible and a full quota of relief players is being carried. Of these, Chapman, Russell, Taylor, Montgomery, McGillivray and Christmas are used at any time, while statement until he knew more about it. Professor G. W. Brown, of the Department of History, Professor C. N. Cochrane, Dean in Residence of University College, and Professor E. A. Dale of University College, all considered themselves not conversant enough with the subject to state an opinion.

R. E. Diprose, President of the Students' Parliament of the Faculty of Dentistry, when interviewed, said, "I don't think it should be done. It means a lot of publicity, it is true, but it is cheap publicity. Something like that best question last year."

As an interesting commentary upon the attitude of the students of Toronto as compared to other universities, the Ohio State Lantern of Ohio State University boasts, "Our university is really collegiate after all. It has passed the supreme test by being mentioned in College Humour, a most popular students' magazine."

But it appears from an article in last night's edition of the Toronto Star that little can be done about the matter. On the radio page was the following announcement, "To the tune of Betty Co-ed, the Neilson Troubadours will play the college songs of the Big Four Intercollegiate Group. Among them, of course, will be the U. of T. song, "The Blue and White".

WOULD PREVENT USE OF UNIVERSITY SONG BY RADIO CROONERS

Student Body Would Limit Use to University Functions

COMMITTEE INVESTIGATES

Possibility Present That the Copyright Has Now Lapsed

"That this Council deplores the use of the Blue and White for any other purpose than as a university anthem, and is opposed to its use in any but university functions," was the subject of a resolution passed unanimously by the S.A.C. at the meeting Friday.

The question was introduced by Ralph Yates of Trinity College. B. A. R. Dignan of Victoria College, moved that a committee be appointed to investigate the matter and determine what control, if any, the S.A.C. had over the use of the song. This motion was also passed unanimously, and Ralph Yates of Trinity, A. E. F. Allan of University College, and H. S. Dodgson of Emmanuel College were appointed to form the committee.

In introducing the second motion, Ralph Yates stated that he considered it was the place of the Council to declare itself upon the matter. He spoke of the lack of respect for the university song which he had observed on the campus, particularly in the first year, mentioning that on his way to the meeting, he had observed a number of students, mostly freshmen from S.P.S. sprawling in all attitudes in a Hart House Common Room while the anthem was being thumped out as a jazz number.

He pointed with pride to the fact that Trinity freshmen were imbued from the outset of their university careers with respect, both for the

ARDOUR UNOAMPENED

Twelve ardent disciples of new ideas in the attire of the modern male received a severe set back over the week-end on their first attempt to introduce dress reform in this university.

It all began in the dining room of Trinity House Friday night when a dozen members of the senior year suddenly paraded into Hall sans ties, sans collars, sans waistcoats, and sans pants—below the knees.

For one brief moment the rest of the college was stunned with incredulous amazement. The sophomores were the first to recover, however, and shouts of "Throw them out, worms!", filled the hall.

The first year really didn't have a chance to obey, however, for Dr. G. F. Kingston, Dean of Residence, was already bearing down ominously on the twelve. Before they were really seated they were banished from Hall.

A few minutes later when they appeared garbed in what convention demands of men to-day, they were allowed to take their seats.

Various members of the party assured "The Varsity" that this initial defeat had in no way dampened their enthusiasm for the new cult in men's dress. More experiments are expected in the near future.

graduate representative on Hart House Debates Committee, who became 1930-31 president of the S.A.C. at a meeting on Friday. Mr. Kenny will be confronted this year with constitutional reform in the S.A.C., following the findings of the Caput Committee to investigate student government here as a result of "The Varsity" agitation of two years ago.

FORMER RUGBY STAR TURNS TO COACHING

George Morgan, Former Varsity Captain, Coaches Team in Alberta

WILL RETURN TO TORONTO

George Morgan, captain of last year's Varsity senior intercollegiate, is now coaching the University of Alberta. That he has made his name in western grid circles is evident from the following article which appeared in "The Gateway", the official organ of the U. of A.:

We are very fortunate in having Dr. "Bud" Morgan, a friend and teammate of Wally Sterling's at Toronto, for our rugby coach this year.

"Bud" Morgan's football record has been one of miraculous success. He began his career with the Oakwood Collegiate Institute, champions '22-'23-'24. In 1925 he made the O.R.F.U. Seniors, and the Senior Intercollegiate in '26-'27-'28-'29-'30. He captained Toronto last season.

In 1926 Dr. Morgan was chosen as All-Intercollegiate centre, and in '27 received honorable mention as end. In 1928 as inside wing he won the Wilmet crown—Dental athletic award.

Dr. Morgan has been driving a car at Jasper Park Lodge during his summer vacation, and there met a number of Alberta students. At present he plans to return to Toronto in November to accept a position as dental interne in the New Toronto East General Hospital.

CORRECTION

In Friday's issue of "The Varsity" Mr. Nat Shaw was quoted as saying that he had learned to trust his professors as he would a dog. Mr. Shaw has informed "The Varsity" that he does not trust his professors as he would a dog, but that his statement was, "I have learned to trust my professors as I would a father." "The Varsity" takes pleasure in making this correction.

Varsity Dons See First Year Pass Abolition As Aid to Honour Courses

WANT MATURER STUDENTS

Graduate Work in Law Will be Much Strengthened, Says Kennedy

No high school student will be permitted to enter the second year of any honour course, in the future. The heads of the departments affected by this new regulation, namely, Law, Political Science and Economics, History, Philosophy, Psychology and Oriental, thought that there would be a general raising of the standards in the future, when approached by "The Varsity".

"Excellent," said Professor Kennedy, head of the Department of Law, when interviewed by "The Varsity". "A four year honour course in Law," he continued, "is going to strengthen the graduate work considerably, and I am very interested in that. The extra year will not affect the number registering. This year the Law Course increased by over 100 per cent., the largest increase of any honour course in the university. We are swamped with new students."

There would probably be a decrease in the number entering first year, was the opinion of Professor Urwick, head of the Department of Political Science and Economics, and presumably the standard would rise, since the third and fourth year students seemed to be suffering from lack of training in the first year.

"There will be little effect in Oriental," said Professor W. R. Taylor of the Department of Oriental. "The present second year work will be shifted to the first year. In general we desire more mature students."

"The problem has to be discussed more fully with the department, as it may involve a change in the course," said Professor G. S. Brett, Head of the Department of Philosophy. "In our course we need a student of the mature type." When asked whether he thought the course was relatively unknown, he said: "This year we have a very large registration in Honour Philosophy, it is quality and not quantity that we want for the Philosophy Course."

Strange Events Under Torrid Skies Feature First Ball Chasers' Gathering

By J. C. Bouves

Over 15,000 fans absorbed the violet rays in the Varsity Stadium at the big opener of the rugby season on Saturday afternoon. It was such a day as one would expect when sitting in the Maple Leaf Stadium, with perspiring brows more in evidence than fur coats.

Co-eds turned out in all shades and tints of make-up, and crowded their section of the bleachers to capacity before a player appeared on the field for the preliminary run-around. The female rooters were out in unsurpassed strength, with not enough seats to go around. It was suggested that the addition of a few men might have helped to make the gathering more compact. The co-eds refused to sit closely together.

McGill players put on the wrong sweaters in the mix-up, and forgot to change, if the numbering given by the Stadium Magazine may be accepted as the right one.

Two new recruits were added to the ranks of the cheer leaders. They performed very well for the benefit of the audience.

In spite of excellent physical con-

Melvin Kenny Heads Students' Council

Melvin Kenny, graduate member of the Hart House Debates Committee was elected 1930-31 president of the Students' Administrative Council at a meeting of that body on Friday. The vote went 8 to 4, with one member not voting. Mr. Kenny graduated from Victoria College in 1928.

B. A. R. Dignan of Victoria College gave notice of a motion proposing a change in the constitution of the Council to the effect that none but undergraduates be eligible for the presidency. He was supported by Mr. Tyson and Mr. Franklin of S.P.S. According to the constitution as it stands only graduates are eligible for the office.

"A student should lead the van of the Council," said Mr. Dignan in giving notice of the motion. It was referred to the Caput Committee.

VARSITY SENIORS KICK TO VICTORY DEFEATING MCGILL BY LARGE SCORE

Spectacular Kicking of Jack Sinclair Pushes Score of Varsity Far in Advance of McGill in First Half

BLUE LINE PLAY MORE CONSISTENT

Keith, Gooderham, Bennet and Jim Sinclair Outstanding for Varsity — Push Through Red Line

By T. A. Fleming

Fifteen thousand fans saw Varsity seniors get off to a flying start in the intercollegiate race when they turned back McGill by a score of 11 to 1 at the stadium Saturday afternoon. Mammoth punts from the educated toe of Jack Sinclair spelled defeat for the Red-men, the Blue star being responsible for all of his team's points, besides outkicking Al Swabey by twenty and thirty yards on nearly every exchange.

The result never seemed in doubt after the first quarter and although McGill gave every ounce and rallied strongly in the third and last quarter, they fought on the defensive for the greater part of the game. In addition to the big margin on the kicking the Blue line played more consistently than the McGill men, according perfect protection to Sinclair on all his hoists.

Keith, Gooderham, Bennet and Jim Sinclair shone with great exhibitions of tackling to hold the elusive Doherty and Hammond on the McGill back-field in check for the greater part of the game. The interference was considerably improved over the last time out and Dinny Traynor, McQuigge, Jim Sinclair, White, Dewar and Peacock crashed through for big gains on several occasions. The first three named were particularly effective in ripping the Red line.

In the first quarter Varsity carried the ball from their own 43 yard line to the McGill 20 yard line on a succession of battering-ram thrusts that had the Red and White squad demoralized for a time. The Blues gained yards fourteen times from scrimmage as against eight for the opposition.

For McGill, Captain D'Arcy Doherty, Don Young, McTeer, Granger, Church and Urquhart, gave everything they had in a vain attempt to hold the Blue machine. Doherty, who bore the brunt of the work of catching Sinclair's spirals, never slowed up un-

WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB FORESEE GOOD YEAR

Interesting Programme Drawn Up for Coming Year's Work

JOURNALISTS WILL SPEAK

The University Women's Press Club will once again fall into swing when, at the opening meeting on Tuesday, its members gather to institute the commencement of another interesting and eventful year.

Already an interesting program has been drawn up by which journalists and literary people prominent in Toronto and elsewhere, are coming to speak on such subjects as journalism, short stories, and reviewing. Part of the time will be devoted to the writing of poetry, nor will the joys of newspaper life be forgotten. Even the diverting themes of advertising and book-publishing are to have their place.

Many of the meetings will be given over solely to the writings of the group, and general criticisms by its own members. In short, the year's activities seem to be of a wide appeal and the subject matter varied enough to foretell a highly successful year.

The first meeting, though of a general nature, is to be devoted for part-time at least, to a brief discussion of short stories, and many old associates are expected to be on the spot.

2000th VIRGIL ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED BY UNIVERSITY

Oct. 28 and 29 of 1931 Date Set—Former Function Just One Year Early

University of Toronto celebrates the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of the Roman poet, Virgil, October 28, and 29 of 1931. Professor R. S. Conway of Birmingham University will deliver two lectures on the life and works of the poet. The local Italian colony will take a prominent part in the celebrations.

The world celebrated the anniversary last year through a miscalculation, leaving out the year that comes between 1 B.C. and 1 A.D. The day and month of the anniversary is almost impossible to calculate because of the fact that when the poet was 24 years old Julius Caesar reformed the calendar and in that year there were about 445 days.

MAURICE CODY PLAQUE UNVEILED IN U.C. OCT. 15

The Maurice Cody Memorial plaque, presented to the University College Literary and Athletic Society by the Maurice Cody Foundation, will be unveiled at next Wednesday's meeting of the Society in the East Common Room.

The plaque was designed by H. Scott Carter.

THE LAST PHASE

The initial skirmish in the closing phase of the two-year battle for constitutional reform in student government at the University of Toronto was fought in the meeting of the Men Students' Administrative Council Friday afternoon.

In the memorable winter of 1928-29, when L. J. Ryan, at that time Editor of "The Varsity", instigated his crusade against the status quo, he met his worst rebuff—not in the vicious smugness of entrenched privilege—but in the apathy of the student body and its seeming indifference to its own interests. Mr. Ryan was a prophet without honor on his own campus when the S.A.C. of that year undertook to oust him from the editorship of the undergraduate daily, but the time is at hand when we, who are about to reap the benefits of his courage, may well remember him as a clearer and more fearless thinker than the smart youths who dangled his effigy from a Hart House raft or burnt "The Varsity" amid the snow of the front campus. And as for the officials who flouted him and the discreetly mildewed alumni who damned him as a noisy fellow who was bringing unfavourable publicity to the University—the report of the Caput Committee ought to have gone far toward silencing them by this time.

The Caput Committee was appointed to investigate student government as it existed—or, according to "The Varsity", failed to exist—here. Under the leadership of Dean DeLury this committee went very carefully into all aspects of the case, and last spring made certain very definite recommendations to the Caput. Two of these recommendations were put into effect immediately, notably the abolition of the Advisory Board of Student Publications and the seating of the Editor of "The Varsity" as a member of the Joint Executive of the students' Administrative Councils. The net effect of these two changes is the freeing of "The Varsity" from superimposed censorship and a closer understanding between the editorial head of the student daily and the body under whom he acts.

But the big job remains. As a result of "The Varsity's" crusade and the findings of the Caput Committee, the students are to have more say in their own government. Unless there is a hitch in the proceedings, the S.A.C. may become "student" in fact as well as in name. But the last phase may yet prove to be the hardest, because the old order dies hard.

B. A. R. Dignan's strenuous opposition to the acceptance of the report of the Nominating Committee on Friday afternoon was the opening volley. Only the undoubted personal popularity of Melvin Kenny and the esteem in which he is held, together with a desire on the part of several members to complete the organization of the Council under the existing constitution so as to facilitate business, prevented the vote from being even closer than it was. Even the sternest proponent of the status quo must admit that the desire to alter the constitution so as to seat an undergraduate as President of the S.A.C. bespeaks a bitter resolve on the part of the faction clamouring for more direct and more complete student government to carry the war straight into the heart of the enemy's country and see the matter settled once and for all.

If the general tone of Friday's meeting is to be taken as indicative of anything, the matter is going to be settled once and for all within the next few months—perhaps weeks. At the next meeting of the Men's S.A.C., the house will find itself confronted with the necessity of dividing on the question of a specific constitutional change whereby none but an undergraduate will be eligible to sit as President of the student government.

It will be the moment when individual members will have to stop pussyfooting and appear in their true colours, either as being in favour of student government or of special privilege.

If this be treason, it is up to the mass opinion of six thousand undergraduates to show their representatives that treason is to be the colour of the last phase.

ANTHEM

A deluge of vitriolic correspondence from counting-house cynics has inundated "The Varsity" during the past few days, belittling the

CHAMPUS CAT

GRANDMOTHER'S BINGE

O Harriet hasten and harness the horse,
And gallop for help to the town:
Grandmother's been granted her seventh divorce,
And she's kicking the cattle shed down.

C—C

For when the glad tidings arrived in the mail,
She said she would celebrate right,
And never since Grandmother broke out of jail

Has the family seen her so tight.

C—C

She was drinking hard cider and aspirin pony,
Peach brandy and dandelion wine,
And before she was finished she wanted a drop

From the bottle of fresh turpentine.

C—C

And talk of your scraggly, horrible sights!

She's really in terrible shape:

She's wearing a pair of gymnasium

tights,

And even the geese are agape.

C—C

And now in the barnyard she's strutting about,

The way the old chanticleers go,

A marvellous effort for one with the gout,

And Heavens! She's trying to crow!

C—C

Now Grandmother's stooping to pick up a clover,

With four lucky leaves on its stalk.

And Gracious, the goat has just butted her over,

—Just hark to her horrible talk!

C—C

And now through the barnyard she's chasing with rage,

The goat that was butting her but She's losing her speed with the gout and old age,

And she's hardly quite right in her nut.

C—C

She has caught him at last by the mowing machine,

And bites with intent to disable;

But she left false teeth for the goldfish to clean

In the bowl on the living room table.

C—C

You'll weary of hearing all Grandmother did

Before she was sober again.

But where do you think that the old lady hid,

When the sheriff arrived with his men?

C—C

She dashed for the bushes that border

the creek,

Threw her clothes on a hickory limb.

And plunging right in she exclaimed with a shriek,

"It's time I was learning to swim!"

C—C

"O Grandmother darling don't swim in the nude,

You'll catch an incurable cold:

And not only that but you look rather crude,

So skinny and boney and cold."

attitude of the student body regarding the use or misuse of "The Blue and White." Vallee will put us on the map, say these extramural letter-writers, and the students are making themselves the laughing-stock of all serious-minded radio fans in trying to stop him.

Aside from the fact that these dear souls are meddling in matters which are quite clearly none of their business, we now have the pronouncement of the S.A.C. decrying the use of the song for illegitimate purposes and in illicit places. All that remains to be determined is: Exactly how much control has the University over its anthem? The committee appointed should be able to determine this fully within a day or two.

And in the meantime, it might be just as well if some authorized body began to take steps to see that students learned the song. The feeble attempt at choring at the opening of the McGill game last Saturday was nothing short of funny.

Perhaps, after all, we owe a debt to radio's nasal wailers for reminding us that we have a student's song and that—as such—it ought to be sung . . . not breathed. We can't possibly hope to command the respect of the outside public until we begin singing our anthem as if we meant it. If we're too sophisticated for that sort of thing—why, the sooner we forget "The Blue and White", the better.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

SCOFFS AT JELLY-CAKING

Editor,
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Allow me, through your columns, to express a desire to make the acquaintance of Mr. C. K. of Trinity. I was delighted with his reference in Friday's issue to "several hundred undergraduates . . . singing in unison and glorious discord at the McGill game to-morrow." Such credulity and simple faith in his brother man is deplorably rare in this age of sophisticated freshmen and hard-boiled coeds. Surely Trinity House soup must contain some unknown elixir that promotes this spirit of naivete in its suppers. I am led to wonder whether C.K.K. still believes in fairies and the inviolability of examination pseudonyms.

I fear that if Mr. K. attended Saturday's game, he must have been sadly shocked when a dozen timid voices sang the wrong words for the verse of the "Royal Blue and White", and perhaps fifty joined in at every other word of the chorus. It is a sad commentary on the "sacredness" of the song, that scarcely a single student in all that multitude really could sing it. For nearly a week indignant guardians of our hallowed treasure have been jelly-caking around the campus about the sacrilege of allowing the university song to be broadcast over the radio, yet none of them are so vitally interested in it that they will take the trouble to learn it themselves.

Surely if Vallee can give publicity to the song he should be encouraged to do so. Whatever Maine students may think of his rendering of the Stein Song, they probably know it themselves by this time.

Miniature Golf May Replace
Rugby at Queen's University

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 11.—Rugby is in danger of losing its place as the foremost sport of Queen's University here.

All last week the undergraduates of the university have been fighting for the glory of their Alma Mater and for one of the lengthy list of prizes being awarded to the winner of the college miniature golf tournament.

Keen interest is being shown in the tournament and the winner is being given a round trip ticket to Montreal.

DEMILLE KICKS POINT

Strong Line Work Features Soldiers' Game at Kingston Battle

By Ken Erwin

Kingston, Ont., Saturday, Oct. 11.—The Varsity Intermediates were taken into camp here to-day at the Richardson Stadium by R.M.C., and forced to yield by sheer condition, to the score of 28-1.

R.M.C. were in mid-season condition and left the field as fresh as when they came on. Varsity stood the pace in the first half, but in the second a noticeable slowing up handicapped the whole outfit. It was then that the Army men gained 23 of their points. It was simply a case of the best team winning.

The Soldiers got their first touch after 7 minutes of play when Davoud advanced the ball 30 yards on a fake play to Varsity's 5 yard line. Lane bucked through the Blue line for 5 points. The touch was converted. DeMille's ditty catching and running the ball 15 yards put R.M.C. on the defensive on their 25 yard line. A touch for Varsity was imminent but the Blue backfield were slow and the line could not stop the heavier R.M.C. men. In the second quarter Varsity gained 50 yards when Irvin muffed a catch and Reid, for Varsity, secured. DeMille kicked Varsity's first and only point and Waldron forced Davoud to rouge. Gregory was prominent for his tackling and line play. The R.M.C. line was a stonewall to Varsity buckers, but Litowitz got through once for 20 yards. Davoud, kicker for the Soldiers, was given beautiful protection by a holeproof secondary defence. The score at half-time was, R.M.C. 5, Varsity 1.

In the second half DeMille ran back Davoud's kick 20 yards. Varsity's lack of condition took the sting out of their tackles and left them peepless. Winrow, for Varsity, used his head to advantage when he turned a kick into an end run and made 25 yards. Smith, for R.M.C., blocked Hume's kick and made 20 yards. The Army men took their downs fast to wear out the weakening Blue team and W. Carr got away on an end run for the second touch, which he converted. Score three-quarter time, R.M.C. 11, Varsity 1.

In the last quarter the Varsity team had lost their starch. Gregory was the only Blue man who could stand the gaff. Storms, for R.M.C., broke through the thin Blue line, intercepted a pass and got their third touch, which was not converted. At the kick-off, R.M.C. returned and Reid fumbled. Lind secured for the Army men and ran 70 yards. Storms, for R.M.C., bucked through the ragged Varsity line for the fourth touch which W. Carr converted. By this time Varsity were out on their feet while R.M.C. were still going strong. DeMille fumbled a catch which F. Carr secured and travelled for the fifth touch. W. Carr converted. Final score, R.M.C. 28, Varsity 1.

(By A. C. C.)

Jack Sinclair's mighty boot was again responsible for another Blue and White victory when he accounted for all of his team's points in an 11 to 1 win over the Red and White in the intercollegiate opener. Sinclair made two beautiful field goals and five single. He delivered several mammoth punts. Kicking from his own 15-yard line, he drove the piskin to McGill's 30-yard line during the third quarter and on two occasions his punts sailed over the heads of the opposing halves to the deadline and bounded to the brick wall.

* * *

On the other hand the kicking of Swabey for the Red and White was woefully weak, but he must not be taken too severely for that as his original position is at snap where he played for the last three years. If the Montreal crew is ever to be taken seriously as a championship contender Coach Major Forbes will have to resurrect a kicker of ability. If he had been able to field one Saturday the score would undoubtedly have been much closer.

* * *

The McGill line fought gamely until the last and Don Young, at quarter, broke up many a Blue and White threat. The visitors have two clever running halves in Captain D'Arcy Doherty and Hammond. The former is as slippery as an eel and he brought the crowd to its feet with his clever work. McTeer was their most effective line plunger.

* * *

Injuries to regulars are sometimes great assets to substitutes. Saturday's battle demonstrated this fact. Jimmy Sinclair, who was late in coming out to practice and was not supposed to be in the best of condition, replaced Bill Adams, and did some noble work by way of line-plunging. McQuigge, who took John Harrison's place at middle wing, was Varsity's most effective ground gainer through the line. Now both of these men will be hard to keep off the line-up. Other men worthy of mention for their offensive work are Traynor and Dewar. In the first quarter these players advanced the yardsticks three times on successive plunges.

The tackling of Captain Johnny Keith left nothing to be desired, while the interference of the Varsity line opened the way for the local plungers.

The local students lost enough yards through illegal interference and offside to win an ordinary game. We hate to think of the verdict had the game been closer.

* * *

By the way, the Stadium Magazine made an excellent Mayfair in which the Toronto advertisers might display their fall fashions, but as a publication "in the interests of Intercollegiate Rugby" it was a total flop. Only three of the numbers of the McGill players listed were correct.

Kime, Archibald, Ward, Francis, Miles, Griffiths, Bigelow, White.

til he finally had to be relieved late in the final quarter.

The Blue team started out in the first quarter as though they intended to make short work of the opposition. An exchange of kicks and two plunges by McQuigge and Jim Sinclair put McGill on the defensive on their 37 yard line, where a bad snap cost them possession of the ball. Sinclair hoisted a long, high one over the line to Doherty who was graced for the first point of the game. Then began a march up the field when the Varsity line-plungers made yards four times in a row to carry the ball to the enemy's 20 yard line. From there Jack Sinclair dropped one between the posts to make the score 4-0.

In the next period Sinclair added another point on a tremendous 65 yard punt. Then the McGill line came to life and began to hold the Blues, but Jack's long hoists continued to gain ground until finally he drove one over the line to Hammond. The Red backfielder made a beautiful return to the open field and Bell took the ball on the dead run, sprinting twenty yards before he was downed on the McGill 25 yard line. Varsity were content with adding an easy point when Sinclair booted a high one over to Doherty. Varsity 5—McGill 0.

McGill showed a considerable improvement after half-time and put up a great fight against losing odds. They were helped a lot by the numerous penalties handed out to Varsity for offside and illegal interference. McTeer broke through the Blue line for a beautiful twenty-five yard run and McGill got their yards again on the next two downs. Swabey then kicked over the line, Sinclair let it bounce and was held to a rouge for McGill's first and only point. Varsity were on the defensive for the most part of this quarter, but long kicks by Sinclair eased the pressure and McGill never threatened seriously.

Sinclair took Swabey's hoist in the last quarter and returned a long, low one, which bounded over Doherty's head, rolling over the line. Hammond fell on it for another Blue point. Bell and Sinclair combined for the first time to run a kick back fifteen yards. Swabey got off another weak punt and Varsity secured twenty-five yards out. Sinclair added another three points on a field-goal. Varsity 11, McGill 1. McGill resorted to onside kicks in the dying moments of the game, but the Blue put on a strong finish to push the Forbesmen back to their own goal-line as the whistle blew.

Varsity—Flying wing, Jimmy Sinclair; halves, Jack Sinclair, Traynor and Rndell; quarter, Bell; snap, Keith; insides, White and Galloway; middles, Dewar and McQuigge; outides, Gooderham and Bennet; subs, Richardson, Ferguson, Twaites, Elson, Scott, Henderson, Solandi, Peacock.

McGill—Flying wing, Granger; halves, Doherty, Swabey and Hammond; quarter, Young; snap, Halpeiny; insides, Church and Chapman; middles, McTeer and Wilson; outides, Urquhart and Chard; subs, Talpis, McMoran, Slanket, Newton, Russell, Fyche, Hilliard.

Officials—Referee: Joe O'Brien, Montreal; Umpire: T. Barton, Montreal; Head linesman: Garkiel, Ottawa.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

College tennis teams clash this morning in the first round of the playoffs for the interfaculty championship. The four semi-finalists will comprise the intercollegiate team which will go to Queen's on Friday to defend the title which Varsity won last year.

Miss A. E. M. Parkes announced on Friday that every girl playing in any interfaculty sport is now required to have her certificate of eligibility in before she takes part in any practice. In former years the certificate read: "before she takes part in any league game". Of course, it is impossible now for everyone to meet this requirement, but appointments should be made with Dr. Edith Gordon, medical advisor for women, at once, in order to comply as quickly as possible.

St. Michael's have at last secured a coach for their basketball team in the person of Miss Barker, a graduate of Margaret Eaton. Miss Barker comes to them with a reputation for energy and thoroughness, and the Double Blue are looking forward to great things.

Miniature golf on the grounds of Columbia University is being agitated for by the undergraduate paper there.

Why is a cheer leader so full of cheer

It is likely because his team has just won . . . or it may be because he has just been accepted . . . but we'll bet you'll hear him in the megaphone that he has just heard his Ed. Provan Suit is ready for him.

An investigation at Washington University has shown that college men spend more money on candy than on any other luxury. Last year students there spent over $9,000 on sweets. The results don't show how much the men ate themselves and how much they gave away.

People marvel at the luncheons they get at the Piccadilly Inn for 35c and 50c. It's so good they go back the next day and marvel all over again. Really, they don't know how so much deliciousness can be served for such little price. The surroundings are so attractive, too, the flowers so fresh, the service so good—and the location so convenient.

Date Has Been Changed For Intercollegiate Harrier

Owing to the fact that the Intercollegiate Track Meet is being held on October 24th, the date of the Brotherton Cup Intercollegiate Harrier Race has been changed from Saturday the 25th of October, to Tuesday the 28th of October at 11 a.m.
The course is the same as last year and all Harrier men are urged to go over it at least once before the meet. Maps of the course will be posted in the different faculties early next week—watch for them!
Meds, with Wally Graham, Al Walters and MacLennan, seem to have the inside track to gain the coveted Brotherton Cup, but O.A.C. are sure to send down a strong team to keep the trophy they have won for the past three years. Both U.C. and Trinity will also have something to say before the Brotherton Cup finds a home for the coming year.

At Rutgers University every student must say "Hello" to everyone he meets on the campus.

BALFOUR DEFEATS IN TENNIS FIGHT

Toronto Club Scene of Five Sets, Completely Exhausting Players

NOYES TAKES SEMI-FINALS

Balfour defeated H. Martin in the semi-finals on Friday at the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club in a match which proved to be the hottest fought in the Intercollegiate Tournament. The match went to five sets before the winner could be decided and both players were completely exhausted when it was over.

Neither used the net game, both attempting to win their points on back court drives. Balfour seemed to be driving much harder than Martin, but the latter was more steady and his return of almost impossible shots made the spectators hold their breath.

The other semi-final was contested between Bill Noyes and Armstrong, with the former winning in three straight sets. Noyes had very little trouble in taking this match. He was in perfect form and his drives had the sting and placement behind them worthy of Gilbert Nunn. Armstrong tried hard to gain the lead in the second set and served three aces but Noyes soon overcame the threat and went on to win quite handsily.

The finals have now been reached and will be played on Monday at the Toronto Tennis Club, and with Noyes up to his wonderful last year's form and Balfour playing his usual hard-driving, steady game, it is hard to say who has the edge, but their match should prove interesting and all university tennis fans should come out and watch this game.

The finals of the doubles will take place at 2.30 on the courts of the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, the winners to represent the university at the Intercollegiate Tournament at Montreal. Art Balfour and Bill Noyes, the singles finalists, unite to meet Bob Armstrong of last year's doubles team, and Paul Hamilton. Both teams gained the finals by virtue of stellar victories on Saturday.

The singles final for the possession of the McEachern Cup and first position on the team, will take place Tuesday at the same time. All those interested in seeing a fine tennis exhibition would be well advised to be present.

GIGOLO PROVES TO BE LATEST CAMPUS NOVELTY

Last Hope of Wall Flowers; Football Huskies Used in Night Clubs

Anything from a janitor to a gigolo can be obtained on short notice in New York from the employment bureaus operated at the various universities and colleges in the city, according to "Variety".

A convention held in New York recently consisted mainly of females. It looked as if a dance scheduled to be held the final day would have to be cancelled until one of the university employment bureaus was appealed to. A score of students was rushed to the hotel ballroom and performed gigolo service at $1 an hour each.

One of the college employment bureaus regularly supplies football huskies to a detective agency to act as bouncers at night clubs on New Year's eve.

Other students receive $1 an hour as hoofers in dance schools.

"Variety's" definition of a gigolo is, "the last hope of a wealthy old woman".

VARSITY JUNIORS DEFEAT ST. ANDREWS

Much Good Material Shows Up in Early Game of Season

SCORE 14-7 RECORDED

Taking advantage of all their opponents' misplays, and displaying flashes of offensive strength, Varsity juniors pulled out a win over St. Andrews College on the back campus Saturday morning by the score of 14-7. From the spectators' standpoint it was not good rugby, but it served to show up several glaring deficiencies in the Blue team which Coach Harry Bales doubtless will remedy this week. Better interference and smoother extension plays are needed if Varsity is to hold the intercollegiate title won last year.

Varsity had begun a plunging attack in the first quarter, when an S.A.C. extension brought the ball close to the Blue line, but Arnup kicked out of danger. Five minutes later, however, successive fumbles by Leachman and Arnup were recovered for a touchdown, which Russell converted. The freshmen failed to capitalize on a St. Andrews fumble, and repeated offenses enabled the prep school team to force a rouge. Varsity's lone point in the first half was scored on a long kick by Arnup after a beautiful run by Leachman.

In the third stanza Varsity pounced on a fumbled catch for a touch, which Leachman failed to convert, but a long kick by Arnup tied the score five minutes later. After the same player's 40 yard run, Bryers intercepted a pass on the St. Andrews 20 yard line and ran for another touch. In the final canto Arnup kicked for two more rouges which ended the scoring. For the Aurora boys the all-round work of Gordon and Young was outstanding while Russell's tackling was deadly.

The Blue juniors have a wealth of good material, notably Leachman, Watson, Herman, Bryers, Oille, Arnup and Patterson. The latter's running was very effective, and he shapes up as a second Hal Richardson. With a week before the intercollegiate schedule opens, Coach Bales will undoubtedly give his boys an overhauling, and should turn out another championship team.

Varsity—Flying wing, Patterson; quarter, Oille; halves, Leachman, Arnup, Webber; snap, Keith; insides, Herman, Monsaroff; middles, Watson, Dennison; outsides, A. Henderson, Woolnough; subs, Bryers, Salter, McGinnis, Rogers, Corrigan, Bryant, Scott, Calvert, Warren, Austin, Mustard, Campbell, Bean, Coy, V. Henderson.

St. Andrews—Flying wing, Russell; quarter, Young; halves, Gordon, Burns, Webster; snap, Kennedy; insides, Finlay, Gordon; middles, Grant, Tucker; outsides, Smith, Cummings. Subs—Ponsford, Turnbull, Qua, Fee, Gould, Jennings, Hughes, Choppin.

BRIGHT YEAR AHEAD SAYS SOCCER COACH

Last Year's Intercollegiate Champions All Back but Three

Chances look very bright this year "The Varsity" was informed last night by Doug Davidson, clever and fast playing manager of the Intercollegiate soccer team. "All but three of our championship aggregation of 1929 are back," he said. "And unless we meet with most unusual competition, we ought to repeat last year's success."

Although the absence of Cox in goal, Dowling at left wing, and Gregg at full back is keenly felt, it is expected that these positions will be equally well filled with the acquisition of a new goal keeper from Victoria College, Smith from Wycliffe, and Bill Jack, last year with Knox and a member of the 1928 intercollegiate team.

There will be a practice at 4.15 on Monday. All freshmen who are interested in soccer are requested to turn out.

Salaries of over $1500 a year are being paid to editors of student publications at Ohio State University.

STAR DEFENCE

George Gooderham, shown above, and Bennet, Varsity's outside wings, gave a great defensive display on Saturday, nailing the shifty McGill halves before they could get started.

STATEMENT ON FIRST YEAR HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE NOV. 1

The first year students of Household Science (Pass) may be affected by the change in the former pass course. Will Household Science refuse to admit students having only their middle school matriculation subjects; if so, how will the registration of next year compare with that of 1930?

It was not possible to get in touch with Miss A. L. Laird, Professor of Household Science on Saturday, but Miss Briggs told the reporter: "We have not discussed this question in the council yet, but we expect to have the particulars by the first of the month. If we were to accept students who have not completed their upper school matriculation, special classes would have to be arranged, since these subjects will no longer be taught at university."

GLASS FLIES FREELY AS SCHOOL MEN CLASH

Doors of Science Buildings Suffer in Latest Rumpus

The soph-frosh argument at S.P.S. assumes a new angle as the contending factions take to breaking glass in the doors of the various science buildings.

In reality the sophs were only trying to regain a little prestige they lost the day before when the audacious frosh attempted to retain them in a lecture room a little longer than the prescribed hour.

The sophs, swelling with newly gained intellectual enlightenment, managed to emerge from the room, but the reaction (always equal to and opposite to action), of the frosh was such that several sophs were forced through the glass in the door.

south, and which was conveyed to our hallowed precincts through the medium of College Humour and kindred publications. This is probably suggested in a most derogatory sense, implying that ideas having their beginnings in the United States are of a necessity of a transient and scatter-brained nature.

The new school of thought denies this. It contends that Dress Reform is but a manifestation of the earnest rebellion of youth against the formality of the conventions; a movement towards the ultimate ostracism of the well-known Mrs. Grundy who decrees that man, a noble animal, in his primitive state gloriously unhampered, to-day should swathe himself in canifoid and stifling clothing.

It is strange indeed that an idea so radical in its nature should take root and grow in the tradition-bound and intolerant soil of Varsity. But there exist in every community, it matters not how stifled are the ideas and aspirations of its members, those, who, possessing minds open to conviction, readily adopt new ideas and incorporate them in their scheme of living.

It is one thing to hold a conviction and quite another to attempt to put that conviction into practice by the medium of concerted action. We have progressed beyond the abstract stage, and have made the first move towards the emancipation of man. We have practised what we have preached. We are the pioneers of a new era when Man, delivered from long trousers, neckties, waistcoats and the like, may revel in the freedom and independence enjoyed by the ancient Greeks and Romans.

It is a well known fact that the clothing worn by man to-day hinders the free movement of his limbs. Women were hampered in the same manner until but a few years ago. They recognized their handicap and strove valiantly to overcome it: with what result? To-day they are as free and as untrammelled as the breeze. Man must follow their example. Our honour and our common sense demand it. We must disregard the temporary defeats at the hands of our convention-stified adversaries, and must raise the standard of ultimate victory in the face of overwhelming odds. We are not the leaders of a cause foredoomed to failure: we are confident of victory and we know that we shall win. We shall deliver man from the bondage of the complete body-covering which has been our heritage from the barbarous days of the Middle Ages. Men needed tin pants in those days. Why indict them upon a generation living in peace and tranquility?

Our platform is: shorts, sport shirts sans cravat, no garters and freedom from that instrument of torture, commonly known as a waistcoat, but a direct descendant of the Iron Maiden of the Spanish Inquisition. We put these ideas into effect the other night. We met with rebuke, tempered by the obvious moral support of the very men who helped to effect us. But we are winning converts. The time is coming inevitably when our opponents, bogged down in hopeless deference to Mrs. Grundy, will awaken to see the new menace to their peace of mind and their complacency. The new ideas arising in their pristine vigour, are bound to overwhelm them.

OSCULATION IN VIEW ATTRACTS VIC FROSH

Saintliness Demonstrated but the Old Spanish Custom Prevails

WHAT PRICE AN OATH?

That Saint Hilda's devotees still retain their saintliness was proven at the first reception of the year held last Thursday evening at 99 St. George Street, when all the Trinity men of first year crowded the halls to meet them.

Newly initiated "Saints" wearing bright green bows, waited in trepidation for the event of the evening, when the time-honoured "osculation" is due to take place between the Head of First Year women and the Head of First Year men. On this occasion the Head of the Freshies was overheard to say, modestly and painfully:

"But, really, you know, I cannot kiss him! I have too bad a cold."

The retort courteous was simply: "You're not supposed to kiss him on the mouth!"

So amid the cheering of the whole college the sacred rite took place. The Freshmen and Freshies were initiated—with a long year of woes ahead of them.

Nevertheless, "All Quiet on the Freshie Front", was the Varsity's impression of St. Hilda's—at least, according to Seniors and Graduates. But they, far away and unconcerned, have forgotten their own stormy first year. Freshies remember, vividly, what makes Trinity different from other colleges. Their opinions, however, are kept strictly to themselves. To confide in any other year would be heresy.

All one can gather of their trials are chance remarks overheard on the street, and in corridors. One girl, in the height of first day excitement last week, shouted for all Bloor St. to hear: "You know, it's terribly exciting! We have to swear an oath."

"What do you mean?" her curious friend asked.

"Before we are allowed to wear our gowns."

Probably that is the easiest task for a St. Hilda's freshie. It is different, they say, when you are living in college and your best school friend, perhaps, is a sophomore or a junior. One senior admitted having seen many a helpless freshie dragged before a Board of Sophomores, severely reprimanded, and given some extra "Freshie Job"—such as telephone duty—to make up for her misdeed.

It is one of the understood laws of St. Hilda's, the "Varsity" discovered, that "each year must stick together." One graduate admitted that to the freshie this seems incomprehensible. Why should she have to mix with girls she doesn't know and with whom she has no affinities?

"But the seniors realize the advantage of the Year System," "The Varsity" was told. "If you get to know your own freshman year, and stick to it at once, later on you come to understand better what college spirit is; and you learn how to mix with girls of other years without being a nuisance to them. Certain privileges belong to the upper years—naturally; and freshies must accept them."

Freshies, looking at the free-masonry of other colleges, chafe a bit. But when they get to be sophomores they have their revenge. The best sofas are vacated for them, doors are opened as they sail past. It is only when a sophomore mistakes a senior for a freshie, that there is any serious hitch in the system. Then the words fly.

Summer Job is Jail for Student Backyard Golf Proves Lucrative

Questioning of men from all faculties revealed a variety of summer jobs filled by students. Most were prosaic but one student, working as wireless operator on a lake boat, is said to have passed a night in Rochester gaol for smuggling. This seems to be the only criminal venture. As one student pointed out, since the O.T.A. has gone, nobody is bootlegging their way through college.

Airplanes were used by Forestry men who became fire rangers and timber cruisers, patrolling all the way from Alberta to Western Ontario. The sport of this $70 a month job was killing porcupines, which were a menace to the jack pines.

Miniature golf seized summer resorts so completely that one student, playing in an orchestra at night, became a Tom Thumb professional as well,

BLUE COPPER DOME LEAVES OLD TOWER

Telescope 20 Years

The old dome is gone. A landmark for freshmen, tourists and visitors for over twenty years, the hemisphere on the Government Observatory at Bloor and Devonshire Place, has been removed permanently. Its demolition follows the removal of the six-inch telescope, which it covered.

"We needed a flat roof on which to set up our instruments for sky-horizon observations," explained Mr. Patterson, director of the Meteorological Office, to "The Varsity." "It was the only suitable location in the building, so we had to sacrifice the telescope and dome. They are being presented to the university."

Dr. R. K. Young informed "The Varsity" last night that while the university hoped to set up the telescope at some later date, there were no immediate plans to announce. The alterations to the Observatory have nothing to do with the erection of the university's reflecting telescope which has been stored for some time in anticipation of a suitable observatory. According to Dr. Young there are no immediate prospects in this direction either.

Percival Price, Dominion Carillonier, gave a benefit recital for John L. Skillicorn, his assistant on the Peace Tower at Ottawa, on the chimes of Hart House Memorial Tower yesterday afternoon. The above is a recent drawing of the Tower.

Sizzling Stories From Sneerio Station Set the World Agog as Speaker Rants On

By Vincent Geller

"Friends, this is Canadian Prosperity Week. Will someone lend me a nickel?"

With this inspiring remark Bert S. McBride opened his address at 7.30 p.m. this morning. The great patriot was speaking from Canada's Sneerio Station, PHEW.

"Yes!" he exclaimed, "this is Canadian Prosperity Week with Lillian Roth in person!"

Citizens throughout the Dominion nodded philosophically as they snored by their radios.

"Now is the time to invest your money in good Canadian stocks. I recommend Hamilton Elevators Limited. Elevators are going up. We have a splendid government in the Province of Ontario. He's gone to London."

As the speaker paused a violent explosion occurred in the editorial rooms of the Daily Star.

"The York Township building investigation is a credit to the community. The hearing will last for another seven years and by then George Young will have won the C.N.E. marathon swim."

He was of the opinion that the dogcatchers were going to the dogs. A high tariff on zebras would afford important protection for the Humane Society. "Let me say," he added, "that I never get drunk. No. I never get drunk without seeing zebras to the left of me and zebras to the right of me. Where would the returned soldiers be if it weren't for the Hydro? Absolutely! We know that George Bernard Shaw is against the navy."

Telegrams of congratulation poured in from all parts of the country as the speaker continued. He now turned his attention to foreign relations, particularly to China. "I never did like foreign relations because they can't speak English. And I don't like China. I have always preferred silverware. As for the question of labour, I have always been the friend of the poor working man and I shall always be the friend of the poor working girl."

The eloquent statesman concluded with a stirring appeal to the patriotism of his hearers. "Celebrate Canadian Prosperity Week in the right spirit. Visit every theatre in the neighbourhood when the doorman is not looking."

ARTILLERY

For those intending to take the artillery branch of the C.O.T.C. military training, the first drill will be at Corps Headquarters, 184 College St., on Tuesday, October 14th, at 5 p.m. All who are interested should be on hand.

Applications for permission to take the course for "A" and "B" certificates, infantry, should be made at the office immediately. Those interested in other arms, e.g., — ARTILLERY, ENGINEERS, SIGNALS, MEDICAL, MACHINE GUNS, should also make enquiries at once.

The following is an extract from the "Instructions for the C.O.T.C." — "Personnel of other units of the Non-Permanent Active Militia who are students of a university may be attached to the C.O.T.C. Contingent of the university for military training and may undergo the examinations for Certificates "A" and "B" under the conditions laid down in these Instructions." Particulars may be obtained at C.O.T.C. Headquarters.

Reverberations of last year's beer episode here are still resounding in the various universities of the United States. The N.Y.U. Daily News recently commented on the large vote in favour of the sale of beer on university grounds registered in "The Varsity" last spring.

WOULD PREVENT USE OF UNIVERSITY SONG

Trinity song, which was in Greek, and for the "Blue and White", being taught to stand at attention while either was being sung. Both Yates and Jolliffe of Victoria deplored the fact that the university anthem was unknown about the campus, and was scarcely ever sung on any occasion except at rugby games.

Various speakers agreed that it was just as well that the question had been brought to the attention of the student body, as it would lead to some definite attitude toward the song, which, they felt, had occupied hitherto a somewhat ambiguous position.

Attention was called to the statement that the university had no valid right to prevent the use of the song by Rudy Vallee, as it was used throughout the city both in dance-halls and in theatres. A. Gordon Burns said he believed it might be possible that the copyright had run out, and that no one had any control over the use of the song.

A student Senate of the whole university will shortly become an accomplished fact at New York University.

Down at the University of Denver, freshmen must attend all football games in a body. They are placed in one section all by themselves and no freshman may take a co-ed to any game.

WITH THE FISHING FLEETS OF NOVA SCOTIA

The Bluenose fishermen of Nova Scotia have won a world-wide reputation as intrepid sailors of the salt waters, and their skill and courage and their storm-beaten schooners have been preserved to posterity in some of the finest of American literature. A typical fishing harbour of Nova Scotia is shown in the upper picture. Lunenburg boats have always been foremost among the fishing fleets and in the foreground can be seen schooners in various stages of construction, while anchored in the background are a number of the ships waiting to leave for the banks. At the bottom is a scene reminiscent of the old world, but one not unusual in the Nova Scotia fishing towns. It shows an ox team bringing a catch of cod fish from a schooner upon its arrival in port.

CONFER DOCTORATE ON NEW MODERATOR OF UNITED CHURCH

Victoria College Celebrates 94th Anniversary of Charter Day

NOTABLE ACADEMIC RECORD

Victoria Was First Non-Conformist College Established in British Empire

"The purpose of a university is to see a little farther ahead than the average man and woman," stated Chancellor E. W. Wallace, at the Charter Day Exercises held in Victoria College Chapel last night. "A great future lies ahead of us in the next fifty years. It is the university's duty to open the eyes of young men and young women to the possibilities of that future. If it fails in this regard it fails altogether." Chancellor Wallace reminded the audience that this was the celebration of the 94th anniversary of the first charter granted to a non-conformist college in the British Empire. He proceeded to recall the great past of the college, sketching details as far as its incorporation with the University of Toronto.

The feature of the evening was the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon the Right Reverend Edmund Oliver, recently appointed Moderator of the United Church of Canada. This ceremony was followed by an address by Dr. Oliver who spoke on "The Making of the West."

"The west," began Dr. Oliver, "has been built upon the east. It has derived its choicest population from the east, its leadership, its financial support. The west loves the east. The two are bound together not by railroads and economic interests only, but by religious ties." Dr. Oliver reminded the audience that the west stands for the principles of progress. Beginning with the earliest explorations, he went on to describe pioneer settlement. (Continued from Page 2)

GROUPS IN LEAGUE OF NATIONS STUDY

To Send Delegates to McGill Model Assembly During 1930-31 Season

The League of Nations Club will this year be welded into a permanent organization. The plans for the ensuing year as formulated by the executive, which will be presented before the club this afternoon, include a variegated program of intensive study coupled with forums and a Model League of Nations Assembly for the University of Toronto only. The study groups will be divided into three sections. One section under Professor N. A. McKenzie will study the social and humanitarian aspects of the League's work. Another under the guidance of Mr. G. P. deT. Glazebrook, will study the political work of the League. The leader of the third group, in the economic aspects of the League's work, will be announced at a later date. The forum will be addressed by persons who will be fully acquainted with the various functions of the League of Nations. As McGill will most likely stage a Model League of Nations Assembly this year the local organization will send a delegation to represent the University of Toronto. All those interested in the work of the League of Nations Club are invited to attend the first meeting.

Carillon Recital Nets $186 For Benefit Fund

The benefit recital on Hart House Carillon by Percival Price, Dominion Carillonneur at Ottawa, for his assistant, John L. Skillecorn, formerly University of Toronto Carillonneur, netted $186.00 Sunday afternoon. Dr. Ernest MacMillan is receiving further subscriptions.

Mr. Skillecorn received injuries that resulted in paralysis which has confined him to bed in the Toronto General Hospital for some months, while diving in the Ottawa River. From his cot on the balcony of the hospital, Mr. Skillecorn enjoyed part of the program yesterday afternoon.

Student subscriptions will be accepted at the S.A.C. Office at Hart House, or with Miss Parks, in University College.

PURPLE PYJAMAS GRACE REFORMER

Leader of Trinity "Shorts" Movement Greets Reporter in Mauve

TOGA LOGICAL GARMENT

Trinity House is divided into two camps to-day on the subject of dress reform. The action of Dr. G. F. Kingston, Dean of Residence, in banishing certain seniors who appeared at dinner Friday night minus certain portions of their wearing apparel has aroused plenty of hot discussion throughout the house.

Dr. Kingston told "The Varsity" yesterday that his sole objection to the new fashion in men's attire was the fact that short pants and gowns were a poor combination. Since Trinity men wear gowns to lectures, chapels and meals, shorts are taboo at such times. As far as he was concerned, they could wear whatever they liked anywhere else.

"The Varsity" found K. C. Coleman, leader of the new movement, attired in a pair of purple pyjamas in what he termed "the Russian style." He felt no dismay at Friday night's fiasco. "We are the prophets of a new age," he said, "and are confident that our cause will triumph."

"Why should men cater to the great goddess style?" demanded R. V. Chapple, another proponent of reform. Improved health and greater freedom of movement were, in his opinion, the (Continued on Page 4)

DIRECTORY READY BY NOVEMBER 15TH

Co-operation of Students Will Avoid Undue Delay in Publication

The 1930-31 edition of the Student Directory is now in course of publication and should be ready about the middle of November. "The Varsity" learned yesterday from the registrar's office.

One of the chronic causes for delay in the publication of the Directory is the failure of students to check up on their addresses and telephone numbers at the registrar's office. "Undue delay can be avoided if there is co-operation in this matter," it was pointed out to "The Varsity". "A greater number of correct addresses and telephone numbers than previous years will also result."

The great amount of work connected with the getting out of a directory necessitates much phoning and sending out cards, on the part of the registrar's office.

DRESS CONSCIOUS COED WANTS GOWN CLINGING TO FORM

Sophette Fears Revelation of Male Figure Would Be Ludicrous

GOWN WEEK ARTIFICIALITY

"Gown Wearing A Meaningless Conventionality," Woman Student Charges

The forces of tradition, as upheld by the college gown are in danger of crumbling. It is not the "mildew of discretion" that has attacked this immortal robe, but the moth of unpopularity. Can it be that the University is losing its hold on the imagination? Do the gown-wearing figures that pass like great black birds no longer stir the undergraduate heart?

"I think gown week is an artificial idea," says Miss Marjorie James, IV U.C., in commenting upon the gown week which began Monday, October 13th, with the purpose of encouraging the wearing of gowns. "There is no tradition such as 'gown' versus 'town' as at Oxford, in Toronto," continued Miss James, "to make gown wearing other than a meaningless convention here."

Incidentally, Miss James herself wears a gown. When this was pointed out she answered with charming inconsistency. "I find it convenient to wear one myself, but I disapprove of the principle."

U.C. PLAYERS IN PASSION POISON, PETRIFICATION

Commence Season with George Bernard Shaw's Farce—Burlesque

"Passion, Poison and Petrification," really and truly by Bernard Shaw, is this season's introductory presentation of the U.C. Players' Guild. Admirers as well as contemners of Shaw who are not familiar with this hilariously amusing farce-burlesque, will find little enough that is characteristic of the dramatist, except, of course, the irresistible humour. The wit, such as there is, is not a bit caustic; it is even (dare one say it?), a trifle lowbrow. There are no theories, socialistic or otherwise. There is no conversation for the sake of conversation or of Mr. Shaw. The plot is as refreshingly original and fast moving as the heart of even the most rabid movie fan could desire. And, to clear up matters, the subtitle is "The Fatal Gazogene."

Kaustic Ko-eds Criticise Knobby Knees; Kilts, Kollars Kondoned

Not even the prospect of Trinity men in shorts can pollute the sainliness of the saints of St. Hilda's. They maintain a chaste silence, their only response to "The Varsity" last night being a complete lack of opinion on the subject, and a final, "I am afraid we won't discuss the point over the phone." Queen's Hall also professed itself inadequate to the question. Men's knees are an insuperable obstacle to shorts for men, is the consensus of opinion of women less reticent than the saints. "Their knobby knees..." exclaimed Marg Millar, II U.C., and "What kind of socks will they wear?" was the pointed query of Isabel Wells, IV U.C. Expressions of horror were evoked by the mention of tuxedos with shorts. Men's need for dress reform was

FACULTY MEMBER CONSIDERS EMPIRE TRADE IMPOSSIBLE

Dr. H. A. Innis Says Canada Should Get Her Markets Wherever She Can

PROF. URWICK IS SILENT

Free Trade Will Be Refused by Labour Government Is Opinion

"Every time we speak on anything like that we're hauled over the coals by somebody," Professor E. J. Urwick replied when asked by "The Varsity" for his opinion of Premier Bennett's Empire trade policy, at Baldwin House yesterday.

"I would, if it weren't such a burning political question. We can't give our personal opinions on a thing like that," Professor Urwick indicated that his silence was due to his position as head of the Department of Political Science and Economics.

"It would be good for Canada, but whether or not it would be good for England is another question," said Dr. H. A. Innis of the same Department, when interviewed by "The Varsity" at the Faculty Reading Room. "I think Bennett's idea is absolutely right—that we should get markets wherever we can. If we can put it over England, so much the better. But I don't think we can. They've been at it for a long time." Dr. Innis was of the opinion that negotiations (Continued on Page 4)

$40,000 is Being Expended on Institution on Queen's Park Site

The University is to have an addition in the new home for the Department of Botany in a building being erected on the south-west corner of Queen's Park, facing Queen's Park Crescent on the north. It is being built at a cost of $40,000, and will be of fireproof construction throughout.

The funds are being provided by the Ontario Government and Ontario material will be used in all the work. The architecture is to be of the English Renaissance period and will conform to the Hygienic Building except that it will be of stone instead of brick. Fair Lillian Razzes Toronto Audiences

"Toronto audiences cannot appreciate stage representations and are unable to appreciate their true worth." That is the opinion advanced by nineteen-year-old Lillian Roth in the course of a few remarks to "The Varsity".

"Really, you do not know how lucky you are in Toronto. The best acts in vaudeville are featured in your city."

Five years ago Miss Roth played here in vaudeville with the Keith circuit. Next year she may return to the stage in a New York musical show. This will not be the type of production which Toronto audiences can see, according to the gentleman who will produce it.

NOISE ABATEMENT PROMISES RELIEF

College Street Construction Has Broken Baldwin House Calm

BANTING STAFF HINDERED

Questioned by "The Varsity" yesterday about the troublesome effect of construction noises on College Street, Miss Fulton, at the inquiry desk of the Banting Institute, replied: "I think the worst is over and nobody around here will be sorry when the whole thing is completed. Not only has there been an excess of noise coming from College Street, but carpenters are still working in the building. It makes it quite difficult to carry on conversation on the telephone, but I don't think it interfered with lectures or similar work within the building. When they were breaking up the old road with jiggers, it was almost impossible to hear over the phone, particularly in the rooms fronting on College Street. However, the worst is over and the improvements will be worth whatever inconvenience the noise has caused. Personally, outside of the necessity of walking through dust or mud and bopping ditches for about a block to get in and out of the building, it hasn't bothered me."

At Baldwin House the noise is proving to be a nuisance to both students and staff since the building is old and by no means sound-proof. Members of the staff expressed themselves as being glad the construction work is nearly completed.

ANNESLEY HALL JUNIORS ONCE AGAIN INITIATED

Masquerade in Order to Pass as Freshettes and Deceive Sophomores Completely

A most unprecedented and untoward incident occurred in the freshe initiations at Annesley Hall the other evening. It did not surprise residents to have sophs crash freshmen parties or for bumptious frosh to appear at the affairs of the elevated senior, but when the unbending, supercilious junior bows to sophomores it is considered time to call a parley.

Two juniors, anxious to attend the initiations, but finding it was participated in only by freshes and sophs, decided to present themselves as the naive freshettes in the mode of a donkey, each wearing a bag over her head for a mask, and carrying a carrot. They were the first to arrive and were treated with the utmost deference by their hosts. During the evening they suffered every throes of initiation, even to the eating of the carrot for refreshment.

TRINITY COLLEGE MARTYRS RECEIVE RADICALS' PRAISE

Ben Borsook Prescribes Rouge and Powder for "Shorts" Enthusiasts

KNEES SUBJECT TO SATIRE

Student Opinion Favours Revolt Against Conventional Male Attire

Undergraduates waxed radical yesterday as they showered words of praise and encouragement upon the Trinity College martyrs who on Friday evening appeared at dinner in shorts to the ruination of their confreres' appetites, and their own reputations. "The Varsity" encountered only one opponent of "freedom for the free", and he is interested in the cleaning and pressing business.

"I propose that the young men who were involved in Friday's farce be presented with rouge and powder compacts, and that they appear on the campus with sandwich-boards announcing a new feminist movement for men." Thus spoke Ben Borsook, II C. and F.

Charles O'Brien, IV St. Mike's, thought that since women are permitted to imitate masculine lines in choosing their attire, men should not hesitate to take similar liberties. "Look at woman!" he exclaimed. "If she can be comfortable, why can't I? The only objection I see to shorts is that they are not warm enough at this time of the year."

"I admire their courage, but not their knees," said W. E. Brady, II F. Vic.

Lro Malania, II U.C., suggested some improvements. "Personally, I approve of it and think it a splendid idea. But I think that more reform is needed on the inside than on the outside. I mean mental improvement."

"It's more hygienic than our present mode of dressing," said Ben Gerrard, II U.C. Asked what he would do during the winter months, he replied, (Continued on Page 2)

VICTORIA PLAYERS MAY PRESENT SHAW

Dramatic Society Ambitious to Tackle Dramas of Famous C.B.S.

Bernard Shaw may be tackled by the Victoria College Dramatic Club this season, it was decided at the initial meeting of the club, held late last week. An overflow meeting sent the organization off to what promises to be the most active year in its history, and the suggestion that Shaw plays be presented was only one of the ideas evolved by the enthusiasm of the members.

Regular activities will commence on Monday, October 20th, when an open meeting, featured by the presentation of Froid's "Suppressed Desires", in one act, will be held in Annesley Hall. Chancellor Wallace and Mr. Edgar Stone, of the Hart House Theatre, will speak. Refreshments will be served for 125 persons, and members and friends are cordially invited.

Membership in the club will this year be limited to 100, so that every member may have an opportunity to engage actively in the club's program. Work in every branch of dramatics, from acting to stage-directing, will be offered, and it is expected that this quota will be filled out within a few days. Prospective members are advised to join immediately.

SHALL WE SAY HELLO?

"At Rutgers University every student must say Hello to everyone he meets on the campus."

Even the smallest line of "filler" may cause a mental flurry. This fragment which was tucked in a corner of yesterday's "Varsity", has caused us to reflect. Are the Rutgers' gods—that be serious in their attempts to force a friendly atmosphere, or is this just another initiation stunt imposed for the first few weeks of college? Do they find their students making class and racial distinctions and, by this decree, hope to overcome the hostility?

To say the least it is a democratic order, one smacking of American geniality and far from Oxonian tastes. Under such conditions even the lordliest senior would have to descend to the level of friendly greeting with the subordinate freshman in his tell-tale coloured tie. Under such conditions even the austerity and aloofness of the Baldwin House atmosphere would disappear. The hardest blow would be, of course, to the sophomores' pride. Time-honored customs have hallowed the unfriendly rivalry between the first and second years. That they should meet and greet with a friendly Hello would be to let bygones be bygones with amazing forgiveness and forgetfulness. As for the difference such a decree would make in the camaraderie between men and women students, that speaks for itself. We have a mental picture of innumerable small groups, mixed and otherwise, dotting the campus, with the friendly souls inspired by the informal exchange of "Hellos", pausing to further acquaintance.

Seriously, is there anything significant in the idea back of the Rutgers' decree, and is it applicable here? Can ours be termed a friendly university? Certainly, division into smaller colleges does help in the matter of getting acquainted. Wheels within wheels of organizations succeed in catching almost every student on more than one cog at least. Inevitably in a university as large as ours there must be students who find the first days lonely and humiliating, and yet the green stage soon passes. Before it goes would Hello from all and sundry do much to cheer him on his way?

On the whole, we reject the Rutgers' idea as one tending to precipitate a boring situation. To save ourselves we would soon feel forced to take to the absent-minded professor's method of not appearing to notice those we met. We like to be friendly, we refuse to be "high-hat", and yet we do like a little privacy as we cross the campus. Wherefore defend us from the indiscriminate Hello!

Sympathy for Mr. Skillicorn

Editor,

"The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

To those of us whom Mr. Skillicorn has so often delighted with his many programmes on the Hart House bells, the news of the diving accident this summer which resulted in his complete paralysis, came as a great shock.

For us who are entering upon the bustle and hurry of another college year it must be almost impossible to realize the weariness and isolation of such a position.

Might not some step be taken to show Mr. Skillicorn that he has the sympathy of the entire university and our heartiest good wishes for his speedy recovery?

Yours truly,

MARGARET E. LEE, 372.

With the Theatres

The local Talkie Tabernacles have nothing spectacular to offer this week, but neither have they anything so rotten that a well-fed speakie-fan is likely to choke on what they serve him. It is a week featured by Dorothy Mackaill, who stars in both Office Wife at the Tivoli and in Man Trouble at Shea's. For her suicide attempt in the opening scene of the latter, she must share with Chico Marx, chief of the four brothers who are doing their bit in Animal Crackers, the laurels for the best individual work of the week. Lillian Roth also puts in a double appearance, with a minor role in Animal Crackers, and an "in person" appearance at the Imperial.

For your benefit we shall each week attempt to grade the offerings in the more important local houses according to a set of standards known only to ourselves. Here is how we shall proceed. The average picture, average, that is, according to our own unknown standards, will be marked thus: (0). The picture that is better than average will bear this symbol: (1), or in rare cases, (2). While those frequent films that seem to descend below the average level will be designated (-1) or very rarely (-2).

Imperial.
Rain or Shine. (-1). As a picture we can not rank this higher, because we think that Joe Cook needs music to put him across, and because the fire at the end of this play of circus life did not look dangerous enough. But we could not help laughing at the voluble chatter of the man. For a few moments the super effects of Jack Arthur made us love a nineteen year old show girl when Lillian Roth appeared in person. We had not thought it possible.

Lowes.

Raffles. (0). This ranks as high as it does because we like watching immaculate clothes prove a crook as fine a gentleman as a floor-walker. It does not rank higher because its charm is of the stilted variety of floor-walkers and fashion models. We did laugh at a cricket match, and actually gasped with delight when Scotland Yard was baffled. But please, Kay Francis, leave the crooks alone for a year. Ronald Colman!

Shea's.

Man Trouble. (0). Not Man in Trouble as The Star Weekly has it, though there is more sense to this title than there is to the former, which is about as meaningless as any title could be. In this production gangland and vice are opposed to a dear old-fashioned couple and the joys of the farm. Rather silly and quite impossible, but just well enough handled to be presentable and even appealing. Milton Sills was a gangster that was tough, and yet not too tough. Vaudeville is improving in this city.

Tivoli.

Office Wife. (1). This proves that a short feature can have all the pep, s.a. etc., of the long stringy ones that so often come around. It takes less than an hour and Lloyd Bacon does a good job with the direction. Thank the gods for a bedroom scene that rings true. We still want to know how a wife should act when she finds the stenog stealing her man away. Dorothy Mackaill, who must accept the second best love of a cheap shiek when she cannot get what she wants, is good. But Natalie Moorhead, as the wife, was better.

Uptown.

Animal Crackers. (0). Hurrah for Chico Marx, the most artistic comedy star of the year. Watch his hands help his face express his thoughts. There is nothing to this piece, neither rhyme nor reason, but the first scene is bright and the last is novel, for which much may be excused, even the fact that we wanted to see the fourth brother, but never could find out what part he played. The burlesque on Strange Interlude was a momentary marvel.

ments and the problems which confronted them. From there he proceeded to the no less compelling problems facing the west to-day. Among the principal of these, he explained, is the moulding of a national spirit among the many mixed races who are scattered throughout the west, the conquest of distance and drought, and the present wheat situation.

In conclusion, he expressed the need of better understanding between the west and east. "I hope some young men will tackle the west," he said. "Not just for a summer. But really tackle it and remember there is no making a country without the spirit of Christ."
Professor C. E. Augur, registrar of Victoria College, who commented on the notable scholastic record of the college last year, as witnessed by the prize winners. He stressed the fact that medal winners at Victoria had all achieved similar honours in the university itself.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King", followed by the Benediction.

DRESS CONSCIOUS CO-ED WANTS CLINGING GOWN

A startling suggestion was made by Miss Margaret Dunham, II U.C. "I think gowns would be improved if they were made form-fitting. Although the effect of such an improvement upon the men gown wearers," she admitted, "might be rather ludicrous."

Miss Betty Lang, last year president of the League of Nations Club, was of the opinion that gown week was a "terrible idea." "It sounds like an American Boosters' Club," she added. Only one undergraduate was found who approved of the idea, Miss Elinor Smith, IV U.C. "I think gowns are very comfortable, and much preferable to wearing a hat. Besides, they give academic atmosphere to the University."

The reason for the fall of the gown appears to be the "clothes consciousness" of the co-ed. As most of those interviewed exclaimed, adjusting a becoming hat, "Imagine me in a gown."

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The brand of tennis displayed yesterday in the first round of the inter-faculty tournament was excellent, on the whole, and the remaining matches should be hotly contested. The tournament was played under ideal weather conditions, and it is to be hoped that it can be completed while it is still warm.

Perhaps the greatest upset occurred when Ruth Harrison, St. Hilda's, was defeated by Alma Burfield of U.C. Miss Harrison is an experienced player and had been going nicely in practices.

Bea Symons won her first match by default, so was able to proceed to the second and third rounds. She had no trouble in these matches and should go right through to the finals without any difficulty. Jed Gray of U.C. also reached the third round, and is playing in great style.

The women's Athletic Association benefited to the extent of $66 through the efforts of some of its energetic members, who spent the time before the game on Saturday directing errant motorists to their parking spaces. The venture was more successful than anyone had hoped and it certainly is a lot more satisfactory than the todays for which it was substituted.

SIX TOUCHDOWNS IN MULOCK GAME

St. Mike's Seasoned Gridmen
Annihilate Forestry
Squad, 32-0

SHEEHY SHINES IN VICTORY

St. Mike's had little trouble taking the Forestry twelve into camp last night on St. Mike's campus. The score of 32-0 indicates how completely the Irish outclassed their inexperienced opponents. The speed of St. Mike's wings spelled defeat for the Forestry men and St. Mike's repeatedly made gains of 20 to 30 yards on end runs.

In the first quarter St. Mike's blocked a kick and converted for a lucky touchdown. Burns and Sheehy combined for another five points on an end run and Sheehy converted. Sheehy kicked a high one, broke through to snap up the ball and continued thirty yards for a major score.

Christie worked hard for the woodcutters, but their lack of coaching and condition showed to great disadvantage and St. Mike's added a touchdown in each of the last three periods. Cameron bucked well for St. Mike's and Burns made two beautiful runs in the third quarter to put his team in a scoring position and Harrison carried the ball through the centre for a touch.

St. Mike's—Snap, Pope; insides, Harrison, Warren; middles, Hyde, Cameron; outsides, Whelan, Keough; quarter, Burns; wing, Nolan; backs, Cere, Sheehy, Schmidt; subs, White, Kavanagh, Tarrant, Dell.

Forestry—Snap, Creelock; quarter, Christie; insides, Bouthbee, Brisley; middles, Sewell, McNutt; outsides, Bullock, McEwan; wing, Meyer; backs, Heggie, Eidt, Howard; subs, Edwards, Reeve.

SHATTERS TRINITY MILE RUN RECORD

Seaborn Clips Three-fifths of Second From Former Standard

The Trinity College record for the mile run was shattered yesterday at the U. of T. Stadium at their annual meet when Seaborn beat Brown to the tape in the fast time of 5:05 2-5 mins. The previous record for the distance was 5:06. All the events were hotly contested.

Hugh Rapsey won the individual championship of his college, amassing a total of 17 points. Jack Clough finished second with 14, while Penlington and Holmsted were tied for third place with 10 points. Holmsted, a freshman, captured both 100 yard dash and 440 yard dash. Penlington took both the 220 and 880 yard events.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Saturday's intercollegiate opener gave us all an insight into the results of the last two weeks' careful coaching under Les Blackwell. The way the interference made holes for some of the plungers was an eye-opener after the Argo game of last week. The line plays were executed smoothly and with another week's drilling should be just about perfect for the Western and Queen's games.

Varsity's end-runs, however, were poor ground-gainers. The interference slipped up once or twice and allowed McGill tacklers to break through and nail the halves before they could get started. Still, a team that can plunge like the Blues need not depend too much on extensions to move the yard sticks.

While we are on the subject of rugby we don't mind saying that anyone who may be under the delusion that next Saturday's game with Western will be a walkover for Varsity is liable to be considerably surprised. By all accounts Joe Breen has gathered together a mighty strong squad this year, as witness the way they held Queen's last week. The Tricolour were lucky in grabbing five points on a fumble to win the game. The contest with the Londoners looks like the first real test for the Blues.

The Mulock Cup series got under way yesterday with Senior Meds defeating their bitter rivals, Senior School, and St. Mike's taking Forestry 32 to 0. This St. Mike's outfit looks like the team to beat this year. It is composed of several of last year's squad which competed in the Senior O.R.F.U. They were originally slated for entry in the intermediate intercollegiate group this season, but were too late with their application and decided to play interfaculty. Right now they look just a bit too good for the class of football played in the intra-mural series.

University College is entering only one team this year. Director of Athletics Phil Sullivan is counting on rounding out a stronger team by combining the four years. It is a well-known fact that the senior Red and White squad has been hampered by lack of interest on the part of the football talent in the final years during the past few seasons, and U.C. should make a better showing this year as a result of the move.

A statement from G. D. Thomson, publisher of the "Stadium Magazine", regarding the McGill playing numbers appears in this issue of "The Varsity". No doubt there was a lack of co-operation on the part of the McGill authorities, but nevertheless we feel that the errors could have been avoided. Just by way of a little constructive criticism we would suggest that Mr. Thomson could have gone to the McGill dressing-rooms and had a word with their trainer when the sweaters were being given out.

Incidentally, a glance at the downtown press will show that "The Varsity" is not alone in its criticism of the "Stadium Magazine".

BALFOUR AND NOYES MONDPOLIZE FINALS

Pair to Capture Doubles and Meet To-day in Final of Singles Series

Balfour and Noyes defeated Armstrong and Hamilton in the final doubles match yesterday on the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club. The former team had very little difficulty in winning as the score of 6-0, 6-1, would indicate. In the first set the first four games were love games, and only one point was lost in the last two games of this set. However, credit must be given to the losing doubles team for their never-say-die spirit. They tried hard in spite of the fact that it was of no avail.

The winning team of Balfour and Noyes played invincible tennis. They used very good court practice when both advanced to the net and with Noyes' overhead smash working in perfect form the points hardly ever went to more than one or two rallies. Balfour's net game, however, was rather weak and erratic.

The singles finals of the Inter-faculty Tennis Tournament are yet to be played, and they will take place between Noyes and his doubles partner to-day at 2.30. All university tennis fans are advised to come out and watch this game as it should prove very interesting.

The House Committee announces that the annual Hart House Masquerade Ball will this year be held on November 14th, 8.30 p.m. to 2.00 a.m.

MEDICALS DEFEAT HISTORIC RIVALS

Senior S.P.S. Bow 9-5 as Meds Put on Driving Finish in Second Half

In a slow starting, but spectacularly finished game played last night Senior S.P.S. lost out to Senior Meds by a score of 9-5.

After being held even in the first two periods of play, Meds came to life, and by a wonderful display of kicking and line plunging put the S.P.S. squad to rout in the last two sessions. The game was featured by the punting of Bull and Caldwell for the Meds, and the continuous battering against the S.P.S. line, which was forced to keep on the defensive throughout the final periods.

In contrast to the even playing of the first half the third and fourth periods clearly demonstrated Meds superiority. The losers' line weakened considerably while Meds seemed to gather pep and confidence as the game progressed.

Meds—Snap, Scandiffer; insides, Massig and Bartlett; middles, Brown and Long; outsides, Steele and McCallum; quarter, Johnson; wing, Bull; halves, McLean, Caldwell and Wensley; subs, Dunne, Spence, Allen and McKenzie.

S.P.S.—Snap, Fotheringham; insides, Styles and Dewar; middles, Ziemann and Anderson; outsides, Cowie and Switzer; quarter, Kirk; wing, Joyner; halves, Parks, A. Jansen and Howe; subs, McLean, Butterill, V. Jansen, McCartney and Brennenman.

Referee, Al Wilson; umpire, A. J. Galloway.

TRINITY-PHARMACY TILT SCORELESS DEADLOCK

Trinity and Pharmacy played to a nil to nil deadlock in a ragged but hard-fought interfaculty soccer game last night. Both teams lacked combination and condition, showing poor form in shooting.

Pharmacy—Goal, Wilcox; backs, Rogers and Johnston; half-backs, Lebar, Fowler and Jackson; forwards, McQuillan, Walton, Smith, Ivey and Fisher.

Trinity—Goal, Brown; backs, Sinfield and Brown; halves, Shambrook, Douglas and Hinchcliffe; forwards, Bell, Graham, Wong, Jackson and Stewart.

EMPIRE TRADE IS OUT

would proceed on a "dickering" basis, and with regard to individual products.

"You can't talk on a basis of free trade any more—Empire free trade is out," he continued. "I think Beaverbrook and Melchett will fall in with whatever plan takes hold. This plan will work if it is put into force, but it won't be adopted by the present labour government."

Dr. Innis expressed the belief that, since the Liberals will not agree to Mr. Bennett's proposals, they will not be accepted by Great Britain unless the Conservatives obtain a majority over all parties in a general election. While declining to prophesy the results of such an election, he did not think the Conservatives would be able to obtain sufficient support on a policy of Empire preferences, although present conditions might possibly cause the others to bring about such a change.

Announces Intention to Keep Stadium Mag. Out of "Flop" Category

Referring to comment in the "Speaking of Sport" column on the mix-up in McGill playing numbers in the "Stadium Magazine," G. D. Thompson, Editor of the magazine, made the following statement to "The Varsity" yesterday:

I very much regret that the McGill playing numbers, as published in the "Stadium Magazine," were incorrect. We printed the numbers supplied by the Athletic Directorate of McGill University. There was doubtless ample cause for the changes made at the last minute in their arrangements. We will continue to put forth every effort to keep the "Stadium Magazine" above the category of a "total flop."

How to Write a Letter Home Always Say You're Going Some

By C. L. Coburn

Sit down at the table. Borrow your room-mate's note-paper. Borrow his fountain pen. Borrow some ink to fill it with. Fill your own pen at the same time. Start to write.

"Dear mother, I" Well, what about you? What have you done to write home about? Did you turn out for the track team and run three miles with a broken leg to win the Wrigley marathon? Did you dash a hundred yards in ten seconds with fifteen tackles around your neck to score a touch down and save the honour of dear old Pharmacy in the last second of the big game, with two ribs broken, a fractured skull and the appendix at the back of the book? Did you? Well, what of it? Say so anyway.

"I am enjoying myself very much" Yes, you are. You looked like it last night when they pulled you out of bed to give you a cold shower, and then you had to sleep on the floor because some barbarian punched a hole in your hot-water bottle. Don't forget about the time you went into the S.C.A. office for your medical inspection. Or the time you asked a second year woman to a dance, and her boy friends took you for a long taxi ride and made you walk home without any pants on. You might mention the new tie they gave you, that's cut so short you can't take it off at night, and you dream you're in a rumble seat every night.

"I am just a little short of funds" You would be. What did you waste that two dollars on a subscription to "The Varsity" for? You never got a copy anyway. And five dollars for pew-rent in Hart House Chapel, and the place is so full you can't get in. Not to mention a ten dollar season ticket to all the inter-faculty rugby and soccer games. Be sure to speak about the fifth hand tuxedo you bought, with soup all over the vest and seams that split just when you're beginning to feel affectionate.

"Love to all. I'll write again soon" You mean you'll write again as soon as you're broke again. But why be crude?

People marvel at the luncheons they get at the Piccadilly Inn for 35c and 50c. It's so good they go back the next day and marvel all over again. Really, they don't know how so much deliciousness can be served for such little price. The surroundings are so attractive, too, the flowers so fresh, the service so good—and the location so convenient.

Canadian Pacific Contributes to Relief of Unemployment

E. W. Beatty, Back From Inspection Trip, Voices Confidence in Canadian West Despite Depression—Crop Outlook Good—Distinguished Party Makes Comprehensive Tour.

E. W. BEATTY

Confidence in the ability of the Canadian West to face and overcome its problems, and a practical plan for assisting in the relief of unemployment were outstanding features of the annual inspection trip through the West just completed by E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and a party of Directors and distinguished guests. Following upon the trip, Mr. Beatty has announced the Company's contribution to the general plans for the relief of unemployment in Canada as follows:

"After Conference with the Federal Government, an arrangement has been entered into whereby in consideration of the assumption by the Government of interest charges for a specified period on the capital expenditure involved in the company will immediately embark on certain works, which had been approved for the future but which in ordinary course would not have been approached until 1931 or 1932. In framing the programme, we have had particularly in mind the desirability of providing some relief to the agricultural industry by furnishing work for farmers and their work animals, and by carrying transportation facilities to those districts where the length of haul to the railway imposes an undue burden on the producer's time and resources. Other works on the list are designed to absorb as much as possible of the surplus labour in the towns and cities.

"The program follows: Track will be laid on the branch line now graded from Crossfield West to a distance of twenty-eight miles, and on the Lacombe and North Western Railway from Thorby to a point of junction with the Calgary and Edmonton, 22 miles. Construction will proceed on the section of the Nipawin-Prince Albert line from the end of the present grading to Henribourg, a distance of approximately twenty miles, from Medford to a point on the Debden-Meadow Lake line, a distance of thirty-five miles, from Cansworth to Rosetown, a distance of twenty miles, and from Rosetown to a distance of twenty-five miles, and on the Kettle Valley Railway a link will be built connecting the tracks at the North and the South end of Dog Lake. Return ballasting will be taken in hand on an extensive scale on the Lacombe subdivision, on the Galt subdivision, and on the Algoma district, all in Eastern Canada. Gravel ballasting will be done on the New Brunswick district. One hundred miles of track in Thompson River will be relaid with a heavier rail section, and one hundred and fifty miles of the heaviest rail section so far used in Canada will be laid in British Columbia. The manufacture of these rails will provide much employment in Canadian steel plants, in addition to the labour involved in the actual track work. It is intended also to start at once on the task of providing more commodious station accommodation at Regina. Surveys are now being made which will probably justify entering on some grade revision work along the Western Canadian Pacific in British Columbia and provision has been made for the necessary outlay."

Discussing present conditions and future prospects in general on his return to Montreal, Mr. Beatty said: "We have come back greatly reassured as to the outlook for a steady progression of general business with, in all likelihood, a well defined upturn in volume making itself evident next year."

"Despite conditions in the world's grain markets which leave much to be desired, Western Canada continues to look to the future with confidence, and apparently has quite made up its mind that it will take much more than the present recession to be unable to work any permanent harm to the West, or even to retard seriously or for any length of time the development which has been going forward over the past decade."

"The crops were, on the whole, very encouraging. The total yield will be considerably above that of last year and greater than was anticipated a month or two ago. While in some districts they were far from good, in the north and more particularly in the Peace River country they were excellent. The quality, too, is generally good, although in some districts recent rain and snow have delayed threshing and may, to some extent, have lowered the grade. The decline in wheat prices naturally has had a serious effect upon the purchasing power of the people, and a return to such pronounced prosperity as we have experienced in the past depends to a large extent upon the future course of the wheat markets and that of the markets for such other commodities as this country produces in large quantities. The outlook in this respect is not at all bright at the present time, but I see no reason to believe that a return to more active business conditions should not be accompanied by at least a gradual upturn in values."

"In the meantime the West is not grumbling. Farmers and business men are facing conditions as they find them with a stout courage born of an unshakable confidence in the country in which they live. There are already evidences that present conditions are bringing about readjustments that in the long run will establish a sounder basis. A much wider spread of mixed farming is one of these. If the decline in wheat prices effects this in a general way throughout the West, it will not have been an unmixed evil."

Mr. Beatty and his party visited the Peace River on the way west later passing through Banff and Lake Louise to the coast. On board the "Princess Norah" they encircled Vancouver Island and spent two days at Victoria. The return was over the Kettle Valley Railway to Kimberley and Trail where the Sullivan mine and the Consolidated Smelters were visited. The fruit-growing industry of southern British Columbia was found to be in excellent shape. Large quantities of fruit were being shipped and the quality was reported good. From British Columbia the party returned north to Prince Albert where Mr. Beatty's special train inaugurated a daily service between Regina and that city over the new Lanigan-Prince Albert branch. At Nipawin the party crossed the Saskatchewan River on the new bridge and inspected the branch line work going forward there. The return was through Winnipeg direct to Montreal. Travelling with Mr. Beatty were Sir Herbert Holt, Sir Charles Gordon, W. A. Black and R. S. McLaughlin all of whom are Canadian Pacific directors. Others in the party were Sir Arthur Currie, Maj.-Gen. the Hon. S. C. McBurn, Hon. Senator Smeaton White, Mr. Beaupre Leman and Dr. W. W. Chipman.

MODERN TAXATION SYSTEM ARRAIGNED AT COMMERCE CLUB

American Speaker Advocates Single Tax on Land as More Just

BASED ON COMMON SENSE

Injustice and Inefficiency of Present System
Decried

"The tax-gathering system in vogue in Toronto and the other cities of America blunders along like a blind mule in a bog," J. R. Brown, president of the Manhattan Single Tax Club told the members of the University Commerce Club as he put before them the arguments in favour of the scheme for which his organization stands yesterday in Hart House Debates Room. The only way that the services that a corporation renders to the property within its limits could be justly paid for was by a single tax on land, he said.

"The city is a business institution purveying service which all citizens enjoy and which must be paid for," he said. "On the common business principle of payment for value received and in the quantity received, the cost of civic improvements should come out of a tax on land."

"The present system means that there is a premium paid on holding city lots idle and for refusing to replace obsolete buildings with modern structures and a fine for new buildings and building improvements of any kind," he said.

His arraignment of the present system involved charges of injustice, refusal to take into consideration the discoveries of science and a disregard for common business principles.

"If a man undertook to run his business on the lines on which a city is conducted he'd be in the asylum before the week was out," he said.

Mr. Brown was introduced by Professor Gilbert Jackson of the Economics Department.

Mr. Brown, conveying this message to the Fabius Club later in the evening, stated in addition that single tax, far from being an exhausted theory, is slowly becoming a world-wide movement. The present system of taxation will not survive, he declared, if only thought is brought to bear upon it.

CLASS PARTY SEES NO GATE CRASHERS

Other Tricks Tried to Gain
Admittance to U. C.
Festival

TWO ORCHESTRAS PRESENT

All years and faculties were represented at the U.C. 3T2 class party, held Tuesday evening, October 14th at the Women's Union. A large crowd as usual thronged the auditorium, and another orchestra played downstairs.

Gate crashers were few this year, but many other tricks were tried. Some tried to gain free admittance by saying they were "Varsity" reporters, but the executive soon discovered this. One man attempted to go in, look the party over, and pay twenty-five cents down payment. However, on being told he would have to pay a like sum each hour, he decided to pay it at once.

S.P.S., Meds, Dents, Forestry, etc., were in evidence. Refreshments and punch were served for tired dancers. Yells from School, Varsity and others brought the dance to an early close.

Canadians Prettier Says Colorado Co-ed

Canadian girls who are thorny upon the subject of beauty as appraised by Rudy Vallee, will be glad to hear that a co-ed from Denver, Colorado, who is now attending University of Toronto, considers the girls of our university prettier than American girls. "They are healthier, fresher looking," continued Miss Marian Poe, "I think they walk a lot. They are also more original."

"Do you think the academic standard is much higher here?"

"Well, yes," she said, "and there is more academic atmosphere here, even the faculty in Denver do not wear gowns except at Commencement."

Miss Mary Turner of Iowa, who is in second year Household Economics, thinks there is not as much school spirit at Toronto. "I think the girls have not as much pep here and the faculties are too isolated."

BUDDING GENIUSES FORM PRESS CLUB

Year's Activities Discussed at Reorganization Meeting

SHORT STORIES FEATURED

With the informality characteristic of all its meetings, the University Women's Press Club opened its season yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union, with a general discussion of the year's activities, the reading of the constitution, and various matters of business.

It was agreed during the discussion that meetings should be held at 4.30 every second Tuesday, instead of Thursday, as it has been in previous years. This change makes it generally more convenient for students who have lectures, labs or executive meetings.

A speaker on Short Stories is to fill the programme of the first meeting, which will be followed up by criticisms of the original work of the members who will have benefited by the experience of the previous group.

A Short Story, the composition of one of the club's associate members, was read at the conclusion of the meeting, something, it was felt, representative of the "budding geniuses" that the club produces, or has within its midst.

FRESHIES BLINDFOLDED TAKEN FOR LONG RIDE

Being blind-folded and taken for a ride that left them away out in Jefferson, Ontario, and then being compelled to wash dishes and to take an oath promising reverence for their seniors, was the fate of the freshies that were initiated into Occupational Therapy yesterday.

The dish-washing and oath-taking took place at the Jefferson home of Muriel Barnaby, where the freshies later put on a series of skits followed by apples and marshmallows.

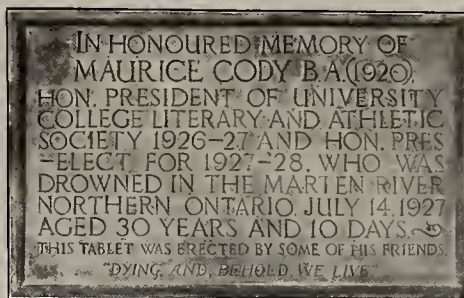

Visitors' Day

Sunday, 19th October, will be Visitors' Day in Hart House when members may introduce visitors, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2.00 and 4.00 p.m. Members will be asked to show their membership cards at the door.

The whole building will be open for inspection.

Tea will be served in the Graduate Dining Room between 3.00 and 4.30 p.m. at 25c per cover.

THE MAURICE CODY MEMORIAL

This tablet to the memory of the late Maurice Cody, has been presented to the University College Literary and Athletic Society from a fund created by friends of Mr. Cody.

Impressive Function To-night At Unveiling of Cody Memorial

A bronze plaque, in memory of the late Maurice Cody, son of Canon Cody, will be unveiled by Lady Kemp to-night at 8.15, at a meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society. Following a speech by Joe McCully, Professor Jackson will move the acceptance of the memorial, and will speak a few words about Maurice Cody as he knew him as the president of the society. D. J. Walker, a graduate of Osgoode, will also speak. Bruce Murray will reply on behalf of the undergraduates. Music and refreshments will be included in the programme. Several guests, including Canon Cody, have been invited.

The Cody Memorial, which is being presented to the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, was designed by J. Scott Carter, who also did the heraldic designs in Hart House.

Maurice Cody, in his undergraduate days, filled some of the most important posts which the Society has to offer, and later was one of the best and most popular honorary presidents the Society has ever had. A short time after Mr. Cody's untimely death, it was decided to create a fund with which to form a memorial commemorating one of the university's most prominent graduates. A sum far in excess of that projected was realized. The major part of this was devoted to fellowships and the surplus to such memorials as the beautiful plaque which will be unveiled in the University College common room to-night.

Varsity Graduate HAS UNIQUE POST

Miss Rhoda Howe is Appointed to Education League Situation

WILL ACCOMPANY TOURS

Miss Rhoda Howe, a graduate of '29, U.C., has received probably one of the most interesting placements the Vocational Bureau has made. She is to be the Toronto representative of the Overseas Education League, which organized the original teachers' and students' tours. In view of the very large number of registrations in Toronto, it was found no longer possible for the work to be handled from the western headquarters, even with an honorary secretary here. Miss Howe has been appointed to look after the eastern end, including enquiries, registrations, etc., and will accompany the tours in the summer.

While in Varsity Rhoda took a prominent part in college activities. In her last year she was president of the Literary Society, and she was the business manager of the play "Whosit" which had a successful run at Hart House. Even now she still might be considered a student, because she has been brushing up her French, German, Spanish and Italian, all of which will be required in her work.

Aldine House, the office of the Overseas Education League, has been established at 224 Bloor St. W. in with Mrs. Mrs. MacKenzie and Miss True Davidson in charge.

SCIENTISTS STUDY FLOWER STRUCTURE

Club President Gives Paper at First Meeting of New Year

LANTERN SLIDES SHOWN

"The Structure and Function of the Flower" was the subject at the first regular meeting of the Trinity College Science Club. W. K. W. Baldwin, the president, gave the paper of the evening. The organization of the flower was first outlined. An idea of the diversity of arrangement of these floral parts in the Flora of the Present was given by means of lantern slides.

Lantern slides of some of our native wild flowers were shown, with explanatory remarks on each, particularly interesting were those of the orchids of this region. Specimens of flowers and microscopic mounts were supplied for the interest of members of the club.

A vote of thanks was passed to the speaker for a paper that was as lucid as it was comprehensive, and to the hosts of the evening who supplied the refreshments. After an animated discussion, the meeting adjourned.

ENGLISH ASSOCIATION MEETS THIS EVENING

Professor J. F. MacDonald, recently elected 1930-31 president of the University of Toronto English Association, will address the organization on "Some Inhibitions of Browning", at its first meeting in the Reference Library Hall, St. George and Streets, on October 15th at 8.15 p.m.

All undergraduates are invited to the meeting. In the past years the meetings of the Association have been of great value to students in the English courses.

Unenviable Publicity Features Park Parade

Queen's Park was the scene of frantic furore last evening when certain business men of the city, in their zeal for advertising, chose the magic hour of six to hold a lengthy motor truck and float parade.

Publicity of an unenviable variety was unfortunately the reward of their efforts. Traffic was effectively blocked for an hour around the crescent, while cops and irate truck drivers rivalled each other in threatening gesticulations.

Laura Secord trucks were mingled with those loaded with washing machines; laundry trucks were in close contact with bread trucks; and Hill, the Mover's vans were coyly associating with the Baby Austins.

BUSY YEAR AHEAD FOR LEAGUE CLUB

Members Show Keen Enthusiasm as New Programme Outlined

GROUP SYSTEM ADOPTED

"The work of the League of Nations Club is to study the League of Nations," said Earl Lautenslager, Vice-President of the club, at the opening meeting in Baldwin House Tuesday afternoon.

"We wish to increase our own knowledge and further international goodwill," he continued as he welcomed all newcomers to the club. He went on to say that the club hopes to prove adequate for those who wish to make an intensive study as well as those who are interested more in the general aspects of the League.

Professor N. A. McKenzie remarked that after the club had been organized last year to handle the Model Assembly it was felt that others would be interested in studying international affairs. This year the League of Nations Club will take over the work formerly done by an S.C.M. International Affairs Study Group. Speaking of the group system Mr. McKenzie said, "My idea of a group is that it should be autonomous and self-contained. Those who attend should study the subject and be willing to work, while the leader of the group should act in a mere advisory capacity."

Along with Professor N. A. McKenzie and Professor Glazebrook, Miss I. Biss, Department of Economics, will lead a group. The leaders intend to allow each group to decide what questions it wishes to study and more definite plans for what looks to be a successful year will be forthcoming next week.

ADVOCATE INTER-VARSITY FELLOWSHIP AT T.I.C.C.U.

Mr. Palmer Tells Meeting of Power of Student Leadership

The first annual meeting of the T.I.C.C.U. was held at Wymilwood on Tuesday, October 14th at 5 p.m., with Mr. Hart-Davies as chairman. Mr. Palmer, General Secretary of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, addressed the group and in glowing terms spoke of the need of a universal Inter-Varsity Fellowship.

"There is no more thrilling task than to bring Christ to students and no group more vital for such work. The influence of students is such a powerful one. In Germany, for example, university students may yet set Europe aflame with another war," said Mr. Palmer during the course of his talk.

SENT IN "AS A JOKE"

Gordon Sinclair Denies Any Ultior Motive for Action

Denying that he was actuated by any ulterior motive when he wrote in an American theatrical weekly that "George Elston gets a job as 'professor of publicity' at the U. of T.", Gordon A. Sinclair, of The Star, in conversation with a "Varsity" reporter yesterday, said, "I simply stuck that in for a joke."

Wandering into the canyons of downtown Toronto, "The Varsity" representative found The Star's wandering reporter in the office of the King Street sheet. Asked for an explanation of his action, Mr. Sinclair parried with, "How do you know I wrote that?" However, after a moment, he explained fully.

George Elston, according to Mr. Sinclair, formerly owned the St. Catharines Standard, and was formerly a member of The Star editorial department. He had told Mr. Sinclair that he was giving lectures in journalism at the University, and that led to mention of the fact in the theatrical publication. Under the heading, "Toronto Chatter", various items of gossip regarding Toronto men, and Toronto affairs were included in part of a column of the paper.

The item in question appeared in the issue of October eighth, before the furore arose among University of Toronto students on account of Rudy Vallee being given a copy of the University anthem.

Mr. Sinclair said his jocular reference "professor of publicity" had nothing to do with the Vallee situation.

SETTLEMENT WORK SEEN IN EXHIBITS

University Settlement Open House Arouses Interest

MANY STUDENTS ATTEND

Yesterday afternoon the University Settlement held open house. The tea hour was presided over by Mrs. H. D. Scully and Mrs. G. H. Neidler, assisted by the executive of the Volunteer Council, Miss Dora Millicamp, Miss Hazel Bredin and Miss Mary Sibley. Students from all colleges attended and were greatly interested in learning the inside of Settlement work.

Among things of interest were the exhibits of junior art and of camp craft work executed under the supervision of Miss Jennie Berlin at Settlement Summer Camp on Gull Lake. During the tea, music lessons were in full swing, and two little girls' clubs, the Little Neighbours, and the Neichewies were visited. Art and pottery classes have been organized for the winter term and will begin this evening.

Two welcome additions have been planned for the House, an art room and a Little Theatre costume room. Although many students signed up to help with the clubs, there is still room for more, and the Settlement will gladly welcome other volunteers.

MILDEW

"Every time we speak on anything like that, we're hauled over the coals by somebody. . . . I would, if it weren't such a burning political question. We can't give our personal opinions on a thing like that."

These sentences constitute the reply of Professor E. J. Urwick, head of the Department of Political Science and Economics, to "The Varsity's" request for his views on Bennett's Empire trade policy.

Shades of Professor Irwin and last year's "mildew of discretion" controversy! Can the University of Toronto dare to lay claim to a place among the world's brain-centres as long as it imposes upon the members of its faculty the necessity of slinking into a corner every time the bone of controversy is dragged out?

It was all exhausted last year when the departing Professor Irwin wrote his famous epistle in which he said a lot of things that not a few of his confreres would like to say if they dared. The best minds in the country are being bound and gagged by a bureaucratic machine whose minions haven't any more backbone than a silkworm themselves and who shudder exquisitely at the thought that anyone else may have the temerity to express an honest opinion on a moot question.

As long as Professor Blank confines himself to vague harangues about rare pre-historic insects and the political alterations of ancient Chaldea, the orifice of officialdom sets itself in a benign paternal smile. But let Professor Blank once venture to make a pertinent remark for publication and some live issue that comes home to men's business and bosoms, and the orifice will show its teeth. And the teeth of officialdom, though they may grind slowly, grind exceedingly small.

The spectacle of a prominent department head in the University of Toronto retiring in trembling confusion rather than commit himself on a subject for which a lifetime of training has qualified him to speak is not exactly a thing to inspire in the lay mind any element of respect. But as long as our first-class minds are dependent for their bread and butter upon a coterie of third-class minds, the present condition will continue to obtain.

We will long remember as a classic the remark of G. Howard Ferguson, Premier and Minister of Education of the Province, when confronted last winter with Professor Irwin's allegations, by representatives of the down-town press.

"I believe Professor Irwin is leaving at the end of the year," quoth the Prime Minister of Ontario. "It is just as well."

MUSIC

With this number of "The Varsity," we return to musical criticism. The position of Music Editor of the undergraduate daily was abolished last year following a deadlock between the Editor and the Hart House Music Committee over certain disputed critical articles which had appeared concerning concerts in Hart House.

"The Varsity" maintained that no self-respecting publication could print the blarney demanded by the guest artists; and the Committee maintained that, since the artists were not being paid for their services, the sort of pointed criticism which "The Varsity" music critic was levelling at the performers, would soon make it impossible for Hart House to secure singers and players for its concerts.

With the re-creation of the music post to-day, this paper withdraws no whit from its position of last year. Under the new regime, however, such criticisms as appear under the head, "Art, Music, and Drama", will be—insofar as they apply to the invited guest-artists of Hart House—either favorable or non-committal. If the Music Editor feels in any instance that it would be a prostitution of his trained taste and an unfair thing to his readers to produce anything but an adverse criticism of a Hart House event, no criticism of that event will appear.

As for the other concerts—those for which admission is charged—this paper will adopt the attitude of "no fear or favor", to which any publication jealous of the best traditions of the journalistic craft must adhere.

Dr. Moure's Recital

One of the most important musical contributions to university life began last evening when Dr. Moure played the first of his series of fortnightly organ recitals.

The feature of the programme was the Gullmunt No. 5 Sonata in C Minor. Really, in symphonic form one is carried from the violence of the Allegro Appassionato to the sweet melancholy of the Adagio. A riotous Scherzo dispels the mood and the fine chorale is not brought on the scene till Comus is in turn driven out by a stodgy page of recitative. Finally developed the movement culminates in a magnificent enunciation of the original chorale.

The performance was quite effective and the moods nicely appreciated but a vacation spent far from a console was revealed in the frequent lack of accuracy and pure legato which is usually so marked a characteristic of Dr. Moure's work.

This writer felt that the rendition of the well-known Bach D minor Toccata and Fugue lacked imagination particularly in the recitatives and inaccuracies occasionally threw a figure out of its perspective.

Cleverly registered morceaux from Kreisler and Paderewski and a festival march completed the programme.

Chatter

One or two of the local dramatic groups are experiencing some difficulty in arranging dates at Hart House Theatre for their annual production. With the Hart House Players themselves requiring twelve of the twenty weeks of the season, it is not proving easy to fit the needs of the local societies to the remaining eight weeks.

We suggest: Since Mr. Edgar Stone will be back as director for 1931-32 it may be possible for him to arrange a round table conference between representatives of all the local groups to meet at the theatre on the first Saturday of the fall term in 1931. Such a conference with all the available dates before it, might after discussion of each society's needs, easily arrange a very suitable schedule. We believe that many benefits might accrue if the executives of all the local societies could be brought together from time to time.

The University College Players' Guild opens the local season this afternoon with a performance of Shaw's Passion, Poison and Petrification, a bright little piece in which G. B. S. allows his characters to express their own sentiments, and a comic fantasy of the highest order. At the first reading of The Way of the World, the truly ambitious selection of the Guild for a December evening production, there were more men present than would sometimes appear at two or three regular meetings. If the Guild can succeed this year, both in carrying out their weekly programs and in producing The Way of the World with some smoothness and technical skill, their claim to be the premier dramatic group in the university will have to be conceded.

Why should the Maine Stein Song be the musical selection that accompanies the advertisements for Canadian Prosperity Week in local theatres?

In another week the local dramatic world will have lost its third bachelor within a month. We congratulate: Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel A. Benson, and Mr. Brownlow Card and his wife-to-be.

Suggestions for this column will be welcomed. It will appear each Wednesday.

but it won't go far in this year of grace. It is the contribution which the listeners to Sunday's carillon recital gave for the benefit of John L. Skillicorn, former Carillonneur of Hart House, who lies paralyzed in a city hospital.

There are approximately six thousand students at the University. Miss Parks at University College and Mr. Burns at Hart House, in their respective S.A.C. offices, are receiving whatever monies students may be moved to offer as voluntary contributions. If each student were to donate the sum of twenty-five cents—which, God wot is a tiny coin enough—the University would have one thousand six hundred and eighty-six dollars to hand over to those interested in caring for Mr. Skillicorn. Why not do it?

Stadium Magazine

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

There has been considerable comment on the inaccuracy of the playing numbers of the football teams, as published in the "Stadium Magazine". That is only one of many faults.

According to Mr. Thompson, editor of the so-called magazine, there are only twelve men on the squad deserving of anything more than a playing number. For his benefit there are approximately twenty-five men working for between three and four months to make the squad. They are the men that make his magazine possible, why doesn't he give them "a break"?

BALFOUR DEFEATS NOYES IN THE INTERFACULTY TENNIS FINAL

Varsity Wins First Game of Four Game Series by 37-0 Score

SHOULD TAKE TITLE

With smashing line plays, brilliant extensions, and a fighting spirit which could not be withstood, Varsity juniors battled St. Michael's College into submission on the back campus yesterday, winning 37-0. The game was the first of a four game series, the winner of which will play off with the eastern winners for the intercollegiate junior title, and judging by this game Varsity will be taking the trip. In fairness to St. Mike's, however, it must be admitted that they had been practising only a short time and their condition was sadly lacking, especially in the last quarter. The next game should be a standout.

Varsity forced the play right from the start and after a series of plunges, Leachman put over a placement for three points. Both sides were fumbling badly, and Varsity had the ball twice on the S.M.C. 10 yard line, but could not score. Finally Leachman returned one for a single. At the opening of the second stanza McInnis passed to Arnup, who ran 15 yards. The Blue team blocked two kicks in a row, and their attempted placement went for a point. Erratic work by the S.M.C. halves cost them the ball, and after a beautiful 40 yard run by Patterson, Oille kicked for another point.

In the last half the superior condition of the freshman team began to tell; the Blue linemen were charging in, and the combination of the backfield was worthy of veterans. Extensions, which were weak on Saturday, brought two touchdowns, one of which Watson converted. Bryers ran 20 yards and Arnup's kick was pushed over for a safety touch. In the final canto Varsity scored three more touch-

KEEN COMPETITION IN TRACK EVENTS

Interfaculty Track and Field Meet Should Furnish Upsets

MANY STARS GRADUATE

Track and field men of all faculties are competing this afternoon at the Stadium in the annual interfaculty meet. This year's intercollegiate team will be chosen from the winners. Last year S.P.S. annexed the championship by a commanding majority and will be fighting hard to retain their honors.

A few of last year's best men have been lost and their places on the team must be filled. Graduation took away Gord Jermya and Bill Finlayson. Jermya, as a half-miler, had few peers and was last year's intercollegiate champion at that distance. Finlayson was noted as a sprinter and also as a field man. Both these men were sure point winners and this loss leaves a decided gap in the team. This year Johnny Fitzpatrick is giving all his time to rugby. He will be a hard man to replace. However, in spite of the loss of these three men, Varsity will again be very strong on the track.

In the sprints, Ralph Adams, S.P.S., of Olympic fame, will, of course, be the number one man. Eddie Dore, Dents, is also showing very good form as a 100 and 220 yard man and is sure of a place on the team. Adams is at present the intercollegiate champion in both the century and the 220 and will be hard to beat. Connolly, S.P.S., (Continued on Page 4) es on their tired opponents, which, with two converts by Watson, completed the one-sided scoring.

In spite of several bad fumbles, the rejuvenated junior squad showed vast improvement over their previous exhibition and with steady work should become a championship aggregation. Leachman, Arnup, Patterson, Watson, Oille, all turned in fine efforts and the team is strong in substitutes. Willett, Ryan and McGoe turned in good performances for the losers, who will undoubtedly show up much better in the next encounter.

Varsity—Flying wing, Patterson; halves, Leachman, Arnup, Webber; quarter, Oille; snap, Keith; insides, Herman, Calvert; middles, Watson, Dennison; outsides, Mustard, A. Henderson; subs, Bryers, McInnis, Morrison, Warren, V. Henderson, Monaroff, Austin, Campbell.

St. Mike's—Flying wing, Carroll; halves, Shook, O. Regan, Ryan; snap, Duggan; insides, Harris, Carter; middles, Willett, Hussey; outsides, Simmons, Brophy; subs, Wilson, Grant, McGoe, O'Connor, Dore, B. Regan.

Officials—Bartlett and "Sweeney" Davis.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

This afternoon's interfaculty track and field meet will furnish an opportunity to glance over prospects for the Intercollegiate meet at Queen's on the 24th of this month.

The track talent looks good enough to repeat last year's win despite the loss of stars like Fitzpatrick, Finlayson and Jermya. The field events are somewhat uncertain, but to-day's meet will probably uncover some hidden talent.

* * *

The team could certainly use Alex. Munro, all-round star. Alex. is not eligible for competition, however, and a sure point-winner is lost by his absence.

* * *

After getting some sloppy rugby out of their systems in Saturday's exhibition, Varsity Juniors showed a complete reversal of form in defeating St. Mike's 37 to 0 yesterday. The freshmen have one or two smart players in Arnup, Leachman, Oille and Patterson and are likely to go as far, if not farther, than last year's squad.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The tennis tourney reaches the semi-final round this morning, when Betty Carter and L. Pattison clash to decide who will meet Jed Gray, and Alma Burfield plays P. Callen for the honour of meeting Bea Symons. So far the favourites have come through in great style, and the tourney has produced some very close and exciting matches. Only four girls are selected for the intercollegiate team which meets Queen's and Western in Kingston on Friday, and competition for a place on this team has been very keen.

St. Hilda's and U.C. seniors both had excellent turnouts at their first basketball practices. The Saints were especially enthusiastic, as all of last year's championship team is eligible except one, and there are seven or eight others anxious for a place on the team. Nine aspirants for a place on University College's senior team were out of which four or five are new material. It is impossible as yet to tell whether these recruits will be stars or not, but if enthusiasm counts for anything, they should go far.

SMART BRAND OF TENNIS AS BALFOUR TAKES CROWN

Intercollegiate Team Picked for Net Tournament at Montreal

Balfour defeated Bill Noyes yesterday in the finals of the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament on the courts of the Toronto Tennis Club in three straight sets, 11-9, 6-3, 8-6. This match proved the fastest and most spectacular of all the matches in the whole tournament, and both contestants were about exhausted when it was over.

Balfour played a very strategic game and his bullet-like drives held Noyes on the defensive for the greater part of the game. Balfour's net playing all through the tournament was the weakest part of his game, but strange to say he turned it into his major point getter yesterday. His overhead smashes had a terrific sting to them and were so well placed that Noyes was drawn well out of court to return them.

Noyes, however, tried hard to regain the lead and his return of almost impossible shots had the spectators holding their breath. As the score would indicate the match was hotly contested and it was just the breaks of the game which decided the issue.

On October 16 the singles and doubles teams will play at McGill in an intercollegiate tournament.

If the common or garden variety of house fly is a dirty creature, it is not its own fault, according to one of the co-eds of Ohio State University who has completed a study of over 3,000 of them. Every one of them in her opinion made an honest attempt to keep itself clean.

VICTORIA GRIDDERS TAKE FIRST GAME

Mulock Cup Holders Capture Opener From Trinity by 11-0

GAME CLOSER THAN SCORE

Victoria College, last year's Mulock Cup champions, opened their season with a win over Trinity by a score of 11-0 yesterday. The game was a good deal closer than the score would indicate, the Red and Black losing considerable ground on offside penalties. Bunt, of Vic, intercepted a pass in the final quarter and galloped 40 yards for a touchdown. Coupled with a field goal by Wills in the same period and two points in the first this furnished the scoring for the game.

The Trinity efforts were featured by the faultless catching of Herbert on the backfield, while Wills was outstanding for the Scarlet and Gold.

Trinity—Flying wings, Clough and Coleman; halves, Herbert and Dickson; snap, Martin; insides, Fair and Yates; middles, Sley and Wilson; outsides, Edwards and Perdue; quarter, Olmstead; subs, Fearman, Mann, Wright, Fingleton and Bushell.

Victoria—Flying wings, Sirmian, Addison; halves, Bunt, Wells; quarter, Ferguson; snap, Derst; insides, Davidson, Wylie; middles, Clarke, Lindsay; outsides, Wallis, Moffatt; subs, Armstrong, Leash, Doughty, Vaughan, Hutton, Henderson, Devitt.

SCHOOL DOWN MED RIVALS IN SMART JUNIOR TILT

Lichty, Muir and Mitchell Make Many Gains Through Line

S.P.S. Juniors displayed some smart football yesterday on the back campus when they trounced Meds to the tune of 16 to 0. Throughout the game Meds fought doggedly on, but found themselves completely at a loss before the repeated onslaughts of the up-and-coming engineers. Lichty, Muir, and Mitchell turned in a real good game for the School with Coleman the only outstanding player for the Meds.

Junior Meds—Flying wings, Thompson, Coleman; halves, Stewart, Walker; quarter, Dickson; outsides, Hazelwood, McGinnis; insides, Bright, Tait; middles, Chenoweth, Kingsberg; snap, Cranfield; alternates, Erwin, Chute, Magner, Stepley, Mather, Barber.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR BLUE GOLFERS

Strong Aggregation Chosen for Intercollegiate Meet

MATCHES THIS WEEK-END

The six members of the golf team to represent the U. of T. in the intercollegiate matches at Montreal on October 17th and 18th were finally chosen yesterday. Jim Sihler, Don Anderson, Jack Nash, F. R. Wilkinson, Murray Payne and Tom Lonnaborough will make the trip. The first four players were chosen last week and one of the remaining two positions was filled when Jack Nash, Ontario amateur champion, returned to school this week. Jack's long tournament experience and past record entitled him to a place without question and his presence will strengthen the Blue and White's chances to a considerable degree. The sixth place was filled as a result of a close play-off between Art Brant and Lonnaborough in which the latter managed to come out on top. Competition this year was very close, seventy golfers entering the qualifying round.

The intercollegiate matches will consist of a three-ball contest on the first day with a man from each college entered. This is followed by foursomes, points being scored on the Nassau system. Total points as a result of these will decide the holder of the trophy.

Varsity's chances this year look particularly bright and indications point to a return of the cup this year.

Thoughtful Theolog Donates Red Flannels to Dying Moth

By Jocelyn Moore

It is too sad. Too, too sad. Grandma Elsie cannot bear it. Bracket. Grandma Elsie's life was embittered by a tragic affair of her young days. She had a teddy bear when she was little and one of its eyes came out, and she could not find it anywhere, and years later discovered her nurse had taken it to sew onto her patent leather slipper. Bracket. Ah, that I should . . . no. Aaahhh that I should live to see the day. Alas, my poor . . . no, it cannot be. Bracket. Harpo Marx: It can-not be. Groucho: It must not be. Chico:

All: It cannot, must not, shall not be. Orchestra sustains. Bracket. You must know the worst. Rudie Moth is ill. What, ill? Yes, sick, like when you—Sh! You see, late last spring Rudie and Mamie got a suit of red flannel underwear. . . . Like pop wore when he was Santa Claus? Be quiet, child, and blow your nose, or Grandma Elsie will . . . anyway they got this luscious suit all to themselves. Bracket. And when the mother of the theolog who had owned the said underwear was unpacking his trunk, she missed it, dog-goned if she didn't. Ooh, Grandma Elsie! Grandma Elsie said—Where did he go to? She missed it, she really did, and, adjusting her pince-nez upon her high and bony nose, she intoned: "Abernethy, my son, where is that suit of red flannels? Come on, ya wouldn't kid me, wouldja?" "Well, ma," said little Abernethy, "it was this way. There was a cunnin' little thing in my room all week last spring—" "What!" "Heh, heh, heh. It was a moth, and the poor little thing was on the verge of starvation, and I couldn't resist its pleading eyes (cf. Rintintin the Wonder Dog, at this theatre all next week), so I did a Philip Sidney and, murmuring 'Thy need is greater than mine', I gave up the ghostly—I mean ghostly—garment." Bracket. So Rudie and Mamie Moth ett opp all de undelwear. But did that make them sick now? No, but when they came back to college they were hit in the eye by freshmen freshmen freshmen with their red red ties. Now go to sleep.

KEEN COMPETITION LIKELY AT INTERFACULTY MEET

another last year's champion in the 440 yards, will again compete at that distance and should make the team. In the 880 yards, Don Smith, U.C., will endeavour to replace Jermy. Jim Peterson, Dents, who, in the past, was considered a threat as a middle distance man, is back in form again and will give Smith a good race for the honours. Wally Graham, Meds, the track captain, Don Smith, U.C., and Carm King, Vic, are all experienced runners, and should give a good account of themselves in the mile event. Graham is also a very good three-mile man. In the latter event, Walters, Trinity, "Hap" Gilbert, Wycliffe, a former champion, and McLennan, Meds, are also competing. Altogether there should be very keen competition all around and the intercollegiate team should be well supplied.

In the past Varsity has been a little weak in the field events as compared with the showing on the track. However, some good men are coming along and there will be a good deal of rivalry between the faculties this afternoon. In the javelin, Thompson, S.P.S., intermediate intercollegiate record-holder, will compete and Ed Peaker, S.P.S., last year's interfaculty champion, is back. Eddie Sinclair, Dents, is doing very well in the running broad jump and will give a good account of himself. For the high jump there is Ford, S.P.S., and Collins, S.P.S. Old reliable Bob Dennis, U.C., will be back in the pole vault. In all the field men are improving and will be ready to fight for the points this afternoon.

"The Ladies' Home Journal" would make a much more acceptable souvenir for those interested in such things as the many "ads" flashed in our faces.

The cuts of the players used were poor, and several of them old, used in years past. There were no cuts of either of the coaches.

It really is too bad that there were so many advertisements, that there was not enough room to publish more about rugby.

If it is too late to remedy matters for the Western game, let us hope that something will be done for the big game on Nov. 8th.

POET'S INHIBITIONS TOPIC OF ADDRESS BY PROFESSOR

Browning Failed to Reconcile
Head and Heart, Says
Speaker

NEXT ADDRESS ANNOUNCED

Animated Discussion Follows and Adds Humour in Meeting

"Inhibition is anything which represses natural feelings," said Professor J. P. MacDonald, in defining the subject of his paper "Some Inhibitions of Browning," last night at the first meeting of the Toronto English Association in the Reference Library Hall, St. George and College Streets. The fundamental inhibition of Browning was the fact that "he never fully reconciled his head and his heart."

It was on these words that the address of Professor MacDonald was based. In a speech chockful of excerpts from Browning's poetry, the speaker gave his audience a very vivid and authoritative account of the poet and his beliefs.

Some of the groups of poetry mentioned were occasional poems, poems in praise of England, poems with Mrs. Browning as their theme, and religious poems. On the question of immortality, Browning said, "I hope, no more than hope, but hope." On another occasion he is quoted as saying, "As to immortality, I don't need arguments, I know it by intuition."

One contemporary calls Browning "God's reporter." "Browning, I imagine," stated Professor MacDonald, "even to-day, is quoted more than any other poet, by clergymen."

The meeting ended with a brisk discussion regarding the various remarks of the speaker. Humour was uppermost in this discussion, and it proved to be a very interesting part of the meeting. At the next meeting of the Association, Professor Henry Alexander of Queen's University, will speak on the subject, "Is there an American language?"

NEWMAN CLUB OPENS BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

Good Crowd Proves Success of Undertaking Planned for This Year

At Newman Hall last night followers of Work and Lenz got together and enjoyed an evening of bridge. Forty couples were present and the successful event speaks well for the series of parties planned for the year, of which this was the first.

Last spring several bridges were held and because of their popularity it was decided to carry on a tournament this year with meetings each Wednesday night. The club executive, with Vincent Webb as president, is in charge of the program.

A prize is donated for each night's play. The winner of last night was Miss Margaret McCarthy, I St. Joe's. The scores are to be carried through the year so that the winner of the tournament may be presented with a grand prize. The proceeds from the parties are to go towards purchasing a radio for the club.

QUEEN'S RESENTS M'GILL ACTION

Students Feel that Game Will not Repay Price
Exactod

CANCEL ACCDMMDDATIONS

Queen's rooters at the Montreal game Saturday, will probably break a record in the matter of poor attendance according to indications in Kingston.

The action of McGill University in raising the ticket price to $2.50 each has caused resentment at Queen's and the resentment takes the form in certain quarters of the cancellation of tickets and bus accommodation for the game. Four hundred tickets have been received at Kingston, but the demand so far has been unusually slight.

Most of the resentment against the action of McGill is said to grow out of the fact that the McGill team this year falls below its form in past years, so that Queen's students will pay a high price for a game that they do not feel will equal former games for which they paid the regular price of admission.

SWERVING AUTO SMASHED OCCUPANTS UNINJURED

Lack of Traffic Signals Makes

Dangerous

A few minutes after midnight last night the collision of a northbound with a swerving westbound automobile threw the latter, a large Studebaker, on its side in the middle of Queen's Park entry from College St. Fortunately no casualties resulted — the occupants of the Studebaker were bruised and shaken up, while the car itself lost a wheel and several of its windows, and was badly scratched. The other car suffered no damage beyond a bent fender and bumper, and the owner was able to drive off quite unhurt.

The lights at the corner are at present dead, owing to roadway repairs, and neither driver, apparently, used the extra caution necessary at such a point.

Captivated Couples Coo on Campus Wakeful Watchman Warns Off Wooers

Recent investigations by "The Varsity" show that an approximate average of ten occupied cars is to be found on the University campus at any time between the hours of 10.30 p.m. and 1.30 a.m. A series of systematic surveys made at 10.35, 11.15, 12.20 and 1.15 revealed that the majority of them are to be found around the front and back campuses of University College, and that the most popular time is between 11.00 and 12.30.

PLAN TO ENLARGE BUILDING

Arrangements are in progress to procure a chair of Fine Arts within the University of Toronto. For the past six years negotiations have been going on with the Ontario College of Art at 26 Grange St. The "Grange" is at present affiliated with the university in name, more or less. The art students' faculty have the privileges of Hart House. Also those university students who wish may do practical work at the art college.

The details of the scheme have as yet not been worked out, but it will no doubt mean that the art students will be able to attend appropriate lectures such as Psychology, Greek and History. The students will, however, take their practical work at the "Grange" as plans are now being made to enlarge the art college to McCaul Street.

DISTINGUISHED GUESTS

Acceptance of Memorial Moved by Professor Gilbert
Jackson

Tribute was paid to the late Maurice Cody, a past-president and former honorary president of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, at a meeting held last evening, when a bronze tablet erected by "some of his friends" was unveiled in the Junior Common Room of the college by Lady Kemp.

Friends and relations, not only in the university, but in every walk of life in which the esteemed young man figured, were present. Many others to whom Maurice Cody means nothing more than the name of a distinguished young man or of a student at this university a few years ago, were there also.

"This is not a memorial of the death of Maurice Cody, but rather of his life," said Joe McCully, Honorary President of the Literary Society, and headmaster of Pickering College, in opening the meeting. "Although this is a sad occasion for some, there should be nothing here for tears but comfort." Having known Maurice Cody intimately, Mr. McCully stated that his life, though cut short, had been full of real achievement. "It was assuredly a concrete and perfect whole," he said. "His life was equipped with a rich and full native ability and a power to conquer much. It is an example to everyone of us."

In words that carried the sentiment of the entire meeting, Professor Gilbert Jackson moved the acceptance of the memorial. Dwelling upon the more political qualities of Maurice Cody's character, Professor Jackson expressed deep regret that Canada should be deprived of a man who had all the possibilities of becoming one of her most brilliant public men. "His death deprived this country of one who was cut off in young life," he said. In the opinion of Mr. Jackson, more opportunities should be given to young men to enter public life. Professor Jackson then praised the work of the late Sir Edward Kemp in regard to the Maurice Cody Fellowship, which is the best of any university in Canada. "For that reason," he stated, "Lady Kemp is the one most suitable for unveiling the tablet."

SING "BLUE AND WHITE"

A very successful hike was enjoyed by the Mathematics and Physics Society at Armour Heights. More than 80 students attended the hike.

Freshettes and graduates joined together to sing the old songs around the fire. A slight delay of several hours in procuring the necessary "aqua pura" in which to scald the dogs did not appear to dampen the spirits of those present.

Many stories, good and otherwise, were told. The hike proved a happy hunting ground for phone number seekers.

The party closed with the singing of the "Blue and White", although Rudy Vallee was not in attendance.

Questions

FEES REMAIN UNCHANGED

The third year class at Victoria College yesterday at 1.30 were urged not to make the occasion of being in third year an occasion to slack as other third years had the reputation of doing.

The third year were requested to give a more spirited rendering of the 3T2 yell at parties than formerly.

The date of the class hike was fixed for October 25th, the day following the freshman reception party.

The question of class fees being raised it was unanimously decided that they should remain unchanged at $3. Don McKibbin, the class treasurer, reminded the class that other years there had been trouble collecting these fees promptly. The date of the year party was announced to take place on 29th November at Wymilwood.

FORCED TO LEAVE ITALY

Finds More Outside Activities
Among Students Here
Than in Europe

To leave Italy while the going was good, due to disagreement with certain policies of Mussolini, and to work in lumber camps in British Columbia, are just some of the experiences of Dr. Boeschenstein, who has joined the German staff of University College this year. In 1926 his activities as foreign correspondent in Italy for the Swiss press led to a prudent exodus followed by a sojourn in Vancouver, B.C. While there Dr. Boeschenstein did anything and everything which came to hand. A return to Switzerland served to convince him of Canada's superior attractions, and 1928 found him studying philosophy with Professor Brett at the University of Toronto.

"Canada is more broad-minded than Switzerland," affirmed Dr. Boeschenstein. "Canadian students have more common sense than those of European universities. Without wishing to detract from the scholarship of European students, I think it is inclined to be over-rated here."

More students here work their way through college, and they have a steady influence in the classes, in the opinion of Dr. Boeschenstein.

The "Bummenstudent", the type which attends the European universities year after year, and never attains the doctor's degree, is agreeably absent here, owing to the examination system. Fraternities, Dr. Boeschenstein considers, provide a useful outlet for activity, especially in the first two years. The numerous extra-curricular activities to be found here had their counterpart in German universities a few years ago, but recently intense competition has necessitated closer concentration on scholarship. "The Varsity" is not possessed of contemporaries in European universities. It might strike a first reader (Continued on Page 2)

FRATERNITY HOUSE NOW USED BY GRADUATES

Medical Advisor Moves Offices to Same Building on Hoskin Avenue

Good progress has been made on the Graduate Students' Union on Hoskin Avenue. Their headquarters are in the building formerly occupied by the Kappa Alpha Society, which has since moved to a property on Bloor Street West.

Two large rooms are at the service of graduate students, including a kitchen and a large common room. The common room on the east side of the house is equipped with easy chairs and a large fireplace, which adds considerably to the charm of the room.

A large elevated gallery on the west side of the common room is also a feature.

Complete kitchen facilities are being provided for the use of graduate students in a separate wing of the house.

The former stronghold of the graduate students has been demolished to make way for the new University College women's residence, now in process of construction.

The offices of the women's medical advisor, Dr. Edith Gordon, are situated on the second story of the same building.

THE "PROVINCIAL" UNIVERSITY

The other day a Med sadly confided to us that there were only a few men in his year who knew the taste of beer. Not that knowing the taste of beer is so important, but it seems typical of the average undergraduate at Toronto. His McGill brother to the impartial observer, has more savoir faire. Part of this difference we consider to be due to the different influences of the two cities in which the universities are located. How can a University rise above the spirit of its own city, and as the Ottawa Journal observed last year during the Communist "riots", "Toronto, for all its skyscrapers, is still a small town". The spirit of complacency and smugness which inundate the city, seeps into the University and prevents healthy soul-searching which might result in an improvement.

The University Director of Publicity has never heard of Rudy Vallee. He is lucky, but just the same we are inclined to wonder how he missed anything so public. The undergraduate shudders at the prospect of the "Blue and White" resounding in every dance hall in America, not knowing that Vallee has sung about a hundred college songs, with only the Maine "Stein Song" catching the public fancy.

To this same undergraduate, the Uptown, followed by coffee at Murray's, is a thrilling evening. He neither knows nor asks for anything better. But what can we expect in a city where night clubs languish and die for lack of patronage? Look around at the next formal dance and count the coloured socks, hooked bow ties and mushroom-front shirts. Alas, there will be too many! But is it any wonder?

Last year a co-educational section in the bleachers was hailed as a great innovation, and this year the segregation of the sexes is still continued at the football games as well as in the classrooms. They say co-education was introduced here in the last century. It still seems to be in the introductory stage.

In our annual crop of freshmen lies the hope of removing our stigma of gaucherie. The upper-classmen are the ones looked up to and imitated. If they do not present a better front, what hope is there that the green frosh will lose his Haley's Station stamp, and learn to do, say, and wear, the right thing at the right time? Small-towners always resent and fear anything in the nature of an innovation, something they do not understand. Trinity men are decried because they want to wear comfortable clothes. Hence three years ago the Ryan reforms were howled down through a combination of narrow-mindedness and mob psychology.

This is a far cry from undergraduates not knowing the taste of beer, and far be it from us to advocate drunkenness, but it is our opinion that a good dose of worldliness in the best sense of the word, would be a good thing for the largest university in the British Empire.

Art, Music and Drama

Players Guild

Of all the dumb audiences we have ever encountered, the worst was the crowd that sat mutely through a hilarious farce at the Players' Guild yesterday afternoon. Passion, Poison and Petrification is rip-roaring comedy, obviously pointed satire, and Shaw at his most humorous and blithesome best. But though each of the half dozen players threw themselves into the mood of the piece with rare abandon, the only time they could raise a snicker from the apathetic house was when they threw soda biscuits around to represent plaster and combined to blow a couple of dead men across the stage.

It was not great drama. It was not remarkably presented. But the melodramatic fervour of Andrew Allan, Patricia Godfrey and S. Ryerson was wonderful to behold. We are glad that if the Player's Guild audiences regard mirth as beneath their dignity, at least the actors still know how to enjoy themselves and to amuse a few others as young and intelligent as themselves.

To-day, we must admit that sometimes Shaw achieves greatness. Otherwise he could never have made us laugh as we did yesterday.

Mu Khow Mu has to offer to every fresette in Pharmacy and Veterinary Science things which no other "frat club" can give. First, our House. Built of Beaver-Board and tar-paper, the house is moisture and odour proof, retaining all smells of cooking indefinitely. Running water in kitchen and attic (the second story having been accidentally omitted in the building of the house). A bicycle stand behind the house and a rail to tie up horses in front takes care of our members' means of transportation. Meals are served in the cellar, as the food is a little heavy and the ground-floor not quite up to supporting it. However, we are proud of our "front room", or parlour. The walls have been artistically tinted by sister-in-Mu-Khow-Mu Feora Fenoles, who decorated it in the modern manner by expelling ink from her fountain pen. Our chair is a solid leather antique—very solid and very antique. The attic has accommodation for sixteen sleeping alternately.

Fun:—Fun is had by all on "College Night", when all members gather on the verandah, or porch, and sing College Songs. Water is drunk, grass is chewed, and "fun" is the order of the evening.

as a sports paper, thinks Dr. Boeschstein, and would be improved by more news of the intellectual activities in the university. When questioned as to his opinion of the "Champus Cat", he replied that sometimes it showed humour—or the touch of a future humorist!

A specialist in philosophy and aesthetics, and author of various articles in Swiss and German magazines, Dr. Boeschstein is now focusing his attention on literature and poetry. His philosophical belief is in a come-back to the humourism of Babbitt—a certain measure and humility—although he is by no means a strict adherent of Babbitt. Provided that English influence continues, he believes that Canada will produce a spirit and literature of its own rather than writing in the American manner.

Dr. Boeschstein has attended universities in Zurich, Switzerland, Munich, Berlin, Kiel, Königsberg and Rostock, taking his doctorate in the latter university. He is now lecturing in University College and in S.P.S. School men are of a different type, he considers, "But perhaps keeps a balance with those of University College."

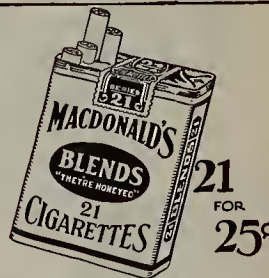

Reorganization in the control of class funds has been found necessary at the University of Washington. Hundreds of dollars have been lost every year in the past by mismanagement.

Nothing could be more inspiring to an ignorant or a nasty mind than the gaps in the conversation where the words have been cut. In this film the situations are so obvious that to try to censor the words is vain. Clive Brook is good—so is Billie Dove—as are the rest. A clever comedy gone wrong.

Bronze Tablet Unveiled TO LATE MAURICE CODY

Maurice Cody, seconded the motion of acceptance. Having camped, debated, studied and worked as a companion with Maurice Cody, Mr. Walker told of some of the many instances that had endeared Maurice Cody not only to himself, but to all who came into contact with him. "He had a 'genius for friendship,'" said Mr. Walker, "whether he was election campaigning in the hinterland among men less cultured than himself, or whether he was debating with a prime minister of opposite political opinions, Maurice Cody was a man's man."

D. B. Murray, President of the College Society, spoke a few words on behalf of those who did not know Maurice Cody personally.

Dr. H. J. Cody, on behalf of his wife and himself, expressed their thanks to the friends who had perpetuated the name so dear to them. Dr. Cody then paid tribute to Sir Edward Kemp. In referring to his son's own life, Dr. Cody advised every student to make strong college friendships, and at the same time to realize that of all the great forces in this world, personality is the greatest.

Sir William Mulock delivered a short eulogy of the young Cody. "It is rare," he said, "that a man passing away so young, should leave such an imperishable influence."

Musical selections were rendered by Otto James. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Among those present were: Lady Kemp, Canon and Mrs. Cody, Sir William Mulock, Brigadier General Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Corrigan, Principal Wallace, Dean Cochrane, E. R. Wood.

The word "racket" as applied to a shady business is not an invention of the Chicago underworld. It was used in the same sense over a hundred years ago.

TRIALS FAST IN TRACK MEET; 220 LOW HURDLES RECORD BROKEN

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The victory of Bea Symons in the tennis tournament is a popular one. The versatile St. Hilda's star excels at any sport to which she turns her hand, being a member of the Saints' basketball and hockey teams, and taking an active part in the Toronto Skating Club carnivals.

Three of the four members of the Intercollegiate team are registered in St. Hilda's, which is rather a triumph for the Blue and Grey. In the past three years the Saints have come rapidly to the fore in interfaculty competition and have always been well represented on intercollegiate teams.

The outstanding surprise of the tennis tournament has been the playing of Alma Burfield of University College. Contrary to all expectations she went right through to the semi-finals, when she was defeated by Bea Symons. Miss Burfield has a peculiar style. She uses a high volley almost exclusively and relies on this for most of her points. To girls accustomed to a driving game, this style is very confusing and, to judge from her success in the tourney, is equally effective.

St. Michael's held their first basketball practice last night, and there was a particularly gratifying turn-out. All of last year's team are eligible again and there are as many again eager to make a place this year.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT WON BY SAINTS

Champion Displays Good Form to Win Title Handily

VARSITY TEAM CHOSEN

Bea Symons of St. Hilda's won the interfaculty tennis tournament yesterday afternoon by defeating Jed Gray, U.C., in straight sets, 6-2, 6-0. Miss Symons displayed a well rounded game with her chief strength in her driving and service. Many of her drives went right to the corners and her net work was very steady.

In the semi-final round, played yesterday morning, Betty Carter lost to Jed Gray 6-4, 6-1, and Bea Symons defeated Alma Burfield 6-0, 6-0. In the quarter finals Pat Callen, St. Mike's, gave Alma Burfield a stiff game, the score being 3-6, 6-3, 7-5. The play was rather erratic and neither player was at her best.

Although Miss Burfield thus entered the semi-finals she was challenged by Sally Ballard, for a place on the intercollegiate team and was defeated. The team is thus composed of Bea Symons, Sally Ballard, Betty Carter, and Jed Gray. The teams from Western and Queen's will compete with Varsity for the intercollegiate championship in both singles and doubles. The team will leave for Kingston tonight and the tournament will be held on Friday and Saturday.

The Team Championship was won by St. Hilda's also, with 16 points. U.C. were a close second with 14, St. Mike's third with 10, Household Science 5, Vic 5, Meds 4.

VARSITY RIFLE MATCH

The Intercollegiate rifle match will be shot on Friday, October 17th at the Long Branch ranges. Shooting will commence at 9 a.m. and will continue until 4.30 p.m. All members are entitled to shoot, the highest eight scores forming the Varsity team. All those who have not joined as yet, can do so at the ranges and will be allowed to shoot then. Everyone is urged to turn out.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

School won the interfaculty championship yesterday. University College supporters were elated early in the afternoon when the Artsmen had a substantial lead over the ultimate winners, but when Smith, Thompson and Eaton finished in the order named in the 440 yard final, the tide of battle changed and the Engineers went on to score a well-earned victory.

An analysis of the meet reveals that Varsity will have a strong team to defend the intercollegiate trophy at Kingston, October 24. The weakness of the local team lies in the field events, while it is on the cinders that Varsity may be counted upon to pile up the points. Although Johnny Fitzpatrick is devoting all his time to football this year, his place on the team will be well filled by Ralph Adams, who captured both the 100 and the 220 yard dashes in fast time. He was extended in both races by Eddie Dore, a freshman at Dents.

Bill Conley, of S.P.S., clipped a full second off the existing record of 27 1-5 seconds for the 220 yard low hurdles. He is a sure point winner at the intercollegiate meet.

King won the mile event in the fast time of 2 minutes, 4 2-5 seconds. Walters ran a beautiful race, beating off the spirited sprint of Wally Graham at the finish in the three mile grind.

The Varsity gridders are in the movies now! Paramount Pictures took shots of Saturday's game with McGill and they are as fine as we have seen in football pictures. One of Sinclair's field goals is shown to advantage. A lengthy reel with a "talkie" description of the play and difference between the Canadian and American games has been distributed throughout the United States. Last night a news reel was made of the Orphan and Intercollegiate scrimmage.

With every successive night the Intercollegiate are finding the going harder against Lou Carroll's homeless ones. The Orphans hit the line hard and their tackling was impressive. Last night they tore into their opponents with abandon and Don Wood and Art Snyder tackled viciously. Bernie Hodgetts is booting them higher and farther. Altogether, Lou Carroll has a scrappy outfit and the Beaches can count on a stiff battle next Saturday at Ulster Stadium.

SCHOOL TAKE TITLE FROM U. C. RIVALS

Records Threatened as U. C. Make Things Hot for School

ONE RECORD FALLS

S.P.S. successfully defended their Interfaculty Track and Field Championship at the meet held yesterday afternoon at the Stadium. The competition was, as expected, very keen, and it was not until the last few events were completed that the result was assured. University College was second in total points with a good advantage over the other faculties.

The fine weather conditions brought out a large crowd in the stands and the meet certainly merited such a turn-out. The results show that most of the old stand-bys have not gone back and some new material was shown for future teams. In spite of many close and interesting races only one record was broken. In the 220 yard low hurdles, Connolly, S.P.S., shattered the standing record by 1 second. Time in the 120 yard high hurdles and in the mile event was also very good. In the former George Laughlin, U.C., came within 1-5 second of the record and in the one mile run Don Smith, U.C., ran a well timed race and was within one second and a fraction of the record. Ralph Adams made fine time in both the 100 and the 220 yard sprints. In both he was pressed to the last few yards by Eddie Dore, Dents. The latter is a new man this year and is sure to be a point winner on the Intercollegiate team. Adams' victories in the two sprints earned him a tie for the individual championship with Ed Peaker, S.P.S., who won the javelin throw and the 16 lb. shot put quite handily. The latter was last year's champion and with a little more practice and coaching will be as good as ever. In the other track events the most notable was the 440 yard dash. The result of this race practically decided the championship for the School men.

SECOND DAY DRAW FOR U. C. TOURNAMENT

Many Contestants Enter for College Tennis Championship

After a successful day of play yesterday the tournament has been reduced to four players, who will meet in the semi-final round at the Toronto Tennis Club at 10.30 this morning. The doubles draw is as follows:

At Rusholme Tennis Club: Leibel-Davidson vs. Draper-Beckett; Ecclestone-Dakin vs. Doherty-Fyfe; Ross-Learie vs. Wiley-Reid; Rudkin-Davidson vs. Dool-Smith.

At Toronto Tennis Club
Singles: Hermant vs. Rooke (semi-final); Winner vs. Shortly (final).
Doubles: Shortly-Sullivan vs. Hamer-Green; Dickinson-Rooke vs. Robinson-Beatty; Hermant-Home vs. Powell-Marron.

The sophs won the tug-of-war but the frosh won the flag rush at Western this year.

The dean of Lehigh University has discovered that only one of eight of the lower half scholastically at high school manages to complete his college course.

Sipar decrees longer loincloths! Sipar, the fashion centre of Polynesia, has decreed that loincloths must cover the knees. Knees, state the Sipar authorities, may be nobby in Trinity, but they are no longer smart in Polynesia (and no pun intended, thank you!) Well, live and loincloth!

Poor Polynesians! they can't make the joke about how to make the loincloth last!

And while we're on our knees, let us praise the Twelve Apostles of Trinity who have come out (get it?) boldly for the Freedom of the Knees. The authorities made them cover up at dinner, but some Sunday they'll emerge at evensong, and there'll be no holding them in.

The great objection, of course, to the appearance of the nude nether limb of the male (there! who could put it more discreetly?) is that it is so much hairier than that of the female. Still, it ought to add competition to the Interfaculty Hairiers.

The most amusing headline we've seen recently is VICTORIA PLAYERS MAY PRESENT SHAW. For various reasons.

Now that the University of Toronto is officially to celebrate the 2000th anniversary of the Virgil birth, the old controversy may be considered as settled.

What is this Bolshevik wave that's struck our University? K. C. Coleman of Trinity (of all places) wears purple pajamas in the Russian style (yeah!), and we are constantly hearing of fraternities holding Russian parties. This is a menace (yes, and a womenace too, as Groucho Marx might say), and should be looked into. Peekaboo, Casey!

Rudy Vallee, it is reported, sings with his eyes shut. Obviously he sings with his mouth shut. Anybody got a clothes-pin?

Some of you may have noticed the dreamy youth who wanders about with shirt-collar poetically open and tie in loose profusion. Just one of life's little Byronies.

Who was the Burwashbuekler who returned with scant dignity closely tagged by a lusty limb of the law, subsequent to a Tushitudinous attempt on the privacy of a St. Thomas Street apartment?

Tush would like to issue a warning to winsome widows. Keep away from the Forestry building! The bucksaw boys love pretty flowers, and will not let a few weeds deter them.

They placed one, two and three, and the winner, Malcolm Smith, made the good time of 52 2-5 seconds. He was closely followed by Duff Thompson and Eaton, with Ralph Standish, U.C., running a good fourth. In the half-mile, Carm King, Vic, won quite handsomely, coming up from third place in the second lap. A good deal of attention was attracted by the distance event of the meet, the 3-mile run. For the first few laps the race was very close, with Lee, S.P.S., setting the pace. He faltered in the last two laps, however, and was passed by Walters, Meds, Wally Graham, Meds, and Spence, O.A.C. The former went out ahead and won the race with a substantial lead. The mile walk had only three contestants and consequently was a wide open affair.

Goulding, U.C., son of the former world's champion walker, won without being very hard pressed. The last event on the program was the relay race. Two teams from S.P.S., and one from U.C. were the contestants.

A good deal of improvement was shown in the field events. Particularly interesting was the high jump. School secured another first when Collins won this event. Kenny Ford, Vic, and Vinnels, Vic, were very close behind him and with a little more luck either might have won.

COMPLETE CHANGES IN HISTORY COURSES EFFECTIVE THIS YEAR

More Advanced Knowledge is

GRAD WORK FACILITATED

Canadian History Emphasized in Latest Courses Laid Down

The need of more advanced knowledge of Canadian history among students leaving the university to take positions as teachers in Ontario High Schools is responsible for the changes in the history courses at Baldwin House that go into effect this year, Professor Chester Martin, head of the history department, told "The Varsity" last night.

"Of course, this change was being discussed long before I became attached to the department," said Professor Martin, making it clear that it was not due altogether to his appointment to the leadership of the History Department.

"The new curriculum was designed to emphasize Canadian History in four ways.

"First, it transferred Canadian History from the first to the third and fourth years, thus taking advantage of the added maturity of the students' training.

"The new courses in general, European and British History in the first and second years would also supply a background for Canadian History in the third and fourth years, that could scarcely be expected in the first year.

"Honour students especially, who sought the special certificate in English and History, would be much better equipped to teach Canadian History in the schools of the province after the more advanced work of the third and fourth years.

"And finally, the additional training would enable our students to undertake graduate work in Canadian History without loss of time in taking pre-requisite courses.

"Moreover, there was more intensive work in British and European History in the fourth year, so that graduate work in those fields also, could be begun at once.

"The aim was to make the course cumulative throughout, in both content and method, with the final emphasis upon the history of our own country."

SCHOLARSHIP GIVEN FOR INDIAN STUDENT

To Be Recommended by Viceroy; Established by Massey Foundation

OTHER AWARDS ANNOUNCED

A post graduate scholarship to be awarded to a student from India, by the Viceroy, on the recommendation of a committee of selection in that country, has been established by the Massey Foundation, as announced in a communication to the Senate of the University of Toronto.

In addition to awarding various fellowships and scholarships, the Senate announces that Miss Mary Jackson of the University of Alberta has enrolled in the third year of the pass course in University College as an exchange student. Miss C. J. Fish of the University of Toronto has enrolled in the same capacity in the University of British Columbia.

Favored Freshman Pleads For Pity

An outstanding episode in the Victoria-S.P.S. fracas last night was the decoration of a captured Science freshman in Gate House, Burwash. After being stripped to the waist and tapped, he was adorned with blacking as follows:

Across his face—Vic 3T3.
On left arm—Vic 3T2.
On right arm—Vic 3T4.
On back of neck—Vic 3T1.

Across his back—Poor Frosh.

Across his chest—Poor S.P.S.

Thus bedecked, the gentle victim was chased at full speed across Charles and St. Mary Streets, struggling into his clothes on the run, escorted some distance down Yonge St. and allowed to walk home. His one remark throughout the whole affair was, "Haven't you guys got any pity?"

POSITIONS PLENTIFUL IN INFANT COURSES

Increase in Number of Mental Hospitals to Mean Greater Demand for Therapists

PHYSIOTHERAPY LIMITED

"I've had one letter for over a year asking for a graduate in Occupational Therapy to go out west, and can find none to fill the position," stated W. J. Dunlop, Director of University Extension to "The Varsity" in discussing the possibilities of some of the infant courses at the university. Far from leading to over-crowded professions, positions are going begging.

"We have as yet no graduate in Physiotherapy," Mr. Dunlop continued, "but two of our students who worked in a hospital this summer were asked to apply for permanent positions in expectation of their graduation next year."

The course in Physiotherapy is a two-year one, now beginning its second year, with a total enrolment of twenty—and is limited in numbers till the demand for graduates is definitely determined.

The course in Occupational Therapy has been doing such efficient work in the mental hospitals, as well as their more widely known work in physical cases, that if, as the Ross Commission recommended, more mental hospitals are built, the demand for graduate therapists will be very great.

When asked if the Pass Matriculation ruling would affect these courses, Mr. Dunlop replied that, since the only Arts subject taken by them was first year Pass French and English, some special arrangement might be made for their benefit—and later, perhaps Honour Matriculation in these two subjects might be required for entrance, as well as Pass Matriculation, as at present.

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday, October 19th, will be Visitors' Day in Hart House when members may introduce visitors, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2.00 and 4.00 p.m. Members will be asked to show their membership cards at the door.

Outstanding Legalist Will Be Guest Speaker

R. O. Daly, of the firm of Long and Daly, an outstanding legal firm in connection with government and municipal financing in Canada, will be guest speaker at a luncheon of the Graduating Year of University College, in Hart House on Tuesday next.

Year luncheons are an innovation this year, and great hopes are entertained for their success by the fourth year executives.

HART HOUSE THEATRE EQUIPMENT OPEN FOR EXPERIMENTAL WORK

Opportunity Given to Students Interested in Dramatic and Technical Phases

SELF-GOVERNMENT PLAN

Edgar Stone Willing to Organize Group Independent of Regular Players

"I entirely agree with 'The Varsity's' suggestion of a conference between representatives of local dramatic groups," Edgar Stone, Director of Hart House Theatre, told "The Varsity" yesterday in an interview regarding the present problem of university dramatic societies securing suitable dates for productions in the theatre.

"We do not wish to encroach in any way on present activities of existing groups," continued Mr. Stone, "but only to offer our assistance in any way possible. It has been brought to my attention that outside these organized playing groups in the different colleges, there are other faculties who have not the same advantages and whose members are anxious to take an interest in some phase of dramatic work."

Mr. Stone suggested that these people call upon him with a view to organizing an experimental playing group, not limited entirely to themselves but open to anyone who wishes to take the same interest and carry on their activities in the theatre, as an organization independent from the regular series of plays produced with the Hart House players. It is Mr. Stone's proposition that this new group be a self-governing organization, running in co-operation with the present policy of the theatre.

"The technical equipment of the theatre offers almost unlimited possibilities to those who are interested in experimenting in this branch of the work," said Mr. Stone. "Last year we offered our green room for use as a club room to the present organized groups who are not as fortunately placed as the University College (Continued on Page 2)

The Sad Effects of Forty Beers On Love Among the Engineers

"It's a damn good initiation. I haven't seen a better one." Thus did a prominent fourth year engineer pronounce his blessing upon his juniors while looking on at the scene of carnage in Examination Hall last night.

329 out of 330 frosh were present. 120 sophomores looked after them. Brains won again. Only one fight, and in that '33 gained the victory with the use of a fire hose. The little red school house is still dripping wet. Plaster fell, etc.

What was in the bushes behind Convocation Hall? We don't know, but late in the evening found two bottles and a lot of bottle caps. Every one of the "forty beers" disappeared during the evening. The rest was not beer.

4 university policemen, two ladies, two professors were recognized, two others we think were professors, two reporters from down town, two ditto from "The Varsity". These all looked on.

When refreshments had disappeared, seventy S.P.S. singers left Hart House and after disturbing amatory couples in Queen's Park, reached Annesley

Captured Crusaders
Meet With Mishaps

The crusading spirit was not confined to the hardy sex last night. A party of sophomore women from Victoria College invaded a mixed first year "Bob" practice and surprised the freshmen by delivering the first year yell. They were accorded a hospitable reception, and found retreat less easy than advance. Forced to bow the knee to superior numbers, some of the sophettes were liberally painted with mercurchrome, while others were taken for a ride.

STORE ROOM TURNED INTO BEER SHOP

Hart House Needs More Racks in Cloak Room for Cold Weather Rush Hours

TUCK SHOP ENLARGED

The thirsty student no longer awaits his opportunity to obtain a seat in the tuck shop at Hart House.

Due to the ingenuity of the authorities, an old store room, has been converted into a second chamber where draughts of ginger beer may be quaffed in comfort. Here, groups of students may enjoy a pleasant respite from their academic labours.

One problem remains to be solved, in the opinion of authorities, that of accommodation in the cloak room. There are a total of 270 racks. This is found sufficient during warm weather, but when winter comes and the regular array of coats, hats, scarves and overshoes appears, this situation becomes more complex. According to the custodian of the cloaks and racks, there will be great difficulty in finding room for all this surplus clothing. When the rush hour takes place at noon and again at 6 p.m., a very serious problem will be presented.

Barrel Staves, Castor Oil, Soap
Suds, Water, All Applied Liberally

WORST ORDEAL IN YEARS

1,800 Pounds of Ice Makes Slide for Grand Finale

School of Practical Science sophomores put on the usual show in initiating School freshmen in the drafting room behind Convocation Hall last night.

There was the usual succession of figures clad in potato sacks and very little else, led by the usual succession of conductors wearing boots reaching to the knee and otherwise suggesting the Great Open Spaces, entering the hall, while two of the university police watched things from a position near the door.

The half-naked figures lined up at the door while from within proceeded a medley of cries and yells and the sound of barrel staves hitting thinly clad flesh.

Though favoured with very pressing invitations and informed of the fair sights to be seen within, "The Varsity" did not care for anything like a close-up of the proceedings.

The feature of the evening was the antics of several of the sophs, who had apparently prepared for the occasion with the aid of something intoxicating. The manner used in advising the freshies before and consoling them afterwards was quite fatherly.

Gathered from the lips of panting freshmen afterwards, what happened inside the Hall amounted to this:

Entering, the guests of the sophomores walked, or rather ran, down a very narrow passage, leaving the after parts of their persons open to the attentions of a group standing above them with pieces of board.

When they had passed out of the passage, the freshmen were thoroughly blind-folded with gauze and adhesive tape. Then they were led to the top of a high and steep slide which had been treated with soft-soap and in about two seconds found themselves at the bottom.

Next they were laid on a big table and on their bare chests was inscribed in brilliant colours, "S.P.S."

Next they were led to a long piece of blanket and forced to crawl under it. During their progress water was thrown on the moving forms and again the barrel staves were brought into play.

On emerging, castor oil was applied to the hair and a handful of the suds of shaving soap into the mouth. Then came the real climax of the affair, a device that had evidently taxed the engineering ability of the whole second year of School. With the tables and foot boards of the room a trough about twenty feet long was formed. This was lined with a tarpaulin and on the bottom of it had been placed a succession of ice blocks—about 1,800 pounds of it that had been previously (Continued on Page 2)

When Saints Rush in Nor Fear To Read

It was noted recently that two St. Hilda's women walked casually into the Women's "Varsity" Office, and glanced nonchalantly over the assignment book in an attempt to find out who was responsible for the publication to the university at large, of the article which appeared in "The Varsity" last Monday, describing the oscillatory tendencies of St. Hilda's.

The two detectives admitted that they were in residence at St. Hilda's, but what particular reward the women had in store for the offender was not ascertained.

TORONTO PROFESSOR MAKES DISCOVERY OF OLD MANUSCRIPT

Dr. Mercer of Trinity College
Uncovers Rare Copy in Abyssinia

ALLOWED BY KING

Is Writing a New Version of Old Testament, Soon to be Issued

University of Toronto once more attains reflected glory through the achievement of one of its faculty members. Dr. S. A. B. Mercer, Professor of Semitic Languages and Egyptology at Trinity College, has just returned after an absence of nine months, three of which were spent in Abyssinia. It was there he made his significant discovery of a hitherto unpublished manuscript of Ecclesiastes which is 200 years older than any other known manuscript. Thirty years ago, Littman claimed that there were no manuscripts now in European libraries earlier than those of the 16th century. It was to prove or disprove this claim that Dr. Mercer went to Abyssinia. When he did unearth the manuscript, superstitious priests refused to let him buy it. It was only on permission from the Emperor that he was even able to photograph the precious article. Dr. Mercer says that his discovery will not alter doctrines, but will be of immense value to scholars, helping to clear up many controversial points about this ancient Biblical book. Following his discovery Dr. Mercer will soon issue a new version of the old Testament, part of which is now ready for print.

UPSET TRAY OF LAMPS CAUSED OLD U.C. FIRE

History of University Retold to Foresters' Club at First Meeting

'SOC ET TUUM' BATTLE-CRY

"Blue and White have been the colours of Toronto's University since 1816," said T. A. Reid, Secretary of the University Athletic Association in addressing the first meeting of the Foresters' Club. "At that time, the Blue School of York was established as the first grammar school in Canada, its name being taken from the blue and white paint trimmings of the building.

Mr. Reid, in his lecture on the place of the university in the city of Toronto, gave a most interesting account of the history of our university. "Toronto land," he said, "once sold for eighteen cents an acre." The university was first granted a lot of 150 acres in the section in which it is now located.

Later, most of this property was sold for building lots in order to secure some of the needed funds to support the institution. In 1843, when the Canadian Parliament was removed from Toronto, the university was removed to the old buildings, although the buildings had been previously constructed for the then University of King's College.

The true university buildings were constructed in 1850 for University College, in the Norman type of architecture, much the same as the present building. But at a St. Valentine's dance in 1890, a janitor overturned a tray of lamps, setting fire to the building. After the fire, University College was rebuilt in the form that (Continued on Page 2)

PARKED PETTING

Anyone who has ever tried to find a legal place to park a car in Toronto streets by day knows full well that there is not a more hopeless task extant. Police regulations conspire with the blue, honking haze of the traffic jams to render it impossible to park even a Bantam Austin unless you have a spare vest-pocket.

But anyone who has ever tried to find a secluded spot in which to park by night for the purpose of tender whisperings and amorous masteries must know that all the hounds of hell could not bay more hotly on the scent than the City police in their anxiety to stop the furtive embrace.

The sound has gone out, however, from mouth to mouth of those who have long been chased from high street to bystreet, that there is a haven provided by the merciful Venus for nocturnal petters.

"Park on the University grounds!" runs the whisper. "Nobody will bother you there!"

So, night after night, parked cars are to be observed distributed about the campus—quite beyond the ken and jurisdiction of the City constabulary. Special investigation by representatives of "The Varsity" has elicited the fact that it is neither engine trouble nor desire to watch the rising of the harvest moon that prompts the parking. It is the sex urge.

While the sex urge is not a thing to be lewdly relegated to the limbo of eye-brow raisers or prudes, we cannot resist the conclusion that nocturnal petting in parked and darkened cars is a thing both ethically and aesthetically unsound. It is not only a source of stumbling to the young and a source of regret to the old, but it places the participant in the position of one who reduces the fine art of love-making to the level of street-brawls and dirty jokes.

Yet, parked petting by night on the campus appears to be a matter which is being completely ignored by the University police. Whether they are influenced by an "Oh-well-they're-only-young-ones" attitude or whether they are merely following the example of others higher up who hold that rules were made to be discussed and not enforced, the fact remains that the University police are making no move to emulate the diligence of their confreres of the City force in striving to check a practice which has been widely stamped as vicious and immoral.

It is scarcely an inspiring example to the outside world when the University of Toronto campus becomes the last stronghold of the parked petter.

VIC GRADUATES CAPTURE PROMINENT O.C.E. OFFICES

The old Vic spirit is still strong in the graduates of Victoria College, as evidenced in the Ontario College of Education elections, which took place yesterday. Graduates of Victoria secured three of the four major executive posts and many of the committee positions.

Ryerson Douglas of 279 Victoria College, who has been teaching at Albert College for the past year, is now president of O.C.E. Supporting him on the executive are: Vice-president, Helen Hilliard, Vic 3TD; treasurer, W. M. Bowman of Western University; secretary, Miss Jean Pinchin, Victoria College. On committees are: social, Miss Mary Armstrong, Miss Joyce Muirhead, F. J. McNamara, and N. Stevens; literary and music, Miss Margaret McKay, Miss Gwen Wesley, J. M. Abbot, and E. J. Collins; dramatic, Miss Maron Bell, Miss Helen Wickett, V. F. Fullerton, and M. C. McDiarmid; men's athletics, F. Davies, W. B. McDonald, G. O'Leary and C. J. Scott; women's athletics, Helen Beal, Fran Dale, Phyllis Ferguson, and Agnes Vanstone.

FORMAL DANCE TO OPEN U. C. SOCIAL SEASON

University College opens its social season with the formal fall dance, which will take place in the Crystal Ball Room of the King Edward Hotel, October 22. W. F. Arnold, the social director, assisted by a committee consisting of F. C. Barton and J. G. Garden, is rapidly completing the plans for the affair. The committee have procured the services of Romanelli and his orchestra. A buffet luncheon will be served.

The sale of tickets will begin next Monday in the offices of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, Junior Common Room. Registration cards must accompany applications for tickets.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE

The results of the election which was held on Wednesday for first year representative of the Household Science Club are as follows: Blythe Spence, Pass; and Eleanor Burrows, Honour.

CHAMPUS CAT

Three cheers for good clean fun! And watch out for the revelations of "Artie, the Big Sorority Man", which will appear sometime next week.

C—C

Artie is the only man in history who ever joined a sorority and lived to tell the tale.

C—C

Of course large portions will be deleted from the original story to make it conform with the high moral tone of the Champus Cat, but many a sweet sister is going to blush over our account just the same. And don't think we can't make her! As all the scandal in the vile hand of the Tush editor is as nothing compared to our vast store of sorority lore.

C—C

The line-up for Saturday's game will be definitely announced in the stadium magazine, probably some time next week.

C—C

A list of wrong numbers will be published on the program so that the crowd will not be able to play favorites.

C—C

A prize of one year's subscription to the "Trinity Eye-Opener" will be awarded to the first person to guess the players' names correctly.

brought on a truck.

On this, tummy downwards, the freshies wriggled and were pushed. Then they were taken in tow by the sophs that had brought them in and conducted dripping with shaving soap lather, water and castor oil, back to the School Building.

It has been the usual thing in former years for Dean Mitchell of the faculty to put in an appearance during the evening.

Refreshments in Hart House finished the night.

Players' Guild." In return for this offer, Mr. Stone said he would appreciate any technical help in stage management the group might offer but assured "The Varsity" that this was not meant to be a proviso in the proposition whatsoever. Regarding the administration of the group, if it should be formed, Mr. Stone desired that it be self-governing, but that he and his assistant would be willing to give any assistance within their power.

Scores Parking

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

If the story in to-day's issue of "The Varsity" about couples parking in cars in dark corners of the campus is true, it is time something was done by the authorities to stop the practice.

The city police have strict orders to prevent couples parking on dark streets in the city to engage in "petting" or other immoral practices. Surely the university police should have equally strict orders about the university grounds.

If anything like ten cars are parked in secluded corners of the grounds, there must be something wrong going on.

The University of Toronto should not be the refuge of those who wish to act in a manner they would not do in public.

Surely the president of the university ought to know what is going on and do something.

Yours truly,
O. W.

FORESTRY CLUB HEARS HISTORY

we know it to-day.

A very humorous touch was given to the lecture by the translation of a Latin inscription over the fire-place in old Moss Hall, where "The Varsity" sanctum was located. The writing, "Soc et tuum", could not be interpreted until it was repeated very quickly. "Such," Mr. Reid said, "has been the policy of 'The Varsity' ever since its inception in the early eighties, then a university weekly."

Dr. Howe, dean of the Faculty of Forestry, also addressed the meeting. His great hope, he said, was that true Foresters would some day control the crown forests, and that permanent forest industries would be established with permanent communities in their company.

BATTLING MUSTANGS INVADE BLUE STRONGHOLD TO-MORROW

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

In order to clear up the difficulties concerning physical examination, Dr. Edith Gordon, medical adviser for women, has agreed to co-operate with the members of the different teams, thus settling the question of eligibility slips. The manager of each team is to make an appointment with Dr. Gordon, at which time all the girls trying out for her team will come up for a critical examination, which will not, however, take the place of the regular test in any way. This system will prevent girls who really should not be playing from going through all the preliminary practice work, and it will also prevent disappointment to both coach and player. It is rather disconcerting for a coach to be suddenly informed that a girl whom she has counted upon is ineligible through ill-health.

An attempt to make the intercollegiate tennis tournament an annual affair to be run upon the same basis as intercollegiate hockey and basketball will be made at the invitation meet in Kingston to-morrow and Saturday. It is certainly time that a sport which arouses such wide enthusiasm in the university should become an intercollegiate sport.

U.C. SOCCER TEAM SWAMPS SCHOOL ELEVEN

Red and White Scores Three Goals to One by School

The U.C. eleven swamped the Schoolmen in an interfaculty soccer match last night, 3 goals to nil. It was the first time in three years that the Red and White have handed out such a beating to the engineers.

Bridges, for the winners got two of his team's counters, while McDonald scored the first one. Sobel, in the U.C. nets, was just about the best man on the field and gave a fine display against the strong School forwards.

U.C. — Sobel, Lefter, McKenzie, Goldenberg, Rudkin, Gray, McPherson, Bridges, Shere, McDonald, Valat.

BIG BLUES EXPECT CRUCIAL CONTEST

Regular Varsity Line-up to be Back in Uniform in Game with Londoners

WESTERN HAS HEAVY LINE

To-morrow's intercollegiate struggle at the University of Toronto stadium, when Varsity plays Western University, has all the appearance of being one of the crucial games for the Big Blue team. Western proved themselves of championship calibre last Saturday in London, losing to Queen's through a blocked kick, and as Varsity plays her next two games away from home, a win to-morrow is most essential for the Blue and White.

At the conclusion of the intercollegiate schedule last year sports critics placed Western among the leading contenders for this year's title. At present, the belief holds that Varsity and Queen's are the two top teams with Western on the outside. Saturday's contests, when Queen's play at McGill and Varsity at home to Western, will give a better idea as to the comparative strength of the three teams.

Western is reported to have a line that would compare favourably with Mike Rodden's Tiger Tanks. The average weight of the Mustang line is 184 pounds. Varsity's line averages 165. On Western's backfield is Paterson, a booter whom the Mustangs claim to be almost as good as Jack Sinclair. This remains to be seen, however.

There is a key note of enthusiasm in the Varsity rugby quarters. Coach Les Blackwell announced last evening that he would use the same regular line-up that humbled McGill last Saturday. Bill Adams, who has been laid up for over two weeks with a badly gashed hand, and who is conceded to be one of the best line-plungers on the team, will be back in uniform for the game. John Harrison and Johnny Fitzpatrick are still on the injured list, to which has been added Mel Henderson, an alternate lineman who sprained his ankle on Wednesday. Harrison has been out to practice all this week, but has not been used in any hard sessions. Fitzpatrick donned his uniform last night merely to loosen himself up. Both are expected to be in good condition for the game with Queen's a week hence.

Two other changes have been made on the Blue team. Earl Davey, backfielder, whose sensational gallop through the McGill team last year placed him in the spotlight, will join the Orphans, as will also, Art McCulloch, snapback and captain of the Orphans last year. As a result of this move, Lou Carroll's squad will be greatly strengthened.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

To-morrow afternoon looks like the acid test for Les Blackwell's intercollegiate rugbyists. The McGill game was somewhat of a work-out but this Western outfit is an entirely different proposition. Joe Breen is credited with having rounded out a very strong defensive team which can also do considerable damage on the attack. The Blues will be giving away a good deal of weight to their opponents, their average along the line being 165 lbs., while the Mustangs' is 184 lbs.

* * *

A man for man comparison, however, gives the Blue and White the edge, with Jack Sinclair's booting likely to be the deciding factor.

* * *

Varsity will take the field with much the same line-up as last Saturday. One notable gain is the return of Bill Adams. Bill's injured hand has healed sufficiently for him to get back in the game and his addition will strengthen the line-plunging end of the team to a big extent. Fitzpatrick and Harrison are still out and will probably not see action until the Queen's game next week.

* * *

The Orphans are in a tough spot. Their game with Beaches to-morrow will just about make or break them. The result looks like a toss-up at first glance, but we are inclined to favour the men of Carroll to come through. They are beginning to have more and more the look of the Eastern Canada finalists of two years ago and have recovered the fighting spirit that wins games. Earl Davey and Al. McCulloch have rejoined the team, which helps the Blues chances materially.

* * *

Just by way of diversion we have decided to try our hand at calling the shots on to-morrow's senior rugby card. We are picking Varsity intercollegiates to beat Western, Queen's to take McGill easily, Tigers to down Argos in Hamilton, Montreal to defeat Ottawa. In the senior O.R.F.U. we are calling the Orphans to come out on top against the Beaches, and Sarnia and Tiger Cubs to beat Kitchener and Windsor respectively.

* * *

Owing to a printer's error the time of the mile run in Wednesday's interfaculty track meet was given incorrectly in this column. Don Smith won the event in 4 minutes, 37 3-5 seconds.

ORPHANS ARE READY FOR BLOODY FIGHT IRISH TO BE BETTER MATCH FOR VARSITY

Beach Team Put Through Heavy Signal Drilling for Tilt with Waifs

LINE-UP TO BE ANNOUNCED

The Orphans meet Balm Beach to-morrow at Ulster Stadium. The daddies are imbued with the old fighting spirit of '28. During the early part of the week Coach Lou Carroll's waifs tore up the senior line, one occasion for yards five times in a row.

The nameless aggregation has been strengthened by recruits from the Big Blue line-up. McCulloch will take the position of snap and Davey will be available for the backfield. Don Wood and Hodgetts are sure of starting on the rear-guard. Doug Smith will probably start at flying wing. Hodgetts has developed into a pretty booter and will handle the kicking assignment. Insides will probably be Witzel and Lang, while Crawford and Lubowicz will be at outside. Art Sinder, peppy veteran of many seasons at the numbers, will call the signals.

The Beaches are heralded as a sanguine and hard-hitting outfit. Coach Ponton, for the three days previous to the tilt with the Orphans, has been drilling the team with signals. His line-up will be complete with one exception. He is Northam, regular quarter, who is out with a twisted ankle. Kirkpatrick will fill his position. Reeve and Trimble, who have been out with injuries, will definitely start. Box's knee has improved sufficiently and the star punter will see action to-morrow.

Fast Football Expected in Junior Intercollegiate Game To-morrow

TEAMS IN GOOD CONDITION

Harry Bales' smart Varsity junior squad face St. Mike's again in the second intercollegiate group game to-morrow morning on the latter's field. The last encounter between these two teams resulted in a one-sided victory for the Blue, 37 to 0, superior condition, more than anything else, being the deciding factor. The Irish are expected to furnish a good deal more strenuous opposition in to-morrow's contest, however, having had two days hard drilling since then. The double blue have a big fast team with one or two husky plungers, and they are due to improve every time out. They should make things mighty interesting for the Varsity kids to-morrow.

The Blue freshmen will take some beating, however, Bales having rounded out a smart team this season. In their first game, an exhibition against St. Andrews College last Saturday, they looked anything but championship stuff, but since then some of the more glaring weaknesses have been ironed out and they are a vastly improved outfit. In young Arnup, late of Oakwood Collegiate, the freshmen have a real backfielder. His all round work has featured every game so far and teamed up with Leachman on the half-line, forms a smooth half-line combination. The Blue line is also strong and it will certainly have to be to stand up against the pounding handed out by the big Irish from line.

These junior games seldom fail to produce some fast football for the fans and to-morrow's contest will be no exception.

All freshmen trying out for Varsity basketball teams will report on the Big Gym, Mon, Wed. and Friday, at 5 p.m. commencing October 20. The senior practices begin a week later.

BIGGER AND BETTER "BOB" FOR FIFTY-EIGHTH TIME

"This year's 'Bob' bids fair to excel any 'Bob' in the past by 100 per cent," said B. A. R. Dignan, to "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon.

"We have reduced the price of the tickets and already the response has been tremendous. I would advise all those contemplating getting tickets to get them to-morrow morning."

"Furthermore, we are putting on a show which will have the people talking to themselves. My only advice to the students is to come early and ask for a program."

STANDING ROOM ONLY AT MENORAH SOCIETY

Plans for New Year as Outlined by President to Have Debating and Dramatics

Standing room only was the order of the house at the first meeting of the Menorah Society, held last night at the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street.

Although Chancellor Hurowitz, who is editor of the Menorah magazine and Chancellor of the Intercollegiate Menorah, was billed as the speaker of the night, at the last moment he sent a telegram of regret stating that he could not attend as he had been suddenly taken ill in Chicago. However, he has promised to come to the next meeting in November, which is an event to be looked forward to.

Sydney Hermant, president of the society, in his opening speech, outlined a vigorous campaign for the forthcoming year, which is to include debating, musicales and dramatics.

A. B. Bennett, who ably substituted for the absent chancellor, called upon the members of the society to put more interest and zeal in the work of the Menorah.

The meeting closed with dancing and refreshments.

UNEMPLOYMENT DUE TO BAD ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

"Continued unemployment is a fertile source of friction between nations," Miss Irene Biss of the Economics Department, told the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom this week.

"The recent depression is not due to differences between nations, but to some defect in the economic conditions of the various countries."

Miss Biss urged the club to study economics. "The great need of the public at large is that they should study economic problems, and form an opinion based, not on election cries, but on facts and theories as they are interpreted."

The list of men for the intercollegiate track and field team published yesterday contained the name Bennett in error. This name should have been Dennis.

Horatius B.A. Struts Up To Town Is Badly Downed by Fishy Frown

By Adolphus Horatius, B.A.

I never was so insulted in my life. No real man likes being stared at as though he were a rotten fish, and neither do I.

Six months ago, I was one of the big guns among the students around this place, but when I came back on the first day of term this year to watch my old friends register and to look over the new crop of frosh, the whole gang just about threw me out on my ear. The same fellows who voted me into a dozen jobs less than a year ago, looked me up and down with coldly vacant eyes and lost no time getting out of my way.

Well, I got grieved right off the bat. Just because I was a grad and had a bit more experience than they did was no reason to treat me like a stranger to the place.

The more I think of the way they walk off when all I want to do is give them a bit of encouragement and warn them off some of the mistakes I made last year, the more mad I get. Soon I got so sick of things that I'm all set to write to Sir Robt. Falconer and say that as a result of a distressing lack of respect for age and experience on the part of his students and the obvious indifference on the part of he, himself and his faculty to the aggravating aspect of the situation I was forced to reconsider certain clauses in my will. That would go over pretty well if I signed it alumnus indignus, and I always had intended endowing the place properly in a few years.

Well I wrote the letter but I never sent it because I got a better idea. "Go back, Horatius. Show these impertinent infants their place. Assert yourself, and make the whole crowd recognize your worth. Go back, Horatius, go back!" So I spoke to myself and decided.

Well here am I registered in psychology with the graduates; and just to prove my worth the first thing that happens is the editor of "The Varsity" comes up and says to me, "Are you Mr. Adolphus Horatius, B.A.?"

I said I was, though he must have known anyhow, because I remember once when he interviewed me because I was made custodian of the Records of the Onward Oxford Movement. He was just a reporter then.

"Glad to know you, Horatius," he said. "I have been asked to request you to write a few words of encouragement and warning to the undergraduates of the university each week. Will you do it?"

Well, he's a clean cut young fellow and quite nicely spoken too. None of the cynical smartness of a lot of that crowd, so I say, "Yes, Mr. Allan, I will."

So each week from now on you will get my message on this day. And soon I shall again prove my worth to the students of this institution.

Next week I have a special message to deliver to all girls who are fair (blondes they call them, but it's an ugly word. Brunette is much prettier), and especially I want my words to be seen and digested by that impertinent child who laughed at me when I slipped up on St. George St. last Tuesday morning. It wasn't necessary even if in the heat of the moment I did say, "For Christmas sake." No lady would have heard me.

"Anybody that's genuinely interested will be welcome," said Mr. Jack Barber, stage manager of Hart House Theatre, in an interview yesterday regarding opportunities for undergraduates in the electrical and stage departments of the Theatre. "If they come to the dress rehearsal next Friday, the 24th, at 7.30 in the evening, I'll be glad to see them."

"Any man interested in set-ups and lighting will get a great deal out of it," he continued. "We have the best equipped switchboard in the city, with the exception of the new one at the Imperial. Last year we did not have one occasion to check up the electrician after a performance, and we had no long delays in shifting scenery. Yet practically all the men were with."

Dean Denies Hazing In Initiatory Rites

"There was nothing in the initiations of first year S.P.S. which could be termed hazing," said Brig.-Gen. C. H. Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science, in an interview with "The Varsity".

"The proceedings were described to the authorities and permission was obtained from the Students' Administrative Council, from Colonel LePan, and from myself in the usual manner. No personal indignity was forced upon the freshmen against their will," said the Dean.

"I wouldn't have missed the initiation for worlds," said P. L. Baker of the first year. Other freshmen expressed themselves as being quite satisfied with the initiation.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE ADD TO DEPARTMENT

James MacGillivray, '26 Grad, Will Lecture in English

IS HARVARD GRAD

Great interest has been shown at University College in the addition of a new member to the English department. Mr. James MacGillivray is a University of Toronto graduate of '26 in English and History, so he has not entered unfamiliar territory on his arrival here. While at college he took an active part in several well-known organizations when he was not busy with his books, which were his greatest interest. He attended O.C.E. and in 1928 received his M.A. degree.

The next two years Mr. MacGillivray spent at Harvard University where he continued to work on a subject which attracted him a great deal—the question whether Wordsworth visited France during the Revolution. He is endeavouring to prove that Wordsworth was bold enough to go back to France in spite of the danger it would entail in doing so. To be caught would mean execution because of his interest in Annette Vallon.

'IT'S A LIE': BONUS FLAT DENIALS GIVEN NO PETTING PARKERS

Reports Exaggerated, Says LePan, Lights in Dark Corners Stop "Evil"

'THE VARSITY' REPRIMANDED

University Police Vigilant in Such Situations, Says Chief

"An absolute lie," said W. H. Bonus, assistant superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, when interviewed by "The Varsity" concerning the alleged parking of cars on the campus, and petting therein. "There is no truth in it at all."

"Do you think, then, that the report was greatly exaggerated?" suggested "The Varsity". "Absolutely," said Mr. Bonus. "We have a man who makes his rounds until late each night and he doesn't know anything about it. Of course, in the early part of the evening, there are a number of people who go to the evening classes at the university. Our man's duty is to prevent loitering, and anyone found on the grounds is naturally sent away. We also have searchlights playing on all the dark corners to prevent this. I won't say that that sort of thing has never happened, but it isn't habitual."

When shown the editorial and letter in "The Varsity" of Friday on the matter, he suggested that probably the writer of the editorial and of the letter was one and the same person. "If 'The Varsity' would only spend more time in getting its news more accurately," he went on, "it would be a better paper."

Constable D'Arcy of the university police said he did not know anything about it. Neither he nor his men had seen anything as was described in "The Varsity".

Colonel A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, was not available to "The Varsity" over the week-end, but permitted himself to be interviewed by the down-town press.

"There is no serious problem, as made out, at all," he is quoted as having said. "The university police are

Correct Your Address

Every university student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

CENSUS OF LIBRARY PATRONS SHOWS GAIN

Mr. Wallace Regrets Not All Students Can Use Stacks

SEMINARS OPEN TILL 9.30

The University Library has had, in the last year, an increase of practically 25 per cent. in the use of books by undergraduates. Since 1921 nearly four times as many books have been borrowed.

This year, the seminars, as well as the reading room, are to be open until nine-thirty every evening. "The whole library would be left open," said Mr. Wallace, "if that did not necessitate a great deal of expense."

Admission to the stacks is confined to members of the teaching staff, to graduate doing research work and to specially recommended students of the third and fourth years. Mr. Wallace regrets that he cannot allow this use to all the students, but if this were done, books would become misplaced and the whole service disorganized.

The Catalogue Inquiry is a department which was started only last year. Some member of the library staff is always there to answer questions, and so far it has proved very satisfactory. Students are invited to make more use of it.

WOULD RUN SUMMER COURSE FOR O. C. E.

Suggests Substitution of Work at O.C.E. by Six Weeks' Course

TEACHING A "SISSY JOB"

A "Varsity" reporter obtained an idea of the work involved in the undertaking Friday afternoon by joining the line-up of men in the S.C.A. library at Hart House, where the settlement of accounts was taking place. The affair developed into an endurance contest, with some of the gentlemen-in-waiting attempting to refuse by means of life-savers. One man walked out with a disappointed expression and a batting average of .125—three of the four books he had turned in were handed back to him unsold. His absence from the U.C. fall dance will be deeply regretted.

Conversations with a number of students revealed that they are well satisfied with the service which Mr. Leslie, who is a recent U. of T. graduate, and the S.C.A. are rendering.

The substitution of a six weeks' summer course in pedagogy, after securing an M.A. degree instead of the year spent at a College of Education following graduation, is the suggestion of Professor J. F. Macdonald, English department of University College.

Lucky Fumble by Patterson Gives "T" Break in Last Two Minutes

FUMBLES DISORDER GAME

Sinclair's Splendid Kicking Offsets Western's Colossal Line-Weight

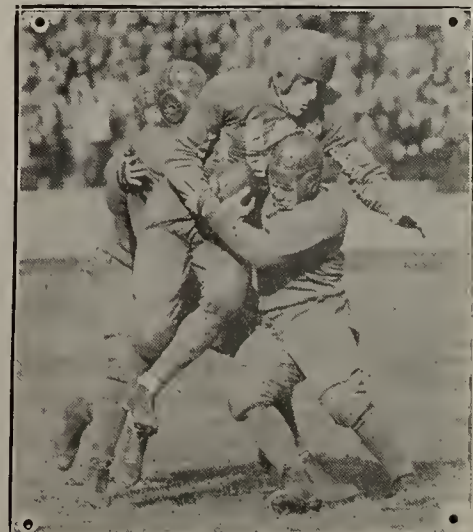

By T. A. Fleming

A fumble by Patterson, Western half-back, on his own three-yard line, with five minutes to go in the third quarter, enabled Varsity seniors to squeeze out a 3 to 2 victory over the Mustangs in Saturday's intercollegiate game at the Stadium. It was a close call for the Blues. Thrown off their stride by the powerful opening thrust of the Londoners in the first four minutes of the contest, they broke out into an epidemic of fumbling which almost tossed the game away. With Western leading 2-0 at half time, Varsity put up a desperate struggle from then on. Unable to make much headway through the stonewall Purple front line, the Blues fell back on an aerial attack which kept the Westerners on the defensive and finally managed to tie the score on singles from two of Sinclair's long hoists. With only five minutes to go it began to look like a game, which under intercollegiate rules counts nothing for either team, when Sinclair booted a long one to Patterson on the Western line. The Mustang backfield muffed it, the ball going into touch three yards out and giving the Blues possession. It was the first real break for Varsity. Two plunges were thrown back by the London defense, but Sinclair lofted one into the bleachers on the third down for the winning point.

The game was a close, hard fought affair with frequent fumbles marring the play at times. The Blues were the worst offenders in this respect. They seemed disorganized in the first half and committed several costly mistakes which put the Westerners in position to score. Once they settled down to business in the second half they began to show some superiority. It was the great hooping of Jack Sinclair which gave them the advantage on the play, however. The Western line had an edge on the Blues.

FOR THE FUN OF THE THING

Dean Mitchell says no personal indignities were offered S.P.S. freshmen at their annual initiation last Friday.

It was all done for the fun of the thing, we gather, and a nice time was had by all.

Anyone who could read "The Varsity's" account of the proceedings and carry away the impression that no personal indignities were offered, is either labouring under considerable misapprehension as to the definition of the term or is used to life under more heroic conditions than it is lived in civilized countries. And "The Varsity's" account was tame when compared with the real thing.

No freshman was compelled to be present, according to the Dean; it was entirely up to the individual.

But only one was absent. Our guess is that he has either been completely paralyzed for life or was undergoing a serious operation on the night in question. Anyway, every devout Schoolman will agree with us that his alibi will have to be a good one to save him from the wrath to come.

A description of the ceremony was passed by Dean Mitchell, Colonel LePan, and the S.A.C., we are told.

That is all very well, but if the advance dope came anywhere near being accurate, the question naturally arises: How did these gentlemen and this august body reconcile their action, in the light of sections forty-one and forty-two in the calendar?

Section forty-three, it is true, empowers the S.A.C.—acting under the Caput—to authorize the holding of initiation nights under the proper auspices. But there is absolutely no question about the meaning of the two preceding sections. They render completely illegal, so far as the laws of the governing body of the University are concerned, all compulsory initiations and all hazing which attacks the personal dignity of the student.

By all means let the Schoolmen have their fun. Let the faculties and colleges which desire initiation nights, have them. But let us put an end to this hypocrisy of sections forty-one and forty-two. These sections are reprinted on posters, and distributed about the campus at the opening of each fall term. And after having read them with palpitating heart, the hapless freshman turns around to find himself in the merciless arms of a sophomore initiation committee.

It might go far to increase respect for the Caput and its laws if these idiotic and ineffectual regulations were deleted from the calendar.

Let us have our initiations and hazings and other quaint institutions, if they add to the colour of our undergraduate life. But let us abolish infantile rules which make it necessary for deans to perjure their souls in order to explain their attitude toward events which everyone knows to be illegitimate under the existing code.

IT'S A LIE!

The statement of W. H. Bonus, Assistant Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, that "The Varsity's" allegations concerning nocturnal parking and petting on the campus constituted "an absolute lie", is the sort of statement that wants considerable backing in the form of cold facts to render it either a valid or a safe charge to make.

The sole backing which Mr. Bonus was able to scrape up was: "We have a man who makes his rounds until late each night and he doesn't know anything about it."

This is the kind of thing that is threatening to put the ostrich out of business.

Mr. Bonus says he has the searchlights playing on all dark corners. We suggest that any quaint, old-fashioned people who cling to the custom of verifying facts might do well to go out and count Mr. Bonus's searchlights some dark night.

"If 'The Varsity' would only spend more time getting its news more accurately," continued Mr. Bonus, "it would be a better paper." And this is the gentleman who, with a previous breath, had "suggested" that the writer of the letter in Friday's "Varsity" and the writer of the editorial in the same issue were "one and the same person."

Sketch Room

The second offering for this season in the Hart House Sketch Room is a one man exhibition of the work of Wendall Lawson. It should be doubly interesting to Hart House members because the exhibit is the work of a graduate of this university and a former member of the Hart House Sketch Committee.

The exhibit is a series of sketches, in various mediums, of scenes in Europe. Mr. Lawson shows a remarkable ability to create atmosphere with a few simple strokes of brush or pen. While he shows a little more skill in drawing than with the brush, the general effect of these compositions is superb, and whether he works in pencil and wash, pen and ink, or water colour, we are able to feel the sensations that he must have felt, a proof of fine artistic ability on his part. London, Dieppe, Boulogne, Dinan, Angers, St. Malo, the French Pyrenees, are brought to us in a few simple lines.

"Angers, The Cathedral from the West", the "Eglise Saint-Jacques, Dieppe", "The Tern near Albis" (a beautiful piece of colour work), and "St. Malo—The Harbour", are about the best in this week's exhibit.

The new Print Case which has just made its appearance in the Sketch Room is a valuable addition to Hart House. Through this medium it will be possible for all those who frequent the Sketch Room to make the acquaintance of a very fine, but hitherto unsuspected collection of old prints.

A Hair-Raiser

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Why not a University of Toronto beard growing contest? I have noted with great interest, in the past, the success of this form of contest in certain northern towns of our own province. These contests could be undertaken following several methods. Firstly, as a form of initiation, all freshmen might be required to allow the growth of their hirsute splendour while wearing a razor attached to their button holes as a sign of self restraint. Their shaving at the end of a given time would be symbolical of emergence from the darkness of ignorance of university ways to the freshness of the realization that they are now students.

If enough enthusiasm could be aroused this might take the form of an interfaculty struggle. Say the contest is for a period of two weeks. Judges might be appointed to see that all contestants start with a clean shave. As the second week drew to a close, imagine the headline you could secure for "The Varsity", "S.P.S. Man Leads Beard Battle by Three Sixteenths of an Inch".

This contest would bring the much sought after publicity it is reputed our university needs. I am sure there are many men who would welcome this suggestion for the same reason that I do, because I have always wished to see just what I would look like if I let my beard go unremoved for two weeks.

Stubbly Stan, (II C.U.)

LAMP BLACK AND WATER TO DARKEN NEW TOWER

The new pinnacle on the Memorial Tower is largely old stone," said Col. A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings yesterday. "A very small percentage is new stone, Bedford limestone. We are using old stone wherever possible," the Colonel explained. The new stone is darkened by a mixture of lamp-black and water, and there is no special or secret process involved.

residence or in boarding houses where common rooms and reception rooms are so often already occupied.

Therefore while we agree that the general public should be excluded from the campus, we feel that the privilege of parking should not be taken away from such unfortunate university couples. May we suggest as a solution to the problem that the university police make hourly calls on the parked cars around the campus and require the occupants to show their "Admit to Lecture" cards. In this way outsiders would be excluded. Due warning might also be given as to the time of the next call.

Yours in the cause of student liberty,
Romeo and Juliet.

Editor's Note: For the benefit of W. H. Bonus and others, we hasten to publish the assurance that the persons masquerading under the above pseudonyms are bona fide students of this university and that the Editor of "The Varsity" is in possession of their names, years, and faculties.

Resisting the urge to suggest that Mr. Bonus would make a better Assistant Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings if he took the trouble to get genuine information on what is transpiring nightly on his own terrain, we satisfy ourselves with assuring him once and for all that the letter and the editorial were definitely not written by "one and the same person"; that the Editors of "The Varsity" are not in the habit of writing letters to themselves; and that we can produce for the inspection of any qualified person who cares to investigate, the signatures of the undergraduates responsible for all the letters which appear in our Correspondence Column. This is more verification than the Assistant Superintendent can produce to back any of his wild assertions.

We mention the gentleman in question only because his attitude is indicative of that adopted toward the undergraduate daily by the lords and minions of the Simcoe Hall bureaucracy and other offices about the campus. As long as "The Varsity" confines itself to printing cut-and-dried bulletins issuing from the pigeon holes and swivel chairs of officialdom and reports of chapel exercises and afternoon teas, the gods are happy. But let the same paper venture to publish anything approaching live news for the information and amusement of the undergraduates or dare to take up the cudgels in behalf of student rights, and the frown of the gods is terrible.

But the last resort of all is the gibbering invective: "It's a lie!"

KNOX FIGHT HARD FOR SOCCER VICTORY

Knox College soccer team blanked Meds 1 to 0 in the last two minutes of play of their interfaculty match on the front campus Thursday. The Presbyterians had the better of the play throughout and put the Meds on the defensive. The Doctors battled hard and it was only in the dying moments of the fray that Knox succeeded in getting a winning counter.

This was Knox's second victory of the week, the Presbyterians having downed Victoria, 2-0.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Varsity's tennis team is to be congratulated on their showing in Kingston. They left no doubt as to their supremacy in both singles and doubles. This is the second year in succession that Varsity has won the intercollegiate titles, in both cases by an overwhelming margin.

The tournament was marred somewhat by the condition of the courts due to snow, which prevented any sensational or spectacular play. However, the steadiness which the Varsity girls displayed throughout the interfaculty tournament here stood them in good stead under such conditions and enabled them to pull away from their opponents.

The interfaculty champion, Bea Symons, bids fair to become intercollegiate champion also, while paired with Betty Carter she is in the finals of the doubles. Miss Symons is in third year at St. Hilda's and thus has still one year of University competition before her.

Heretofore these tournaments have been purely invitation affairs, but at a meeting of delegates from Varsity, Western and Queen's on Saturday it was decided to make them league fixtures, to be held in rotation at each of the three universities concerned. Also certain rules regarding scoring and the selection of referees were decided upon.

BALMY BEACH TAKES TILT FROM ORPHANS BY DECISIVE COUNT

Fighting Spirit of Blue Team Continues Even in Defeat

SNYDER STANDS OUT

Varsity's Fumbles and Kicking of Beaches Account for Victory

By N. W. Dickson

Ulster Stadium, Oct. 18. — Varsity Orphans went down to a decisive defeat here to-day before an unrelenting attack from Balmy Beach which gave them an 18-3 victory.

Balmy Beach entered the game with a two-fold purpose. The leadership of the group was at stake and, above all, they still entertained thoughts of a 1-0 defeat on Thanksgiving Day two years ago.

Although the Orphans were outscored, they were not outgamed. Through sixty minutes of rugby, that saw the Beachers firmly establishing their superiority, Lou Carroll's Orphans clung to their posts. The Orphans were in the game every second with the courage and fighting spirit that was so characteristic of the 1928 Orphans that had humbled the Beachers.

Balmy Beach were superior in the rear division especially in the kicking. Box being given perfect protection to get his long hoists away. The Orphans tackled well. Sass Subosits nailed them quite frequently. Crocker, Woods, Witzel and Rogers all tackled hard. But outstanding on the Orphans was Quarterback Art Snyder. Snyder was with the Orphans when they reached the Dominion finals two years ago. His is a fighting spirit that was quite prominent in the game. His tackling and stopping the Beach plunges placed him among the stars of the game. Snyder's field generalship could be easily noticed. Making yards against an experienced line such as the Beachers by a team that has had little experience in the heavy going of senior company is a tough proposition. In the second quarter, the Orphans advanced by yards on three successive

By A. C. C.

A GREAT GAME! Yes, from a spectator's point of view, especially if he were a local enthusiast, but as an exhibition of Canadian football—Ugh! Those fumbles in the first half by the local gridders gave the Varsity supporters a bleak outlook for the second half. It was a different team that confronted Western in the second half, a steadier team, one that committed fewer errors. At that the Blue and White got a break when Patterson muffed Sinclair's kick on his two-yard line and the Varsity hooper subsequently booted the pigskin into the bleachers.

The high wind undoubtedly was responsible for many muffs on the backfield, but then the passing and several snaps of the U. of T. squad were inexcusable. The Mustangs are too dangerous a team to take chances with. The wind played havoc with kicks of both Sinclair and Patterson. Three times Sinclair booted into touch whereas ordinarily his hoists would have gone for rouges.

The average fan left the stadium after Saturday's game under the impression that Western had the better of the play or at least were not far behind the local lads. As a matter of fact, however, the Blue and White forced the play into Mustang territory for far the greater part of the game. A perusal of a chart of the game reveals the fact that Western never had possession of the ball past centre field in the second half. The Mustangs got possession of the ball at centre on a Varsity fumble but they were compelled to kick from there. Even in the first half when the visitors gained a two point lead the play was mostly in Western's half of the field.

Although this column is not exactly a roll of honour, there are several names worthy of "honourable mention". "Skin" Dewar heads the list for his consistent line plunging and the way he nabbed the Western ball-carriers behind their line. "Dinny" Traynor went through the line for some nice gains. "Tubby" Bennett was the stocky outside wing who brought the Western tanks down by their shoelaces. His interference was splendid and he wrecked Western's hopes of executing an onside kick by taking the men out of play.

Evidently, the Balmy Beach crew were greatly underestimated. They scored an overwhelming victory over the Orphans, 18 to 3, Don Wood managing to avert a shut-out in the last three minutes of play with a placement kick. However, the work of the Juniors is encouraging. They downed an improved St. Michael's team 20 to 1. The Saints' lone tally was their first in two games against the local freshmen.

BLUES MAKE COME-BACK TO TAKE MUSTANGS

and White all the way through, working like a machine on their shifts and presenting a battering ram attack coupled with a stonewall defense.

The Londoners opened the scoring four minutes after the start of play in the first quarter when Kennedy rounded the Blue left end for 23 yards. Paul Hauch added fifteen more on the next play and Patterson tried a placement which went to the deadline for a point. This sudden attack took Varsity by surprise and they proceeded to uncork a number of misplays which, coupled with one or two bad breaks in favour of the Purple, shoved them back on the defensive. A crossfield wind had the ball doing tricks and the halves were having difficulty in catching it.

The Blues had several chances in the second quarter but misplays and some bad breaks went against them. Play saw-sawed up and down the field until finally Western found themselves in a scoring position near the end of the period. Patterson tried a placement and Bell ran it out from behind the line to the Varsity twenty yard mark. A bad snap on the third down gave the Londoners another break. Sinclair tried to get the kick away on the run while surrounded by tacklers, but the ball went into the stands about ten yards up. Patterson then hoofed over to Bell. The Varsity quarter passed to Sinclair but Jack hadn't a chance and was downed for a rouge, making the score 2 to 0 for Western.

After the half time intermission Varsity came out looking like a different team. They settled down to a kicking game and soon had the Purple and White on the defensive. After three attempts in which the wind carried the ball into touch before it crossed the line Sinclair kicked one sixty yards to the deadline for Varsity's first point. In the fourth period Varsity began to solve the Western defence on some of their plays. The Blues still had difficulty in handling the ball, however, and lost some valuable ground. Then the breaks began to turn in favour of the "T" squad. Hauch dropped one of Sinclair's hoists on the Western thirty yard line and Russell fell on it. Sinclair made no mistakes and kicked to the deadline to tie the score. The remainder of the game saw some strenuous football with both sides trying desperately to get the advantage. Sinclair booted over the line once but Patterson raked it out, saving what looked like a sure score. Then the same player made the fumble which ended the game and gave the verdict to the Blues.

For Varsity, Sinclair's kicking again featured. Without him the result would certainly have been very different. Bell handled the team well at quarter and pulled off one or two nice runs, while Traynor and Dewar were the pick of the plungers. The tackling of the "T" wings was great, although the loss of Jimmy Sinclair, who was injured near the start of the game, left a big vacancy. Johnny Keith, as usual, was at the bottom of almost every tackle. The whole team, however, was far from at the top of its form and played some sloppy football at times.

On the Western line-up the work of the line as a unit was the big feature. They outweighed the Blues and in addition were perfectly drilled, being one of the best front lines in this respect seen at the Stadium since Hamilton Tigers were here last. Ted Kennedy, Mustang captain, was just about the hardest working man they had, but he marred his effectiveness by pulling off an exhibition of high tackling which would have done credit to an American college team. The whole Western outfit were no slouches at the same game and the crowd did not take kindly to some of their tactics.

COED TENNIS TEAM TAKES TWO TITLES

Both Singles and Doubles
Fall to "T" at Kingston Tournament

SINGLES DRAW ANNOUNCED

University of Toronto women's tennis team again won the intercollegiate titles, both singles and doubles, at the tournament held at Kingston on Saturday afternoon between Varsity, Queen's and Western. Adverse weather conditions prevented the tournament from being played on Friday, as scheduled, so that all the matches were postponed to Saturday and had to be played in a snowstorm. Since only three teams were entered, there was a bye for every match during the first round of both singles and doubles.

The final score in the singles tournament was: Varsity 18, Queen's 3, Western 1; doubles, Varsity 8, Western 1, Queen's 0. Due to the snow the individual championship was not decided, since it was between two Varsity girls and the points went to Varsity in any case. The same plan was followed in the doubles. These games will be played of in Toronto next week.

The brand of tennis displayed was not particularly good, due principally to the weather, which made the footing slippery and uncertain and slowed up the play to a great extent. The finals of the singles will be between Bea Symons and Margaret Schwartz, who successfully challenged in on Sally Ballard on Thursday. In the doubles Bea Symons was paired with Betty Carter and Jed Gray, with Margaret Schwartz, and the final is between these.

The draw was as follows:

Singles, first round—Betty Carter (V) vs. Eileen Bogart (Q); by, J. McCormick (W). M. MacArthur (Q) vs. B. Connolly (W); by, M. Schwartz (V). Jean Uren (W) vs. Jed Gray (V); by, M. Bews (Q). Bea Symons (V) vs. I. Kent (Q); by, M. Robertson (W).

FROSH ELECTION RESULTS

In the presence of the faculty and fellow students, the freshman class of St. Michael's College was accorded its official welcome in Hart House Friday evening. The newly elected president of St. Michael's Students' Council, J. J. Clancy, was in the chair. As has been customary, the principal feature of the program was a concert presented by the frosh for the benefit of the other students.

J. B. Bickersteth, warden of Hart House, opened the affair with a promise not to bore them. He welcomed the students to Hart House, urging them to take part in the debates and athletics which were offered in the House. He impressed the freshmen with the fact that they should develop some outside interest besides their own work. "The world has no use for second rate men," said Mr. Bickersteth.

"I also wish to correct a statement which appeared last year to the effect that this university was the largest in the British Empire. It isn't the largest and I am thankful of it. It is the past and future achievements that count."

A group of frosh representing St. Michael's future "entertainers" presented "Old McDonald". The "cows" were too much for the other students who hoed the frosh off the platform. Father McCormick, Superior of the college, hoped that the freshmen would enter into activities before the third year, in which so many failed.

TRINITY, MEDICALS WIN WEEK-END TILTS

EDDIE DORE SENSATIONAL

Trinity College defeated U.C. 5 to 4, and Meds seniors downed the Dental College in Friday's interfaculty football games on the back campus of the University of Toronto. The first game developed into a kicking duel between the opposing halves, with Herbert of Trinity having the better of the match. He kicked 5 singles, three of them coming in the first half. U.C. scored their 4 points on a rouge and a placement kick.

The Meds-Dents fracas proved to be the best exhibition of the fall pastime to be played in the Mulock Cup series to date. An attempted field goal by Meds went for a rouge. A few minutes later, Eddie Dore, sensational freshman sprint ace, who gave Ralph Adams such close calls in the 100 and 220 yard dashes at the interfaculty meet, completed a spectacular run of 90 yards for a touchdown, evading a maze of tacklers.

In the second quarter Meds counted a touchdown and a field goal. In the latter half the Dents put up a spirited effort to overcome the lead and managed to score two rouges to make the final score 9 to 7 for the Doctors.

Senior Meds—Flying wing, Gibbons; Bull; halves, McLean, Murby; quarter, Caldwell; snap, McCullum; insides, Bartlett, Dunne; middles, Wong, Ramsey; outsides, Steele, Graham; subs, Spence, Allin, Thompson, Johnston.

Dents—Flying wings, Peterson, Dore; halves, Komisky, Sinclair; quarter, Simpson; snap, Mitchell; insides, Merril, Wylie; middles, Wachna, Conn; outsides, Shaver, Milne; sub, Oliver, Kahn, Cook, Campbell.

The fighting spirit of St. Michael's College was satisfied by three boxing bouts which enlivened the students to wild excitement.

Elections in the first year were announced by the president of the students' council: President, Robt. G. Miller; vice-president, J. Brophy; athletic representative, Harold Dennis.

BELL SAVES POINT

Billy Bell carried out a wide placement kick in the last few minutes of the second quarter of Saturday's game to save the Blue a point. Sinclair is in the background.

School Wants Revenge

Plans for drastic reprisals on the part of S.P.S. for the tapping of a number of School men by a group of Victoria men were frustrated by the mustering of the entire university police force and three mounted men from Chief Draper's force, for the protection of the Victoria "Bob" on Friday night.

So nervous were the men from Burwash about the threatening hostilities that they sent a plainclothesman to the Union Station to escort one of their number from the train to the college. He arrived safely, but without his baggage.

According to Dean Mitchell of S.P.S. these precautions were unnecessary, for, as he phrased it, "The School men were asked to use their better judgment and save what in all probability would be a serious outbreak of war."

McGILL'S TENNIS TEAM WIN INTERCOLLEGE TITLE

Montreal, Oct. 18.—McGill University captured the annual intercollegiate tennis tournament here to-day by winning both the singles and doubles final. C. W. Leslie, McGill, defeated C. E. Sheppard, Queen's, in the singles final, 6-0, 6-1, 7-5.

C. R. TRACY AT QUEEN'S

C. R. Tracy, a graduate of University College of 1930 in Honour English and History, has been appointed to the Latin Department of Queen's University.

A son of F. Tracy, professor in the Department of Ethics of the University of Toronto, he won the Aikens Scholarship during his second year, and was editor of the University College Magazine during his graduating year.

Several McGill students deserted architecture for stargazing the other day. Their professor finally found them on the roof of the engineering building and closer investigation showed him that they were not interested in astronomy, but in the adjoining building which happened to be a woman's residence. Perched on the window sill of their dormitory were two co-eds attired in bathing suits with back straps down, attempting to acquire one last coat of tan before the arrival of winter.

occasions. In the second quarter Snyder received a painful injury while stopping a Beach plunge and had to be helped off the field. He returned to the game in the third quarter and continued to bring down the Beach thrusters.

Bernie Hodgetts and Earl Davey were on Varsity's rearguard. Both were subject to continual hard tackling from the Beach wings. Hodgetts had to leave the game early in the fourth quarter when he was floored by a heavy Beach tackle.

Varsity fumbled considerably in the first quarter in their line plays, undoubtedly due to the force of the heavy Beach tackles. Beachers thus came in scoring position early in the game. They carried the ball to Varsity's one yard line. Varsity held them on three downs. The Orphans' kick was blocked and a Beacher fell on it for a touchdown. The half time score was 9-0. In the third quarter they scored a second touch on a fake play. Both touches were converted, the other points coming in singles.

The Orphans never gave up. In the final quarter they held the play for the greater part in the Beachers' territory.

Leslie and Ross Wilson, McGill, defeated W. S. Noyes and A. T. Balfour, University of Toronto, in the doubles final, 6-4, 5-7, 7-5, 6-3.

The final point score of the meet follows: McGill 12, Toronto 7, University of Montreal 6, Queen's 4, R.M.C. 1.

Witzell was prominent along the line with some fine bucking, while Woods pulled off some fine tackling. Varsity scored their points in the closing few moments via a placement kick. Don Woods booted it over the bar.

Balmy Beach—Snap, Cummins; insides, Reid, Taylor; middles, Trimble, Reeves; outsides, Keith, Snyder; quarter, Kirkpatrick; flying wing, Harris; halves, Box, McKenzie, Foster; subs, Hendry, Jones, Peacock, Knowles, Stewart, Kirkland, Mays, Norman.

Varsity Orphans—Snap, Doyle; insides, Long, Witzell; middles, Stringer, Rogers; outsides, Subosits, Crocker; quarter, Art Snyder; flying wings, Woods, Monkhouse; halves, Hodgetts, Davey; subs, Copp, Britnell, Gibson, Hendry, McCullough, Scott, McMillan, McGibbon.

APPOINT COMMITTEE FOR WOMEN'S UNION

Members Will Take Charge of Library, Posters and Magazines

DAILY BULLETINS POSTED

The Women's Undergraduate Association has decided to appoint a House Committee at the Women's Union.
"One member of the committee will be responsible for the library," stated
Jean Robertson, President of the Executive. "She must see that there is always someone to act as librarian, while another person will be placed in charge of the magazines. A third person on the committee will be responsible for all posters required by the Women's Undergraduate Association and will be asked to post a bulletin of each day's events."

"We are going to move the pigeon holes which are in the women's cloak room of University College," Miss Robertson informed "The Varsity".
"We think that the girls would look in these boxes oftener if they were at the Women's Union. Moreover, they will be more convenient for Miss Kilpatrick if they are there. Any notices which have not been collected at the end of the day will be mailed to the individual whom they concern."
"The Varsity" was also informed that the date which had been chosen for the annual autumn tea was November the first, and that the University College initiation would take place on November the sixth.

every fortnight. It is hoped that, later on, longer plays could be put on, open to the general public. Meanwhile it is settled that a first performance take place on Thursday, October 30.

To select plays, a committee of three was elected: Miss Letitia Wilson, Miss Dorothy Ryerson and Miss Dorothy Lyvers. Mr. Ross Parmenter was chosen as secretary-treasurer.

BLUE JUNIORS WIN; REMAIN UNDEFEATED

Freshman Team Gives Veteran Display; Second Straight Victory

CAPTAIN LEACHMAN STARS

"How to play rugby", in four acts, was presented by Varsity juniors at the Stadium on Saturday when they trounced St. Michael's College 20 to 1 in an intercollegiate fixture. Smooth work on the half line, heavy line plunging, and daring tackling by the outsides combined to produce a game
St. Mike's could not match, and the issue was never in doubt. The Double Blue showed vast improvement over their previous exhibition, but fumbles at critical moments cost them what ever scoring chances they had, and they lost several opportunities to kick for singles. In addition, their halves were nailed in their tracks on practically every punt, while Leachman and Arnpup were usually able to gain anywhere from 10 to 15 yards on their catches.

Varsity took the offensive when Patterson passed to Captain Bill Leach-man for a 20 yard gain, but on Ar-nup's short kick, S.M.C. ran the ball to the Blue 40 yard line. An extension gained 15 yards, and Carroll added five more before Varsity stiffened and Arnpup ran a kick 20 yards from behind his own line. St. Mike's finally fumbled and the Blue team came back with an Arnpup to Leachman run for 30 yards; from here they steam-rolled their way for a touchdown. Keeping up this plunging offensive the freshmen had play in S.M.C. territory at quarter time.

Fumbles paved the way for their second touch when Varsity recovered a muff on the S.M.C. 10 yard line, and on the third down Leachman completed the distance. The Blue captain kept up his effective work by running the kick-off back 25 yards, and then the old Varsity fight carried the ball on successive downs right to the 15 yard line, a beautiful series of plunges. A poor placement was recovered by St.
Mike's, but pretty work by the Varsity halves gave Leachman an open field and he ran 40 yards for another major score. Loose ball handling by S.M.C. enabled Patterson to recover at centre, and Arnpup's long kick put the Double Blue on the defensive.
Successive fumbles were gathered in by Mustard and Scott, but Arnpup's boot over the line was disallowed just at half time.

Starting the third canto, St. Mike's took on a new lease of life, plunging for yards twice in a row. Then Mc-Nulty caught Arnpup's kick and ran 40 yards, the longest gain of the game.
On their one yard line, Varsity put up a rare struggle, and kept the fighting Double Blue off the score sheet.
Finally Willett punted a long one for their first point in two games. In the final stanza Varsity came back to their old game, and Mustard recovered an whose tackling was a main cog in the Blue and White defence.

Each freshman at Rutgers University at New Brunswick, N.J., is issued a green ticket with two stubs by the sophomore year. For the first infraction of the rules of the sophs one stub is taken off. If a sophomore collects the second stub, distinctly unpleasant treatment follows.

S.M.C. mislay, and another one gave the Blue a touch, to end the scoring.

In spite of the losers' improvement, the Varsity team still look much better, and gave a finished display of the fall pasture. On the day's play, it would be unfair to single out individuals, but Capt. Leachman led the way to three of their touches, and Keith emulated his more famous brother in tackling and recovery of loose balls. Every player on the team, including the subs, is in the pink of condition, and put up a fighting effort.
McNulty, Willett, Ryan and Carroll showed up well for the losers.

Varsity—Snap, Keith; insides, Herman, Calvert; middles, Dennison, Watson; outsides, Mustard, Campbell; flying wings, Webber, Patterson; halves, Leachman, Arnpup; subs, Henderson, Rogers, Scott, Woolnough, Bean, Brebner.

St. Mike's—Snap, Dugan; insides,
Wilson, Grant; middles, McGoe, Willett; outsides, Timmins, Brophy; halves, Shook, Ryan; flying wings,
Carroll, Zachanko; subs, Carter, Harris, Hussey, Dore, Regan, Petrie, O'Connor.

Officials—Bartlett and Lou Carroll.

Bully Skit Says Vallee Thro' Crooner Bounced, Western Too

Rugby fans were given the opportunity of ridding themselves of the excessive heat which they had absorbed at the McGill game. It was idea rugby weather, but a little hard on the fair co-eds who were not prepared for the unexpected change. Quite a few fur coats were in evidence but not so many as were expected.
Perhaps it is a result of hard times.

The Varsity Band under the leadership of Bandmaster Algic, should be commended for their spirited rendering of the "Blue and White". In spite of the fact that the band was gathered together by dint of hard last-minute effort, they gave a creditable rendition and broke the interludes of the game very well.

The first and most likely the last bull fight ever to be staged in the Stadium was put on between periods.
A most energetic matador from S.P.S. threw the bull in record time. If they teach them nothing else at S. P. S.
they certainly give them good instruction in the art of bull-throwing. Perhaps they ought to grant a B.A. degree

(Bull-throwing Artist). We are wondering what the hind legs of the bull did to the matador when he got out of the bull costume.

The beautiful senorita who sat on the ladder seemed to have a most inspiring effect on our heroic and acrobatic matador.

Rudy Vallee received a tremendous ovation (and a free ride in the wheel barrow), after he attempted to render (from limb to limb) the "Blue and White", with his crooning voice.

The cheer leaders seem to have roused some spark of life in the student section. Or perhaps it was the sound camera which inspired so great a change in the volume of noise.
Whatever it was, it brought good results. In order to be eligible for a position as cheer leader, one has to be able to do a flip. All would-be acrobats are invited to try out.

The press box inhabitants are putting in a request for electric warming pads. The cold weather may cramp the style of the writers.

COLORFUL ACAAIA U. OUTSTRIPS OLO TORONTO

Acadia University presents a gayer spectacle than Toronto during the opening weeks, according to an eyewitness lately returned from the maritimes.

Both freshmen and freshettes are sandwich men. All first year students wear green silk skull caps, and their backs are decorated with a large piece of cardboard, advertising his or her native town. This is awkward enough on a promenade, but on a bicycle in a high wind the result was enough to make one sorry freshman swear to retire from public life. Toronto's tie-cutting would be bread and milk to the eastern lions.

'BOB' UNDISTURBED BY THREATENING MEN FROM ANGRY S. P. S.

Fifty-Ninth Annual Function Has Drama, Music, Fun as Sophs Make Merry.

RICICULE LOWLY FRESHMEN

Police Protection Forestalls Engineers' Plans of Revenge

In spite of abortive attempts by various factions and faculties to create an uncalmed for conflict, the 58th annual production of the Victoria College Bob, the yearly fray between sophs and frosh, was carried through with success on Friday evening in the Victoria College hall.

At 7.45, just previous to the commencement of the Bob, some few aggressive sophomores were frustrated in their wicked attempt to kidnap George Addison, the president of the first year. Some of Al Dignan's cops used their batons in the fracas, to the discomfort and general detriment of the sophs in question.

After a false alarm S.P.S. yell the ceremonies commenced with a speech by Professor W. B. Lane which served as a prologue to the play "The Milky Way", presented by the sophomores. This praise-worthy attempt at drama opened with a solo by Murray Babe. "College Days are Here Again", followed by a chorus of eight blazer-clad sophomores.

The first act, entitled "The Birth of a Nation", took place at Professor C. B. Sisson's Dairy Farm. It consisted of a dialogue between Professor Sissons and Professor DeWitt, the former extolling the virtues of his milk-fed, diaper-draped family of boys, who acted in harmony with their garb.

After songs alternately warbled by the sophs and frosh to the tune of many popular selections, the second act, "So This is College", commenced. The setting was intended to represent the Old Ontario Strand, and consisted mainly in the misdirection of the unsuspecting frosh by their superiors. One innocent frosh, in search of Miss Addison in Annesley Hall, was directed towards a building across the street on the back porch of which flaunted certain unmentionables, and if he had followed the instructions given him by he would have been as popular as the proverbial skunk in the garden party!

The third act consisted in the graduation of Adam and Sons from Victoria College, who, on the event of receiving their sheepskins, became intoxicated on Professor Sissons' heifer-juice.

Following this was an intermission, during which a quartet, including John A. Falconbridge (Director), John Bates, Ray McKnight and Dell Martin, sang the song immortalizing the tricks played on the frosh. The Bob committee was thus given recognition of its capable functioning by the presentation of canes to its members.

The fourth and final act showed the Right Honourable George Addison and cabinet on Parliament Hill in 1970. The cabinet was assisted by the orchestra of Stan St. John, who performed creditably as Mme. Gracindini, successor to Paul Whiteman. The entire orchestra appeared as women. A beautiful violin solo was enhanced by vari-coloured lights from the balcony. Prime Minister Addison gave a speech over the radio at $1,000 a word. He spoke of endowing Victoria with a fund of $2,000,000 for benefit of unemployed students. The Bird's Eye Centre United Church choir warbled in discord.

Roy Wood sang a solo, "Little White Lies", which was appreciated by all. "Amos 'n Andy", presented by Jack Bowers and Aubrey Smith, caused considerable humour, with references to Bill Little's forthcoming marriage, a rather crude remark about bathing beauties, and the old standing jokes about the Greek "syntax" and "Gladly", my cross-eyed bear! This skit was succeeded by a solo from Sid Buchanan, which was reputed to have brought him immoral fame, and one

Swelling Strains of Moure's Lyre Sweep us on from High to Higher

By A. P. Sileo

GOSH! Didja see wot happened to Mac? Mac says here (I'm reading Wendy's Varsity) that he went to hear Dr. Moure play the pipe organ down t' Cowvocation Hall an' he says he was carried from the violence of Allegro Appassionata—some sophomore, I guess—to the sweet melancholy of another former Adagio! Why do they allow these wops to carry on like this around the campus anyway? I thought that freshman initiations were forbidden by the Catapult? An' anyway Mac ain't a freshman. Well, he goes on to say that another riotous European named Scherzo dispelled the mood, whoever he was, (maybe he meant the mooray) and wouldn't let 'em bring on the fine chorale (wot kind o' ale is that—one of the forty used at S.P.S.?), until some stodgy page had chased Comus out. I'll be glad when the Student directory is out so I can tell who these folks are. Then some fellow Fugally developed a movement—sumpin' like a forward pass, I 'spose—and Mac says he "e-u-l-min-ates in a mag-n-i-fi-cent en-un-ci-ation of the original chorale. "Now, wot do you make o' that? Do you think he got treated to a big bottle of that ale for makin' that for'd pass?"

Mac says that this show—the Guillo-tine or sumpin'—affected him but he liked the moods (there's that word again!). Then he talks about some console revealing pure legato—sh! tut-tut—I don't know wot he means but I don't think he otta talk like that about such burnin' questions. He might get hauled over the coals or mildewed or sumpin'. (Boy, that musta bin a hot party!)

After that, he says he's felt rendered by some fellow who's 'sposed to be pretty well-known—Bach Daminor (rotten proof-readin', they left out the "a" here). He says that Toccato and Fugue didn't have any imagination (oh, well Mac made up for it!), but that they occasionally threw someone's figure out of the perspective—I wish they'd have thrown Mac out.

Then a kid named Cleverly, a registered moreaux (that's French for a sawed-off half pint, ain't it?) who used to go to Kreisler and Padewski—two Ukrainian colleges, I guess—ended the party by marching out. Good! That's wot he shoulda done in the first place.

Next time the editor sends Mac around to report on one of these here recitals, I wish he'd tell us sumpin' about the swell music.

BULLETIN BOARD

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD

The Players' Guild of University College will meet on Wednesday, Oct. 22nd at 4.20 p.m. The presentation will be "Makeshifts", by Gertrude Robins, under the direction of Miss Rhoda Howe. The cast includes Mr. Howard Lindsay, Miss Aleen Turner, Miss Haldenby and Mr. Dewdney.

CONSERVATIVE CLUB

The first meeting of the Macdonald-Carter Club will be held at the Music Room of Hart House on Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. Hon. Leopold Macaulay, provincial secretary, who is a graduate of University of Toronto and the youngest member of the cabinet, will speak. Those earnestly interested in Conservative political doctrines are invited to come.

WOMEN'S LIT.

Members please note that the regular meeting will be held this evening instead of Tuesday.

FREE LANCES ATTENTION!

The Free Lances are holding their first meeting of the season at 5 o'clock Monday, October 20, in the common room of the Women's Union. This is the organization of girls who are financing themselves at college and all girls interested along this line will be heartily welcomed.

Cats Eat Rats; Rats Eat Cats: Yukon Cat-Fur King Reaps Profit

In the wilds of the Yukon this summer, Alex. Stringer, well known U. of T. undergraduate, locally known as "the Polar Bear of the Yukon", came upon a wild-cat promoter who was actually selling to the gaping natives—according to Mr. Stringer—a scheme to make a fortune out of cat-fur by raising millions of rats as inexpensive but delectable fare for the fur-bearing felines. The circular letter of the promoter, as furnished "The Varsity" by Mr. Stringer, reads as follows:

THE WHITEHORSE CAT & FUR COMPANY
Whitehorse, Y.T.

Dear Sir:

Our Developing Resources

Knowing that you have taken some interest in the fur business, we take the liberty of presenting to you what seems to us a most wonderful proposition, and in which you will, no doubt, take a lively interest, and perhaps wire us the amount of stock you wish to subscribe towards the formation of this company.

The object of this company is to operate a large cat ranch in or near Whitehorse, where land can be purchased cheap for that purpose. To start with, we will collect about one hundred thousand (100,000) cats. Each cat will average about twelve kittens per year. The skins will run from by Murray Bahe, "Betty Co-ed", nobly assisted by a chorus of sophs and one chorus girl, Alex Adams. Reference should also be made to the ballet dances by Da Costa Sudio, put on by Murray Babe and Alex Adams.

Considerable consternation was felt because of Al Dignan's police protection from S.P.S. The School put in an appearance early in the evening, but were dispersed by the officers. Vicoria could have handled them capably alone, although a slight disturbance in the Bob might have resulted.

10c each for the white ones to 75c for the pure black. This will give us twelve million (12,000,000) skins a year, to sell at an average of 30c each, making our revenue about $10,000.00 a day gross.

As a man can skin fifty cats per day for $200, it is estimated that it will take one hundred men to operate the ranch, and therefore the net profits will thus be $9,800.00 per day.

We will feed the cats on rats, and will start a rat ranch on the next property. The rats will multiply four times as fast as the cats. If we start with 1,000,000 rats, we will have, therefore, four rats per day for each cat, which is plenty.

We will feed the rats on the carcasses of the cats from which the skins have been taken, giving each rat a fourth of a cat per day.

It will thus be seen that the business will be self-supporting and automatic all the way through. The cats will eat the rats, and the rats will eat the cats, and the company will get the skins.

Awaiting your prompt reply, and trusting that you appreciate the opportunity that we have given you by which you can get rich quick, we remain, Yours very truly, out previous experience." This record, Mr. Barber explained, was partly due to the fact that only students are on the crew.

"Most of the men are interested only in the technical end of it," he went on, "but if any of them are attracted also by the acting itself, they sign for both. The director gets to know the men, and if one of them is a type or would fit into one of the productions, he is given a small part."

Mr. Barber gave "The Varsity" a glimpse of what he describes as "the fascination of back-stage work" by a tour behind the scenes at Hart House Theatre. To say there was a multiplicity of ropes, lights, pulleys, switches and wires would fall short of the mark. A rotating machine to produce the sound of roaring winds, a drum electrically heated to emit different tones, and apparatus designed to create blue sky, dawn, and sunset were explained, as well as one or two of the tricks in setting up scenery.

It will be necessary for the technical crew to be at full efficiency for the next production, "Peer Gynt", and Mr. Barber will discuss this branch of the work with any interested student any afternoon or from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m. after the final curtain.

tensive grounds, and is of considerable size.

In 1919 it was purchased by the University of Toronto, from Mr. Graham Campbell, for whose father the building was erected. Mr. Campbell was formerly Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds for the University of Toronto and is now secretary of the York Club.

After its purchase by the university, the building was converted into a residence for women graduate students in medicine. It has been used these last few years as a residence for University College women.

The new wing of the museum will extend out to Queen's Park and will cover the site formerly occupied by Argyle House.

The wrecking is in the hands of Frank Bros., who expect to have completed the demolition of the building before the eighth of November. The construction of the new museum wing will commence shortly after this date.

House is covered by one of these committees and they are largely responsible for keeping the machinery of the house running smoothly.

WOULD RUN SUMMER COURSE FOR O.C.E.

in an article concerning the fewness of honour graduates who take up secondary teaching, appearing in the latest issue of the "University of Toronto Monthly".

Mr. Macdonald gives an extensive analysis of the reasons that seem to make high school teaching to-day seem like a "kind of sissy job" and also place it in danger of falling entirely into the hands of a "narrow professional group" of people who take the special teachers' courses. "This kind of people," says Mr. Macdonald, "are in danger of becoming just teachers. It is Mr. Macdonald's opinion that university students in becoming high school teachers, feel they incur something like the contempt of their fellow students, their professors, and the community at large."

To remedy the defect, Mr. Macdonald suggests that the university instructors drop their "rather snitty" attitude of superiority to the teachers in secondary schools, and that a five year combined course of arts and pedagogy be established instead of having to spend a whole year on top of the four or five in arts. Mr. Macdonald refers to the time when he lectured on methods in English in the Faculty of Education at Queen's University. "In a quarter of the lecture period," he said, "I had told the students all I knew about the art of teaching English, and I felt back, as lecturers in these courses usually do, on teaching the subject and not the method. It is my firm conviction that the time, the energy, and the expense of a whole year at a training college are not justified by the effects on the teachers in training."

Winnipeg, Oct. 17. — Movement of western grain to the lake head and Pacific ports remained steady on Thursday, although reports indicate considerable falling off in marketings from the Saskatchewan farms due, no doubt, to the heavy snowfall which retarded all kinds of outdoor work for the past twenty-four hours. A half million bushels went out from the lake head and nearly a quarter of a million from Pacific Coast ports, according to Canadian Pacific Railway report for October 16.

Canadian Pacific transportation figures on grain for Thursday show—total inspections, 441 cars; western line marketings, 419,000 bushels, with 121,000 from Saskatchewan, which practically trebled that amount the previous day. Cars loaded on the prairie, 237; unloaded at lake head, 359; unloaded at Pacific Coast, 128; on band at Fort William for unloading, 654; in transit west of Field for Vancouver, 303. In store in country elevators, 34,930,000 bushels; in store government elevators, 9,357,000 bushels; in store at lake head, 69,828,000 bushels; at Pacific Coast, 10,968,000 bushels; shipped at head of lakes, 521,000 bushels; shipped at Pacific coast, 227,000 bushels.

MATHEMATICS POPULAR

"We sold about $2,533 worth of books this year—$500 more than last, roughly speaking," said Charles Leslie, manager of the S.C.A. Book Exchange, during an interview with "The Varsity" Saturday. While he had not yet had time to make an accurate summary, Mr. Leslie estimated that about 5,000 books had been turned in, of which approximately 2,700 were sold.

"A text-book in good condition usually brings two-thirds of its original sale price, after one year's use," he continued, "but the reductions run all the way from twenty to sixty per cent, depending on the condition of the book." This variation is also due to the fact that the student offering the book for sale sets the price. One C. and F. man, it is said—though not by Mr. Leslie—re-sold a used text without suffering any depreciation whatever on it. An unconfirmed rumour has it that the authorities intend to award him with his B. Comm. immediately.

"Old editions of medical books were a nuisance," went on Mr. Leslie. "Students would buy them and then would bring them back on finding that they were out of date. In other subjects old editions don't matter so much.

"More mathematics texts were sold than anything else. Texts that are definitely prescribed, of course, were (Continued on Page 4)

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP CANDIDATES ATTENTION

Conditions of Eligibility; Last Application Day
Oct. 31st

The attention of the students of the university is drawn to the fact that applications for the two Rhodes Scholarships to be awarded in 1930 should be submitted NOT LATER THAN OCTOBER 31st to D. R. Mitchener, 371 Bay St., Toronto.

A limited number of application forms may be obtained on request from D. R. Mitchener or the registrar's office, since Hall.

Conditions of Eligibility—A candidate to be eligible must: (1) Be a British subject, with at least five years' domicile in Canada, and unmarried. He must have passed his nineteenth, but not have passed his twenty-fifth birthday on October 1st of the year FOR which he is elected; (2) Have reached such a stage in his course at one of the universities of Canada that he will have completed at least two years at the university in question by October 1st of the year FOR which he is elected.

Further information regarding the Rhodes Scholarships may be secured from the registrar's office.

Distribute Musicales Tickets Wednesday

Representatives from the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's office on Wednesday, 22nd October, between 12.30 and 1.30 p.m. for their allotment of tickets for the Sunday Evening Concert on 26th October.

Victoria, St. Michael's To Supply Debaters

The debates committee announces that the following men will speak on the paper at Hart House debate on October 29th: For the affirmative, J. W. Binning, Victoria, and R. J. Gunn, St. Michael's College. For the negative, E. B. Jolliffe, Victoria, and J. C. Gallagher, St. Michael's.

The subject before the house will be: "Resolved that this house has every confidence in His Majesty's government at Ottawa."

Ninety-eight Per Cent. Receive Permanent Employment
in Canada

Practically all of the graduating class of engineers in 1930 have received permanent employment in Canada, according to Dean Mitchell of S.P.S.

Col. R. E. Smythe of the Technical Service Bureau, Queen's Park, when interviewed by "The Varsity" had definite information to the effect that of the one hundred graduates of 1929-30, only two have gone to the United States and one of the latter is taking further instruction in his profession. The other 98 have received permanent employment in Canadian industry.

In 1926, 25 per cent. of our graduates obtained employment across the border. This is a considerable contrast to the present 2 per cent. of 1929-30.

STUDENT TORIES HEAR PROVINCIAL MINISTER

The youngest member of the Provincial Cabinet, Honourable Leopold Macaulay, M.P.P., Provincial Secretary, will address the first regular meeting of the McDonald Cartier Conservative Club. This club is for undergraduate Conservatives and the first meeting will be held in the Music Room of Hart House at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, October 22; it will also be the organization meeting for the election of this year's officers. The secretary, R. Palmer, expressed the opinion that great enthusiasm would be shown due to the Conservative victory in the summer. He cordially invited all those who are interested in Conservatism to turn out to-morrow night and help put the club on a firmer basis.

A. E. Tyson Declares Compulsion is not Exercised on Freshmen

"With the exception of the cod liver oil the initiation was very enjoyable," said a first year S.P.S. man who declined to give his name, when interviewed by "The Varsity". First year School men generally did not want to give an opinion as to whether sections 41 and 42 in the calendar, relating to the illegality of compulsory initiation were farcical. Second year men, however, were very much of the opinion that the regulations in the calendar were a "joke".

The opinion among first year S.P.S. men was very favourable to the initiation, in fact C. Annis, first year, said he had not heard anyone in his year "kick" about initiation and most of them had expressed the opinion that "they would not have missed the initiation for anything, as it was something to be talked about." When the School men were asked if they had read the editorial in Monday's issue of "The Varsity" over 85 per cent of them said they had not, and so the question which was put to all was: "Don't you think that sections 42 and (Continued on Page 4)

Medical Student Parks to Pet No Cop About to Make Him Get

"I was down there last night, and didn't get kicked out," answered Lyman Walker, III M.D., when asked yesterday by "The Varsity" if parked petting was prevented on the campus.

"Everybody has their moments, don't you think?" inquired a U.C. co-ed on being asked if the pastime was indulged in about the university. The reporter next wanted to know if it was being done by students. The young lady replied by propounding another question:

"Who do you think it would be—professors?" This enquiring co-ed preferred to remain anonymous.

"Petting? I never heard the word used before," said Bob Agnew, II C. and F., "but I think all cars parked on the campus after 10.30 should be condemned as fire hazards."

Other opinions on the subject of yesterday's editorial were:

"I guess it's being done, but I don't know whether students are doing it or not," replied Miss Carolyn Temple, II Vic.

"I don't know whether they do or not. I haven't had any personal experience—here," volunteered Bruce Miller, II C. and F.

"Thursday night after the initiation there was quite a bit of it," was the observation of H. C. Herring, II S.P.S.

"Herring gave it up as an impossibility," remarked W. S. Swallow, II Pharmacy, in the presence of and with the consent of the gentleman to whom he referred. "I haven't noticed very much of it." Asked by whom it was being done, he answered: "According to chatter, I would say outsiders."

Howard Ross, II M.D., observed that there were no couples engaged in the activities which Mr. Bonus claims to have prevented, during the summer when he had occasion to cross the grounds, and suggested that "if there is any, it must be the students."

Varsity rooters will make the trip to Kingston for the Queen's game next Saturday on chartered busses instead of by special train, it was decided, at a meeting of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council yesterday. Tickets will go on sale to-day.

A committee to bring up to date the facts regarding the attitude in various faculties towards changes in the S.A.C. constitution, agitated by "The Varsity" two years ago, was appointed.

The committee includes: Bruce Murray, Bert Tyson and Miss Robertson of University College. Melvin Kenny, S.A.C. president, and A. Gordon Burns, secretary-treasurer of the Council, will co-operate with the committee.

Mr. Burns told "The Varsity" last night that the committee had been appointed for the benefit of members new to the council who lacked information regarding the constitution change situation.

TRINITY OPPOSES FULL CRIME NEWS

Government Defeated on Motion that Newspapers Should Stress Crime

By the narrow margin of one vote and on the first occasion it faced the House, the government of the Trinity College Literary Institute went down to defeat Friday night on its motion: "Resolved that, in the opinion of this house, newspapers should publish reports of crime in full."

The freedom of the press was vigorously upheld by H. H. Clark, government leader, who opened the debate. He accused the opposition of being "obscurantists who would like to return to the prudery and suppression of the Victorian age."

T. P. Crosswhite, speaking against the motion, announced to the great amusement of the whole house, that he was the leader of a "Purity League" which intended to "protect the morals of government members." The publication of full reports of crimes would be in his estimation a direct incentive to further crime.

Recommends Six Week Course

PRESENT COST UNJUSTIFIED

Sees Danger of Monopoly by "Narrow Professional Group"

Professor J. F. Macdonald, English Department of University College, suggests that the substitution of a six weeks' summer course in pedagogy after an M.A. degree is a better training for school teachers than the year spent at a College of Education following graduation, in an article concerning the present day problem of inducing honour graduates to take up secondary school teaching as a life work, appearing in the latest issue of the "University of Toronto Monthly".

Among a number of reasons for the reluctance of first class honour students to study pedagogy, Mr. Macdonald expresses the opinion that to many teaching to-day seems like a "kind of silly job". To others it means the sacrifice of a more remunerative career spent in business. Mr. Macdonald foresees a danger in teaching falling entirely into the hands of a "narrow professional group" of people. (Continued on Page 4)

Inhabitants of Temporary Residence Fall Back on Union

Bathtubs are working overtime on St. George St., according to reports received by "The Varsity" concerning the existing condition of one bath tub only at 106 St. George St., the substitute residence for Argyll House.

It is understood that the situation is somewhat improved by the use of the bath tubs at the Women's Union across the street where the three tubs are available between the hours of four and five p.m. and seven and eight p.m. The Union officials refused to give "The Varsity" any information whatsoever on the subject of the number of bath tubs at 79 St. George St.; it was ascertained later that the order of the bath is the order of the day for the co-eds incarcerated in the residence, only at the above-mentioned hours.

Signature of Dead Air Minister Seen in Hart House Register

"This book is a slice of life," said the Warden, as he brought forth the leather covered register of visitors' names in Hart House Library, and began turning over the pages. Last year's members are requested to be present, and a few undergraduate journalists will attend by special invitation.

FEW OBJECTORS TO VACCINATION

No Objection to Vaccination,
Though Compulsory, Says
Dr. Porter

RECORDS INCOMPLETE YET

"The medical health inspection is in fine shape this year, and the students are co-operating nicely," stated Dr. George Porter, head of the University of Toronto health service, and medical adviser to the male students of the University.

"As far as can be reckoned from the records, which are as yet very incomplete, the general health of the students is quite satisfactory."

No serious objections have been raised to the rule compelling all students to become vaccinated for small-pox, according to Dr. Porter. He pointed out that the university is just as interested in the health of the individual student as in that of the more outstanding athletes, although the ordinary student who does not ask the Medical Adviser does not have the same opportunity.

In the case of those students who do not desire to take the regular course in Physical Training, a course of training is offered through the C.O. T.C. Playing on any recognized university team is accepted in lieu of physical training.

"Physical training is merely play that any normal student can enjoy, with one period on the floor of the gymnasium and one in the swimming tank," stated Dr. Porter. "It is not compulsion or any form of discipline that we are attempting, but merely the welfare of the student body. Many older men have recognized the benefit of physical and medical examination, and as a result more and more senior men are coming in voluntarily for examination."

Physical training hours are set only for the purpose of preventing confusion, Dr. Porter stated.

R. 101 catastrophe, signed this book. Coming to recent times the names in 1930 alone include W. Hamilton Fyfe, the new President of Queen's, Cyril Norwood and Frank Fletcher, headmasters of Harrow and Charterhouse; the Archbishop of New Zealand; Lord Broughley, the hurdler; F. C. Goodenough, head of the new Barclay's Bank in England; Lord Moylhan, president of the Royal College of Surgeons; Sir Frederick Kenyon, director of the British Museum, and many more.

Mr. Bickelsteth confessed that his was the task of deciding who should sign the register and admitted that it was a difficult task, especially when one has to be chosen out of a group. A loose-leaf book is kept with detailed information about each name, and the register itself, already immensely valuable, is kept under lock and key in the Hart House library.

NOT TROUBLE-RAISERS

The primary interest of the Editors of "The Varsity" is not in raising trouble within the university or in causing embarrassment to any individual or faculty; but rather in discovering the true conditions affecting university life in all spheres of activity, and in bringing the general student body face to face with these conditions.

We regret that from time to time there have been individuals firmly convinced that our only pleasure in life lay in abusing the authority or privileges which from custom they had come to regard as their inherent rights; and that still others have depreciated our efforts to improve a condition that was already fairly good. But the great god "private privilege" and the greater god "status-quo" we do not recognize.

In a university where divers faculties, creeds, and social groups exist side by side, the editorial voice can only demand that its readers uphold their dignity as members of a collegiate body by insisting on their ability to manage their own affairs, and by facing without prudery or fear whatever is truth, regardless of any comfortable preconceptions that may be upset.

So far this year we have raised three major issues on this page. The first of these was in connection with what we considered an insult to the University Song, a song we thought was prized by all members of the University. "Why did you bring that up?" has been the query of almost all the authorities. "Don't suggest that we stand for our College Hymn and not dance to it. Patriotism isn't fashionable these days."

The second issue we raised was with regard to a condition that does exist and that seems to us evil—namely,—that cars are parked each evening by amorous couples, in the shadows about the campus. For our pains in this instance we were called either liars or evil thinkers.

Finally yesterday morning we suggested that an obsolete rule in the Arts Calendar be done away with. Believing that college students have the right to decide questions of initiation for themselves, and realizing that several faculties have very definite initiation ceremonies that are contrary to ordinance of the Caput, we recommended that this ordinance be abolished. How will this recommendation be treated by the undergraduates and faculty? In S.P.S., Trinity, and Meds at least, we expect a sympathetic consideration of the proposal.

THREE MAGAZINES TO APPEAR SOON

Trinity and Vic Publications Will Go to Press Immediately

Plans for the immediate publication of "Acta Victoriana" and "The Trinity Review" are now complete, and "The University College Magazine" will follow the appearance of these magazines in a few weeks.

"Acta" will be more widely read this year, because subscription to the magazine is included in the compulsory Victoria College Union fee, so that every student is entitled to a copy. The editorial staff is aiming to raise the literary standard of the magazine by the introduction of short stories written either by graduates or undergraduates. Reviews of the latest novels and plays will appear in each issue in order that a taste may be developed among the students for good current literature.

"We don't aspire to be literary," stated Stuart Ryan editor of the "Review," "but we do use a great deal of material. Because of space limitations, the magazine is restricted to short articles. 'The Review' is divided into two sections, one containing material of interest to the graduate such as personals and articles written by outstanding graduates; and the other dealing with material appealing to the undergraduate."

"The editorial staff of the 'U. C. Magazine' hopes to be able to announce in the near future plans for the complete reorganization of the policy and general character of the University College official organ," said G. K. Masters, editor-in-chief.

Plans are under way for the incorporation of new departments to arouse greater interest among the undergrads. There will be two issues this year, the first late in November, the second around March. It is not yet decided whether contests will be held this year similar to those in last year's magazine.

Art, Music and Drama

H. C. Players' Guild

It often happens that one whose experience has been wholly on the acting department of the drama conceives a craving for self-expression in another form. The actor wants to create from the other end; he becomes a dramatist, and often a very successful one.

Gertrude Robins, the author of the play to be presented at the Players' Guild on Wednesday, October 22nd, is such a person. After achieving considerable fame as an actress in England, she produced several studies of middle class English life, of which one of the best known is "Makeshifts". This play is built around a situation and a problem which cannot fail to hold interest and has a surprising conclusion.

The production is being directed by Miss Rhoda Howe, and the cast includes

Mr. Howard Lindsay, Miss Turner, Miss Haldenby and Mr. Dewdney. Several important problems concerning the year's program are to be discussed at this meeting.

Victoria Dramatic Club

The first meeting of the Victoria Dramatic Society for the current year was held last night in Wymilwood. Included in the program was a short comedy, Suppressed Desires, effectively enough produced considering the limitations of the Wymilwood stage.

Pauline Mills, Bernie Hodgetts and Louise Huribart comprised the cast and put over the play without any startling mistakes.

We hope the Victoria Players will again attempt short plays in Hart House where they would have greater opportunity to display their talents.

In connection with Petted Parking, Mr. Bonus tells us that they have a man who makes his rounds late each night and he doesn't know anything about it.

C—C

We think that they should get someone who knows at least a little about it, if only to—

C—C

And in order to cast a little more light upon the subject he says "we also have searchlights playing on all the dark corners to prevent this."

C—C

This statement seems to us rather silly. Obviously if the searchlights did play on the corners, they wouldn't be dark.

C—C

But there are still many dark corners around the campus so the lighting must still be inadequate. Why not mount big searchlights in strategic positions, viz., on the Soldiers' Tower, to flood the nooks and corners of Trinity grounds, and on Wycliffe chapel to overlook the tennis courts, etc.

C—C

In conclusion we are told that the university police are on the watch for anything improper of that sort and take necessary action when it happens.

C—C

When what happens? What were we talking about? Onions?

But to be serious, what is the necessary action for a university policeman?

Would he tap you on the shoulder and say, "I'm sorry Sir, but—" Or would he stand by for a moment or so to make sure that it is improper.

C—C

Believe it or not, officer, we were only hemstitching.

—Gaspard McGuffey.

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Another average week in the local palaces of patter with male players featuring almost every film. The real stars of this crop were John Barrymore in Moby Dick, Richard Barthelmess in The Dawn Patrol and Gloria Swanson in What a Widow.

We do not like over-emotionalism as evidenced in some scenes of The Dawn Patrol and Scarlet Pages. We do like the ability of Jack Arthur to co-ordinate the acts of a vaudeville show.

Imperial. Scarlet Pages. (0). Elsie Ferguson is a woman attorney and a politician in her first talking film. She is fairly good, but the picture is spoiled by annoying mistakes in detail. Costumes in the 1911 scene were distinctly modern. Jack Arthur's stage show hangs together well. It is certainly the most consistently good vaudeville in the city.

Loews.

What a Widow. (0). Gloria Swanson is funny enough to save this from the bone pile. The whole show is just on the verge of being a triumph but never seems to click. Lew Cody makes a come back but is rather disappointing as a drunkard. The costumes are marvelous. The Clock Shop. An all colour song and dance short—is good.

Shea's.

The Big Fight. (-1). Stepin Fetchit, the slow motion coloured clown is not supposed to be featured in this show, but he ought to be. None of the leads do anything to be proud of, and the whole story is obviously improbable, though interesting in view of recent disclosures about the influence of the big gutter and yegg men in the pro fight game. First pictures of R 101 disaster are of tragic import. Vaudeville pleasing.

Tivoli.

Moby Dick. (1). Another success for director Lloyd Bacon. Remarkable photography of storms at sea and fights with whales. Joan Bennett not so fascinating as Dolores Costello in the silent version, The Sea Beast. Love scenes subdued but possibly true (Continued on Page 4)

ST. MICHAEL'S JUNIORS FACE UPHILL TASK IN NEXT TWO GAMES

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Baseball players and fans in the different colleges are becoming restive at the inaction which seems to have seized upon the executive of the baseball club of late. A meeting has not yet been called, and there will be plenty of work for them when they do have one.

As a matter of fact, it is becoming more and more doubtful whether University College will be able to field a team. They lost four of their members through graduation and one other through registration at another college. It will certainly be a shame if the Red and White do not enter a team, since there were only three in the league last year and the withdrawal of one of them would considerably lessen interest in the sport at college.

A ruling by which girls are forbidden to take part in more than one interfaculty sport seems to be the stumbling block which is preventing a more wide-spread interest in girls' sports. The ruling is all very well when the individuals are not physically able to take part, but when they are fit and want to play both baseball and basketball there seems to be no good reason why they should not. It was the introduction of this rule which caused the withdrawal of St. Hilda's a few years ago, and it seems likely to occasion another now.

Social Service have decided to enter a team in the interfaculty basketball this year. They have several girls there from McGill and Queen's and they hope to produce a real team.

WYCLIFFE SOCCERITES ONE GOAL UP ON TRINITY

Wycliffe defeated Trinity 2-1 in a hotly contested game on the front campus last night. Wycliffe had a little edge on the exchanges, although Trinity showed great improvement over last week's game.

Wycliffe—Goal, Goldring; full back, Rueh, Smith; halves, Perkins, Geary, Crawshaw; forwards, Wood, English, Prior, Sage, Masters.

Trinity—Goal, Brown; full backs, Sinfield, Brown; halves, Bloomfield, Douglas, Hinchcliffe; forwards, Bell, Archbold, Graham, Wong, Stewart.

The University of Iowa is now offering a course in radio broadcasting. Voice training, interesting methods of presentation, and elimination of personal mannerisms are all studied.

ST. MICHAEL'S FACE UPHILL STRUGGLE

Must Win Two Remaining Games to Tie Varsity Juniors for League Lead

Facing the problem of winning two straight games in order to win the group title and minus six of their regulars as a result of last Saturday's game, St. Mike's have an almost impossible task ahead of them when they meet Varsity juniors in the third game of the series to-morrow.

In the two previous games Varsity have come out on top in each by scores of 37-0 and 26-1, and are confident of repeating, thus taking the group in three straight games. Varsity has a strong team this season both in the backfield and on the line, and will be at their best for the game. In St. Mike's camp things are not too bright as Tom O'Connor, their best tackler, will probably be out of the line-up as a result of a sprained wrist, while Jack Hussey is definitely out with a broken nose as his share of the injuries. Carter and Regan will both probably be absent due to torn ligaments while Ed McNulty, playing regular quarter, is on the injured list with a badly twisted knee. Completing the list is Don Harris with his shoulder out of joint.

Manager McGoy was unable to give his starting line-up as many new men have been out to practice and the list may have some new faces in it for the game. Varsity will in all probability put the same team on the field that won Saturday's fixture, but the substitutes will not be chosen until after to-day's practice.

The team as lined up last Saturday is as follows:

Snap, Keith; insides, Herman and Colbert; middles, Watson and Dennison; outsides, Mustard and Woolnough; quarter, Oiley; wing, Patterson; halves, Arnup, Webber and Leachman.

TICKET HOLDERS CERTAIN OF SEATS

Three Sections of Bleachers Reserved for Students; One for Co-eds

"Every student season ticket holder is guaranteed a seat for every game which the ticket entitles him to," stated Gordon A. Burns, secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administration Council. "The confusion at the first game was owing to the greatly

SPEAKING OF SPORT

It is a grimly determined Intercollegiate team which begins its workouts again to-day. Western threw a scare into that big Blue team that they won't forget in a hurry, but now that it's all over, Kingston is the next stop. Judging by the low score which the Tricolour were able to produce against Old McGill, and with the entire Toronto squad eager for the chance to tear into Queen's, Varsity should just about be good enough to take the Batstone-coached aggregation. At all events, it will be a battle royal, and with all the traditional trimmings the ancient feud is on once more.

Those who saw the battering behemoths on the Western line laying the Blue men low, will be relieved to hear that the team stood up well under the pounding and with the exception of Jimmy Sinclair who sustained a dislocated shoulder, Les Blackwell's boys are in good shape. Johnny Harrison and the fleet Fitzpatrick are expected to return to the line-up for Saturday's game, and just ask Mustangs if Bill Adams is his old self again!

Balmy Beach also attempted to plough up Ulster Stadium with the Orphan squad as implements and almost succeeded, but Coach Carroll is satisfied that his men are ready to go at it once more. The dynamic Art Snyder, who tried to throw Teddy Reeve for a loss, is fully recovered from his shaking up (ever see Teddy Reeve?), and Bernie Hodgetts will also be out to practice to-day. The intermediates worked until long after dusk last night, and are recovering the confidence they lost after their set-back at R.M.C.

Speaking of cold weather, those who have been entering the Stadium from the south door may have noticed the familiar smell of ammonia. The ice-making plant is now being checked over, and skating will commence by the end of the month. Coaches already are on the watch for freshman hockey stars, who will undoubtedly be needed to fill the vacancies in the senior and junior teams.

The basketball squads are losing no time, either, and Coach McCutcheon put the freshmen junior squad through a brisk initial workout last night. Several American flashes are said to be turning out. The other teams will start practices next week.

St. Mike's by their decision to enter teams in the interfaculty and junior intercollegiate series only, seem to have split their luck pretty unequally, with the junior squad getting all the tough breaks. Injuries have just about wrecked the team, and Varsity thirds should have little difficulty in eliminating them on Wednesday. The Mulock Cup team, however, look hard to beat for the title now held by Victoria.

Junior U.C. certainly registered a decisive victory in the first game of the interfaculty water polo league, when they heaved the spheroid into the net no less than seven times. Coach Spence has a very smooth team, and they must be conceded a chance of wresting the championship away from S.P.S., who last year staged an all-School final.

increased number of tickets sold but everyone obtained a seat and things should be better next game."

"This year 2,056 tickets were sold and there was not sufficient to meet the demand. Co-eds purchased 666 of this number while students of University of Toronto Schools also were able to obtain them.

"Three entire sections of the bleachers are reserved specially for students tickets and one of these is reserved for the girl students. Also one-third of section R is reserved specially for co-eds and their escorts who have these student books. Plenty of room is provided in these three sections to easily accommodate all ticket holders and there should be no cause for complaint."

"The advance seat sale for the Western game was not as great as for the McGill game," said T. A. Reed of the Athletic Office. "But this is due to the fact that Western has not the same reputation as the other teams on account of only having been in the league one season. The cold weather has had some effect on cutting down attendance, but this is not as big a factor as the other."

EURYTHMIC DANCING ATTRACTS VICTORIANS

Eurythmics will have a place of importance this year at Victoria College—double that of last year, if plans go through. Since the recent demonstration by Mme. Lasserre in Annesley Hall of interpreting music with movements of the body, great enthusiasm has been shown and more people have become interested. A new group will be started for these beginners, and members from last year's group

St. Mike's Make Good Showing in Initial Water Polo Venture

The first water polo game in the interfaculty struggle for the Eckhardt trophy was won by Junior U.C., who defeated St. Mike's by a score of 7-0.

This was St. Mike's initial essay into the water sport and considering the fact that they had had only two afternoon's practice they did exceedingly well in holding the more seasoned team coached by George Spence to such a low score. Spence's men scored early in the game and before the first half had ended they had added two more.

In the second half U.C. garnered the other four. The first of these was an easy goal, but the others could have been missed by more experienced goalies.

Jr. U.C.—Leachie, Ross, Clute, Lash, Hermant, Caplan, Smith, Tindale, Parker.

ENGLISH RUGBY XV DEFEAT WELSHMEN

Humble Powerful Welsh Pack With Five-PLY Coat of Whitewash

SECONDS SHAPE WELL

The U. of T. senior rugby team again emerged victorious last Saturday at Oakwood Stadium, defeating the Ontario Welsh Rugby Club by 5-0, in their third fixture of the season. The score is a fair indication of the play, for it was only a slight edge in the backfield that kept Varsity ahead. Welsh teams are famous for their powerful scrums, and the Blue forwards are to be congratulated for their holding of so strong a pack. Although a casualty, Brown was a continual threat to the Welsh, and particularly effective were Nash, McKenzie and Allan. The Varsity forwards are showing great improvement over last week's exhibition.

The backfield, too, shows the effect of the coaching of Dr. Boyle, who is now drilling the team which hopes to bring the intercollegiate title home from McGill.

Captain Johnnie MacLean turned in his usual nippy game, being well supported by Grimley. Goldenberg scored the only try of the game, converted by McKenzie.

While the first fifteen are training hard to steal the laurels from McGill this coming Saturday, a second team has also been showing up well for the Varsity. With the assistance of several other experienced players,

HEAR TALK ON AVIATION AT ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Stunt Flying is a Detriment to Progress of Aviation Says Col. Bishop

Aviation was the subject of the meeting of the Engineering Society yesterday. Dean Mitchell, as the first speaker, greatly lamented the fact that Toronto has as yet no municipal airport. He declared emphatically that commercial aviation has come to stay not as competition for railroads, but in conjunction with them, serving as an aid.

Sir Charles D. Richards explained the new method of aerial survey by which land could be surveyed and mapped in about one thirtieth of the time it originally took an engineer to survey the ground. His talk was well illustrated by the maps which he had with him.

Lt.-Col. "Billy" Bishop, the famous Canadian war ace, was the featured speaker of the meeting.

Captain Archbold has whipped a fast team into shape. It has already won one game from Camp Borden, but last Saturday was unlucky to be defeated by the long experienced Lansdowne Club. This team has unearthed some very good material for next year's intercollegiate team.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 20th.—Cleared weather gave impetus to the grain movement in the west on Saturday, the report of the Canadian Pacific Railway's transportation department indicating heavier car inspection, loading, and Pacific Coast shipments, with slightly higher storage at the lake head in spite of boat shipments of 680,000 bushels.

Totals for Saturday, with decidedly heavy marketings in Alberta and Saskatchewan, include:

Inspections, 394 cars; cars loaded on the prairie, 177; unloaded at lake head, 180; unloaded at Pacific Coast, 117; on hand for unloading at Fort William on Canadian Pacific tracks, 665; in transit west of Field from Vancouver, 296. Marketed: in Manitoba, 62,000 bushels; in Saskatchewan, 104,000 and in Alberta 395,000 bushels. In store in country elevators, 35,282,000 bushels; in government elevators, 9,540,000 bushels; at lake head, 70,458,000; at Pacific Coast, 10,860,000 bushels. Shipped at lake head, 680,000 bushels; at Pacific Coast, 340,000 bushels.

How to Write a Letter Home Freshman Rubs His Nether Zone

By C. L. Coburn

Sit down at your desk. Get up again and put a cushion on the chair. Park the body with care. Lower her gently, lower her sadly. Proceed to indite.

"Dear folks. Things have been happening since I wrote last—" You bet they have. Now you know what a full-blooded initiation is. No hazing allowed of course. Just gentle fun. But oh, those barrel staves!

"I have met a lot of interesting fellows in the last few days—" Particularly the one that filled your mouth with turpentine and tar-paper. Not to mention the gentle spirit that shaved you with a can-opener. Or the pleasant playmate that poured five gallons of ice-water down your back at a crucial moment.

"Things are a little different from what I expected in some ways—" And what ways! If this chap's mother's little boy Julius had ever known that he would spend a whole morning scrubbing shoe-blackening off his back, there'd be one more plough in use on the old homestead.

"I've been running around quite a lot—" Like the night you ran down Bay Street in the uniform of the squash team with seventeen devils on your tail throwing ice-cubes at you. Or the night you walked home after a car ride with the men in the next room. They made you get out to see by the stars where you were, and then had to hurry back for a class in eurythmics.

"I think I'm going to be quite popular—" They've certainly given you a warm reception. SAY IT WITH SOAPSUDS.

T. A. ELIOT'S WORK SUMMED UP FOR U. C. WOMEN'S LIT.

"T. A. Eliot is an exponent or an opponent of Humanism," was the manner in which Sophia Buckingham summed up the poet's work in her paper, which was read by Maureen Macoun at the U.C. Women's Literary Society last evening. "He is not only a poet, but a philosopher constantly searching for a set of values. This fact makes such poems as 'The Waste Land' and 'Ash Wednesday' confusing. We wish that philosophers would keep their questionings for prose.

The program of the society from now until Christmas has been announced. The paper at the next meeting will be given by Amy Lovegrove on Virginia Woolf. Later, Primrose McLean will give a paper on Mary Webb.

Professor F. C. Green has very kindly consented to speak on Marcel Proust sometime in the near future.

JAPANESE STUDENTS

The Japanese students of the University of Toronto, met on Friday last at the School of Mission and formed a club which is to be known as the Japanese Students' Club. The regular club meetings are to be held on the first Friday of each month. A very interesting programme has been planned for the ensuing year and all those interested are invited to attend their meetings. T. RELIGION A PRACTISE NOT MORE DOCTRINE

"Religion is not only a doctrine, but a practise," said Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick at the Women's Union on Friday afternoon to a group interested in "The Teachings of Jesus in Relation to Modern Problems".

Miss Kilpatrick contrasted the Hindu religion with Christianity and pointed out that the former is withdrawal from life. After repeating the name of God one hundred and eight thousand times the Hindu loses his personality. There is no relation between the spiritual and material life. If he dies holding a cow's tail or lying on the banks of the Ganges, he is certain of salvation.

The group discussed the new conception of God that Jesus brought into the world and stressed the fact that God is interested in the small as well as the great problems of human existence. "The commonest life needs the greatest inspiration," said Miss Kilpatrick.

TIME SAYS MACDONALD

ple who take the special teachers' courses. It is Mr. Macdonald's opinion that university students in becoming high school teachers, feel they incur something like the contempt of their fellow students, their professors and the community at large.

Stating that any remedies for the defect must be spread over a considerable length of time, Mr. Macdonald suggests that the university instructors drop their "rather snuffy" attitude of superiority to the teachers in secondary schools, and that a five year combined course of arts and pedagogy be established instead of having to spend a whole year on top of the four or five in arts. At one time, Mr. Macdonald lectured on methods in English in the Faculty of Education at Queen's University. "In a quarter of the lecture period," Mr. Macdonald says, "I had told the students all I knew about the art of teaching English, and I fell back, as lecturers in these courses usually do, on teaching the subject and not the method. It is my firm conviction that the time, the energy and the expense of a whole year at a training college are not justified by the effects on the teachers in training."

most in demand. Many English, French and Latin books were sold. A number of French books were left over.

Of the ten per cent, which the S.C.A. charges for this service, seven and one-half per cent. is used to pay advertising and administration expenses, salaries for Mr. Leslie and his assistants, and losses due to the activities of certain light-fingered gentlemen who cannot resist the temptation to slip small volumes into their pockets. Latin keys frequently find new owners in this way. The remaining two and one-half per cent. helps to support other S.C.A. activities.

DISCUSS WYCLIFFE SALARY INCREASE

Literary Society Publication Now Pays More to Editor

NEW EXECUTIVE ELECTED

The question of the salary of the editor of the "Cap and Gown", the Wycliffe publication, was treated in a meeting of the Wycliffe College Literary Society held in Wycliffe common room at 7 o'clock Friday evening. It was moved that the editor receive in addition to his salary, a percentage of the receipts from advertisements. A discussion followed and an amendment was finally carried that the editor's salary be increased $25.00 per session and if circumstances warrant an honorarium was to be added. It was also decided that tenders would be called for business manager of the magazine, since a former request had brought only one reply.

A hearty debate followed a motion that a radio be purchased and installed. An unprecedented incident occurred during this discussion when a man spoke by proxy. One member listed ten reasons why a radio should not be installed, and unable to be present, he prevailed on a friend to present them. In spite of this the motion carried, and a radio will be purchased.

The annual "news items" discussion was considered. This discussion in past years has taken the form of a social evening in the basement when amusing scandals about prominent personages of the college are recounted. The motion for the appointment of a news committee was lost and Wycliffe will hear no "news items" this year.

W. F. Payton was installed as secretary for the present year. The critics brought in a favourable report as to the brisk manner in which business was conducted and this brought the meeting to a close.

Last year there were more college students in the United States than in all of the rest of the world combined. There were 1,327,000 students enrolled in the various universities throughout the country.

SCHOOL FRESHMEN ENJOY INITIATION

43 in the calendar forbidding compulsory initiation is rather a farce?" "The regulation in the calendar is a joke," said J. Jordan, II S.P.S. A similar sentiment was expressed by S. A. McCarty of the same year.

"That regulation should be removed," said W. E. Crooks, another sophomore.

"It is rather a silly regulation, for there will always be initiation and that regulation spoils the spirit of the initiation," said M. Pulver, III S.P.S. "If the students break one rule it will only make all the other rules open to censure," said Tony Archer, IV year S.P.S.

"There is no compulsion exercised. The form of initiation is agreed upon between the heads of the first and second years, and finally by the Dean of the Faculty of Engineering and the Engineering Society," said A. E. Tyson, President of the Engineering Society.

"Is it compulsory initiation?" said J. S. Little, fourth year.

"There was no hazing and I asked 15 or 20 freshmen how they liked it and practically all said they thoroughly enjoyed it. There was no compulsion exercised, but those who missed it would probably have been picked on," said Sorelle Laurin, I year.

"There was no hazing, and it does not concern the ruling in the calendar," said O. F. Bush of the first year.

NO BLIND ALLEYS IN O.C.E. COURSE IF NOT CUT SHORT

Pakenham and Carlisle Agree Practical Work Needed for Teachers

SIX WEEKS TOO SHORT

Macdonald's Article Admired but Doesn't do Justice to O.C.E.

Six weeks spent at a College of Education following a university course is not enough time to equip men and women for secondary school teaching, is the opinion of Dr. William Pakenham, Dean of the Faculty of Education, and Mr. J. O. Carlisle, of the Latin department of O.C.E.

In interviews yesterday with these men, regarding the suggestion of Professor J. F. Macdonald, English Department of University College, in an article in "The University of Toronto Monthly," "The Varsity" was told that the factor of intense practical work on the part of the student was of vast importance and the length of time required to secure the training was justified.

"Although, perhaps, we do more for the student on the negative side than the positive," stated Mr. Carlisle, "my experience in this work for a number of years has shown me that observations and practical teaching under supervision are enormously valuable, and save the student many trips up blind alleys later. That could not be done in six weeks unless the students had had previous experience, such as those people who take the six weeks' summer course. It takes time," he continued, "to fit educational psychology into the ordinary students' university education."

Dr. Pakenham, due to an urgent engagement, had only time to tell "The Varsity" that the great percentage of work accomplished in training teachers was practical and due to observations. "That is one argument against a six weeks' course," said Dr. Pakenham. "There are a host of

FOUND PROVINCIAL DRAMATIC LIBRARY

O.S.T.F., Library Association
Combine to Assist Amateur Dramatics

The Provincial Dramatic Library of Ontario has been founded for the purpose of distributing plays and books on drama to schools, reading clubs and drama leagues throughout the province. There will be over three hundred sets of plays in the collection which will be available at the end of October.

A very small fee is being charged, but special rates will be given to clubs, reading groups and little theatres. The library is to be located in the Central Library, College St.

The formation of this library is the joint work of a committee representing the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation and the Ontario Library Association.

The dramatic committee of the O. S.T.F. was first formed in 1928 in order to bring to high school students of the province a performance of the Shakespearean play required for matriculation. But from the beginning this committee was interested in the foundation of a lending library. At the Easter meeting of the Ontario Library Association a committee was

City By-Law Permits Selling of Programmes at Stadium

NO UNIVERSITY SANCTION

The sale of the magazine offered to rugby fans outside the stadium on Saturday afternoons cannot be stopped as it is permitted by a city by-law, according to information received by "The Varsity" yesterday. The publication is not the same as the Stadium Magazine, which is given to ticket-holders inside the stadium.

The magazine sold outside is a commercial enterprise backed by interests which have no official connection with the university; the Stadium Magazine is published by G. D. Thomson with the sanction of university authorities, and is financed by the sale of space to advertisers.

According to a city by-law the sale of the unofficial program is perfectly legal so long as it is licensed as a magazine, is sold by licensed newsboys and does not use the name of the university. Its similarity to the Stadium Magazine may be due to the copying in it of articles from previous issues of the Magazine.

CAMERA CLUB SEES PHOTO EXHIBITION

Colour Photography Featured to Reveal Modern Possibilities

PHOTO-MICROGRAPHS

A remarkable exhibition of the possibilities of modern photography was shown last night at the introduction of the Camera Club in the Music Room, Hart House.

W. Connolly demonstrated colour photography in most of its aspects, Winter, Summer, Sunrise, Sunset, Architectural and Nature Study. He was followed at the lantern by W. F. Haenel, who showed a series of athletic pictures both field and track.

Then W. T. Grant gave a display of photo-micrography, that is, photographs taken through a microscope. He showed several slides of scientific interest, a few being coloured.

In demonstrating colour photography W. Connolly said that it is not yet possible to produce coloured prints; only coloured motion pictures, and screw-plate slides being possible at present.

All members of Hart House are eligible for the Camera Club. A deposit of $3.00 is required to cover the cost of equipment, breakages, etc., said Professor A. F. Coventry, who gave a miscellaneous exhibition of Northern and Natural History slides.

The members of the club had several pictures hung at the Canadian National Exhibition last summer.

Valuable Knowledge Gained by Clever Pilots Says
R. W. Angus

"Stunt flying is only permissible and encouraged in military work," Brig.-Gen. C. H. Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, told "The Varsity" yesterday. He referred to Lieut.-Col. Bishop's remarks condemning "stunting" made at the meeting of the Engineering Society on Monday.

"In all other flying, commercial and otherwise, it is discouraged and condemned," Dean Mitchell continued. He told a story of a combat between Bishop's squadron and Richtofen's in the Great War, when only superb stunt flying saved the German from annihilation. "That is why stunt flying is aided in the army," Dean Mitchell explained.

"Lieut.-Col. Bishop emphasized the safety of modern commercial planes as comparable to motor coaches. It is chiefly the private planes that stunt and discredit aviation."

"I look upon stunt flying as both a help and a hindrance," stated R. W. Angus, professor of Mechanical Engineering. "It shows what a plane can do and one can learn from it things one can't learn any other way, but on the other hand it often ends in the pilot's death. A good many of aviation's best men have been lost that way."

Professor Angus went on to remark that it was pretty difficult to put a ban on anything, including stunt flying. As an example he pointed out that people were prohibited from going over the Falls in a barrel and still it was done. "Yet one feels badly when he considers how many good men are lost trying to do something the plane won't do," he concluded.

Queen's Hall Cuties Blithely Gambol Sport With Onions As They Ramble

Raspberry jam rouge, gobs of lipstick and a liberal sprinkling of flour were the cosmetics applied at the annual initiation, to Queen's Hall freshmen, who failed to obey the no make-up decree of the sophomores.

Another interesting feature of initiating the freshmen into the sacred sect of Queen's Hall was a novelty race—an onion race in which each freshee had to push a Spanish onion from one end of the long dining hall to the other, with her nose.

The skits put on by the first year were of a high quality. A bus ride gave an interesting sight-seeing tour around the campus in which the little red school house, the medical building,

Theft from Science Building

SUSPECT INSIDE JDB

A coat belonging to Miss Alice Chalmers was reported stolen from the Household Science Building yesterday, according to the university police. Miss Alice Chalmers' coat was valued at one hundred and seventy five dollars, being of muskrat and lined with brown silk.

"A man could hardly steal a coat from the second floor of the Household Science Building," stated the police when asked if it was the same gang that operated here last year. The implication was that it was an inside job.

Last year a number of coats were stolen from the university buildings and the culprits were caught and severely punished.

"There is too much piffle published in 'The Varsity,' we don't want any published about us," was the remark of one Simcoe Hall official.

for Publicity

University men are taking a prominent part in the production of the daily newspaper as never before, Hector Charlesworth, editor of "Saturday Night" and noted Canadian journalist, told the University Press Club when it met for luncheon in Hart House yesterday.

"Newspaper editors tell me that the university men that they have on their staffs are a valuable adjunct in their work," he said. "There is now a definite link between the newspaper office and the university."

"Older newspapermen could meet the younger men. While youth could learn from age, in newspaper work the reverse is also true. Age can learn from youth," he said.

Another lucrative field now open to university graduates, he said, was advertising. He spoke of the great growth in the last few decades of the advertising field due to the greatly increased use of display advertising.

"Newspapers should conduct themselves on the basis of a gentlemanly agreement between the journalist and the public," he said, pointing out that the law, while it has a great deal to say regarding what newspapers cannot say regarding what newspapers cannot

FREE LANCE CLUB PLANS PROGRAMME

Plan to Aid Women Students to Obtain Part-Time Employment

MANY POSITIONS OPEN

The university "Free Lance Club" held its first meeting of the year yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union. The meeting took the form of a tea, at which Miss Kilpatrick poured, and an informal discussion of the year's programme. Miss Kilpatrick told the club of her own experience as an undergraduate, when the only opportunity for students to earn money was teaching in the west in the summer.

Now-a-days, however, things are quite different. Opportunities for part time work are open to undergraduates in many different fields. These include coaching, clerical work, home-nursing, office work and even entertaining hostess. The aim of the organization is to form a union whereby the university women who are paying all or part of their own college expenses may gain by the experience of other such women in the university.

The club is, in a sense, an employment bureau. A record is kept of the work each member is capable of doing, and every possible means is used to supply that work. Miss Kilpatrick receives many requests for part time workers.

There are still a few vacancies on the Sports Staff of "The Varsity". All those interested in this work should apply at "The Varsity" office Wednesday and Thursday mornings of this week.

Antique Ford Stars In Hart House Play

Varsity students asked themselves if the original Joe College had appeared in town yesterday when a 1904 Ford was discovered parked in front of Hart House. The ancient vehicle, which will take a stellar role in a play to be produced at Hart House Theatre, arrived in the care of a first-aid expert. According to its escort the machine is equipped with first-class brakes, and is still capable of being utilized for petting and other useful occupations.

It is an all-talking, all-dancing, all-lugging model of what the bow-legged man prefers in transportation de luxe, and will be seen in the production of "Doctor Knock" next week.

JAPANESE REVIVE STUDENTS GROUP

Plans to Promote Interest in Japanese Problems and Affairs

BIBLE GROUP CONDUCTED

Toronto's Japanese students gathered at the School of Missions on Friday last and revived their students' club which has been dormant during the last year or so. There are seven Japanese at Varsity and these, with three of their compatriots outside the university, make up the membership. The first meeting was held principally to discuss future plans and programs. It was agreed to meet on the first Friday of each month. It was also suggested that any others who might be interested in Japan be invited to attend in an effort to develop a better understanding. For study purposes it was decided to join the S. C. M. groups.

Interviewed by "The Varsity" Mr. T. Miumi explained that these seven students are to be found in various faculties—three in medicine, one at S.P.S., one (a lady) at Victoria, and one at Emmanuel. He himself is in Social Science and intends to return to Japan next year.

"Some of these students were born in Canada," he explained, "and speak English even better than they do Japanese. I do not know their intentions but I expect most of them will re-

M'GILL FRESHIES MUST SEE GREEN

Montreal—Despite all rumours to the contrary, the freshettes at McGill University are being initiated this year. It was thought that as the Students' Council had barred hazing the men, the co-eds would follow suit. But, alas, the poor, innocent freshette is not to be allowed to wend her way in peace, but must submit to the indignities thrust upon her by the hard-hearted soph.

At a meeting of the second year students last Monday, ways and means of hazing were discussed and the result of their scheming was made known to their victims after the English II lecture yesterday.

Green goggles were distributed and the freshies ordered to put them on. Nor was this all, they were requested to wear placards on their backs on which is inscribed their names. This is not so much an instrument of torture as a means of making the upperclasswomen and men acquainted with

WOMEN'S RIGHTS!

While the male undergraduates of the University have been engaging in verbal and barrel-stave battles regarding ye ancient rites of Initiation, the women have also been having their little troubles. The insignia of freshmanhood, a coloured tie, though it reveals identity inevitably and noisily, is at least conventional, and universally accepted in these parts. It is a necessary evil, but at least the freshman of one faculty can console themselves that the evil is neither worse nor better in the other faculties, unless indeed it be that yellow is his favourite colour for a tie and his particular college has chosen purple with pink spots.

For many years the first year women have had to endure the wearing of insignia which was far from conventional, that is, inverted berry boxes for hats, odd-mated stockings, green ribbons to be worn in a variety of places—and so on. All this can be borne in the proper spirit of fun, but it is often humiliating in making undue demands on one's so-called pride. Why should the women be denied the comparative comfort which the men enjoy, the conventional comfort which comes from the knowledge that though you are enduring conspicuous treatment, at least all the others are too? Why should they have to suffer misery through the adornment of some grotesque garb first conceived in the dark recesses of a vengeful sophomore's mind?

Last year the Women Students' Administrative Council asked itself these questions, and in big-sisterly fashion, went on record condemning the current practices in initiation insignia. At the same time the Secretary of the Council was asked to send a letter this fall to the leaders of the women's student bodies, suggesting that berets in the college or faculty colours be adopted as sufficient insignia for first year women. The letter was sent—but the resulting co-operation on the whole has been disappointing. For the second time University College crowned its freshmen with red and white caps; St. Michael's indulged in green berets. Otherwise initiation garb (or lack of it, as at St. Hilda's), has gone on as before. Green ribbons around necks and ankles have been worn, and one college residence insisted on its members being let loose with inscribed placards on their backs. One notice warned all and sundry, "No parking here".

Yesterday the Women Students' Administrative Council made a second attempt to provide against further exhibitions of this kind by ruling "that each spring suggestions for initiation plans for the following year be presented to the Council by the incoming sophomores in the colleges, faculties and residences". In this way satisfaction for both the individual and the college can be obtained and the danger of too ridiculous garb be avoided. We commend this interest on the part of the Women's Council and recommend to all future sophomores that they lend full co-operation. It is not that we would increase standardization in this day and age, but in this particular case we feel that mass-production in berets is far more to be desired than the rarest assortment of freshmen in odd stockings.

With the Theatres

EARLY SPRING

Last night at the Standard Theatre we saw almost the longest moving picture we remember. Early Spring is a notable film for several reasons. First, it is a silent success that is drawing 2,500 spectators each evening, although it was produced neither in Hollywood, nor England, nor France, nor Germany, but in Warsaw. More important is the fact that it is the first Polish picture to appear in Toronto. Dialogue throughout is in both English and Polish, but the atmosphere and plot is typically Polish. This is not a great picture, but such a combination of love and hate, luxury and squalor, war, revolution and murder is bound to be of interest. And more interesting than the picture is the reaction on the part of the audience to both the plot and the scenes. The first sight of Warsaw was the occasion for prolonged applause. When the words "Revolution 1917" flashed on the screen a large number in the front of the house clapped vigorously. Whenever one of the spectators recognized a familiar spot in their old home land there were delighted exclamations.

The translation of the titles from the original Polish was accompanied with considerable felicity, though here and there were phrases strange to English ears, but none the less effective through their very oddness. "Voluptuous dizziness", "the revolted mul-" (Continued on Page 4)

CHAMPUS CAT

The Women's Union officials have refused to give "The Varsity" any information whatsoever on the subject of the number of baths at 79 St. George St.

C—C

What does this official silence mean? Are we led to believe that there are no baths at the said residence? That is the natural conclusion at any rate.

C—C

What is the University going to do about this? Do the people of the province know that they are sending their children to be educated in places which lack modern conveniences?

C—C

Think of a score of co-eds all having to take their baths within one hour in an alien tub after tracking through snow across bleak, windswept thoroughfares! How many would have to get into a tub at once? About four!

C—C

Imagine trying to bathe properly with three others splashing around with you at the same time in one tub! Ridiculous. And the terrible tangle, my dear, complicated with the plug chain. Whose back was that I washed?

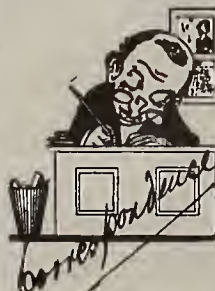

C—C

The situation has become so acute, it is said, that many co-eds are forced to go home to bathe over the weekend.

C—C

do, says nothing about the rights that a newspaper has in the matter of demanding information and the voicing of opinion by public men.

As usual the Press Club speaker was bombarded with questions on the newspaper profession at the close of his address. He gave it as his opinion that newspapers were growing more and more fair during political campaigns and that the writing of political news was as a rule fair rather than unfair.

"Talkies have forced managers to do something more significant," said Mr. Charlesworth, in discussing recent changes in the theatre.

He said that a dramatic critic had perfect freedom in expressing his opinions regarding the merits of productions. There was no fear of the cancelling of advertising because of adverse show write-ups, as "the theatre man needs advertising just as the patent medicine man needs advertisement," he said.

James Bowes, the president of the University Press Club, was in the chair and introduced the speaker.

STRING QUARTET MUSIC

HAS GROWING IMPORTANCE

Dr. Ernest MacMillan, Principal of Toronto Conservatory Believes

it Necessary

An Antidote to Certain Modern

Tendencies

"It seems more than likely that a string quartet may soon be considered a necessary adjunct to the musical life of every community which is culturally minded. Education must always remind us that the finest things come after much labour, and the school must act as a brake to certain modern shallow and unsound tendencies.

The trend towards a wider cultivation of the ensemble art is one which appeals to any club, college or organization dedicated to the advancement of musical taste, and which aims at moulding musical opinion of its community into those channels which experience has shown to be of lasting worth. It is easy to see, therefore, why these groups should sponsor ensemble concerts; for quartet music is the antithesis of certain modern tendencies. It avoids the sensational, it does not seek to startle, but it puts before the listener and player a mirror of thought expressed in one of the most perfect of mediums, and with the minimum of rhetoric and a complete absence of bombast. It is, in short, an antidote to a phrase of modernism in which all indulge, but which many regard with distrust."

Dr. MacMillan has appeared on several occasions with the Hart House String Quartet, the most recent one taking place in Montreal, where they played the Franck Quintet.

The forthcoming series of concerts in Convocation Hall specially arranged for undergraduates of the University of Toronto by the Hart House Quartet is an event that should not be overlooked. (adv.)

Lesson in English Composition

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

This comes by way of assurance for "anyone who has ever tried to find a secluded spot in which to park by night for the purpose of tender whisperings and amorous maseries". If the city undertook to dislodge all the cars lined up in High Park for the aforementioned purpose, it would be necessary to double the police force. Cars of every description continue to slip silently into the parking stalls considerably supplied. There is no evidence of the city policemen making determined efforts to stamp out "vicious immorality" by speeding the joy-riders on their way. Isn't it platitudinous to talk about the Sex Uge being the cause of Parked Petting? In fact aren't University students weary of having the subject dragged in at every possible juncture?

Granted that petting in darkened cars is unhealthy—why bring in the police? Can one combat that sort of thing by policemen? And anyway the campus of the University is NOT the last stronghold of the parked petter as you so dramatically phrase it.

The Editorial Column of Friday, October 17 seems to suggest that possible subjects were woefully lacking. Seven-eighths of the material is irrelevant, silly or untrue. Then, too, the style fails to justify the presence of the article. One expects that sort of thing in the Champus Cat—"that all the hounds of hell could not bay more hotly on the scent than the city police in their effort to stop the furtive embrace". This example of a cross between an imitation of Dr. Swift and cheap journalism is too obviously an attempt to be clever or humorous. Doesn't an editor usually pride himself on the clear, concise expressing of a worth-while idea?

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Richardson Stadium at Queen's University will be much in the spotlight this Friday and Saturday. Friday will witness the annual Intercollegiate track meet between Queen's, Varsity and McGill, while the following day will decide the top team in the Intercollegiate Rugby Union.

Varsity and McGill will fight it out for the track title and from the results hung up at the McGill meet last Friday, Varsity is going to have as tough a proposition in holding the championship as she had in winning it from McGill last year.

With the exception of four events out of fourteen, McGill athletes made better results than those of the recent Interfaculty meet, ten events being in favour of the Red team, two were a tie, while Varsity were ahead in two. One record fell in the McGill meet, while one was equalled. In the javelin throw Cummings threw the spear 154 ft. 4 7-8 ins., to set a new record. In the 220 yard dash, Bourdeau stepped it in 22 2-5 secs., tying the existing mark.

Varsity's time was better in the mile by 6 1-5 secs., and in the 220 low hurdles by 3-5 secs. The pole vault and the 440 yard dash were the same. In the 120 high hurdles McGill's time was 1 sec. better, in the broad jump, 8 7-10 inches, in the javelin, 13 ft. 8 5-8 ins., and 11 3-5 secs. in the three miles. In the other events McGill's margin was very little.

St. Michael's College appears to be headed for the Interfaculty title and the Mulock Cup. Yesterday they handed Knox one of the worst drubbings ever witnessed in Interfaculty rugby. The score was 71-0.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Basketball players in the various colleges are enthusiastic over prospects for the coming season. The executive of the basketball club are meeting some time this week to arrange a schedule and in all probability games will begin the week of November 1st.

Interfaculty teams are often criticized for their lack of smoothness and for their inaccurate shooting. The shortness of the time for practice is undoubtedly the cause of this. With any except players of outstanding ability, most coaches find that they are handicapped by a real ignorance of some of the most elementary rules and their first concern is to eliminate these obvious errors. By the time this is done, the season is upon them and there is not time to lay sufficient stress upon signal plays.

However, in spite of this handicap, some real teams have been produced in the interfaculty series. The University College Juniors of two years ago were such a team. On that outfit, however, were four players who were later to make good in intercollegiate competition, Wilma Hazlitt, captain of Varsity seniors in 1929 and 1930; Louise Crouch, Jean Allen and Betty Thomas.

This year St. Hilda's are favourites to repeat their success of last year. With eight of their former team back, Coach Athol Wesley will be able to go right ahead with plays. Just at present she is anxious to find a guard, as the principal weakness of the team is their defence.

University College seniors, too, are getting off to a good start. They are fortunate in having three intercollegiate players, Wilma Hazlitt, Louise Crouch and Jean Allen, and though the turn-out otherwise has not been encouraging, Coach Edith Blackwell is confident that she will be able to round out a team which will give anyone a good battle.

SAINTS TRIM KNOX IN MULOCK MATCH

St. Mike's Give Opponents Terrible Lacing to Win by 71-0

KNOXMEN OUTCLASSED

St. Mike's handed Knox a terrible lacing to the tune of 71-0 in one of yesterday's Mulock Cup features. From the first few minutes on the final result was apparent. St. Mike's were all over the opposition in every play and looked like a pretty powerful machine, while the Knoxmen were ragged and very much below their standard of other years.

In the first half the winners piled up 42 points and earned them on the play. Individually and collectively, the Knoxmen were outclassed, but they tried hard throughout the game. In the third and fourth sessions this never say die spirit had some effect in keeping the score down. St. Mike's slowed down a bit and were kept from running wild to the same extent as in the early part of the game.

The winners teamed up well and all looked pretty good. Sheehy at centre half and Burns at quarter were outstanding. For Knox, Cuthbertson turned in a good game.

A regrettable accident occurred when Rayner of Knox was put out of the game by a kick on the thigh. St. Mike's—Snap, Harrison; insides, White, Warren; middles, Hyde, Cameron; outsides, Keele, Whalen; quarter, Burns; flying wing, Nolan; halves, Schmidt, Sheehy, Cerre; subs, Calderone, Ryan, Bell, Lacey, Farant, Cavanaugh.

Knox—Snap, McDermott; insides, Hamilton, Stevenson; middles, Davidson, Lowry; outsides, Roe, Bullock; quarter, Cuthbertson; flying wing, Neilson; halves, Myers, Milligan, Rayner; subs, J. Ritchie, D. Ritchie, E. Adie.

S.P.S. SENIOR TEAM DEFEATS DENTS 6-3

School Shows Most Decided Superiority Throughout Entire Game

END RUNS STAND OUT

Senior School defeated Dents 6-3 in the Mulock Cup fixture yesterday on the back campus. They showed a decided advantage throughout and deserved the victory. S.P.S. kicked off and immediately began to force the play. After repeated end runs and plunges through the line, School moved the play into Dents' territory. A fumble of one of Ah Jansen's kicks gave S.P.S. the ball on Dents' 15 yard line. Jansen kicked again for the first point of the game.

Moving the yard sticks three times by plunges the School again forced Dents back and then went over for a touchdown. Dents fought back in the second period and had their turn at forcing the play. They were rewarded by two points, both secured by Eddie Sinclair's kicking. The first half ended with the score 6 to 2 for Senior School. In the second half play was much closer and the teams took turns on the offensive. Sinclair's long hoists earned Dents another single in the last period, leaving the final score, Sr. School 6, Dents 3.

Dents—Flying wings, Peterson and Oliver; halves, E. Sinclair and Conn; quarter, Simpson; snap, Pepper; insides, Merritt and Wyllie; middles, Wachna and Gibson; outsides, Campbell and Kahn; subs, Milne, Cooke and Hudson.

Sr. S.P.S.—Flying wings, Howe and Jones; halves, A. Jansen and V. Jansen; quarter, Wood; snap, Fotheringham; insides, Styles and Dewar; middles, Montgomery and Campbell; outsides, Vigers and Switzer; subs, Parks, Brennenman, Anderson, Ziemann, Bond

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE MEET WON BY BOB DENNIS

Amid most unfavorable weather the University College track meet was held at the Stadium yesterday afternoon. Bob Dennis won the individual championship by amassing a total of 23 points. Ralph Standish was second with 16 and Lloyd Greer, a frosh, was third with 15. All the events were hotly contested and in one event the mile run, the University champion, Don Smith, failed to live up to expectations when he was defeated by Jack Vila. The results are as follows:

100 yards—1, R. Standish; 2, O. Brooke; 3, F. F. Greer.

220 yards—1, R. Standish; 2, O. Brooke; 3, F. F. Greer.

440 yards—1, R. Standish; 2, F. Peart; 3, C. Burnet.

880 yards—1, Don Smith; 2, F. Peart; 3, J. Vila.

One mile—1, J. Vila; 2, D. Smith; 3, F. Peart.

Three mile—1, F. Peart; 2, D. Smith; 3, C. Burnet.

"Hugh Canthys Fellaby?" Everyone Cries "No Gnus is Good Gnus," the Echo Replies

By Hugh Canthys Fellaby

Interviews, interviews! Seems like life is just one damn chat after another! Already to-day we've interviewed Auntie Vivian Section regarding the strange lack of opposition to vaccination. We found Auntie prostrated with a splendid attack of smallpox. The smallest pox we've ever seen, too! We swatted millions of them little rascals, but they hid everywhere—beneath the bed, in our pockets—scampering hither and thither with the agility of antelopes. Which reminds us of the antelope's remark when she heard that all the gnus had left the country. "No gnus is good news!" she exclaimed on being interviewed. Hopping direct from Auntie to Trinity we asked Terry Crosthwait just what was the object of this Purty League of his. "That reminds me," he replied, "of the story of the travelling snailman and the former's daughter." "The former!" we ejaculated, "you've only mentioned one so far." "Why, I never mentioned any so far!" he punned exuberantly. "Well, you'd better!" we countered with fiendish glee. And so we got around to S.P.S.—we forget just how—probably by the Library. "You boys sure made haze while the moon shone!" we opened wittily. "Happy haze is here again!" was his instantaneous reply, so we started off for Victoria, barely avoiding three skittish curyhmies, and thus meeting Babayaya-plush, an old Afghan rug-merchant who used to be in first year Religious Economy with us. In the course of his itinerary, he informed us, he had called at 79 St. George St. "No," he was told, "we don't need a bath-mat." Well, draw your own conclusions, Munificent prizes will be given for the best drawings, if they are fit to reproduce. Fitness to reproduce—that is the crying need of the age! Oh, you Jennix!

the newcomers. The Frosh are to carry cushions and when the sophomores blow their whistles once, they must kneel and salaam, at two whistles they rise and leave the exalted presence.

This year any one who does not follow orders will be penalized and though the nature of the penalty was not made known, it was hinted that it would be "dire and embarrassing". In other years, the disobedient would be fined, but it was thought that this would not be severe enough. The difficulty of penalizing the right person lies in the fact that it is sometimes very difficult to distinguish between the freshies and upperclassmen in these days, when freshies do not look green and bewildered.

others, which I have not time to tell you."

Mr. Carlisle admired to a great degree Professor Macdonald's article, but stated that he did not think that the writer did O.C.E. complete justice. When reminded that Professor Macdonald had at one time been on the Faculty of Education at Queen's University, Mr. Carlisle stated that it was about ten years ago that the Faculty of Education was abolished. "Since that time," said Mr. Carlisle, "much has been done in the way of improvement of methods of teaching."

Agreeing with Professor Macdonald's opinion that the social standing of the teacher had fallen in regard to the attitude taken twenty-five years ago, Mr. Carlisle said, "Although the teacher of to-day has lost the prestige of years ago, he has put something else instead of it that is quite as good. The teacher is now more of a human factor in the community. He is not so much the oracle." Mr. Carlisle expressed the same belief as Prof. Macdonald that the fact that a man in business would be better off financially after ten years than a man who had entered teaching upon graduation, helped to deter university graduates from taking up teaching.

Professor Macdonald had stated there was a danger of too much time being spent in the study of matter. Mr. Carlisle, when questioned, answered, "Refresher courses are necessary, but are never over emphasized. Matter is never dissociated from method."

titudes give vent to their anger over the satraps of the Czar, "Mother loved me with all her soul", "Have we not so much endeared you to ourselves?" "In a quiet and small mansion", "a breach was completed in my soul"; these do not sound like the titles of the old silent pictures.

Somehow it seems strange to watch a vivacious young lady greet the handsome hero like this: "Sir, you are undoubtedly welcome. I will show you, sir, into the guest chamber."

This is the story of Czarus Baryka, who is but a boy when war breaks out in 1917. In a few years he sees his mother killed in the horrors of revolution, feels all the pangs of hunger and desolation, watches his father die, fights through the Polish-Russian war of 1920, and finally makes his home with rich Polish friends. At this point the real story begins, the story of passionate love, jealousy, poison, and luxury that first wearies and then disgusts the man who is already contemptuous of revolution and blood.

Though he is called "Peace-Maker", "Patriot", and "Coward", all three terms of contempt, he foresees a future Poland to be built only through hard work and patience, and resisting a temptation to suicide, determines to live for Poland.

The hero is young and handsome and three women fall in love with him at once. The story of his tempestuous intrigues is involved and very un-American.

The acting throughout is good, with the young man in the hero's part the outstanding star. The photography is sometimes commonplace, but often striking in the extreme.

The picture closes a three day run to-day with performances at 6.30 and 9.00 p.m.

main in Canada, although one young lady, I believe, intends to return to Japan to teach."

Mr. Mikawa, of third year Emanuel, when questioned by "The Varsity", stated that there were about seventy or eighty Japanese in Toronto, about half of whom were working men, machinists and the like, the rest being business men and students. He conducts a Bible study group among them each Sunday in a downtown residence. About ten of these are professing Christians and most of the others show a keen interest in Biblical teaching.

Among the business men are a number of well-to-do dealers. One of them, Mr. Ubukata, has contributed generously to the interests of Japanese students in this university.

MAY FORCE 'VARSITY' TO CEASE PUBLICATION

Humor Sheet to Supplant 'Varsity'?

AMERICAN MERCHANT SEEKS TO PUBLISH VARSITY SCANDAL

Publication Would be Free From Control of Authorities

HINDERED BY 'THE VARSITY'

Underwear Dealer Would Bring American College Humour to Toronto Campus

Sources made available to "The Varsity" last night revealed that a Pittsburgh underwear manufacturer, who has been interested in two humorous college publications in the United States, has been in Toronto within the past month and considered the possibility of establishing a humorous and sporting bi-weekly magazine. It would be designed to attract all Canadian undergraduates, but produced chiefly for and by students of the University of Toronto.

He is said to have abandoned the idea because of the hold "The Varsity" had on local advertisers, but to have expressed a willingness to back such a venture if the undergraduate daily lost at any time, the confidence of Canadian business men.

The proposed publication, to be financed by advertising, would be edited off the campus by local students who would be at entire liberty to write on any subject that would interest Toronto students as a whole. No serious news, dramatic criticism or editorials would be carried, though the magazine would welcome what he called "bit-kids of local scandal".

The magazine would depend for material chiefly on syndicate jokes, drawings, and stories from similar American publications.

It has been frequently rumoured that some University magazine to replace The Gobbins would be established in Toronto. Most American colleges have their humorous weekly papers. Many of these have come more or less persistently under the ban of college authorities. Such difficulties would be avoided in Toronto by keeping the magazine off the campus and away from the control of the university authorities.

The whole scheme dropped for the present, is expected to revive if any change in the status of "The Varsity" in the university occurs.

PASS COURSE CHANGES WILL AFFECT SCIENCE

Failures in First Year Pass Must Obtain Honour Matriculation

The change in the Pass Course in the Faculty of Arts will affect Householder Science first year Pass students. Those who fail, must complete their Honour Matriculation at a high school. The number of supplementals allowed to each student has not yet been decided by either Faculty.

University College has grown to such an extent that it is finding difficulty in accommodating its own students, without the additional influx of first year Pass students from Householder Science. That is the reason for the formation of a separate Faculty, beginning with the class of 1934.

Band Practice

Members of the Varsity band are reminded that it will be necessary for everyone to be present at the last practice before the Queen's game. The practice is being held at 5.50 p.m. this afternoon. This applies particularly to those planning to go to Kingston for the Queen's-Varsity game. A good showing is desired by Bandmaster Algie, as this is the first trip out of town for this season. The band made its first appearance since its organization this year at the Varsity-Western intercollegiate rugby game last week.

VIC DOES NOT COMPLAIN

"My knees are still rather sore," remarked one freshette from Hutton House, when asked to comment on the letter published in yesterday's issue of "The Varsity", which stated that the first year women of the university were molested and ill-treated.

"We had to curtsy and say, 'Most worthy sophomore', when we met a second year girl on the campus or any other public place, and if there were two or more in the group we bowed as many times as there were sophomores," she continued. "We even had to bow to some men on St. George St., while the sophomores looked on and enjoyed the performance."

At this juncture she was interrupted by the entrance of the Don, Miss I. M. Biss. The grievances all disappeared in her presence and the girls (Continued on Page 4)

Schoolmen Are Not So Bad—Really Quite Polite at Times

WOMEN LOYAL

"School men aren't all like their reputation," Melba Greer, second year Chemical Engineering, informed "The Varsity". "They are really quite polite at classes and I like both the course and the faculty very much. I even enjoyed the soph-frosh banquet last year."

Miss Greer is the only girl in engineering, although there are three other women in S.P.S., the others being in architecture. There are about 850 registered in the faculty, the largest year yet. All the women professed loyalty to their faculty, in spite of the predominance of "he-men". "I would rather not be quoted for fear of being tapped," said one of the S.P.S. co-eds, who was interviewed. "It wouldn't matter whether the remarks were favourable or not, anyone who is quoted in 'The Varsity' gets tapped."

"The boys are really quite nice and not half so bad as they're cracked up to be," said Phil Cook, first year architecture. "The first five days were awful, but now I like it very much."

PUBLICITY GIVEN PETTING PRODUCES USEFUL RESTRAINT

Students Do Not Think "The Varsity" Prints Piffle

GOOD FERTILIZER

The majority of students interviewed yesterday do not agree with the Simeoe Hall official who stated that there was too much piffle published in "The Varsity". Most of them were well satisfied with "The Varsity" considering the opposition to be contended with.

J. Robb, II U.C., is of the opinion that such things as the S.P.S. initiations should not be exposed. L. M. Goldenberg, III Medicine, thinks that the publicity given to the above, and also to such as petting, coat-lifting, and so on, has a useful restraining influence and that all in all it is a very good publication.

W. Krehn, I U.C., says "It is uncommonly full of hot air; amusing, but empty."

A. Greerson, II U.C.: "The Varsity" is on the whole a very sound publication and is entirely in keeping with the university atmosphere."

V. O. D. King, V Medicine: "Sometimes they make too much of trifling incidents."

F. S. Nishikawa, VI Medicine: "The Varsity" exposes too much of the dark side of undergraduate life, and makes too much of small things."

N. Caswell, III Victoria: "I have been reading 'The Varsity' every day and I consider it is giving us the news that most of us want."

Colin N. James, I U.C., assistant secretary of the U.C. Lit.: "The only piffle published is that concerning Simeoe Hall."

C. B. Macpherson, treasurer of the same society: "I refuse to make any statement to such a rag."

Peter Coyle, I U.C.: "Too much hammering on such subjects as petting."

N. Elliott Dunn, V Medicine: "The reading matter would make fine fertilizer."

E. T. Nash, V Medicine: "No, there is not too much piffle. The editorials are amusing and so is the correspondence."

K. Pratt, VI Medicine: "A fine medium for the editor's excess energy."

J. W. Burgess, I S.P.S.: "I am quite satisfied with 'The Varsity' as it is."

FALL DANCE AT U. C. STALELY AFFAIR

Characterized by an atmosphere both colourful and stately, under the softly shaded lights of the Crystal Ball Room, the leading social event of the autumn season for University College, the Fall Dance, was held in the King Edward Hotel last evening.

An excellent buffet supper was served in the course of the evening. An added feature of the supper hour was a humorous musical skit by three University College men.

The event was held under the patronage of Mrs. M. W. Wallace, Mrs. C. N. Cochrane and Mrs. N. A. MacKenzie. The committee responsible for the success of the evening included W. F. Arnold, chairman; J. G. Garden, and F. C. Barton.

VANDAL ORCHESTRA MISAPPROPRIATES 'BLUE AND WHITE'

University Song is Dedicated to Maple Leaf Hockey Club by Ronnie Hart

UNOERGRAUATE PROTESTS

No Acknowledgement is Made for Radio Piracy of Song.

That "The Varsity's" protests against repeated misuse of the University song, "The Blue and White", are expressive of undergraduate opinion is borne out by the following letter received yesterday from a third year student:

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I have no desire to stir up once more controversies which you may wish to consider closed, nor do I wish to be regarded as an agitator. Nevertheless, I am compelled to bring to your attention a further degradation of our University song, and this misuse is the more invidious because it took place locally.

Last night as I sat with a group of friends listening to a popular Toronto orchestra over the air we were suddenly astounded, angered and aroused by the following announcement:

"Ronnie Hart and his band will now play 'The Blue and White', a number made popular in Toronto by Ronnie Hart. This piece is dedicated to the Maple Leaf Hockey Club, who we understand are listening in to-night."

Not only was an incorrect title given out to the unsuspecting public, but no mention was made whatsoever of the University of Toronto, no acknowledgement, no apology, simply a clear case of misappropriation. And dedication.

STATE SOCIALISM TENDENCY OF AGE

Provincial Secretary Addresses Macdonald - Cartier Club

SPEAKS ON PRISON REFORM

What the Province of Ontario is doing in the way of discouraging crime and setting offenders on the way to the straight and narrow path was outlined when Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Provincial Secretary, spoke to the Macdonald-Cartier Club in Hart House last night.

"Whether you like it or not, the tendency of the age is toward state socialism," he said, pointing out that more and more the government was looked to to take the place of the home, church and school, in taking care of the citizens, regulating their conduct and in solving the economic and social problems evolving from modern conditions.

The need in dealing with crime conditions, he said, was not so much to punish offenders, but to improve the means of preventing crime. To this end, police, courts and penal institutions in the province were working.

Basing his remarks on the report of the Ross Commission on Ontario prison conditions, Mr. Macaulay spoke of the need of increased segregation (Continued on Page 2)

BOARD OF GOVERNORS THREATENS TO CUT OFF FINANCIAL BACKING

Since the Governors Cannot Dictate to "The Varsity" the Board Wants to Gag Medium of Student Opinion

JOINT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETS BOARD TO-DAY

Muzzled Paper May be Substituted for Free Publication by Installation of School of Journalism by Extension Department

An attempt to force "The Varsity" to discontinue publication is to be made by the Board of Governors within the next month, according to information received by "The Varsity" last night. The Board is planning to withdraw its support from the University newspaper and to refuse to allow the allotment of a portion of the S.A.C. fee to pay its expenses. If the proposed action of the Board becomes effective, it is suggested that it may be impossible for "The Varsity" to continue publication. It is understood that the Board is dissatisfied with the present system under which the paper is being run, as the Governors are now unable to dictate to "The Varsity" what news and editorial matter shall be run by its columns.

FRESHMEN EMERGE UNHURT FROM MEDS

Revelling Students Commandeer Cars of Bewildered Motorists

SPIRIT OF CAMERADERIE

Barrels, staves, castor oil and paint were the main characteristics of the Meds initiation at Little Vic Rink last night. The physical part of the initiation took place inside the building where freshmen crawled through innumerable barrels, assisted by members of the other years and went through the other devices to test new students.

Skulls and crossbones done in red on chest and back were the main artistic features as the frosh once more appeared in the light. They presented a dishevelled but cheerful appearance as in a body they were marched across towards Queen's Hall, where they serenaded lustily with "The Blue and White" and Med and Varsity yells.

A few Burwash Hall men watched proceedings from the other side of Charles Street, but did not approach nearer. No guard was kept on the door and anyone could see the proceedings who had courage enough.

The freshmen themselves did not mind the initiation at all and were quite cheerful as they merrily blocked traffic on University Avenue and Hoskin. Automobiles were commandeered and six or seven students climbed on the roof of each passing car. In five minutes traffic was blocked as sophs and frosh alike bewildered sedate drivers with their antics.

The consensus of opinion was that although the initiation was rather tame the freshmen had come through with flying colours. Two of the university police force were present in plainclothes and watched proceedings. Sergeant Darcy said that he had come on his own book and nothing out of the way took place that he could see.

In a spirit of cameraderie the initiation concluded at Hart House in a sing-song and cats, where lowly frosh up to sixth year men, seemed on equal terms.

W. J. Dunlop, director of extension and publicity, told the press yesterday that a committee has already been appointed to take the question up with the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils, and that definite action may be expected as soon as T. A. Russell, a member of the Board of Governors, returns to the city.

On the advice of the Board, the Joint Executive has also appointed a committee to meet the Governors' committee, consisting of the following members: A. G. Burns, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., and business manager of "The Varsity", who is a graduate member of the Executive, appointed by the Board of Governors; Mel Kenny, this year's president of the S.A.C., and also a graduate; D. B. Murray, president of the University College Literary and Athletic Society; Bert Tyson, president of the Engineering Society, and Jean Robertson, a member of the Women's S.A.C.

Under the present system, the Joint Executive has direct control over university publications, including "The Varsity", and a portion of the S.A.C. fee, paid by all undergraduates in the university, is used for the upkeep of these publications. It is said to be the intention of the Board of Governors to force the Joint Executive to discontinue the allotment of "The Varsity's" share of the fee.

In some circles it is regarded as probable that the Department of University Extension will seize the present moment to establish a school of journalism in the university. It is understood that the organization of such a school has been under consideration for some time.

As in certain American colleges, the school of journalism would be expected to have complete charge of the university paper and it is claimed that those favouring the organization of a course of this kind consider the present as a time when the S. A. C. might be persuaded to hand over the management of "The Varsity". It is widely known that most practical newspaper men frankly despise schools of journalism.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23rd, 1930

OUR STAND

The time has come when the members of the Board of Governors must place on record for all time whether they are men of the world or atrophied relics of mid-Victorianism.

To-day a committee of the Students' Administrative Council will appear before the Governors to make a report on the undergraduate newspaper. What the committee will say, or what its attitude will be, "The Varsity" does not know. But what "The Varsity" does know is that now is the moment for the final decision on the question which has been agitating the campus for several years.

The issue is clear. No matter what attempts have been made or what contingencies have arisen to beloud it, the question is one of freedom of expression. Is the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto willing to lend its support to a publication in which any and all members of the undergraduate body of this University are free to express their varied opinions on matters of pertinence to them? Or does the Board of Governors intend to kill this publication and permit to rise in its place a host of independent periodicals, financed by outside monies, and loyal to no interests save those of the Almighty Dollar and the Main Chance?

That there are officials within the precincts of this University who would be only too delighted to see "The Varsity" bound and gagged and cast into outer darkness, no person who has followed recent developments on and about the campus can doubt. These officials have been irked by pointed references in the undergraduate paper about the muzzling of our first-class minds by our third-class bureaucrats; their prudish souls have been outraged by the printing of lively and readable news in the place of dull, official bulletins; they have been unpleasantly roused from their lethargic slumbers by "The Varsity's" insistent demands for constitutional reform in the S.A.C. so as to make student government a reality instead of the empty mockery it has become. And they are out for blood.

It will be up to the Board of Governors to decide whether they value more highly the insidious machinations of this handful of salary-drawers or the almost unanimous opinion of the student body whose welfare the Governors have always avowed to be their chief consideration. Although there have been some quite recent attempts to place "The Varsity" in a disadvantageous position, we are firmly convinced that a systematic investigation during the next few days will convince the most ardent sceptic that the undergraduates of this University are willing to back "The Varsity" when it comes to a crisis and that they not only desire it to continue publication in the years to come, but that they desire it to remain a truly undergraduate publication, free from the pressure of the official thumb.

We who are young and enthusiastic, may make occasional faux pas. But is it possible that the Board of Governors is less willing to overlook the faux pas of the young and enthusiastic than the discreet mildew of the aged and lugubrious?

One of the prime considerations before the Governors will be, so we are going to be told, the reputation of the University of Toronto. If we may be permitted an opinion on so delicate a point, we would suggest that it might be a more unfortunate thing for the good name of the University of Toronto if the Board of Governors of that University took deliberate steps to force an end to the publication of the only organ of honest opinion representing the student body as a whole. It may be quite possible that the Board of Governors would find the game not worth the candle if their own action reduced them to the ambiguous position of having no legitimate defense for the suspicions of those on the outside who will say that the only reason for such an action is the fear of the truth.

cated to the Maple Leaf Hockey Club indeed!

Mr. Editor, it is time that the University acquired a pride in its institutions, when no resentment is aroused by such flagrant flouting of all our finest sentiments. As the organ of public opinion on the campus, this letter is addressed to your paper, which at least has never been accused of inaction when the prestige of the University of Toronto was at stake.

Yours truly,

J. D. A., 3T2.

The report of the S.A.C. committee appointed to investigate the rights of that body over the student song is expected to give its report at the meeting of the Men's S.A.C. on Friday.

Art, Music and Drama

H. C. Players' Guild

Gertrude Robbins, an actress herself, has written two plays. Yesterday afternoon the Players' Guild took one of them, Makeshifts, and after proving they understood the piece, failed to take advantage of the possibilities presented, because none of the players seemed sure of their lines.

This is a simple and thoughtful little study of the drab lives of two girls, one a teacher and the other a housekeeper. Obvious hesitation, constant prompting, and gagging, no matter how clever, have no place in a play that depends for success upon absolute smoothness of execution. Rhoda Howe and Ruth Haldenby, as the sisters, only failed to keep the entire interest of the house because they let the line drag. Howard Lindsay speeded up the action, but was perhaps inclined to jazz his part too much. This may have been due to the amount of improvisation he found necessary. Selwyn Dewdney, the last of the four players, was perhaps the most satisfactory, though he had but a few lines. Perhaps his make-up was too young. We rather pictured Mr. Thompson as an anaemic young man of thirty, not as an awkward boy of fifteen.

This was a good offering for the Guild and was well directed except for one or two uncovered crossings, and the tendency of the whole play to drag more than the mood required.

Watchman (leaning into parked car): "Hey you! What's going on in there?"
Young Man: "Oh, nothing to speak of."

Watchman: "Well, I don't want to interfere with your personal affairs, but don't you think it is getting too cold for this sort of thing?"

Young Man (sneezes): "Kurgheul! Yes, now you come to mention it, it does seem rather chilly to-night, doesn't it? I believe I'm catching cold. Kageight—G—cheugh!"

W.M.: "You want to be careful, young fella, my wife's sister caught a cold the same way last fall and—"

Y.M.: "Kascheught! Esheugh! A-Kitchew!"

W.M.: "Hey, can't you even stop while I'm talking to you?"

Y.M.: "I beg your pardon. What were you saying about your sister's wife?"

W.M.: "Oh, yes, to resume. Did I say it was my sister Mary?"

Y.M.: "I don't know. Do you happen to have a sister Gladys?"

W.M.: "Why, yes."

Y.M.: "Well, she will do."

W.M.: "Gladys takes after father. As a matter of fact I am rather good looking on my father's side. He was Polish, you know, very polished and cultured too. In fact the doctors took a number of cultures from him. They thought it was distemper. But he died of Phthisis. That's why I lisp. I have been trying all my life to pronounce it."

Y.M.: "They say that those correspondence courses help you overcome that. They laughed when I sat down on the mouth organ. It cured my drooling too."

W.M.: "I must try it sometime. Good bye. Here comes my wife."

PUBLIC HEALTH GETS SEAT

Women's Debating Union Asks S. A. C. for Financial Aid

At their first meeting of the year, held this week, the Women's Students' Administrative Council went on record as eager to co-operate in every way possible with the committee which is studying possibilities for the long-dreamed-of Women's Building. The Council also expressed appreciation of the work done by the committee so far. It was unanimously agreed to admit a representative from the Public Health Nurses' Course to sit on the Women's Council and enjoy its privileges. No vote, however, can yet be granted them for their registration has not yet reached the required fifty.

Apparently it has been the custom of the Women's Debating Union to rely each year on the Council for partial financial help. Plans for making the Union more completely dependent on the Council were outvoted, though a motion was passed, stating that an itemized budget of the Debating Union expenses should be tendered Miss Parkes, Secretary of the Council, at the beginning of each year.

A recommendation to the committee on investigation into the constitution of the Joint Executive and the Administrative Councils, was passed, suggesting that there be proportional representation from each college or faculty, but not in such a way that any college or faculty would have an overwhelming majority.

in Ontario jails where first offenders and hardened criminals, mental defectives and men perhaps innocent, though awaiting trial are herded together. Another need of the jails was occupation for the inmates.

After speaking on the work in the reformatories, both at Guelph, where men appearing to be reformable are sent and taught trades, and at Burwash, where more callous offenders are sent for a regime of wood chopping, Mr. Macaulay paid tribute to the work the Ontario Parole Boards were doing. He said that less than five per cent. of men granted parole at the end of a determinate sentence ever returned to Ontario institutions. The system by which prisoners were allowed to take positions outside of institutions under the care of a citizen who employed them and have their earnings sent to their dependants, also worked out well, he said.

Lou Golden, president of the MacDonald-Carter Club, was in the chair and introduced the speaker.

Seniors at Franklin and Marshall College voted Greta Garbo as the class sweetheart. The vote was almost unanimous.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TRACK & FIELD MEET TO-DAY IN KINGSTON

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Although it is a trifle early to begin talking of swimming meets, some enterprising co-eds don't seem to think it is a bit too early to begin practicing for them. Every day there are many enthusiasts making use of the Lillian Massey tank and among them are some who show considerable promise. Especially in the diving an improvement is noticeable. In former years it has been in this branch of the sport that University girls appeared weakest, there being about five who could really dive, the rest being mediocre. If enthusiasm keeps up there should be many records broken at the interfaculties meet in the spring.

Badminton also is coming in for its share of popularity. Two years ago, a badminton club was organized at University College, and quite a few girls made use of the court which was set up in the auditorium of the Women's Union. There is some talk of organizing a similar club at St. Michael's since some of the freshies are quite enthusiastic.

Baseball at Victoria received a severe set-back when it became known that Daisy Quance, who has pitched for the Red and Gold for the past two years, will be unable to play owing to ill-health. This will certainly reduce the chances of Vic in the interfaculties league since Miss Quance has been one of their most reliable players in the past.

INTEND ORGANIZATION OF VICTORIA ORCHESTRA

Yesterday afternoon a group of young people interested in the formation of a Victoria College orchestra gathered in Annesley Hall common room and were served tea by Miss M. G. T. Addison, enthusiastic patron of the organization. Plans for the coming year were discussed and those present promised to bring to the first rehearsal next Wednesday evening any others wishing to join.

INJURED S.M.C. BOYS MEET BLUE THIRDS IN TO-DAY'S BATTLE

Teams Meet for Third Time To-day — Varsity Won First Two

STRENUOUS WORKOUTS

Coach Harry Bales Predicts Another Win for Blue and White

Varsity juniors will meet St. Michael's College for the third time to-day in the local group of the intercollegiate Union. The blue team romped off with the first two fixtures by a substantial margin, and judging by the pessimistic attitude of the Bay St. boys, should win the group honours in to-day's contest. Workouts which have lasted until long after dark, and strenuous scrimmages against the Intermediates have put Harry Bales' undefeated youngsters right on edge, and though they are making no rash promises, they expect to win this afternoon in a decisive fashion. The game was scheduled for yesterday but St. Mike's inability to field a team forced a postponement.

Manager Jerry McGoeys has had one tough break after another with his S.M.C. junior squad, and the string of injuries would have disheartened the best of teams. However, St. Mike's will undoubtedly field a team that will be battling from the opening whistle, and with the crowd of rabid supporters which always turn out to shout for their Double Blue squads, Varsity are assured of a ding-dong struggle.

Varsity's junior hopes have been working very smoothly of late, especially on the half line, where Leachman and Arnup continue to run the opposing outsiders ragged with their lightning end runs. Patterson and Webber have made names for themselves by smashing line plunges, and by running the ends in a manner reminiscent of Lou Carroll in his playing days. Watson, the man mountain on the line, has been smacking the tacklers right merrily, and since he weighs a paltry 198 pounds, when he hits them, they stay hit. Dennison and Herman carry the burden of the tackling, while Calvert is plunging better than ever. Mustard and Henderson are the outsiders, while Bill Oille continues to call the signals. With the capable substitutes which they have displayed in previous encounters, the team is remarkably well balanced, and only a miracle can save St. Mike's from elimination. The Eastern section of this group is still incomplete, but R.M.C. look like the big threat. The Blue aggregation are already looking forward to entering the play-offs, and with the fighting spirit they are displaying, should retain the championship won last year.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

That Richardson Stadium in the Limestone City will be taxed to capacity for Saturday's crucial struggle is evident from the advance sale of tickets. Interest will centre in Kingston and a large contingent of Blue and White supporters will make the trip.

The league leadership is at stake, Queen's and Varsity each having won two games. Moreover, the local squad believes that this is Varsity's year; Varsity's year to break Queen's string of victories on their own back yard. The Tricolour have only gone down once before a Blue and White machine at Richardson's playground since 1922.

The third game between Varsity juniors and St. Michael's College football teams which was scheduled for yesterday, was postponed until to-day on account of the long injured list of the Saints. Seven of the Irish squad are said to have been forced out of the line-up.

St. Mike's have scored but one point in the last two games with the Blue and White freshmen, the U. of T. twelve winning 37 to 0 and 20 to 1. With a view to their past performances, the Varsity men may be counted on to clinch the Western intercollegiate group title with three straight victories. The schedule, however, is not over until Nov. 1, when the fourth game is to be played. The winners of the Western group play the champions of the Eastern group and it will be likely some time before a winner will be declared. Thus it appears that the local juniors are in for a layoff, probably broken by a few exhibition tilts.

The annual intercollegiate track and field meet takes place in Kingston on Friday, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning and continuing until it is over. It is meet to say so. Keen rivalry will be the order of the day. Coach Walter Knox of the Tricolour, can be counted on to present a galaxy of track and field stars, while the McGill team is reported to be of unusual calibre.

Varsity's chances in the meet don't seem to be overly bright in view of the comparison in times etc., reproduced from the McGill Daily. In spite of this, however, Coach Martin is quite confident and does not believe that times and distances made in the respective interfaculties meets are indicative of the outcome of to-morrow's contests in Kingston.

U.C. OUTCLASSED BY VICTORIA TEAM

Scarlet Men Hard Plungers and Run Up Score of 21-2

DOUGHTY MAKES TOUCH

The Victoria football team outclassed the fighting U.C. twelve to the tune of 21-2 at Vic campus yesterday.

For the first half U.C. held up well against their heavier opponents, but the hard plunges of the scarlet men had its effect. In the second cant they slowly wilted and Truelove, Clarke and Wylie gained repeatedly with some fine plunging. Willis, due to the better protection which his line afforded him, outkicked Haas, so that here also the Burwash lads had the advantage. Nevertheless, Haas, though hurried, booted well, and was the outstanding man on his team. Victoria also showed two fine running halves in Bunt and Buchanan, a scrappy quarter, Sirman, and an experienced outside, G. Ferguson.

WATER POLO TEAMS ENTER NEW SEASON

Dual Entry with McGill at International Meet Is Discussed

ELEVEN TEAMS START

A meeting of the University Swimming Club was held in Hart House yesterday to discuss a dual entry with McGill in the International Swimming Meet. It was decided to negotiate with Major Forbes of McGill as to financial requirements and the personnel of the team. The Varsity men have not yet been picked, but Major Forbes will be supplied with those men of last year's team who are available. The meet will be held at Springfield, Amherst, and Brown Universities.

Interfaculties water polo commenced this week with eleven teams entered this year instead of eight, the new entries being Trinity, St. Michael's, and O.C.E. O.C.E. will be allowed to enter the semi-finals as a group.

Track Results Made by Varsity and McGill

The following table is a comparison of the results made by Varsity and McGill in their recent interfaculties meets. The McGill Daily compiled it to indicate the probable winners at the intercollegiate meet to-morrow:

BLUE TRACK TEAM INVADE QUEEN'S TO GAIN INTERCOLLEGIATE TITLE

McGill Expected to be Chief Competitor for the Coveted Title

QUEEN'S ALSO DANGEROUS

Varsity Sending Strong Team Although Several Men Lost

To-morrow at Richardson stadium, Kingston, the University of Toronto track team will make a determined effort to retain their intercollegiate title and the McGill trophy, won by the Blue and White last year from McGill.

As in the past few years the meet will be a fight between Varsity and McGill. McGill's team this year is reported to be stronger than the one which lost the title to Varsity last year while Varsity's is probablv on a par with the championship team, although they lost Fitzpatrick, Jermyn and Finlayson.

Queen's will undoubtedly offer stronger competition this year, the Tricolour having obtained Walter Knox for their coach. Yet, without any new promising material, it can hardly be expected of Knox to produce a championship contending team in one season. Queen's will show improvement chiefly in the field events.

Ralph Adams and Eddie Dore will carry the Varsity colours in the hundred and two-hundred yard dashes. Adams won both events in last year's meet and should take both again this year. Dore pushed Adams to the limit in both events at the Interfaculties meet and it would not be surprising if the Dental speed flash finished in second position in the century, but the out-

Tush!
The One and Only

By P. A. Gardner

TORRID TID-BITS

The recent outbreak of arson in a town not far from here demands the composition of a theme-song entitled "Here we go scattering butts in hay!"

A Vermont farmer who had been troubled by weasels, left his refrigerator open one night. Next morning he found a dead weasel in it. Pop froze the weasel.

"Where's your Cadillac, Cyril?"

"Oh, it's laid up in the garage just now."

"Why, what's the trouble?"

"Well, we're not sure, but we think it's going to have an Austin."

The Hawaiians are becoming terribly Americanized, we read. Aloha Oyah!

ONLY FANCY!

(Society Stuff and Such)

A cable from England informs us that the well-known Madam Odiva has been appointed Guardian of the Privy Seal (Privy by Sale). This Seal, incidentally, was caught in a trap baited with the famous Seducto Sealing Wax (made by the manufacturers of Floppo Floor Wax). (Adv't.)

This is a trifle late—forgive it:

TWELVE APOSTLES CAUGHT

SHORT

Now that petting is in the public eye again (much to the surprise of our petters), we recall the delightful story of the person who phoned Canon Cody in the spring of 1929 and enquired splutteringly: "Have you heard about 'The Varsity' editorial in favour of petting?"

"Putting!" exclaimed the Canon, "why, what's wrong with putting?"

Of course, the baby courses hadn't arrived then.

Tush is glad to announce that our University is now Argyleless and, according to Mr. Bonus, free from petty earnings. Oh, my yes!

Tush, following in the footsteps of its great forbear, Elisha, is commencing an active campaign against wickedness in high places. Why go to a high place to be wicked when a low dive is so much more convenient.

Tush, incidentally, has a large interest in the Lidoff Club, which is undoubtedly the lowest dive Toronto has ever known—not excluding the well-known fraternity house on St. George Street whose leading light wears a pearl grey suit with the waistcoat touched on one point with cold connoisseur, on the other with creamed halibut (he calls it his "soup and fish"), and bears a large bald spot just below the throat. We have a bone to click with this gentleman, by the way—a pair of them, in fact. But to get back to business—come and try the Lidoff Club some night when you feel like committing suicide. You can hang around the Lidoff as long as you like. And as for Vice—well, the Editor of Tush is Vice-President of the Club—need we say less?

While chicken-and-waffling in Charlotte's the other day (and what a delectable occupation that is!), we overheard two fraternity frills chatting: "Well, I guess we've got Melinda Mudd cinched."

"Who? You mean the Cadillac roadster?"

Looks like the Vic Bob hit about the usual level—that of a very discreet small town garden party. But think of it! Vic has a chorus girl! Alex, come forward and curtsy. And a couple Valcetan crooners, Messrs. Bable and Wood. We know a family of robins that are just dying to cover them up with big red maple leaves.

come of the furlong sprint is uncertain, Bourdeau of McGill being the main obstacle.

Varsity is likewise equally as strong in the 440 yard dash. Mal Smith is Varsity's fastest in the quarter and as running mates he will have Thompson and Connolly. Carman King will represent the Blue in the half mile, with Peart the second entry. Don Smith and Wally Graham are certain point winners in the mile. The three mile grind should see a repetition of the smart race run last year by Allan Walters and Wally Graham, who finished one, two.

Connolly should take a first in the 220 yard low hurdles but faces stiffer opposition in the 120 high in which event McGill is stronger. Laughlin is Varsity's second entry in both hurdle events.

McGill's chief point winners are in the field events. Ed Peaker is the Blue's best in the javelin and the shot put. In the latter event he stands a good chance of winning. Ballachey is the second entry in the 16 lb shot and Thompson in the javelin. Collins and Ford will represent Varsity in the high jump. Newell has shown so much improvement since the Interfaculty meet in the discus that he is considered a first or second place man. Ballachey is Varsity's second choice. Eddie Hymmen and Eddie Dore are the Blue's best broad jumpers while Bob Dennis and Walker will carry her hopes in the pole vault.

The relay race, the last and quite frequently the deciding event of the meet, will be run as usual at the half time mark in the rugby game between Varsity and Queen's on Saturday. Mal Smith, Connolly, Thompson, and one of Dore, King, Don Smith, Adams and Graham will comprise the U. of T. team.

year; Hynes and Huhn from Acadinas Academy, Rochester, N.Y.; MacIsaac, who starred with the Dalhousie University quintet from Halifax; and Sugar, who is known to local fans as having been on the regular line-up of last year's Elizabeth junior team in the O.B.A.

Yesterday a dozen or so were culled from the squad but more are expected to register this week. During the first few practices the squad is being tried out in passing, dribbling, and close-in basket work. The ability displayed in these departments of the twine art has been good with the exception of dribbling which shows much need for improvement.

The squads of the second and higher years begin practices next week and big turnouts are expected.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 22.—Arriving in Winnipeg this morning, a shipment of beef cattle, 23 cars in all, destined to have significant effect on future export of this class of stock, proceeded to Montreal for transfer to Manchester, England, on October 30. Two, three and four year old steers of Herford, Aberdeen, Angus and Shorthorn breeds, the first predominating, taken from record herds in southern and Central Alberta, formed the nucleus of the consignment, which was added to en route as far as Maple Creek, Sask.

The Federal Department of Agriculture is responsible for the arrangements, Jack Byers, western representative, live stock branch for the Federal Government having selected the cattle at various points. Arriving with the train over Canadian Pacific lines to-day, Mr. Byers explained that ranchers have contributed without immediate recompense or promise of definite return. Although it is hoped that shipment of the cattle to Great Britain will prove a profitable move there is no guarantee, but it is expected it is the beginning of export on a large scale. In that case, he declares, western ranchers by their generosity will have done valiant service in the industry. The arrival of these cattle in Manchester will demonstrate what can reasonably be expected as regards shrink, and the salability of range steers in the old country market. Chas. G. Gilchrist, rancher of Maple Creek, will accompany the shipment to England. (Adv't.)

SOCIAL SERVICE COURSE HAS NO DEFINITE OPTION

"History of Social Effort" to be Offered Next Year

"No definite option is in Social Service Department for Arts students at present," Miss Berta Hamilton explained to "The Varsity" yesterday. "But Mr. Brett is willing to give his course on Social Relationships."

The Social Service department hopes next year to offer a new course called

"The History of Social Effort" for undergraduates only, providing certain difficulties are overcome.

The Social Service group of the S.C.M. from Victoria College are this year taking a course on Community Effort, the idea of which is to learn how the society of a city functions, with particular reference to those sections of the community who find themselves in various difficult situations. This group is carried on by means of actual visits and discussions of things which create an understanding of modern social work.

STUDENT GIVES DISPLAY OF ARTISTIC PARKING

Clever Exhibition on Campus Draws Attention of Envious
Spectators

To prove the saying that there is "always room for one more", one student recently gave an exhibition of skilful parking in front of the library. The space was just sufficient for the car and did not allow for any driving in or adjusting. The young man very ingeniously drove into the car behind him, and gently pushed it back a few inches. He repeated this until he was able to get his car in a straight line with the rest, and was safely wedged in.

The whole performance was accompanied by a chorus of jeering onlookers, who yelled their sarcastic advice at him from the safety of the sidewalk.

SUNDAY SERVICES MAY BE RESUMED

Guest Clergy May Use Convocation
Hall After Three Year Lapse

"A possibility exists that the Sunday services, held in Convocation Hall until discontinued some three years ago, may be given another trial," F. J. Moore, general secretary of the Students' Christian Association, told "The Varsity" yesterday.

"Nothing definite has as yet been decided," said Mr. Moore, "but it is possible that monthly meetings may be held. It is not likely that we will be able to continue the weekly services that were formerly held."

Until discontinued three years ago owing to lack of interest, services were held each Sunday in Convocation Hall. Preachers of note were brought to the city for the benefit of the students. Although held essentially for students, more citizens than students took advantage of the services.

"I would give me the greatest pleasure if the services could be revived," said Mr. Moore, "even if held only once each month. The main trouble is that Toronto boasts as good preachers as any that we can bring in from other cities, and students seem to like to hear them. The financial (Continued on Page 4)

LARGE MIGRATION FOR QUEEN'S GAME

By Train, Bus, Motorcycle,
Over 700 Will Invade
Kingston

All the ancient caravans which used to tote the sporting students to Kingston seem to have died a natural(?) death. At least, as far as the Varsity could learn, there are none of them going this year.

The only novel way of transportation seems to be the motorcycle, four or five of which are going. Some are going to carry two passengers, without a side-car, too.

Most of the students are going in busses, or cars of their own. Three busses have been chartered, one for the band and two for students. Some seats in them are still for sale. The fare is five dollars and a half, including a ticket for the game. The reduction in the price of the ticket is due to the Athletic Association. (Continued on Page 4)

Joint Executive to Meet Governors To Discuss Financial Position

No inkling of what their intentions are with regard to the future financial position of "The Varsity" was given by the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, who held a closed meeting in Simcoe Hall last evening.

No definite action was taken, if the matter was considered at all, according to the brief comments of those present at the meeting. It is expected that more definite action will be taken when members of the Board of Governors, at present out of town, return to the city.

The committee appointed by the Joint Executive which is to confer with a corresponding committee appointed by the Board of Governors, are active in their desire to have the whole matter satisfactorily settled.

Commenting editorially on the present condition, the Toronto Star says in part, "The Varsity," it is said, prints much that the authorities cannot approve. It may be so. But one might venture to say that "The Varsity" refuses to print much that would be a great deal more objectionable than that which is printed. The probability is that if "The Varsity" goes under owing to official action, there may arise in its place a students' publication entirely beyond control of the authorities. It was from just such situations that a free press emerged. Perhaps that is precisely what the University authorities are wisely working for."

Midnight Struggle in Purlieus of Burwash as School Retaliates

Paying off Victoria for tappings administered the night of the School initiation, the S.P.S. men gathered at midnight last night on the back campus for an organized attack on Burwash Hall. The raiders wore white handkerchiefs on the left arm for identification throughout the toughest hour of fighting that the University has witnessed in many a long year.

Engineers rushed for the lower Burwash windows and succeeded in upsetting some of the bedrooms. Those were played on them from upper windows until the whole force of Burwash men could be mustered. Throwing on anything that lent itself to free action, the men of Vic poured forth to meet the onslaught of half a thousand yelling engineers and to uphold the honour of the Scarlet and Gold in a fight against fearful odds.

While weight of numbers and organization gave "School" the advantage and they left declaring their honour vindicated, the casualties were divided within the narrow doorways to be tapped, stripped, painted, and otherwise entertained in the gentle Vic fashion.

The "privilege of the press" saved a "Varsity" reporter, seized by the Science men.

"And I'm supposed to have my graduation picture taken to-morrow," said an S.P.S. man, retreating to the Special Meeting Menorah Society

Owing to the fact that the labour government's report concerning the cutting off of immigration from Palestine has caused so much consternation in the ranks of the Jewish students throughout the world, a special meeting of the Menorah Society has been called for this Tuesday evening. Mr. Meyer Weisgal, editor of the "Jewish Standard", and former head of the world Zionist organization will speak.

The opinion of many is that the British Government has not kept faith with the Balfour declaration, and as a result the leaders of the Zionist organization have resigned. The leaders of the Zionist organization in Toronto and all Menorah members and prospective members will be made most welcome. The place will be announced later. After the meeting the floor will be thrown open for discussion.

ARTS GET CHANCE EQUAL TO S. P. S.

Technical Service Will Place
Graduate in Physics or Chemistry

"The Varsity" has investigated a rumour said to have emanated from a remark passed recently by Col. R. E. Smythe of the Technical Service Council. It was believed that the council was planning to extend its employment services to assist students in Arts, as well as those in Sciences, to find positions. Col. Smythe denies that any plans are being made as yet.

"We have all we can handle with our present staff and equipment," he stated, "but if an Arts student in pure Geology, Physics or Chemistry, comes to us we may be able to place him in a good position, just as though he were a Science man. There is very little difference in some cases." He added that they have occasionally been able to place C. and F. men who might apply to them, but that no efforts were (Continued on Page 4)

A chorus of vehement protest from the co-ed and evidence of a similar attitude more thoughtfully expressed on the part of men undergraduates, confronted reporters who combed the campus yesterday asking the question: "Do you think that 'The Varsity' should be made to suspend publication?"

"Ye gods," cries Miss M. Adams, U.C. "What would we do? Nothing to read in the library!"

Miss H. Cowan, I.H.Sc.: "Certainly 'The Varsity' should continue. As for humour there's enough in it without another sheet, and it's the kind we appreciate."

Miss Jean Watts, II.U.C.: "I'm for free speech, absolutely! What about having a mass meeting and throwing mud?"

TO RESUME HART HOUSE ART CLASSES OCTOBER 30

Art College Director to Act
As Instructor For Weekly Sessions

The Art Classes which have now become a recognized feature of the life of Hart House, will be held again this year. Mr. F. S. Haines, the Director of the Art Gallery of Toronto, will be the instructor, assisted by Mr. H. S. Palmer. The first meeting will be held on Thursday next, 30th October, at 7.30 p.m., and thereafter every Thursday in the Sketch Room. The fee for the entire series of fourteen classes will be three dollars ($3.00) for undergraduate members of Hart House and five dollars ($5.00), for senior members. It should be emphasized that the chief qualification for joining these classes is interest in and enthusiasm for drawing. Lockers will be given out at the first meeting.

Varsity TO GET LARGER STADIUM

Plan Important Improvements
As Soon As Finances
Will Warrant

"In two or three years the university may have a new stadium," said T. A. Reed, secretary of the Athletic Association, when interviewed by "The Varsity" as regards a new stadium. "But not at the present time; the association is still paying for the Arena which was built some time ago."

A new roof for the stadium and a larger seating capacity are two more important improvements that the Association is to undertake as soon as sufficient funds are available. This matter was taken up by "The Varsity" last year and the Association has co-operated with the paper as much as possible in getting the students a more comfortable structure from which to watch their athletic contests.

Feminine Punters Break Library Calm

Free entertainment "spiced up" the afternoon for would-be workers in the lower reading room yesterday afternoon. Two future "seekers after knowledge", presumably returning home from public school via the main campus, stopped at an open window of the library and commenced a lively, though somewhat one-sided, conversation with the industrious ones below. The intruders, being of the weaker sex, very naturally picked on the men at the tables for a target and aimed some comical though distracting remarks his way. Having succeeded in getting everyone in the room sooner or later into a burst of laughter, the two intruders vanished just before the arrival of one of the library staff.

Set the Stage

The stage is being prepared for one of the recognized social events of the year, the annual get-together of Meds and S.P.S. Both societies are working hard to make it a big success.

Meds started the ball rolling when they paid a goodwill visit to the little red school house on Wednesday night, October 22nd. The Engineering Building signs at the north and east entrances were tastefully smudged with thick crimson paint. On the north steps the charming invitation, "Poor S.P.S.", was inscribed. One Med extended his invitation in poetry, thus: "S.P.S., H2S".

An army of from 100 to 125 journalists in the making from all over Ontario will invade U. of T. campus to-day and to-morrow for the 5th annual High School Editorial Convention held under the auspices of the Sigma Phi women's honorary journalistic fraternity.

Prominent journalists, among whom are Gregory Clark of "The Star", Vernon Knowles of "The Mail and Empire", and Arthur Terry of MacLean's, will lecture to-day and to-morrow morning in Convocation Hall, and small informal discussion groups will be held on practical questions to be brought up by the delegates themselves. Dr. J. O. Robins, of Victoria College, Clarke Locke, of the University Extension, and Dr. E. A. Hardy, of Jarvis Collegiate, will also address the delegates.

A banquet Friday night at the Arts and Letters Club, choice of going to the rugby game or to a theatre party at the Royal Alexandra, and tours of "The Star" building and the MacLean Publishing Co., are all included on the programme.

Majority Do Not Appear to Regret Dollar Expended for "Varsity"

According to student opinion "The Varsity" is the only paper for the University.

When interviewed yesterday, as to whether a humorous magazine like "The Goblin", could supplant "The Varsity", the students almost unanimously agreed that no other magazine, humorous or otherwise, could replace "The Varsity" as the student paper. Only one undergraduate, who preferred to remain anonymous, expressed himself as distinctly dissatisfied with "The Varsity".

"It is the worst paper I ever came across, and I would prefer a humorous magazine any time," were his exact words. A. W. M. Carmichael, III S.P.S.: "I don't think it would be a success. Goblin wasn't much of a university magazine. A humorous magazine might go big on the news stands, but not as a school paper."

R. Graham, II Pharmacy: "It would be just outside stuff. It is far more interesting as a students' paper."

C. Clegg, II Pharmacy: "Goblin when printed by the university was a little weak. I would rather have 'The Varsity' than a weekly because you get all the up-to-the-minute news in the former."

George Kirkendale, I S.P.S.: "I wouldn't like the idea. Humorous magazines are mostly lachrymose. Goblin was better than the American magazines in its day. But I would rather have the news."

A. Webber, II Pharmacy: "Goblin was sold everywhere and everyone knew it was a university magazine. I would prefer it if it could embody everything that 'The Varsity' has. We need the news in a paper because that is what we look forward to every day. We should have 'The Varsity' every day and a humorous magazine weekly."

D. Kingsberg, II Meds: "I prefer 'The Varsity' to any magazine. If I want to read humour I go out and buy a magazine, but when I want to read school news I read 'The Varsity.'"

Art Snyder, quarter Varsity Orphans: "I would rather have a humorous magazine because most students know the news anyway, and therefore we don't need a newspaper."

J. Gold, III Arts: "Nothing can supplant 'The Varsity'. It could go beside it but never take its place. If 'The Varsity' ever quit publication, numerous small papers would spring up in protest against the Board of Governors. I would start one myself."

W. Duggan, II Arts: "The students depend on 'The Varsity' for news and activities on the campus. A humorous magazine with syndicate articles, would be a universal thing, rather than a university project."

F. C. Barton, II U.C.: "No, it would not. 'Varsity' is fundamentally a newspaper for the university. I am quite willing to pay two dollars a year for its upkeep."

Goblin, as a university magazine, was a financial success. It had been published by a group of students, but when these students graduated they continued to publish the paper as an outside venture. It attained success for a few years until suddenly the interest in this type of magazine died out. Seeking new fields in which to sell their magazine they moved to Montreal, where they had been promised financial backing. The magazine is still being published, but now more in the form of a short story magazine, most of its humour having been discarded. It is put out every month.

WELCOME

This morning the University welcomes within its gates over one hundred editors and business managers of provincial high school magazines. This is their first annual gathering and the increasing interest and enthusiasm they show each year speaks well for the work done by Sigma Phi, the women's honorary journalistic fraternity in sponsoring and carrying through such an ambitious project. The opportunities for exchange of practical suggestions as well as of editorial problems which the convention affords, cannot help but be an incentive to the work of each delegate as he returns to the task of editing his particular magazine. For many of these visitors this is their first glimpse of the University world, and we trust it will prove a pleasant and informative one. "The Varsity" bids these budding writers welcome and wishes them the joy which comes from an increasing acquaintance with the world of printers' ink.

TO THE CLUBMAN

A problem that requires the serious consideration of every student in each successive year at the University is the amount of time to be devoted to academic work and the amount to be given up to extra-curricular activity.

It is often felt by some people that to achieve any degree of intellectuality it is essential to concentrate entirely upon lectures and reading, and to forego the pleasures of the social world. This attitude, when viewed in the light of present and past generations of students, is surely unjustifiable. An intellectual need not of necessity be a recluse, shunning the society of his fellow students, and depending entirely upon book knowledge for his views on life, and interpreting modern problems merely by what he reads upon the printed page. There is a phase of life that can be studied only through personal contact with one's fellow men. An intellectual is defined as a person possessing a good understanding, and of all beings that require study in order to be understood, the human being stands first.

The next question that presents itself is where should this study be undertaken. It is in the choice of his field of experimentation that the individual must needs exercise his own discrimination. However, every student usually has some prevailing interest that may be followed by joint co-operation with other like-minded persons. But in a University of the size of ours it grows increasingly difficult, with the advent of fresh societies and clubs, to select those which offer the greatest advantage to the individual. To choose wisely from these requires singular skill and taste.

As more activities are engaged in, so much the more, it seems, do other societies begin to attract attention and invite participation. It is at this point that the thoughtful student will pause and consider the real reason that he has linked himself to his clubs. If it is only for social enjoyment and pleasure, to the disregard of their lasting value, then the more he joins the better, but if it is with a view to cultural background, and the acquisition of an intellectual attitude, it would be well to draw the line before so much engages his attention as to convert his mind into disordered chaos.

In order to derive lasting benefit from his social life, it is necessary to exercise the power of reflection, and not merely act in a certain way because other people do the same. If all our extra-curricular activities were thus subjected to careful analysis and we endeavoured to take part in no society without justifying our action to reason, and determining its ultimate value, if any, we would most certainly obtain a maximum amount of efficiency during our academic lives with a minimum loss of time and in addition of the formation of these habits would be of inestimable value to us in later life.

It may not be gainsaid that extra-curricular activities have a very definite place in a University education, and that the experience and knowledge one gains from these associations are in a very real sense necessary before embarking upon a career—the outside world. But it is just as necessary to recognize the need for a reasonable limitation of these efforts, lest we become mere automatons attending meetings and passing motions because we have addicted ourselves to the practise, and the habit is so much a part of us that we cannot overcome its power.

CHAMPUS CAT

We believe that the following paper, which is said to have been found outside Simcoe Hall by an irresponsible person, will cast new light on the Press controversy which is raging at the present moment.

"The Board of Sinecures wishes to announce the Policy of the Renovated Varsity which will be published shortly under entirely new management."

The undergraduates' newspaper will be published by the students of the newly formed Faculty of Journalism, and will be under the censorship of Dean R. E. Noles. The students will be required to write news articles and interviews and will receive grades at the end of each term.

No actual University news shall be permitted published in the Varsity for fear of offending the authorities.

Funds for financing the undergraduate paper will be raised by tag-days, weekly teas, popular subscription, and the help of Providence.

A humorous column will appear daily and all undergraduates are urged to laugh heartily at its pure and simple wit and comment.

On two days of each week there will be no reading matter in the columns, as all the space will be devoted to advertising.

It is expected the texture of the paper will be improved to make it crackle-proof and less irritating to professors, as it is feared someone might need one sometime during a lecture.

Gaspard McGuffey.

With the Theatres

Every Friday this department will perform still another service for the readers of "The Varsity" by carrying in brief sentences, announcements of the shows in down town theatres for the following week.

Here is this week's list:

Her Wedding Night—Clara Bow in a quite respectable comedy.

Loews.

The Big House—3,000 prisoners in a drama of prison life and love.

Shea's.

The Santa Fe Trail—Richard Arlen on the Santa Fe Trail.

Tivoli.

Check and Double Check—Amos 'n' Andy in their first feature.

Uptown.

All Quiet on the Western Front—The best of all films yet made.

BOND ISSUES SUBJECT OF LUNCHEON ADDRESS

The method by which international bond issues are arranged was the subject of a talk given by Mr. R. O. Daly, of Long and Daly, corporation lawyers, at the U.C. 371 men's luncheon Wednesday in Hart House.

He illustrated the difficulties involved by relating a case in which bankers in Vancouver were buying a bond issue in the Republic of Panama. In this transaction thirteen different lawyers were involved.

Sullivan and Cromwell, a New York firm investigating bond issues, employs over sixty lawyers, occupies five floors in a Wall St. building and has representatives in almost every foreign country.

BIG BLUE SQUAD AT FULL STRENGTH FOR KINGSTON STUGGLE

VARSITY JUNIORS WIN THIRD GAME

Capture Deciding Tilt of St. Mike's Series With 25-0 Score

Varsity juniors once more defeated St. Mike's by a score of 25-0. The juniors fielded a smart team that was well balanced in all departments, while St. Mike's were noticeably weak in the line. Varsity gained yards many times on plunges, a few of them netting from twenty-five to forty yards. In the first quarter before the game had progressed sixty seconds, Arnpup of Varsity kicked for a rouge. Varsity continually forced the play and, ten minutes of the game gone, Leachman booted a beautiful drop, scoring another three points for Varsity. Leachman was soon in a position to try another drop, but was only credited with a rouge. Arnpup came back with another rouge. The quarter ended 6-0 for Varsity.

At the beginning of the second quarter, McNulty of Varsity blocked a St. Mike's kick and Keith went over for a touch. Leachman easily converted. Leachman later made a spectacular forty yard plunge. McNulty of St. Mike's had his shoulder dislocated, putting him out for the rest of the game. Half time found Varsity leading 13-0.

The third quarter brought a rouge by Arnpup, followed shortly by a touch by Webber. Leachman again converted.

VARSITY PREPARED FOR EPOCHAL FIGHT

Blackwell Hopes to Repeat
1928 Success in Kingston
Stadium

KICKING DUEL FORESEEN

To-morrow, Coach Les Blackwell's Varsity team faces what may prove the deciding test when it invades the Richardson Stadium, Kingston, to do battle with the Tricolour. The outcome of the game will just about decide the championship of the College Union and with this in view the classic game of the season will have an added attraction.

Varsity is ready. With the exception of Johnny Fitzpatrick, the team will be at top strength. Coach Les Blackwell sent his team through its final workout yesterday afternoon, winding up a week that was marked with strenuous sessions in preparation for this more than ordinary game with Queen's.

Varsity's last two wins have been mainly due to the kicking of Jack Sinclair. The team possesses as strong a line as any in the Union, however, and with the gruelling it has received this week, it will undoubtedly reveal its real strength to-morrow.

But the outstanding feature of to-morrow's game will be the kicking duel between Jack Sinclair and Howie Carter. Sinclair is in perfect form for the encounter although he refrained from dressing for yesterday's practice, it being thought best by the Varsity mentors. Jack was at the stadium and did some booting, however.

Not since 1928 has Varsity won a game at the Richardson Stadium and singularly enough, Les Blackwell was coach of the team that year.

Varsity graduates and undergraduates will invade the Limestone City in full force. Already seven hundred tickets have been sold at Hart House (Continued on Page 4)

In the final session Dennison went over for a touch for Varsity and Watson successfully converted.

Varsity—Snap, Keith; insides, Calvert, Bean; middles, Watson, Dennison; outsides, Mustard, Henderson; quarter, Oille; flying wings, Webber, Patterson; halves, Leachman, Arnpup; subs, McNulty, Corrigan, Monsaroff, Warren, Austin, Lewis, Woolnough, Bryers.

St. Mike's—Snap, Duggan; insides, Grant, Wilson; middles, Dore, Willett; outsides, Timmins, O. Regan; quarter, McNulty; flying wings, Carroll, Ryan; halves, Shook, Brophy; subs, McGoe, Fullerton, Webber, B. Regan, Barfield, O'Connor, Byrne, Kelly.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

From all appearances the struggle at the Richardson Stadium seems like the proverbial toss-up with both squads at full strength and promising their supporters a victory. The only absentee on the Varsity line-up will be Johnny Fitzpatrick, whose knee has failed to respond to treatment.

* * *

So far this season the Blues have won most of their games by superiority in kicking. They will have little, if any, advantage in this department on Saturday, however, if Sinclair and Carter are both up to form. It looks as though the game will be decided along the line where Varsity have a slight edge. Traynor, Harrison, Dewar, McQuigge, Adams and Jim Sinclair appear better than any combination of Queen's plungers, despite the presence of "Blurp" Stuart, and "How" Hamlin. On the backfield the Tricolour, with the redoubtable "Red" Gilmore flanking Carter, have a small margin.

* * *

Then there are always the well-known breaks which have won and lost many a game before this, and may decide to-morrow's contest.

* * *

The Orphans look like a sure bet for to-morrow. After the trouncing the Bechers handed them last week, Lou Carroll's boys have been at it hammer and tongs in the scrimmages this week, and should have little trouble in taking the Airmen. Carroll has made several changes in the starting line-up which are calculated to strengthen the team. Don Wood has been shifted to quarter, the position he held down with the Intercollegiates last year, and Art Snyder has been moved to the backfield. Peacock, who showed up well for the seniors in the McGill game, is back on the squad and Al McCulloch will be at snap.

* * *

Despite the fact that two of last week's seven guesses went west we are going to pick them again for to-morrow. Here is the way they look to us—the Orphans will down the Bordenites here, Western will take McGill, Argos look too good for Ottawa, and Mike Rodden's Tigers should keep their slate clean in their game with M.A.A.A. In the O.R.F.U. western group Sarnia should take the Tiger seconds, while Kitchener gets the call over Windsor.

* * *

Although we are writing about Varsity teams for the University paper we have always felt that we were adopting a strictly non-partisan viewpoint in our accounts of all games. It seems, however, that some of the football experts around the campus think otherwise. The other day we were accused of being biased by a group of anonymous critics signing themselves "Five Varsity Supporters". We are therefore issuing an invitation to these gentlemen to write us a letter explaining just how a rugby game should be covered. It would appear that there is much in the way of sports-writing talent around the campus going to waste, and we would be delighted to have some of it come around and show us how.

HOPE TO REPEAT WIN FROM FLIERS

Orphans Tune Up Machine for Crucial O.R.F.U. Struggle
To-morrow

MANY CHANGES IN LINE-UP

Varsity Orphans went through their final workout last night in preparation for the senior O.R.F.U. game on Saturday with Camp Borden and Lou Carroll's squad bid fair to repeat their opening performance this year when they defeated the Airmen to the tune of 29-11.

The squad are still smarting under the defeat handed out to them last week by Balmby Beach and intend to make up for this in to-morrow's game. The Orphans share the main attraction given to Toronto fans this week as part of a double bill with Ottawa and Argos clashing in the second game. Lou Carroll has made many changes in his starting line-up for the game, as McCulloch will take Doyle's place as snap and Scott and Long will have the middle positions instead of Stringer and Rogers. Art Snyder has been shifted to the backfield thus dispelling the rumour that he would be seen with the juniors this season. Although Art is very light in weight he is of invaluable service to the Orphans.

The line-up for the game is as follows: Snap, McCulloch; insides, Witzell and Peacock; middles, Scott and Long; outsides, Crocker and Baker; quarter, Woods; wings, Monkhouse and Hodgsetts; halves, Davey and Snyder; subs, Gibson, Coleman, McGibbon, Doyle, Lang, Rogers, Copp, Stringer.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Although Household Science are entering a team in the interfaculty basketball series for the second year only, advance reports are very enthusiastic. A large number of freshies have been turning out, and the embryo dietitians hope to make a better showing than they did last year. At the beginning of last season, they were rather weak, but improved rapidly. They are coached by Betty Doyle, who played on the first Household Science team and is now in her fourth year.

* * *

According to the basketball schedule announced to-day, some teams will have to play twice in two days. This arrangement is unfortunate, but is extremely hard to avoid owing to the over-lapping in practice hours, and the lack of suitable gyms.

QUEEN'S AT FULL STRENGTH SATURDAY

Capt. Gourlay Will be in Action; Walker Only Absentee

Special to "The Varsity" by Art Child, Staff Writer, Queen's Journal
The Queen's senior rugby squad will all be back in harness in to-morrow's game with Varsity, with the exception of Bert Walker, a promising line man up from the Intermediates this year, who is out with a broken ankle. Captain "Oot" Gourlay, stellar outside, has recovered from a serious injury to his eye, and will be in action for the first time this season. The stadium has recovered from last week's drenching, and Coach Harry Batstone has been putting his men through heavy workouts all week in preparation for the coming battle.

One of the greatest aerial duels in years will take place when "Howie" Carter opposes Jack Sinclair. In his fourth year of senior football, "Howie" has been kicking them higher and farther every game and his steady catching has been a feature of Tricolour battles all season. His running mate, little "Red" Gilmore, formerly of Oakwood Collegiate, is one of the most elusive ball carriers in the Intercollegiate Union, and every game is featured by yard gaining dashes of the sorrel-topped half-back, Bob Elliot, at secondary defense, played with the Kingston Interscholastic champions three years ago, and in addition to being a smashing tackler, has been an effective ground gainer since his advent into senior rugby in 1928.

The Queen's line is light this year, and depends on speed for its gains.

Perspiring Percival in a Play of Wedding Nights and Hic-hics

By Horatius, B.A.

Sophia—Why Genevieve, it isn't right that a girl should be crying the morning after her wedding.
Genevieve—Oh Sophia—my husband has tricked me.
Sophia—What? The scoundrell I guess you didn't know enough about him, dear.
Genevieve—No, no—it isn't that. He . . . he . . . I'll tell the truth. He hiccuped! A terrible kind of hiccup, Sophia. It only happens when he gets excited. He kept them off while he was courting, but last night—our wedding night . . . oh!
(Enter Percival.)
Percival—Genevieve, Genevieve, let me explain.
Sophia—So it's you, you cur!
Percival—Let—hic—hic—hic.
Sophia—Here, hold your breath and swallow nine times.
Genevieve—You hound, you puppy, you dirty dog.

Percival—Dear Genevieve. I'm sorry, forgive me.
Genevieve—You lousy betrayer of a maiden's faith. You deceitful—to take in me, me, me, ME. I, who might have married any man I chose. Oh you, you, you canine.
Percival—Please, oh please, his, hic—hic—hic—
Sophia—Hold your breath.
Genevieve—Swallow nine times.
Sophia—You cat. To abuse this gentle dove. She ought to kill you, she ought.
Percival—But my children—my children. Oh! . . . hic—hic—
Sophia—Swallow nine times.
Genevieve—Hold your breath.
Percival—Thanks a lot old dears. Damn decent of you.

Several well-known speakers are coming to Toronto soon, and we hope to have some of them speak at the Hall. If the students show sufficient interest, the meetings may be held monthly."
"Professor C. F. Angus, of Cambridge, will be in the city for a week at the end of November," said Mr. Moore, "and he will speak at one of the College Chapels. It is not likely that he will also speak at Convocation Hall."
Mr. Moore would like to hear the opinions of students in regard to the monthly services, expressed through the medium of "The Varsity". Monthly meetings were given a trial two years ago, but were discontinued when students did not respond.

TORONTO MIGRATES TO QUEEN'S TO-MORROW

One S.P.S. man is driving a five-passenger Essex coach, with three men and three women. For some reason, he refused to give his name, nor did he seem anxious for another passenger.
About seven hundred seats have been sold. Mr. Burns told "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon. This, according to the Athletic Association, is slightly more than last year.
Interest in the game is very high, and while "The Varsity" was threatened with death if it approached the little red schoolhouse, it learned that one Schoolman raffled a ticket at a profit. The winner, another Schoolman, later attempted to sell it for four dollars.

STADIUM USHERS

As there will be a double header to-morrow all ushers in sections "L" to "R" inclusive, and all head ushers in the grandstand and boxes must be in their places not later than 12.45 p.m. All other ushers are asked to report before 1.15 p.m.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCCER

Varsity will play their first game against McGill on Saturday. The team has been coached for the last few weeks by Art Halliwell, the well known Toronto Scottish player. Although handicapped by the loss of Rowland this year, the team is a fairly well balanced one. The following have been selected to play against McGill: Little, Smythe, Jack, Goldenberg, King, Whilla, Regan, McPherson, Davidson, Ward, Carbert, West. All players are asked to be at the Union Station at 10.30 p.m.

VIC CREW

All men rowing in the regatta must sign eligibility forms in the Athletic Office before the race.

the city made in handling the "Red" situation some time ago."

Miss B. Lang, II U.C.: "It would be a tragedy to see 'The Varsity' go. I need it to keep abreast of my many activities."

Miss Hazel Bredin, IV U.C.: "A publication under the management of a school of journalism couldn't be much worse than 'The Varsity'."
Miss E. Gillespie, II Victoria: "We couldn't let 'The Varsity' go. If it does print bosh sometimes it's amusing bosh and we like it."
Suggesting that the question contained appropriate material for a future Hart House debate, F. R. Higginbottom, fourth year U.C. said: "It would be a great mistake to abolish 'The Varsity'. I do think that our editor does not express the views of the whole student body. An editorial just expresses one viewpoint and there is rarely a comeback for those who disagree. The trouble with 'The Varsity' is that it has to try to cater to the whole university. What we need is about four newspapers around here, not just one."

Marvin Lemon, second year S.P.S.: "I don't think that 'The Varsity' should be abolished. It is more a student paper than some outside publication could be."

VARSITY WINS THRILLING AERIAL DUEL

APOLOGIZE FOR USE OF UNIVERSITY SONG BY DANCE ORCHESTRA

Blue and White is Played Only at Request of College Men

DANCE MANAGER EXPLAINS

University Song Dedicated to Maple Leaf Team Without Consent

Drawing attention to the fact that he inadvertently neglected to have his announcer mention the University song while playing "The Blue and White", a letter has been received from the manager of "The Silver Slipper", suburban dance hall, apologizing for his error. It will be recalled that the Students' Administrative Council considered taking official action to prevent the use of the University song by outside parties.

October 24, 1930.

Mr. A. G. Burns, Secretary, Student Council, University of Toronto, Gentlemen:

Our attention has been called to the article which appeared in the Evening Telegram of October 23rd, with reference to the dedication of the Varsity Song, The Blue and White, by our orchestra, Ronnie Hart, to the Maple Leaf Hockey Team, wherein our announcer neglected to mention the University of Toronto at the time the song was dedicated.

Our orchestra only plays this number at the request of a member of the University of Toronto, and at no other time. Since Connie Smythe, the coach of the Maple Leaf Hockey Team, and several members of the team are Varsity graduates, this number was requested and played. It was purely an oversight on the part of our announcer in neglecting to mention the University of Toronto at the time, and we can assure you that there will not be another occurrence of this type.

It distresses us greatly that we should have, in this way, neglected to pay due honour to the University of Toronto, and trust that this apology, on behalf of the announcer and the Silver Slipper, will be accepted.

We would appreciate this letter being posted in a conspicuous place, where it may be read by the Students.

Very truly yours,
Waldo Holden.

DEFER CAPUT ACTION ON RECENT FRACAS

Arrival of Dean Mitchell of S. P. S. Will Settle Matters

No action will be taken by the Caput in regard to the scrap between S.P.S. and Victoria, Thursday, until Dean Mitchell, who is out of town, returns, it has been learned by "The Varsity".

Members of the Caput, when questioned by "The Varsity", stated that they knew nothing of the matter beyond what has appeared in the papers, and the President of the Students' Court made a similar statement.

Since so many men were involved in the fracas the probability is that penalties will be in the form of fines, rather than suspensions or expulsion.

Bath-tub For Women On Porch of Union

Said to be an expression of the regard with which University men view the health and comfort of their less fortunate sisters in residence, a full-length, life-size, white porcelain bath-tub was deposited shortly after midnight last night on the piazza of the Women's Union, at 79 St. George Street.

When a "Varsity" reporter observed the contribution in its unique setting at 2 a.m. this morning, the donors had already disappeared, and are so far anonymous. It is believed that these premature Santa Clauses were impelled to action by a rumour which appeared recently in "The Varsity" that the co-eds at the Union were insufficiently supplied with adequate bathing facilities. Miss Kilpatrick, Dean of U.C. Women, could not be reached by "The Varsity" for an expression of opinion at an early hour this morning.

Applications Invited For New Scholarships

The Registrar of the University will receive applications for the Robert Bruce Scholarship from students enrolled in the Second Year in the Faculty of Arts. These applications must be filed with the Registrar on or before November 1st.

Applications will also be received for the William E. Wilder Fellowship, the gift of J. H. Gundy, Esq., of the value of $1,500.

Applications must be filed with the Registrar on or before November 1st. Further information regarding the fellowship may be found on pages 67 and 83 of the current Arts Calendar.

GREAT IS SINCLAIR

In the three intercollegiate games played this year "Long Jawn" Sinclair has booted all of Varsity's points—two field goals and fourteen singles. In the above picture, taken especially for this issue of "The Varsity" he shows us how he does it.

Burwash Raid Costly

It is estimated that School of Science men will have to dig down to the tune of between $300 and $500 as a result of the retaliatory escapade at Burwash Hall last Thursday night.

This sum will be used for the replacement of numerous windows on the ground and second floors of South House. A few windows were also broken in Gate House. South House will also need a whole new front door, of which the lock alone will cost about $50.

Pig Squeals; Blue Band Blares As Queen's Goalposts Tumble

By Kenneth J. Erwin

Did Toronto have any supporters at the game in Kingston on Saturday? The valiant seven hundred came through with the right spirit. And how they yelled! With the right spirit.

Oy, that Varsity band can sure swank around. Attaboy Loch!

Sprott, former Toronto man and Queen's band leader, got a kick out of directing the "Blue and White".

"Alphie", the whispering baritone, led in the group ushering in the Governor-General. It was a light prologue to an austere and dignified curtain raiser and caused a ripple of amusement around the stands. Alphie was decked out in a fitting manner.

There was a minute's silence in deference to the Governor. Everyone took a deep breath, yelled, and the game was on!

Before the game a couple of Queen's men mauled around a Blue and White dummy until the cork came out of it. And then the worm turned.

They say it was a kicking game, but Varsity had no kick coming.

At half-time a delightful sight was put on when a hog was given the freedom of the grid. Fully a hundred men pestered it around. A Queen's man tackled it. Poor little piggie.

Perhaps he thought he was bringing home the bacon.

After taking sides they proceeded to split hairs on the razor-back. But the pork was not to be put off that way. So they rendered "Little Pal" and gave it the truck.

And after the game the strains of "The Blue and White" led a parade around the field. It was innocent enough until the boys noticed the goal posts. They shouldn't be there. Queen's men objected for some reason. It developed into a free-for-all when one post had been removed. Then the Varsity men broke for the other posts. By this time the band had arrived at the other end. Queen's evidently thought they had set their caps for them.

We are the engineers.

Engineering got those posts.

Was there a parade? Yes, harassed all along the route by those who love the Blue.

Some Kingston boys threw pebbles at the band. Someone said, "Those aren't Queen's men, are they?"

The valiant seven hundred came away with the dusk. If you had stayed long enough you could have helped paint those posts in familiar colours.

BLUE AND WHITE OUTPLAY QUEEN'S TO GAIN LEAD IN RACE FOR TITLE

McMASTER FRESHMEN WORK ON CITY MAYOR

Course in Shoe-Blacking Is Added to Course by Sophs

SHINE ALL COPS SHOES

Initiation of the freshman year at McMaster has been more spectacular this year than heretofore. An extramural course in boot-blackening has been added by the sophomores and is absolutely compulsory. Recently the sophs decided on a little practical demonstration in aid of the staff of the city. Freshmen brought polish and brush into play and presented each and every cop with a sparkling shoe shine.

Not satisfied, someone spied the mayor descending the city hall steps and decided that a polish would benefit the mayoral shoe. Freshmen laboured manfully and produced the desired effect. The mayor surveyed the result and bestowed a pourboire of ten cents. Whether this was confiscated or not by the sophs is unknown.

McMaster men are evidently taking themselves seriously in their new home. They feel it necessary to create and maintain a college spirit in a city where a university has yet to build a tradition.

BRILLIANT TACKLER

Captain Johnny Keith, who will go down in the annals of Canadian football history as one of the greatest tacklers ever to don a Blue uniform. His tackling on Saturday bordered on the phenomenal.

Sinclair's Lofty Spirals Give Varsity Lead of 6-1

LONGEST PUNT BY CARTER

Bell Made Spectacular Runs While Keith's Tackling Was Superb

By A. C. Cochrane

In one of the most spectacular aerial duels ever played in senior intercollegiate football, Varsity triumphed over Queen's 6 to 1 at the Richardson Stadium, Kingston, on Saturday, and went into the lead in the fight for the title.

Great is Sinclair! The Big Blue and White half back again accounted for all of his team's points and his lofty spirals, coming from behind a powerful Varsity line, drove the Tricolour into submission for eighty per cent. of the struggle. Only for a short period in the last quarter did the champions appear dangerous when Carter kicked their lone tally. The end of the game found the locals crowding Queen's with a kick to their 25 yard line.

For the second time since 1922 Varsity took the Tricolour into camp on their own playing field, Coach Les Blackwell duplicating his feat of turning back the men of Batstone in the intercollegiate opener there in 1928. A wild demonstration on the part of nearly 1,100 Varsity supporters that made the trip to the Limestone City followed the game.

Although Jack Sinclair was responsible for all of Varsity's points, the Blues outplayed the Queen's squad in every department of the game. They drove the Tricolour into their own territory at the start of the game and it was not until there were three minutes of play remaining in the second frame that Queen's gained possession of the ball in the Varsity end of the field and then it was on the 54 yard line. Too much credit for this fact cannot be withheld from the wonderful tackling of Captain Johnny Keith. His work in this department of the game was little short of being miraculous. He was down under every kick and he nailed the elusive Queen's halves, "Red" Gilmore and Howie Carter, in their tracks.

Wild Melee Ensues In Limestone City

Varsity made whoopee in Kingston Saturday night. The fun started when the final whistle blew and gave Varsity its first decisive win in years at the Limestone City.

The Varsity rooters started on the goal posts when the game closed. They didn't succeed in that effort, however, for the Queen's rooters rallied to the defence. After a try at the other pair of posts, the rooters, several hundred strong, started a snake dance across the field, led by the Varsity band.

Tiring of that, they continued over to Princess Street and marched down town. A number of town hoodlums showed a disposition to break up the procession and disable the band, but a steel music stand proved effective as a defensive weapon. Rooters then formed an advance guard and the procession proceeded undisturbed.

Colour snatching was the order of the day, as usual in Kingston, and a good many bedraggled trophies came home on the special Varsity busses.

CRYING 'PEACE! PEACE!' . . .

Neither now nor at any time has the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto had any intention of taking steps to cut off compulsory fees for the support of "The Varsity", according to a statement issued to the down-town press by W. J. Dunlop on Friday night.

If Mr. Dunlop is sincere in his statement, all we can say is that his information on the subject is woefully inadequate. But in view of certain facts published last week in the undergraduate daily regarding the establishing of a U.S. college comic magazine on the local campus and the introduction of a School of Journalism into the increasing catholicity of our curricular menu—both events to transpire in the event of "The Varsity's" demise—we may perhaps be pardoned if we suggest an analysis of Mr. Dunlop's beautiful new tolerance. If this is a crying of Peace! Peace! we hasten to assure Mr. Dunlop and any other interested parties that until student government is an assured thing at this University and until the status of "The Varsity" has been made both clear and secure, there is no peace.

As a publication which firmly believes that neither this University as a whole nor any worth-while institution in it has any reason to fear the truth, "The Varsity" has been edited for the past several years as a paper calculated to be readable, amusing, and provocative. At no time have the editors been afraid to risk either their skins or their personal comfort in providing fuel for discussion in a community where free discussion is supposed to be the very breath of life. If strong and unequivocal opinions may not be expressed in a journal sponsored by the students of one of the world's foremost universities, where in this particular year of grace is one to be expected to look for expressions of free opinion?

Yet, whenever the policy of this paper has threatened to become too virile for the squeamish stomachs of certain polite individuals, the editor has always been taken gently aside and informed that, if he didn't behave, the Board of Governors would cut off "The Varsity's" share of the compulsory fees. If this threat is pure rhetoric, it is about time we threw rhetoric overboard and decided to substitute a little plain speaking. The editors of this paper are just about fed up with officials who speak one way when they want to put the clamps on the students who are doing their level best to carry on a live publication on this campus, and another way for the benefit of the down-town press.

We started off the year by making the statement that we were willing to meet the authorities half way in the solution of the difficulties which exist with regard to student self-government and the student newspaper. And so we are. But we do not believe in crying, "Peace! peace!" when there is no peace.

If the recently created "Varsity" investigation committee appointed by the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council has come into being—as we are assured it has—as the result of overtures from sources closely associated with the Board of Governors, it simply means that the Governors are on the verge of formulating an official attitude with regard to the undergraduate daily. For the sake of the University we sincerely hope that this attitude will not involve the withdrawal of financial support. With the passing of the publication backed by the S.A.C. under authority from the Board of Governors, and the substitution of a periodical backed by outside interests and free from any kind of restriction, certain officials might find the last state of their discomfort worse than the first.

And if there is no move on the part of the Board of Governors to cut off financial support, we should be delighted if the thing went out of vogue as a weapon with which to bludgeon "Varsity" editors into submission.

Art, Music and Drama

Hart House Theatre

Those who remember Mr. Dixon Wagner's performance in The Doctor's Dilemma at Hart House Theatre two years ago, will note with unusual interest his return to the local play-house in the title role of Dr. Knock, to be presented there this week by the Hart House Players under the direction of Mr. Edgar Stone.

Like Shaw's play, Dr. Knock is a satire at the expense of the medical profession. But it is a farcical satire, very different from the semi-tragic satire of G.B.S.

The version of Jules Romaine's play used by Hart House Theatre was prepared by Harley Granville-Barker, and is considered an excellent translation. Throughout Mr. Granville-Barker was careful to translate the spirit rather than the language of the original.

The present production will be especially noteworthy because of the efforts made to overcome certain difficulties of staging in the first act; and because of the decision of Edgar Stone to direct the play as a comedy rather than as a farce.

Besides Dixon Wagner, the cast includes W. P. Schutte, Kenneth Conn, Purvis Wood, F. J. Mallett, K. E. Kitchman, John Patton, J. M. Goss, Graham Garton, Dora McMillan, Margaret Tytler, Leontia Wilson, Jane Mallett, Eleanor Barton, Maxine Stafford.

Sunday Evening Concert

A large audience of happy youths and maidens sat intently watching what one writer has called the "ridiculous spectacle of four fellows sitting opposite each other and scraping catgut". This statement, unquestionably true, reveals rather well a relation between life and art. To the writer quoted it was a matter of catgut. To many of the audience of last evening it was a matter of worship at one of beauty's finest shrines.

It was fitting and yet very kindly that the Hart House String Quartet should open its Toronto season in the house whose name it bears.

The programme opened with two delightful Purcell numbers, and what medium, saving perhaps the human voice, can better revive the exquisite charm of 17th century music? The first, "Phantasia", began on very broad lines, soon to develop into a dainty allegro. The second, "Chacon", deeper in construction, wove its way in lovely sadness.

Two Haydn quartets, the F. Minor and the B. Minor, were the features of the evening. Progressing along the same lines, the first is rather jovial, while the second treats more sombre shades. The first appealed rather more to this writer and seemed to find the players in more facile mood. The finale, fugally developed, is a very excellent bit of writing. The andante of the B. Minor quartet revealed some of the more subtle excellencies of the players' art.

The programme closed with two clever arrangements of traditional English tunes. "Fairiest Jenny" is roistering and chiefly technical in its demands. The second, "The Sheep Under the Snow", has a melody reminiscent of plainsong. Unfortunately, Mr. Blackstone broke a string and the third number was not given.

As we go in to dinner?"

The Major at her words unshamed,

It was a gallant company,
That sat that night to dine,
And jolly was their repartee,
Though somewhat asinine.

The guests received their consommé,
But sought for spoons in vain;
The hostess saw their mute dismay,
And said, "Let me explain";

"I'm serving straws for eating soup,
"To cut out all the static;
"So Junior, who is ill with croup,
"Won't hear it in the attic."

"Nay," laughed the judge, "pray don't conceal

"The true cause for your care:
"You, Madame, are afraid we'll steal
"Your cherished silverware."

The Parson paled and looked shamefaced,
Then turned a sickly green:
For 'neath his vest he'd slyly placed
The lid of the soup tureen.

The Parson rose as he heard the joke
And said, "Alas, what grief
"It gives to tell you honest folk,
"That one of us here's a thief!"

The hostess rose to disagree,
To brand his words a fable,
As sounds of falling cutlery,
Came from beneath the table.

The dozen guests looked sickly round,
As the hostess glanced below,
Where a dozen knives and forks were found,
And a score of spoons or so.

The Parson left their social set
And hasn't since been seen,
For aught we know he's keeping yet,
The lid of the soup tureen.

McGILL CAPTURES TRACK & FIELD MEET; ADAMS WINS SPRINT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

With the opening of the interfaculty basketball series only a week away, coaches and players are working hard in an endeavour to round out plays and put the finishing touches on defence. According to reports from the different camps, the teams are very enthusiastic and competition promises to be very keen.

Right now it looks as though St. Hilda's, last year's champions, will have no difficulty in taking their group title and should go right through to the finals. According to pre-season dope, the best teams look to be St. Hilda's, St. Michael's, and U.C. Seniors, although almost any of the others have a real chance to upset calculations.

Some of the teams are being rather hard hit by the failure of some players to measure up to the requirements which Dr. Gordon, medical adviser for women, has laid down. Also, injuries are taking their toll, thus making it very hard for coaches to select their players and decide upon a regular line-up. The new system of team examination has obviated a large part of the difficulty, however, and a vote of thanks is due to Dr. Gordon and her staff for their co-operation in this matter.

The executive of the baseball club is having a meeting on Wednesday of this week to draw up a schedule and settle some questions which have come up regarding the eligibility of certain players. The managers are having a great deal of trouble in getting efficient coaches. The ones who would be the most capable seem to be unaware of their own qualifications. Just now it looks as though some teams will have to resort to playing coaches, which is never satisfactory under the best of circumstances.

McGILL VICTORIOUS IN TRACK AND FIELD

Red and White Show a Great Advantage in All Events

DREW, INDIVIDUAL WINNER

The Red and White of McGill University triumphed at the Intercollegiate Track and Field Meet held at Kingston last Friday. Showing a considerable advantage in both track and field events, the McGill athletes amassed a total of 70 points against Toronto with 49 and Queen's with 16 points. Charlie Drew of McGill retained the laurels that he won last year at Toronto by winning the 120 yard high hurdles and the running broad jump and placing third in the high jump. This gave him a total of 11 points and the individual championship. He was closely followed by Ralph Adams (V), and by Wally Graham (V), who each won two events, securing 10 points each. Adams, duplicating his performance last year, won both the 100 and the 220 yard sprints, while Graham won the 1 and 3 mile distance races. As a result of the previous nights rain, the weather and track conditions were not very favourable for record breaking performances. Adams came within 1-5 second of equalling the record of 10 seconds flat in the century, and Drew was 2-5 seconds behind his own record of 16 1-5 seconds in the 120 yard high hurdles.

On the track McGill had a slim advantage of 4 points over Varsity, but their strength and Varsity's weakness in the field events left no doubt as to which was the superior on the whole. Toronto and McGill each secured 6 firsts and Queen's 2, in the 16 events on the card. McGill also won the relay race held on Saturday at half-time in the Queen's-Varsity rugby tilt. It was in second place position that the Red made up their margin. The Red and White colours placed second in 10 events against Varsity's 3 and 1 for Queen's. Toronto added 7 singles for thirds, and McGill took 5 and Queen's 2. Varsity also placed second in the relay with Queen's a rather poor third. This was the 29th championship meet held, of which 18 have been won by McGill and the remaining 11 by Toronto. The results of the placings in the events are as follows:

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

Varsity, by virtue of their victory over the Tricolour, are occupying a commanding position in the race for the intercollegiate football honours. There is no mistaking the fact that this year the Blue and White is represented by one of the strongest aggregations in years and that the win over the Men of Batstone was no fluke. If the local squad continues to play the brand of football they uncorked Saturday, nothing can prevent them from winning the championship.

Perhaps the sweetest aspect of the Blue win was in taming the opposition right on their own backyard. Coach "Les" Blackwell is evidently a jinx to the Tricolour in the Limestone City. He duplicated his feat of turning back the "home towners" in the opener there in 1928. Previous to that year Varsity had never won a game in Kingston since 1922. The large crowd of Varsity supporters demonstrated their elation in no uncertain terms and according to reports the parade, headed by the local band, embarrassed the Kingstonians not a little.

Of the fifteen games that have been played in Kingston between Queen's and Varsity, both teams have won seven games, one struggle ending in a tie.

Queen's were completely outplayed. It was not until the second quarter was nearly over that the Tricolour secured possession of the ball in Varsity territory, and then it was on the 54 yard line. A chart of the game showing all gains and losses reveals the fact that for 80 per cent. of the game Queen's were bottled up in their own end of the field.

A strong Blue line and Sinclair's magnificent punting accounted for this fact. On many occasions Sinclair gained 20 and 25 yards on an exchange of kicks.

Captain Johnny Keith was a demon to the Tricolour ball-carriers with his deadly tackling. His exhibition of this department of the game was the finest we have ever seen and we feel that he will go down as one of the greatest tacklers Varsity ever produced. His fine work has featured every game to date.

How does he do it? Subjected to the heaviest bombardment of spirals from the toe of "Howie" Carter, Billie Bell caught faultlessly and ran them back in superb fashion. He was tackled hard and often, but every time he got up and barked out the signals immediately.

TWO TRICOLOUR STARS

"Howie" Carter, on the LEFT, was worsted by Jack Sinclair in a strenuous kicking duel, although his punt of 70 yards was the longest of the game. "Red" Gilmore, Queen's spectacular running half, who was a dangerous threat in Saturday's match.

BLUE AND WHITE TEAM DEFEAT QUEEN'S LINEUP

pound Blue quarterback, comes in for plenty of praise. How he stood up under the gruelling tackling is a matter of conjecture. Carter, the Queen's kicker, carefully avoided giving the oval to Sinclair and Bell looked after practically all of the spirals and he caught faultlessly. It would have been too bad had Billy muffed one with a swarm of Tricolour wings around him eager to gobble it up and romp for a touchdown. He was subjected to the hardest kind of tackling and "Gib" McKelvey did not strain the quality of mercy. His tricky running back of Carter's hoofs had the crowd on its feet and his dash of 35 yards was one of the longest gains of the game. He and Jack Sinclair combined well.

McQuigge, Jimmy Sinclair and Dewar were Varsity's chief gainers through the line while Gooderham and Bennet, holding down the outside wing positions, performed in stellar fashion. "Blurp" Stuart, Queen's middle wing, was the outstanding line plunger of the day, and on one occasion he appeared headed for a touchdown after wiggling his way through a maze of Blue and White tacklers for 40 yards, only to be brought down by a hair-raising tackle by Johnny Keith. Time and again he ripped through the Varsity line for gains. Hamlin was another consistent plunger for the losers, while "Gib" McKelvey and Captain Ian Gourlay were the main cogs in their defence.

"Howie" Carter, Queen's kicking ace, received the worst of the argument between him and Sinclair, but he allowed his wings more time to get under his hoists. His punt of 70 yards was the longest of the game. "Red" Gilmore thrilled the largest crowd ever to witness a rugby game in Kingston with his open field running. He proved a hard man to bring down.

The game was held up for twenty minutes pending the arrival of His Excellency the Governor-General, who was the guest of honour at the game. Carter kicked off for the Tricolour against the wind. Sinclair returned it, the ball going into touch at Queen's 25 yard line. Three times the Blues were penalized for offside and they found themselves in midfield. Sinclair, hurried, delivered a long bounding ball which went to the deadline for Varsity's initial counter.

Shortly later U. of T. were again in a scoring position and Sinclair attempted a field goal which went astray and Carter ran it out. Carter booted, Jimmy Sinclair made 6 yards on a buck and then "Long Jawn" kicked for a rouge from his 45 yard line, Gilmore being downed on the play. The Queen's star had his pants ripped on the tackle and a human wall surrounded him while he changed on the field. An enterprising photographer was shooved away from the scene. Hamlin went through the Blue team (Continued on Page 4)

TRICOLOR TRIUMPHS OVER INTERMEDIATES

Costly Fumbling of Varsity Responsible for 13-3 Score

VARSITY OUTPLAYED

Queen's triumphed over the intermediate Blue and White team on Saturday at the stadium by the score of 13-3. However, the score is by no means indicative of the brand of play for Varsity, although always on the short end of the game, continually pressed Queen's, but several costly fumbles marred their chances of winning.

McKay, Queen's halfback, hoisted some beautiful punts, having plenty of distance and enough length to give his wings a chance to nah the Varsity halves. Varsity was greatly outplayed in this department. However, on the line the Queen's aggregation met their match. Time and again the Blue and White would break up the Queen's plays before they got started. The plunging of Gregory and Wally Fear, the Varsity middles, was a treat to watch.

In the first quarter Queen's had a decided edge. After moving the yardsticks three times, Rostnick, the Queen's middle, plunged for a major score. McKay converted. With their handicap right from the start Varsity got down to business and began breaking up the Queen's plays behind the line. They slowly advanced down the field and at the end of the quarter were in good position to kick a drop. Queen's 6, Varsity 0.

In changing over, apparently, Varsity changed their mind, for they decided not to take a chance in kicking a drop, and instead Winrow kicked for a rouge. Queen's got a close call when Garvie fumbled the ball on his twenty yard line. But McKay, his partner on the half line, recovered just in time with about six Varsity players all around him. The Blue and White pressed the Tricolour throughout the whole quarter and were just getting ready to kick a placement when half time was called. Half time score: Queen's 6, Varsity 1.

The third period proved Varsity's nemesis. Two fumbles in quick succession gave Queen's a rouge and a converted touchdown. This seemed to take the heart out of Varsity, for they played ragged rugby for the remainder of the period. Queen's 13, Varsity 1.

The fourth quarter saw the Blue and White come back strongly. They repeatedly made their yards. They gained two points by two rouges off

CAMP BORDENITES ROUNDLY TROUNCED

Orphans Hold Scoring Bee Winning Game by Score of 30-12

WILD RUGBY PLAYED

The Orphans held a scoring bee at the expense of the Camp Borden Airmen on Saturday when they handed the Fliers a 30 to 12 wallop at the Stadium. It was a somewhat wild and wild exhibition of the fall pastime, featured by numerous fumbles on the part of both squads. The Aviators started out well and looked as though they were going to make it interesting for the locals. At times they appeared every bit as good as Lou Carroll's men, but they faded in the last half and the Blues began to find themselves and play a little of the rugby they are capable of, running up a total of fifteen points in the two final periods to sew up the game.

Camp Borden drew first blood shortly after the start of play when they blocked one of Don Wood's kicks on the Varsity 40 yard line. Whitman grabbed the ball and ran the rest of the distance for a touch, the Varsity tacklers nailing him just a second too late. Lalonde converted.

The Orphans just about evened it up near the end of the quarter when Don Wood galloped thirty yards around the end for a touch which he failed to convert. Right after the teams turned around Wood tried to get a kick away on the run and it was blocked. Partridge picked it up and carried it to the Varsity twenty yard line before he was downed. On the next play Lalonde, who was playing a stellar game for the Airmen, found a hole in the line and crossed over for a touch, making the score 11 to 5 in favour of the Bordenites. The convert went wide. The Carrolites got a break later when Cable's kick was blocked and Monkhouse secured after nearly everybody on both teams had juggled the ball around. A kick then put Camp Borden on the defensive on their three yard line and on an exchange of hoists, Davey punted over the line to Lalonde and the diminutive Flier fumbled it. The ever-present Monkhouse was right on the spot, the ball bounced into his arms and he fell on it for a major score. Don Wood missed the convert.

The Orphans continued to press and were finally rewarded when, after forcing the opposition back to their four yard line, Cable got off a bad kick. Hodgetts made a nice catch and Varsity had the ball fifteen yards out. An attempted placement was messed up and Snider had to run with the ball. On the next down Don Wood made a beautiful run around the left end of the line and sprinted twenty-five yards for a touch.

Camp Borden kicked off to start the second half and Snider let the ball roll over the line, where he was downed for a rouge. The wind was against the Orphans this quarter and they fought on the defensive until Lalonde muffed a punt and Coleman snaffled the loose ball to run twenty yards. The Blues failed to take advantage of the break, however. They got another gift when Cable dropped a catch and the ball was dribbled up the field and over the line for a touchdown. Varsity 20; Camp Borden 12.

In the final quarter the Orphans were all over the Bordenites. Shortly after the start of the period they forced the Airmen back over the line for a safety touch. Then Bernie Hodgetts followed up under one of his the boot of Winrow, who, in this quarter, easily out-kicked Kesky. However, Varsity had to be content with only these two points and consequent defeat. Queen's, 13; Varsity, 3.

Queen's—Wing, Kesky; halves, McKay, Garvie and Conger; quarter, Agnew; snap, Austen; insides, Murray and Purvis; middles, Robinson and Hostnick; outsides, Bethune and Hollett; subs, Simmons, Stuart, McKelvey, Falkner, Alexander.

Varsity—Wing, Humes; halves, McMullen, Winrow and Litowitz; quarter, Blachford; snap, Buchanan; insides, Patterson and Coy; middles, Gregory and Fear; outsides, Reid and Salter; subs, Ship, Riggs, King, DeMille, Walters.

U.C. DEFEAT VICTORIA IN TORONTO REGATTA

Senior School Promised to Give Opposition, but Lost Out

University College won the inter-faculty rowing regatta, defeating Victoria in the finals on Toronto Bay Saturday afternoon. The regatta provided many upsets, School of Science being heavy favourites in view of past performances. In previous years the S.P.S. crews have walked off with all the honours.

Victoria and Trinity provided a close race in the first heat with the Vic crew winning. U.C. beat Junior School by a comfortable margin. Senior School also won handsily from Dentistry on Friday.

In the semi-finals on Saturday, U.C., gaining the lead at the gun, provided the upset of the regatta when they eliminated Senior School by a foot. It was a thrilling race, with both shells running neck and neck most of the course.

own kicks and, while the Borden halves stood around and watched the ball roll, he picked it up and carried it across the line for another five points. Snider failed to convert the score. Varsity continued to dominate the play for the remainder of the game.

Davey, Don Wood, Snider and Rog. Baker turned in nice efforts for the Orphans, while Lalonde, Cable and Partridge were the pick of the losers.

Varsity—Flying wings, Snider, Monkhouse; halves, Davey, Copp; quarter, Wood; snap, McCulloch; insides, Witzell, Peacock; middles, Scott, Peacock; outsides, Crocker and Baker; subs, Doyle, Gibson, Coleman, McGibbon, Lang, Rogers, Stirling, Solandt.

St. Michael's College, favourites to win the Mulock Cup this year, chalked up another victory Friday afternoon when they blanked the Forestry twelve 23 to 0. The powerful Irish squad had little difficulty in subduing their less experienced rivals. Although the Woodcutters fought every inch of the way, the result was never in doubt once the Double Blue steam-roller got under way. For St. Mike's the sparkling work of "Speaker" Burns was a standout. He ripped off one or two thirty and forty yard gains and twice carried the ball over the enemy line for a touchdown. Sheehy, who handled the kicking assignment for the Irish, was also a big factor in the victory, his long hoists proving great ground gainers. Edwards turned in a nice effort for the losers, while the tackling of Heggie also featured the Foresters' play.

St. Mike's—Flying wings, Nolan, Certe; halves, Sheehy, Schmidt; quarter, Burns; snap, Harrison; insides, White, Warren; middles, Hyde, Cameron; outsides, Koele, Whalen; subs, Calderon, Ryan, Bell, Lacey, Farant, Cavanagh.

Forestry—Flying wings, Meyer, Heggie; halves, East, Howard; quarter, Christie; snap, Creelock; insides, Boulbee, Bresley; middles, Sewell, McNutt; outsides, Bullock, McEwan; subs, Edwards, Reeve.

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

I am one who has followed the life and morals of several publications, one of which has been "The Varsity", whose life at the moment seems strangely high, and whose morals are low.

It is most unfortunate that a journal of such prestige should find it necessary to follow the mode set by modern advertising in search of unsavoury odours.

Feeling that I am no longer a best friend of "The Varsity", I shall not hesitate to state that, outside the ceremonial scent the physical aroma reminiscent of the fish-stalls arising from its pages can only be described as a hell of a stink. I remain,

Parking for Love-Making

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

May I say at the outset of this letter that it is not my intention to take up the argument of defence for those "captivated couples" who use the University of Toronto campus as a "champ d'amour". If it be against University regulations to so park, let the University police do their duty.

However, sir, may I point out that several remarks in the Friday editorial seem strangely out of harmony with the fine spirit of "cosmopolitanism" so ably taught by the editorial of the preceding day.

Surely the spirit of an act is its moral measure. Remember the dictum, "He that looketh . . .". Do you seriously contend that the art of love making is not practiced in parked cars by night as well as love's perversions? Consider the case of unfortunate fine young couples who lack the facilities of doing any entertaining at their places of residence. That there are many such people in Toronto I can testify. Why bring them with one fell swoop into the category of perverts and those who would take part in "street brawls" and retail "dirty jokes" regardless of time and circumstance?

You laud tolerance and the men that stand and act for tolerance—the mighty martyrs of old—the English ecclesiastical saints of vernal memory—and in our day, Ryan and his confederates and the Twelve Apostles of Trinity.

Why become intolerant of "all parking" and brand all "parking" as unethical and unesthetic?

After all, true love will find a way; that way often has to be the way of the parked car, (Canadian autumn and winters being a trifle chilly for canoeing), and does find a way in Toronto in High Park and adjoining areas, and in other districts too numerous to mention, besides the "last stronghold" of the "parked petter", the University of Toronto campus.

Yours truly,

Maximus Johnston Barber.

Wants Marching Song

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

Now that all the comments concerning our "Blue and White" and arguments pro and con regarding Rudy Vallee's intentions of broadcasting this song, have died down, a matter of no little importance is being discussed by certain groups of students.

This new question is none other than the lack of a suitable marching song to depict and express the true spirit of Blue and White.

It seems to me that there is enough suitable talent in this large university to aid in such a composition. A contest, attractive enough in its reward, could be staged, ending ultimately in the selection of the University of Toronto's Marching Song.

I agree that the "Blue and White" should not be sacrificed for the sake of jazz, but since at present there is no other alternative, this will be the result. Further, the "Blue and White" is not quite the type of song that stirs a team and its supporters with that feeling known as school spirit. In conclusion, may I wish luck to a Toronto Marching Song.

II S.P.S.

Craves Maturity

Dear Editor:

With your kind permission I would like to express, a few sentiments through the columns of your much discussed paper. I have read the Varsity for over four years now and have not previously craved this indulgence inspite of great desires to do so.

In my humble opinion, the Varsity has been considerably in error on several occasions concerning its subject matter. Regardless of repeated objections by students and members of the staff it has continued to print news which would be highly interesting to the self-conscious mind of fifteen years. Examples of this type are too numerous and well known to be recalled. If this apparently necessary discussion had any trace of value whatsoever to those who have so lavishly expounded it, why in the name of the Most High does its leaders not organize a society and have a thorough discussion of the subject. Then if they considered the matter of importance the press might be admitted. Two recent organizations namely the Fabius Club and Model Assembly of the League of Nations were formed before they had been discussed nearly so much as some of these other topics. Therefore it seems to me that in the future, those who are in charge of printing our highly valued paper ought to give more consideration to its contents. Let this be one instance where the majority do not suffer for the mistakes of the few. We want our paper but we prefer a paper worthy of mature minds over one full of gossip. Thanking you for your valuable space

Yours Sincerely

Loyalist

Editor's Note: The above is reproduced exactly as received. Any peculiarities of style are doubtless to be laid to the maturity of the writer, whose charity in setting the mental age of the average reader at fifteen years bespeaks a state of chronic optimism little short of phenomenal.

ANNOUNCE CONTINUATION OF STUDENT ART CLASSES

F. S. Haines, Director of Art Gallery, Will Be Instructor

The Art Classes which have now become a recognized feature of the life of Hart House will be held again this year. Mr. F. S. Haines, the Director of the Art Gallery of Toronto, will be the instructor, assisted by Mr. H. S. Palmer. The first meeting will be held on Thursday next, 30th October, at 7.30 p.m. and thereafter every Thursday in the Sketch Room. The fee for the entire series of fourteen classes will be three dollars ($3.00), for undergraduate members of Hart House, and five dollars ($5.00), for

STANLEY RUSSELL SEES CHANGED WORLD

Emmanuel College Students' Society Hear Noted Clergyman

SEE CANADA WORLD CENTRE

"You are entering the ministry in a great age, in a great church and in a great country," said Rev. G. Stanley Russell, M.A., at the autumn dinner of the Emmanuel College Students' Society on Friday night. "Although it is difficult for any age to comprehend its own significance, we are able to see that this is one of the most interesting, formative periods the world has ever known. The world is seeking to-day to re-establish its life on new foundations of peace. Racial relationships are changing. The superiority of the white peoples is being doubted even by the whites themselves.

"As the literature and art of Canada already shows distinctive traits and are the peculiar expression of her people, so is the United Church a distinctly Canadian accomplishment—the religious expression of the life of Canada."

Continuing, he quoted from a letter received from a friend in England who deeply regretted his isolation in such a remote land as Canada. "I wrote him," said Dr. Russell, "and suggested that he look at a map—if he had one—and he would see that Canada is right in the centre of the world. Her gates open on the Atlantic, the old centre of civilization, and on the Pacific, the new hub of the world's greatest activities. She is in constant communication with the United States and, through them, with the countries of Central and South America, which are more and more coming into the life of the civilized world." Dr. Russell, regretting that he was not born in Canada, expressed his joy at being a Canadian by marriage. "I am a son-in-law of the University of Toronto," he explained.

Theologians and Church students in Arts joined ranks a hundred strong in both the business meeting and the supper in Burwash Hall. Raymond McCleary, president of the society, welcomed the Arts students and, replying, Harold Day expressed appreciation of the Older Pal society which has been established in recent years between freshmen and their predecessors. Verne Zufelt, the "Pope" of Queen's Theological School, brought fraternal greetings and suggested the need of some means of intercollegiate fellowship among candidates for the United Church.

INTERNATIONALLY KNOWN

Hart House String Quartet

Which opened its Toronto season last night with a program in the Great Hall of the House from which it derives its name. Seven hundred students of the University of Toronto and a coler of distinguished guests were present to hear this internationally renowned musical organization in the first Hart House Sunday Evening Concert of the year. The Quartet is to appear again this season in a series of afternoon programs at Convocation Hall, specially designed for undergraduates.

senior members. It should be emphasized that the chief qualification for joining these classes is interest in and enthusiasm for drawing. Lockers will be given out at the first meeting.

VARIED PROGRAMME AT ALUMNI REUNION

Dinner Dance and Rugby Game to be New Features of Activity

WILL DISTRIBUTE PLAYS

Varsity Alumni are holding a reunion in connection with a homecoming planned for November 7-8-9. The committee, headed by D. B. Gillies, U.C. '03, are presenting a good program which begins with a dinner dance at the Royal York Hotel on Friday evening, November 7. The annual meeting of the Alumni Federation in East Hall, University College, will occupy Saturday morning. After lunch the graduates will add their cheers at the historic annual struggle between Queen's and Varsity on the stadium gridiron. Two entire blocks of seats are being reserved for their use. Following the game, the university earlhoneur will entertain with a recital on the carillon. The evening will be spent in the Hart House Theatre, where the Alumnae Dramatic Society of University College will present, for the first time in Toronto, A. A. Milne's "To Have the Honor". This group of players is one of the most finished and expert amateur groups in the city.

On Sunday morning a special church service will be conducted in Convocation Hall by a minister whose name is yet to be announced, and in the afternoon tea will be served at Hart House following another earlhoneur recital. The homecoming will come to a close Sunday evening with a Musical in Hart House.

There will be a limited number of tickets for the dinner dance available to undergraduates, concerning which further announcements will appear later. Detailed information concerning the program, registration and reservations may be obtained from K. B. Conn, at the offices of the Alumni Federation.

This new feature of alumni activities heralds a series of similar annual reunions if the first venture proves successful. As registration has just begun, no estimate of the probable attendance could be obtained from the secretary.

SPIRIT OF O. C. E. ENLIVENED BY CIOER KEG

Hard Times Party Shows Doleful Spirit of Teachers

Mocking the doleful spirit of the year, the Ontario College of Education gathered Friday night to revel at a "Hard Times" dance, the first class party of the year.

Dressed in copies of "The Varsity", one sweet girl graduate of 1930 said she represented the spirit of the occasion as it is a "hard times" year for "The Varsity" this year.

Many men were in he-man khaki shirts and not a few were in shorts. With gypsies, period costumes, and Jaek with "his" Jill, the gay gathering of graduates was like an advance showing of the Hart House Masquerade.

Stan St. John had a new one in a carillon imitation that made a great hit.

Some fortune telling and skits contributed with dancing to a gay evening that augurs well for the O.C.E. parties this session. Ryerson Douglas, recently elected president, played the lead in a bad-room scene of the best skit of the evening.

The keg of apple cider was just right for a "Hard Times" dance.

VIC FRENCH CLUB

The opening meeting of the Victoria College French Club will be held to-night at 8 o'clock in Wymlywood. All those interested in French are requested to be present. An outstanding speaker will address the meeting and refreshments will be served.

SECOND YEAR PARTY

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Mabel Capling, pianiste, favoured Hart House with the first Friday afternoon recital for this season.

The well arranged programme opened with two lovely 17th century Italian songs, "Kindly Forest" by the little-known Caldara, and "Should Florindo be Faithful" by Scarlatti. The German group was represented by Schumann and Schubert, and the latter's well-known "Wanderer" very justly received most generous applause.

The skilful and clever modern English school provided the concluding group of five songs. Painting a variety of moods from the exquisite "Cloths of Heaven" by Thomas Dunhill, to the pranks "Five Eyes" by Armstrong Gibbs, this group left artists and audience very happy and Gibbs "Cuckoo Fair" provided a most suitable encore.

Miss Capling knows what is expected of an accompanist and contributed two piano numbers.

One was impressed with Miss Fleming's skilful treatment of moods, her musical sense and her pleasing stage presence.

PREFER UNIVERSITY TO PRACTICAL WORK

Commerce Supervisor Says University Men Will Get Farther

STOCK MARKET HAD EFFECT

"It is not the possession of a 'degree' in Commerce and Finance that brings success, but the possession of a good degree," said Professor G. Jackson, adviser in studies in Commerce and Finance, when interviewed regarding the business success of graduates in that course.

"In spite of the fact that business is not good, the members of last year's graduating class in Commerce and Finance have been very fortunate in finding suitable employment. Our experience last summer was the same as it has always been. The really good man has no serious trouble in finding a job along the line chosen by himself, whereas the weaker graduate who only gets a degree by the skin of his teeth, always has considerable difficulty whether business is good or bad.

"Of course, four years here is better than four years practical experience. If it wasn't I wouldn't be teaching economics in this course," Mr. Jackson added. "So far my records show the highest starting salary of any member of our graduating class was $1,920 a year—the lowest was $900, the average being $1,360. Students take this course for different motives; some for the desire to make big money, more with the hope of at least a little money, others in order to qualify for special kinds of work, such as actuarial science. Some come with the mistaken notion that Commerce and Finance is a practical training for business, which notion we disabuse them of as quickly as possible."

Mr. Jackson thinks the stock market crash will, for some years to come, lead Commerce and Finance graduates to a much wiser choice of career. Too many went into the stock market when the bull movement was on. These are the ones who have lately suffered.

GREAT HALL NOISES WILL BE AMPLIFIED

The installation of a General Electric system of voice amplification is now complete in the Great Hall at Hart House. This system, which has been installed for the purpose of directing the voice away from the high ceiling and the walls and permitting speeches to be heard at the very far end of the Hall from the dais was first used at the Banting Institute dinner in September.

Due to the effectiveness of the temporary equipment the Governors of the University expressed their willingness to pay for permanent installation. This proposal was submitted to the whole Committee and to the Board of Stewards, and a sub-committee was appointed to meet Col. A. D. LePan and to discuss the best type of equipment.

Diners in Hart House to-day will note the two horns, one on each side wall of the Great Hall at the dais end which will direct the voice of the speaker to the body of the hall, to the back of the hall and away from the walls and ceiling. It will no longer be necessary to move the dais to the middle of the hall to allow everybody to hear the speakers at a banquet.

FLOWERS MAY AID TRUE LOVE COURSE

Such is Suggestion at Debate of Trinity College Men and Women

MEN AND WOMEN DISAGREE

"Resolved that this house say it with flowers," was the subject of a party debate of the Trinity College Literary Institute on Friday evening, October 24th. The debate was held in Trinity College Library and the members of St. Hilda's were their guests. When the men voted the debate was resolved in the negative. The house said it "with flowers," and the affirmative won when both the lady guests and the men voted.

Introducing the motion, Miss M. K. Pellatt of St. Hilda's College, showed how flowers could be made to express thoughts. "Can you, Mr. Speaker, remember the day when you approached your beloved and at the fatal moment of a proposal you stood speechless, yet, a bouquet of flowers served your purpose well! When she refused you, she could have hurled a sweet pea at you, signifying the refusal. Or, if this method of expressing thoughts is rather expensive, for our Aberdonian friends, they could use dandelions."

"If a man gave me flowers or something, I should prefer the or something," said Miss M. Thompson, the leader of the negative. Continuing, she showed how inept it would be to send flowers on certain occasions. "Picture a hospital, a young lady, recovering from a serious illness, surrounded by friends and a big box comes in, all nicely done up, the patient opens it and inside is a card on which are inscribed, 'with deepest sympathy'—this would have the opposite effect intended. I had rather have someone send me something more practical or do something for me, such as being taken to a movie."

"Flowers can mean many things, when sent to your mother-in-law's funeral," said J. C. Clough, second speaker on the paper for the affirmative. "There are other kinds of flowers," he continued, "flowers of courtesy and flowers of speech, such as when someone steps on your toe."

"That love of the greatest thing on earth, woman, should not be gained by flowers which soon languish and fade," said J. E. Graham, second speaker on the paper for the negative.

"If we wished to speak in January we should be florally speechless." Then he painted a very gloomy picture of two girls who went to live with their auntie. She had a very beautiful flower garden, one girl died of fever caused by a flower, the other became a dope addict from eating poppy seeds.

At this juncture the two St. Hilda's leaders were presented with bouquets

HART HOUSE QUARTET TALKS ON RADIO

"Yes, we enjoy giving one or two radio concerts each year," said the Hart House String Quartet to a "Varsity" reporter. This is not so much for the benefit of city folk, but rather for those in the far off North or those on the prairies in secluded places, where the opportunity to hear our type of music is not possible for them except through the radio. The better way of hearing us is in the concert hall, as it is with any musical programme, but the letters of thanks from countless listeners over the radio, are a proof of the demand for better radio music desired by people throughout Canada. It is a pleasure to note the increasing response, both in numbers and appreciation, which our concerts receive on our annual coast to coast tour. Our Convocation Hall series has grown from a medium-sized audience to one of almost capacity proportions." (Adv.)

of flowers. Then the debate was opened to those who wished to speak from the floor of the house. "Saying it with flowers is a most abominable phrase, for every flower has a soul just as much as I have," said C. R. Parmenter. "If she has put her foot in it, that could be expressed by a bouquet of lady's slippers, they have soles in them," said T. P. Crosthwaite, replying to the previous speaker, Mr. G. O. Murrell-Wright referred to the affirmative side as "a bunch of paid retail florist agents."

In reply the leader of the affirmative noted that the negative leaders had thrown their flowers on the floor, but had later placed them in a jug of water on the floor and how were they going to reconcile that with their attitude in the debate?

A discussion took place on the subject of the next party debate and one of the subjects mentioned, "Hell hath no fury worse than a woman's scorn," was rejected on the ground that (1), the house wasn't a woman, (2), the house had had no experience in hell. The subject finally chosen was, "That this house views with trepidation the future of swearing." The meeting then adjourned and refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Susquahanna College recently completed a six hole golf course on its campus. Clubs will be supplied student players by the athletic association but they have to buy their own balls.

Sophomores as well as freshmen are liable to punishment for violations of college customs at Penn State College. Both classes receive their punishment at the hands of the Student Tribunal composed of members of the upper classes.

That the city police took the part of umpires on the night of the S.P.S. fracas, was the opinion of several S.P.S. men. It is reported that this did much to create a favourable opinion of the Toronto bobbies, who were described by Bert Tyson, president of the Engineering Society as the "best in the world". Other tokens of esteem expressed by Schoolmen were that the Toronto police were the "acme of diplomacy"—especially so, when their attitude is compared with that taken a few years ago when they are reported to have used batons and whips.

A few nights ago, a Vic man, Boardmore, was "captured", painted with shoe blacking and placed in the hall where he was pelted with tennis balls, after which he was given soap and towel to clean himself as best he could. The spirit in which he took the "painting" excited favourable commendation among the School men. In fact since last week's fight much mutual esteem has grown up between the two faculties. Vic men stated to the School men that they enjoyed the fight (Continued on Page 4)

GRADS COME BACK FOR QUEEN'S GAME

Undergraduate Tickets Are

York Dance

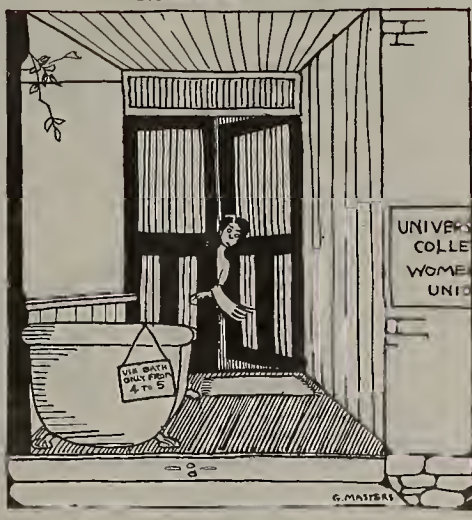

HART HOUSE PRESENTATION

Three days, the seventh, eighth and ninth of November, will mark the annual "homecoming" of U. of T. graduates. In connection with the "homecoming", and of direct interest to the present student body, is the dinner dance to be held on the seventh at the Royal York. "The cost per couple is seven dollars, and fifty tickets have been reserved especially for undergraduates—if they want them," Mr. Conn of the Alumni Federation, told "The Varsity" to-day. Mr. Conn stressed the latter point particularly. "Don't think we're telling you this because we can't sell them," he said. "We've sold a part of that fifty already. Undergraduates who want tickets had better apply immediately."

The rest of the "homecoming" program, arranged by the reunion committee, will give Varsity's graduates a chance to get in touch with student life again. Arrangements are being made with the Department of University Extension for a special series of lectures, the subject of which are to be decided by the graduates themselves.

The Queen's-Varsity game on Saturday, November the eighth, should see a large number of Old Boys in the stands. Two blocks of seats are being reserved for graduate rooters. Other high lights for Saturday will be the meeting of the Alumni Federation in the morning and at eight-thirty p.m., a presentation in Hart House Theatre of A. A. Milne's play, "To Have the Honour", by the Alumni Dramatic Society of University College.

TO MEET McMASTER

A lively interest was displayed in education by the women undergraduates, in the try-outs for the Women's Intercollegiate Debating Team which were held yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union.

The judges were Miss Irene Biss, and Mr. A. B. Hood of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The four chosen to represent the University of Toronto on the women's Intercollegiate team were Miss Agnes O'Dea of St. Michael's, Miss Bernice Venini, St. Michael's; Miss Ruth Sparling, Victoria, and Miss Isabel Jordan, University College. Miss Dorothy Smith and Miss Evelyn Scully of St. Michael's, were chosen as substitutes.

The team will debate first against McMaster University. The time and subject of the debate will be announced at a later date.

MONSTER BONFIRE ENLIVENS QUEEN'S

Playful Students Reverse Hose on Indignant Kingston Firemen

Last Friday night the limestone building of Queen's University harked in the ruddy glow of a monster bonfire, built by the students on the lower campus. Fences, planks, stray Chic Sales, and everything burnable blazed up in the darkness as scarlet, gold and blue sweaters and tams milled about the field and the Gacbe "Chacchell" rent the air.

Came the fire department, led by the chief. Fire hoses were dragged out and water played on the flames. This did not dampen the students' enthusiasm. Seizing the hose from the rear they got possession of it, and turning it on the firemen, washed them down the bank. So, amid futile efforts to stop it, the fire burned on.

Three members of the brigade suffered injuries in the melee, and as a result of the mauling he received the fire chief was confined to his bed. And now that ill-used dignitary is threatening the students with court action for interfering with the discharge of his duties.

Downtown Daily Sketches Students

A series of sketches of prominent campus personalities is being published by a downtown daily. Several student intellectuals have already been interviewed by the author of the articles. Mrs. K. Connolly. It is understood that particular attention will be given to students of foreign birth who have distinguished themselves since coming to this country.

MEDICAL BOOKS EXCEPTED

Are books sold cheaper in the downtown shops and departmental stores than in the University Press? is a question which crops up in the mind of every undergraduate faced with the problem of buying books. On Friday afternoon the "Varsity" went into this question very thoroughly with Mr. R. J. Hamilton, manager of the University of Toronto Press.

"There are a few books," stated Mr. Hamilton, "that sell for the same prices as those downtown, notably medical books, on which the publishers will not let us cut the prices."

"The books bought at the Press are certainly a lot cheaper than those bought downtown," stated one student when asked by the "Varsity". "I paid $3.25 for Tansig's Principles of Economics downtown which sells for $3.00 in the Press." Mr. Hamilton told a story about a number of students in Law who had clubbed together in order to buy their books cheaper. They procured prices from all the leading book stores of the city, whose prices Mr. Hamilton guaranteed to be better by ten per cent. As it actually happened, the prices were bettered by more than twenty per cent.

Perhaps dozens of instances could be found which would prove that books are cheaper in the Press than elsewhere. The following is a list of comparative prices prepared specially for the "Varsity".

Although the more general courses have their advantages in preparation for a course at Osgoode Hall, the law course is, according to Professor Norman MacKenzie, the best preparatory course of this kind.

"As the course is only two years old, no definite results can be observed as yet," said Professor MacKenzie.

"Until a short time ago, the entrance requirements for a course at Osgoode were nil. That is, the course was, and is, complete in itself, no knowledge of law being necessary. But," states Professor MacKenzie, "law is such an extremely large subject, that (Continued on Page 4)

A series of talks on contemporary German literature to be given by German scholars, is the feature of interest of the German Club this year. Speakers are to be invited from among the German department and from the downtown German Club. Mr. Victor Lange, the Davis Exchange Scholarship student from Germany, is to read the first paper at the opening meeting of the club on Thursday night at Wymilwood.

Music and drama are as usual included in the plans for this year, but in these, as in the literary part of the programme, a higher intellectual standard is aimed at, by the executive.

News Hound Sleuths Trace Unwelcome Gift To Unsavory Resting Place

After passing through a series of alien hands, the stray bath-tub which was left on the front porch of the Women's Union yesterday morning has at last found a peaceful haven. When tracked down by "The Varsity" after a long search yesterday, it was finally discovered reposing quietly on a dump by the side of the River Don, in the shadow of the Bloor Street viaduct, guarded from molestation or depredation by a vicious watchdog.

After a vigorous investigation, "The Varsity" eventually succeeded in partially untangling the immediate history of the porcelain Ulysses. Questioning of University employees revealed that the tub was probably removed Sunday night from Argyll House, which is under process of demolition. Intensive inquiring obtained no first hand information as to the manner in which the abduction was accomplished.

The tub was first observed by "The Varsity" early Monday morning, and a few hours after dawn a reporter was sent out with a camera to investigate. Due to insufficient light, no clear photograph of it could be obtained, but about 9.30 two men with a University truck appeared to remove it.

Schoolmen Vainly Serenade Co-eds

Grey skies and blue tempted three School of Science students to turn from laboratory smells to the delights of extemporized vocalizing yesterday afternoon. With megaphones fashioned from copies of "The Varsity", passing co-eds were lustily serenaded from the third story of the Little Red School House. To their sorrow, their yearning renditions of Sweet Adeline were in vain, and they returned to work minus any fruition of their love-calls.

CONVENTION BIG SUCCESS

The Fifth Annual High School Editors' Convention, held at Convocation Hall, it was agreed by those present, was both interesting and educational. Editors attended from points as far distant as North Bay and it was felt that the convention was the most successful yet held.

The convention was opened on Friday morning by Dr. Malcolm Wallace of University College. Other speakers were Miss Evangeline Powell and Miss Jean Hunnisett, who welcomed the delegates. An inspirational address was given by Mr. Vernon Knowles, of the Mail and Empire; another on Staff Organization by Mr. Andrew Allan, Editor of "The Varsity", and one on Humour, by Mr. Gregory Clarke, of the Toronto Daily Star.

Discussion groups on Advertising, News and Feature Writing, Art, Layout, Poetry and Humour, Short Story and Editorial Problems, were conducted by members of Sigma Phi fraternity and of "The Varsity". Afterwards the visitors were treated to a sight-seeing tour of the MacLean Publishing Company and the Daily Star. On Friday evening they were entertained at the Arts and Letters Club and Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts read several of his poems.

However, the various men's residences in the district considered the bath tub story juicy material and were profuse in their comments. They thought it a "damn clean idea" though the situation was a bit cold and awkward.

MARTIN UPHOLDS EUROPEAN STUDY

Scholarship Holder Returns from Trinity College, Cambridge

Canadian university students will be greatly benefited by a year of post graduate work in a European university, Paul Martin told the students of St. Michael's College, when they welcomed him back after a year of study at Trinity College, Cambridge, on the Wilder Scholarship.

Gratitude to the faculty of the college and an appreciation of the fellowship that he had experienced among the students while studying there were expressed in his address. Some of the things that he saw in Cambridge were also described.

Mr. Martin, who was the youngest Liberal candidate in the last Provincial election, was presented with a desk fountain pen by the Oratorical Club of St. Michael's College. The presentation was made by Bernard Wieler, president of the Club. He was introduced by Rev. Father E. J. McCorkell, Superior of the college.

Paul Martin, after taking a Master of Arts degree at St. Michael's, spent a year at Harvard University studying international law.

A remarkable opportunity was given yesterday afternoon to the women students of Victoria College to see the collections and stacks of Victoria Library. At 4.30 p.m. a dozen or more students of all years gathered in Dr. Barber's office. There he had assembled various articles from the library vault. Among this interesting collection was the original charter of Victoria University, granted in 1836 by William IV. Among the documents was the warrant for the beheading of Charles I, having as one of the signatures that of Oliver Cromwell. The collection of books included the complete works of Mary and Charles

NEW VENTURES

This is a day in which vocational guidance has almost reached the status of vocation itself. Particularly in the United States, in recent years, there have been an increasing number of centres established wherein those puzzled as to their future careers, may seek advice and receive practical help in the locating of suitable positions. Considering the progress in this field made elsewhere, Canadian Universities have been woefully slow in creating similar opportunities for their students. Not till this summer, so far as we are aware, has a vocational bureau been made available to University students in this country. Therefore the women of the University of Toronto may count themselves fortunate to know that it is within walking distance of their own campus that the bureau has been located. The work is being done by two of our own graduates, sponsored by the Canadian Federation of University Women.

It is significant that within two or three months they have already been sought by enough applicants to make their venture more than justifiable. Both undergraduates and graduates have already sought advice and practical help from this source, and the records show that it has been with gratifying success. An interest in, and intuitive understanding of, people, and a knowledge of available positions with the type of workers desired are, of course, the primary essentials for an adviser of vocations if he or she is to be a successful go-between for the one who seeks the position and the one who offers it.

It would seem that except for the student whose course definitely fits him or her for a professional position, undergraduates for the most part spend their four years here with a glorious vagueness about what is to follow graduation. Business, they suppose, many of them, or (and they say it in an if-the-worst-comes-to-the-worst tone), if nothing else turns up they "suppose they'll go to O.C.E." It is in helping to avoid weak-minded indecisions of this sort that vocational guides can best make themselves invaluable.

Coincident with the establishing of this bureau comes word that Dr. James Brebner, so long an integral part of this University in the office of Registrar, is offering his services to the high schools of Ontario, in a similar capacity of guidance for young people in the choosing of their vocation. His long and intimate knowledge of the courses offered by the Universities of this country, will make the sharing of his experiences of invaluable aid to collegiate students. Perhaps in a few years we will have conditions so improved that there will be a cheerful decrease in the now depressing number of students who, through ignorance, take insufficient matriculation subjects for the University course they desire. Perhaps, too, there will now be an increase of students who from first year are animated by the knowledge that they are preparing for a definite vocation in which they are vitally interested. At least we hope so. These two most recent signs make us almost optimistic.

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Imperial.

Her Wedding Night. (0). Clara Bow in a comedy role does rather well but the real star is Skeets Gallagher, who is funny. Story of young lady who does not know whether she is married to two men or to no man at all. Humour in situations; dialogue a bit flat; photography nothing much. First time we have seen Miss Bow without blushing.

Loew's.

The Big House. (1). Not an easy show to classify, 3,000 extras and a few leads in a drama of prison life, with a riot, an escape, a couple of stool pigeons and one reformed criminal who falls in love. A powerful picture that is lurid without being annoying. On the whole the extras were better than the leads. We almost loved the toothless old wretch whose dream of heaven he described thusly, "I was sittin' on a velvet cushion an' a thousand blue-eyed blondes was dancin' all around me."

Shea's.

The Santa Fe Trail. (0). The first western thriller to come to town for some time. Nothing very original about the plot. Sheepmen and Indians and a bad "hombre" and a misjudged young man and a pretty Spanish scortia. They are all there and all run through their parts well enough. Perhaps the stars of the show are Mitz Green and Junior Durkin, who are decidedly precocious detectives for ten and eleven year old children. Richard Arlen and Rosita Moreno are billed as the leads. The vaudeville show has one darn good act and several others.

Tivoli.

Check and Double Check. (1). If you believe in Amos 'n' Andy; (-1) if you don't. We think Gosden and Correll have put over a clever piece of work in their first picture feature. Amusing, natural comedy; droll, but not impossible. The white folk are pretty bad, but the coloured pair cer-

Doctor Knock

Whatever else may be said of Dr. Knock, the first production of the year at Hart House Theatre, no one can safely call it a mediocre show. During its whole length it runs to extremes—at one moment being very good, at the next rather bad.

The play itself, an adaptation by Harley Granville-Barker, from the French of Jules Romain, is very clear—monotonously clever. From beginning to end it is a satire at the expense of medical quackery; and such beautiful satire, that it is a real pity constant harping on the one subject from the same angle should render part of the dialogue boring.

The story concerns a doctor who buys a small country practice from the competent and good-natured incumbent. Realizing the delight of democracy in its ill, he puts the whole countryside to bed, and makes a fortune for himself, the chemist and the hotel keeper who lodges those who come from afar to visit the great Dr. Knock.

There are no sub-plots, no interwoven intrigues, nothing but duologue after duologue on the same theme. Indeed, except for the first act and a few moments in the third, there are never more than two persons taking part in the conversation at one time.

The first act drags because nothing happens. The second act is the strongest because there is humour in the situations as well as in the dialogue. The last act was obvious after the end of the second and rather unnecessary.

Nevertheless the house enjoyed each act and with good reason. Brilliance, even monotonous brilliance, is enjoyable.

Dixon Wagner as Dr. Knock was perfectly cast and carried his part as one felt it should be carried. His was the only quite satisfying performance of the evening. H. E. Hitchman, Purvis Wood, and Loetitia Wilson were all good with lowbrow character roles, though the latter was less at home and more obviously acting than the other two.

Of the rest the most satisfactory were F. J. Mallett, the village school teacher and Janet Mallett as the county aristocracy. Percy Schutte, as the amiable and unsuccessful doctor, was a good foil for the magnetic Mr. Wagner, but not entirely satisfactory in the role assigned to him.

We were disappointed in the staging. Possibly the best solution of the difficulties facing any director in this play would be the use of plastic settings, and the first act might well be played on a partly darkened stage in front of curtains. The use of exterior naturalistic sets on a stage as close to the audience as that at Hart House is not often successful. The interior sets of the third and fourth acts were perfectly in keeping with the atmosphere of the piece, but simplification would have shortened the between act breaks in a play that needs to be kept going at as rapid a pace as possible.

See this show. Not for a long time have you been offered such a chance to engage in dramatic arguments. —Nemo.

MY OWN INTERVIEW

"I am Mr. R. E. Noles of the daily Scar," began my interviewer, on entering my bedroom door at the Royal Fork, where I was staying temporarily with a number of other celebrities.

"As a matter of fact, Mr. McGuffey, I am in a dreadful hurry to-day, and I was wondering if you could help me with your interview."

"Why certainly," I replied graciously. "I suppose you wish to begin by saying just how I appeared when you entered the room."

"Exactly," said Mr. Noles, "although not altogether exactly, because as a matter of fact you were bending over with your back to me as I came in. Now that, as you can perceive, is hardly a base upon which I can build my story. Suppose I begin something like this—"

"It was with a certain sense of awe that I at last found myself in the presence of Gaspard. As yet he was nowhere to be seen, but presently a timid toe peeped out from under the bed, to be shortly followed by its owner, clad in a roomy pair of pyjamas."

"Were you thinking, Mr. McGuffey?" I asked.

"Yes, I always think under the bed; the solitude helps me," he replied.

"There," said Mr. Noles. "How is that?"

"Not bad," I said, "and you can say anything about my twinkling blue eyes, my unruly hair, and my alert, curious nose?"

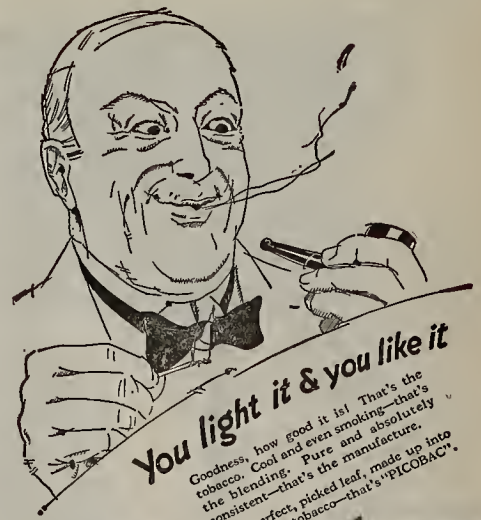

"Yes," said Mr. Noles, "we can say that later, but as yet I have not mentioned myself in the interview. How about something like this—'In a few moments we were both sitting merrily and noisily draining the contents of

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

St. Michael's College basketball team held a snappy work-out last night. They have been handicapped by a change in coaching half way through the season, and also by the loss of two players whom they had counted upon as regulars. A change in coaching is never very satisfactory, and as the Double Blue had counted on making their team a real factor in the series, it is especially disappointing. However, the players are turning out well and are willing to co-operate in every way, so that they have a good chance to produce a real team yet.

University College Juniors are also hopeful of developing a championship team. They have a wealth of good material, including Betty Thomas, intercollegiate jumping centre in 1929. Coach Fran Dale is enthusiastic over prospects for the coming season.

The baseball situation is becoming more and more complicated every day. Right now it looks as though at least one of the teams will have to resort to a playing coach, and the one-sport restriction is playing havoc with the line-up of all the teams.

U.C. WATERPOLOISTS DEFEAT TRINITY 4-0

Forward Line Combination Is Factor in Anglican Reverse

Junior U.C. won their second game in the interfaculty water polo series yesterday when they defeated Trinity by 4-0. A smooth working combination which makes George Spence's men a serious threat to the Eckhardt Cup, baffled the Trinity swimmers in the first half and three tallies were registered against them. After the rest period Trinity improved steadily and held their more experienced opponents to a single goal.

For Trinity, MacDonald, at centre, showed plenty of speed, and Winyard played a superb game in goal. U.C. forwards made a nice combined effort and the score indicates their effectiveness.

Jr. U.C.—Ross, Lealie, S. Smith, Hermant, Caplan, M. Smith, Christolm, Parker, Clute.

Trinity—Hunt, MacDonald, Merwynne, Cuttill, Winyard, Davies, Hamilton, Chambers, Archer.

The game between Sr. S.P.S. and Sr. Meds, was postponed because of conflict with a Mulock Cup fixture.

TRINITY DEFEATED IN GOOD CONTEST

Victoria Takes 14 to 5 Lead With Steady Team Play

Vic lowered the Trinity colours by a score of 14 to 5 at Trinity campus yesterday afternoon in an exceptionally well played Mulock Cup rugby game despite the soggy condition of the field. The Burwash boys as usual played steady football. Clarke and Hutton featured for Vic with their plunging and defensive work, while Willis kicked admirably. Vaughan and Bunt caught faultlessly throughout.

The Red and Black fought hard, but lacked the team play of their opponents. Led by Herberts, Clough, Edwards and Yates, they tried hard all the way.

About midway through the first quarter Vic blocked a kick and Willis punted a long one for a rouge. Early in the second canto Ferguson fell on a Trinity fumble for an unconverted touch. Then a Red and Black snap went astray and Rapsey was forced to boot it to the deadline.

In the third quarter Willis' rouge and Clarke's touch after a blocked kick made the total fourteen for Vic. Late in the final quarter Trinity broke through and secured near the Vic goal line from where Clough went over for a touch.

Victoria—Flying wings, Willis, Hutton; halves, Vaughan, Bunt; quarter, Sirman; snap, Addison; insides, Wiley, Truelove; middles, Lindsay, Clarke; outsides, G. Ferguson, Morfat; subs, Hendershot, Davidson, Doughty, Purchase, Armstrong, Willis, C. Ferguson, Hayden.

Trinity—Flying wings, Coleman, Clough; halves, Rapsey, Herbert; quarter, Edwards; snap, Martin; insides, Lemon, Yates; middles, Wilson, Spey; outsides, Perdue, Pegall; subs, Caffien, Fair, Fanningly, Rea, Murrell-Wright, Olmstead.

U.C. WOMEN IN TRAINING FOR INTRAMURAL SERIES

Two Arrivals from Last Year's Juniors Look Good in Practice

The U.C. women's senior basketball team has been practicing hard for the last two weeks in preparation for the interfaculty series which begins next week. Although there has not been a very large turn-out at any time, the coach, Miss Edith Blackwell, believes she will be able to field a team which will give the other contenders a real battle for first place.

Wilma Hazlett and Jean Allen, who have come up from the junior team, are showing up well and with Madge Newman of last year's senior team, form the nucleus around which the coach will build the team.

Freshmen at the University of Denver won a complete victory over the senior year of that institution when they recently painted the traditional senior fence all the colours of the rainbow.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Still water runs deep. A student body which became only faintly thrilled over the previous victories of the Intercollegiate rugby team was yesterday seething with real enthusiasm over the Tricolour defeat in Kingston. Snatches of campus talk brought out such phrases as: "Sinclair . . . 60 yard punts . . . Billy Bell . . . those running catches! . . . and can Johnny Keith tackle! . . . the line were just plunging fools . . . I think I'll go to London!"

Anyone who saw that ordinary display (to say the least), against Western, must have wondered how many teams the University puts out. It was certainly a different aggregation which met the Queen's onslaught and turned it back like champions.

The surprising thing about the victory was that the self-same players who came in for some harsh criticism against the London Mustangs turned in brilliant efforts against Coach Batstone's squad. The interference and line plays looked positively weak before, yet Dewar, McQuigge and the other Blue tanks ripped through for yards almost as often as the highly-touted Stuart-Hamlin-Morris offensive. In backfield work, Queen's mainstay when Harry Batstone and Pep Leadley were drawing the cheers, Varsity showed unmistakable superiority, with Sinclair and Bell making a wonderful bid for a permanent place in rugby's hall of fame.

All Varsity teams were idle yesterday, but the grind begins again this afternoon. The Orphans start intensive preparations for Balmly Beach, and a win next Saturday will tie up the race. The Intermediates have yet to break into the winner's circle, but it must be remembered that they are playing teams which correspond to Varsity's O.R.F.U. squad, and consequently are not to be too severely criticized. The Juniors play St. Mike's on Saturday morning, since they must complete the schedule of the group they have already won in order to qualify.

Rain or shine, the Interfaculty series goes on, and yesterday in a drizzling down pour the pursuit of the Mulock Cup continued without interruption. Victoria remained undefeated by trimming Trinity 14-5, Forestry overcame Knox 5-2, and Meds took S.P.S. 12-1. Judging by the scores to date, the race is between Vic and St. Mike's, with the Irish having an edge. The well-drilled Bay Street team have all the smoothness, speed and consistency which goes to make worthy title holders.

Coach Spence has done wonders with his Junior U.C. water polo team, and they improve every game. Clever combination and accurate shooting allowed their forwards to beat the Trinity goalkeeper four times yesterday, thus continuing their march for the Eckhardt Trophy which S.P.S. are defending.

M'GILL-VARSITY MATCHED IN 3-3 TIE

Red and White Backfield Star Checked by Efforts of Blue Forwards

The opening game of the intercollegiate English rugby schedule on the back campus of the University on Saturday, saw Varsity and McGill battle to a 3 to 3 deadlock. Both teams fielded strong sides and neither was able to make much headway against the opposing defence. McGill took the lead in the first half when Woods carried the ball over the line for a try. Despite some brilliant work by the Blue forwards, the Redmen managed to retain their lead until the period ended.

The last half saw both teams go at it hard in the attempt to score. Varsity had a slim edge on the play and Captain McLean finally got away on a great run which resulted in a try. The score was not converted, however, and the game ended with the score at three points each.

Varsity (3) — Duntan, Goldenberg, Crang, Bull, Cameron, Grimley, Lawson, McLean, Telford, Allin, Nash, Knowles, McKenzie, Macfie, Brown.

McGill (3) — A. Grimes-Graeme, Rice, Chalmers, Fogarty, R. Grimes-Graeme, Powell, Woodden, Woods, Luke, Hamburg, Skinner, Kincaid, Price.

PRESBYTERIAN FUMBLES GIVE WIN TO FORESTRY

Christie Crosses Line for Only Major Score of Game

Forestry defeated Knox yesterday 5 to 2 in a closely contested Mulock Cup game. The teams were evenly matched and it was not until the last half that a score could be chalked up. Knox made some costly fumbles, perhaps due to the drizzling rain, of which Forestry were quick to take advantage.

After Edwards of Forestry made a spectacular 40 yard dash, Christie, the quarterback, managed to wiggle through for a major score which was not converted.

Forestry—Wing, Myers; halves, Edwards, Heggie, Townsend; quarter, Christie; snap, Bullock; insides, Cree-lock, Bolting; middles, McNutt, Crutcher; outsides, McEwan, Sewell; sub, Howard.

Knox—Wing, Bullock; halves, Davidson, Knowles, Stevenson; quarter, Cuthbertson; snap, McDiarmid; insides, Symons, Hamilton; middles, H. Davidson, Lowry; outsides, R. Milligan; subs, Adie, D. Ritchie and J. Ritchie.

SCHOOL-MEDS GAME ENDS IN OBLIVION

Sr. Meds Take 12-1 Victory On Weather-Beaten Field

In a sloppy exhibition of rugby, Sr. Meds romped away from Sr. S.P.S. to the tune of 12-1 in a Mulock Cup fixture last night. The game was played on the back campus in a heavy rain and ended in pitch darkness.

The first period produced the best rugby and play see-sawed up and down the field with neither side being able to score. Meds scored four points in the second quarter on a safety touch and two rouges. The half ended with School pressing hard.

The Engineers threatened in the third period, but Howe fumbled when a major score was imminent. Bull kicked a nice drop later on for three points. In the last quarter Graham got away in the darkness for a sixty-yard run and Long pushed over for a touch. School scored on a rouge in the last minute to save themselves from a whitewash.

School dominated in the kicking department, but Graham ran back several kicks and made two long runs to put Meds in a scoring position.

School—Backs, Bailey, A. Jansen, V. Jansen; flying wing, Vigara; quarter, Kirk; outsides, Switzer, Joyner; middles, Montgomery, McLean; insides, Anderson, Zeman; snap, Fotheringham; subs, Howe, Buttrill.
Meds—Backs, Murbey, Graham, Caldwell; flying wing, Bull; quarter, Strong; insides, Bartlett, Massig; middles, Long, Spence; outsides, McCollum, Winsley; subs, Allan, Dunn, Gibbons, Thompson.

The latest fad for coeds at the University of California is turtle racing. According to an article appearing in the campus publication the races are run over a hundred yard track and require almost an hour to finish.

the sooner one rolls up one's sleeves and gets into it, the better."

"It would undoubtedly be a fine thing for a lawyer to have a knowledge of economics and history in a general way, business and the languages, but the professors in these courses say that it requires all a man's time to become proficient in any one of these departments and they could not be treated as a minor part of one's education." The law course in the University is sufficiently general to give one a liberal education, that is, to develop a keen and analytical mind, thought Professor MacKenzie.

The course in political science is very popular at the moment for those intending to enter Law. The first year in this course is practically the same as first year Law. The course in Commerce and Finance is a fine preparatory course, as the demand for corporation and business lawyers is increasing steadily.

exceedingly. However, some person created an unfavourable opinion among School men when he summoned the Toronto police on the night of the Victoria "Bob", making them believe that the Vic men were afraid of a fight.

Up till now no action has been taken in regard to the Victoria "scrap". No meeting has as yet been held with Dean Mitchell of the Faculty of Engineering. To-night there is to be a meeting of the Engineering Society to discuss the matter. When asked by "The Varsity" whether the Engineering Society could fine its members for misdemeanours, Bert Tyson, the president, said they could, but in a case which involved two faculties, it was up to the Caput to decide the mode of penalty. It is reported that after the meeting the students will parade down to the Dean.

The heads of the faculties did not know when the next meeting of the Caput was to be held nor could they give any information as to the probable action to be taken. It is rumoured that the Caput will not meet for three weeks.

How To Write a Letter Home Bath and Battle Help Us Some

By C. L. Coburn

Go to bed at 4 a.m. Sleep . . . long and loud. Dream you're a fire-alarm in Hades. Wake up. Turn off that alarm clock. Roll over. Sleep . . .

Wake up late for the third lecture. Shower, etc. Borrow writing pad, pen, etc., ex consuetudine. (Meaning from your room mate.) Ready? Begin.

"Dear Dad, your letter came all right. Tell mother not to worry, I'm getting to bed early every night . . . Every morning you mean. That's what comes of taking a girl from York Mills to the Musicals. And then wasting time over a bunch of missionaries in Queen's Park. Those guys did look runny, though. Eleven husky theologists toting a big white bath-tub across the park on a stretcher made of barrel staves . . . happy thought, frosh! They stopped as soon as they saw you, and three of them lay down in it for a rest and went to sleep. Said they were taking it to the Union because some co-eds needed it. Two of them said they were plumbers' agents trying to drum up business. And then you had to help them lug the heavy brute half a mile. It sure did look pretty when you got it there, though. Hope they use it. And so to bed . . . at 4 a.m.

"I'm mixing pretty well in social life here . . ." You certainly got well mixed in that big residence fight last week. Remember the fire extinguisher you turned on and caught that big fat muckhorn right in the . . . well, it caught him anyway, with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. And were you the chap that they took au naturel and threw into the hedge? Were you? Who scratched your back, then? Tell it to the Varsity!

"I went to Kingston Saturday and . . . and damn lucky to get back whole. You were the blaggard that tried to run away with the stadium at Queen's. Don't attempt to deny it, you did! Oh, damnable, sir, damnable! What in the name of Alexander's Sklydskrsld could you do with it if you got it? Use it to play miniature golf in? Or a garage for a baby Austin? Sure, keep it under the bed.

They suggested that it was merely some kind person making another contribution of peculiar nature, no doubt, to the Women's Union, and all agreed to send in a petition at once for similar contributions. "MY BLOOD IS UP"

Queen's Hall Freshies Get Punished for Upsetting
Boudoirs

It was all on account of some dirty work done by a fresh freshie; no one knows when or how, but when the upper classes of Queen's Hall, No. 9, arrived home after spending a portion of the evening viewing freshie skits, and initiation, they thought they were to go calmly to bed without more excitement but not some freshie had disturbed their rest by doing damage to their lounges.

"My blood is up," cried out a senior as she yanked off a dress and wrapped herself around a bath robe.

"Let's move their beds," cried out a vindictive soph.

Suiting action to words, blankets, spreads, sheets, pillows and mattresses were dragged out and deposited in the main hallway.

Then followed shoes, lace shoes, high shoes, party shoes, school shoes, new shoes, old shoes; all were intermingled. There was chaos—washing and scrubbing and all the freshies were muttering together because they had been ordered to continue making beds for another month. Was that sporty? Who says there are no complaints? Just ask the freshies in No. 9.

FRIDAY SINGSONGS WILL BE RESUMED

Songsters to Commence on Friday in East Room of Hart House

WILL USE LANTERN SLIDES

The mid-day Songsters are to start on Friday, November 14, the day of the Hart House Masquerade. These are to be held in the East Common Room. When interviewed by "The Varsity", J. B. Bickerteth, the Warden of Hart House, stated that a large repertoire of slides had been collected of many different songs. These lantern slides are now owned by Hart House. This year, the room is to be darkened by the addition of curtains in the East Common Room. G. Ross Workman is to direct these songsters and Angus Ross is the pianist.

When interviewed by "The Varsity" G. Ross Workman stated that these songsters are very popular, for the whole of the East Common Room is filled, that is, about three or four hundred. Asked whether he thought the songsters were fairly harmonious and also whether any improvement was shown in the singing of the students after they had sung at several songsters, he stated that there was very little discord and each year there were so many from the previous year that the freshmen were unable to produce discord, through lack of numbers.

It was a good thing for the students, because there was nothing much to do in the winter months, and the songsters provide a welcome change, he said. Asked what kind of songs were sung, he stated that generally, college songs were sung, as they proved the most popular and the students wished to learn them.

CHARACTERIZATION SUPERSEDES PLOT

"A Market for Every Short Story," Says Mrs. M. L.
Ross at Women's Club

MEN EMPLOY SYSTEM

"Characterization is becoming more and more important, gradually superseding plot," stated Mrs. Mary Lowry Ross, speaking on Short Stories at the University Women's Press Club yesterday afternoon in the Women's Union.

"The simple plot with emphasis thrown on character makes an attractive and saleable short story," she continued. However, speaking of men's writing, she mentioned that they showed more system, and correspondingly, employed more plot which, perhaps, for short stories, was advantageous, for character sketches were vainly hampered by the construction forms and by the lack of space.

"Every kind of short story can find a market," she said, adding that as a side line, good incomes can be acquired from free lance work, for which, at the present time, there is wide demand.

Mrs. Ross believed that women as a class were much less definite concerning plans for future courses than men, but seemingly drifted into whatever particular field they found themselves in in later life, "which," she concluded, "may be the reason for the lack of achievement on their part compared to men, who, all through life, generally have definite ambitions of some kind."

EXPERT CHESS CHAMPION WILL PLAY STUDENTS

Mr. George Eastman, well known Canadian chess expert and Toronto champion for many years, will meet all comers in a simultaneous exhibition at the opening meeting of the U. of T. A capacity crowd is again expected this year as the Hallowe'en party has always been popular with members of other faculties as well as Dents.

As well as the usual number of novelty dances, a special entertainment will be presented during the half time intermission. Mr. V. Basil O'Reilly is president of the at-home committee, convenors for the dance.

COMMEMORATE BIRTH OF ANCIENT SCRIBE BY ITALIAN LECTURE

Professor Conway Attributes
Present Greatness to Past Influence

DESCRIBES VIRGIL'S VALUE
Much of Meeting in Trinity
Library in Italian Language

"We owe Greece and Rome a great debt for many of our institutions," said Professor R. S. Conway of Victoria College, in a lecture held yesterday in the library of Trinity College in commemoration of the two thousandth anniversary of the birth of Virgil.

"It has been said," Mr. Conway continued, "that the English ideas of freedom and empire and the old Roman ideas closely parallel one another." The system of one large group composed of sections acting as aids to one another is common to both countries. The reason Germany failed in the Great War, in Mr. Conway's opinion, was because it aroused Britain to a sense of the danger with which freedom was threatened. For this reason also the United States, ordinarily a peace-loving nation, entered a war against an autocratic aggressor. It is Mr. Conway's belief that Napoleon also failed because of a misconception of the true meaning of "empire". He saw it as something that should dominate and gradually absorb all lesser powers.

"The British Empire is the only true league of nations," said Mr. Conway, "as war between the parts of the Empire is absolutely impossible." (Continued on Page 4)

Eugenics Group Discusses the Influence of Heredity

EXPERIMENTS CONDUCTED
Recessives Apt to Skip a Gen-

to Second or Third

Heredity was the subject of Miss Lucas's talk in the Eugenics Group on Tuesday. In this she pointed out that dark haired individuals vastly predominate in mixed breeds. The ratio is 9:3:3:1, 9 dark, one pure blonde, and the others mixtures. Various characteristics such as insanity, left-handedness and colour blindness predominate over the normal state, for instance, a strain of insanity will affect three out of four children in a family one of whom may be noticeably insane.

Left-handedness, is transmitted from the parent to a child of the opposite sex. Recessive characteristics such as light hair, will frequently skip a generation and be carried over to the second or third. Pure breeds have entirely dominant or entirely recessive (Continued on Page 4)

PEE-WEE GOLF MATCH BY COMMERCE CLUB

Professor Urwick Makes a Birdie Hole in One From First Tee

PRIZES AWARDED LATER

Indoor golf was given its first official University tryout yesterday when the Commerce Club held its first Indoor Golf Tournament.

Professor Urwick and Mr. Crookre officially opened the tournament by teeing off at 2 o'clock. Prof. Urwick scored a sensational hole in one, on the first hole, and Mr. Crookre did likewise on the 18th. Prof. Gilbert Jackson played his usual steady game for a 58. Mr. Ashley had the low faculty score, 50.

Low scores were far from plentiful due to the tricky layout of the course. The upper surfaced greens were true, and very fast. Mr. John Murray had the low score with a 44, and some anonymous player handed in a 65, which will probably stand as high score.

There was a large turnout, men dropping in all afternoon between lectures.

The prizes will be awarded at the Commerce Club banquet on Nov. 4.

Urges A Greater Mess For Next Vic. Row

"If there is ever a student rum-pus similar to the S.P.S.-Burwash affair last week, I hope you will make a much greater mess of things," said Mr. Hudson, supervisor of the Ontario Employment Agency, in his address to third year Commerce yesterday afternoon. "It took only four men to clean up the resulting debris and we can certainly place far more."

SPEECH ON INDUSTRY

At the meeting of the Oratorical Club at St. Michael's College at 8 o'clock last night, it was resolved that the Oratorical Club put on record as upholding the present policy of "The Varsity". This motion followed the speech of W. Hannah on "The Varsity", who could not understand the attitude of the Governors in regard to this publication, as it was hard to take exception to statements made in "The Varsity".

The speaker in remarking on the merits of "The Varsity", stated that he especially enjoyed the "Champus Cat" (Continued on Page 4)

U.C. SDPHS EXHIBIT CALM DIGNITY AT PARTY

Noticeable Lack of Cigarettes,
Meds, Schoolmen, But Other
U.C. Students There

All the dignity and poise popularly ascribed to the sophomores of University College was thrown to the winds in a mad whirl of gaiety last night at the Women's Union. The second year were holding their first party, a great success. The party proceeded in an unusual manner, the men outnumbering the girls by a vast majority. The music was provided by Allan McAndrews' two orchestras, one situated in the auditorium, the other in the dining room.

Although there was a noticeable scarcity of cigarettes and "Meds", nevertheless first and third years of U.C., some S.P.S. supporters, and even men from the Art School numbered among those present.

Refreshments served during the evening helped to enliven the party which broke up before twelve o'clock with yells from each faculty. In spite of the damp weather the attendance amounted to over three hundred.

The patroness was Miss Kilpatrick for the women and Professor R. Finch kept order among the boys.

U.C. FRENCH SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING TO-DAY

Musical Selections and a Short Play Promise an Interesting Evening

The French Society of University College is holding its first meeting on Wednesday, October 29th at 8.15 p.m. in the auditorium of the Women's Union. An interesting program is being arranged. Mr. Finch has kindly offered to provide the music for the evening, and a short play will be presented.

The Society wishes to extend a hearty welcome, especially to students of the first year, to attend this opening meeting in order to meet other students interested in French, and to indulge in conversation. Refreshments will be served.

POLITICAL DEBATE TO-NIGHT AT HOUSE TO BE REAL BATTLE

Confidence in the Federal House to be Under Question

NO OUTSIDE MEN SPEAK

Both Governments Are to Have Their Representatives Present

Hart House is to be the scene of a real battle to-night. All the Liberals and Conservatives of the University are expected to be present in the debates room to discuss the motion, "Resolved, that this house has every confidence in His Majesty's government at Ottawa."

The debates committee has adopted the policy for this debate at any rate of not having any outside men speak "on the paper". It is felt that this will give more undergraduates a chance to air their views on so important a subject.

It is well-known, however, that the Ferguson government will be well represented to-night and that Ottawa will also be heard from. In addition, Lou Golden, president of the MacDonald-Carter Club, told "The Varsity" yesterday that he expected a full turnout of the members of the club to support the motion.

The Liberal leaders, E. B. Jolliffe and T. J. Gallagher, said yesterday that in spite of the fact that the debate was being held in Tory Toronto, they were confident of success. R. J. Gunn and J. W. Binning, Conservative speakers, expected, however, that a real victory for Premier Bennett and his policies would result from to-night's debate.

It has been mutually agreed not to limit the discussion to the last session of Parliament, but to include in the debate the record of the Mackenzie King administration and the incidents of the election campaign.

EMPLOYING OF ARABS WAY OUT OF PROBLEM

Stopping of Jewish Immigration Cuts Off Much Capital,
Says Menorah Speaker

ALMOST ALL ARABS FREED

"If Britain is worrying about the Arab unemployment it is up to Britain to see that the Arabs are employed. A government interested in creating a land reservoir for unemployed could have transferred the excess Arabs to Transjordan," stated Mr. Meyer Weisgel, Editor of the "Jewish Standard", to the Menorah Society last night in reference to the Simpson Report on Palestine. The speaker pointed out that the stopping of Jewish immigration cut off the capital that was flowing into the country and which would have alleviated the situation.

"There is sufficient documentary evidence to prove that Palestine was never included in the proposed confederation of Arab states," stated Mr. Weisgel. "Out of 10,000,000 Arabs, 7,500,000 have been freed. The rest live in Syria with a considerable degree of self-government and in Palestine. They live in independent Arab states in Iraq, Yemen, etc. Not only that, but part of Palestine, T-Jordan, was cut off and given to the Arabs."

IS THE UNIVERSITY LIBERAL OR CONSERVATIVE?

To-night certain members of Hart House will range themselves on two sides of a hardwood table to debate on a vote of confidence in the present Dominion government. Whatever may have been the thought which prompted the members of the Debates Committee to select this subject for the first Hart House Debate of the season, the result of the evening's verbiage is going to be pretty generally interpreted as an answer to the question: Is the University of Toronto Liberal or Conservative?

That the division of the house on this motion is being regarded seriously by undergraduate politicians and their mentors, is indicated by the fact that the members of at least one of the two leading University political clubs have been instructed to turn out in full force—not necessarily to take part in the debate, but to cast their votes.

The University of Toronto, we hasten to assure panting politicians and party newspapers, has no political hue. On the continent of Europe universities are political. A whole university there will belong either to one political party or another. But with us it is different. The maturity of the average undergraduate here is distinctly less marked than in the Old World. Our whole attitude towards politics is more casual.

But Toronto is the Provincial University of a province where Conservatism is a religion and a stamp of respectability, and is located in the Toriest town south of the Arctic circle. It will be urged that—in spite of the fact that tie-clipping is more the metier of the student here than is the consideration of knotty political and economic problems—the U. of T. will show a decided Conservative cast when it comes to a vote.

Nevertheless, we suggest that the result of to-night's division might come as somewhat of a surprise to the present Ontario Premier and Minister of Education were he at the moment within sight of Queen's Park rather than of the Thames Embankment.

Art, Music and Drama

Dr. Moure's Recital

Yesterday afternoon an appreciative audience of fair size received the second organ recital given by Dr. F. A. Moure. With the exception of Handel, the composers were all of the twentieth century. The absence of Bach from the program was unusual for a recital given by Dr. Moure, yet there was present a marked sense of balance.

The Rheinberger Sonata in C major was the outstanding number; the rugged grandeur of the opening movement was softened by a contrasting middle movement, the Idylle. The toccata as the third and concluding movement was a majestic finale, reminiscent of a hymn subjected to an elaborate analysis. It is the writer's opinion that here Dr. Moure was at his best.

Handel's "Samson" overture had an unusual, yet pleasing combination of an andante, allegro and minuet. The dignified and perhaps too vigorous first movements were finished off with a delightful minuet movement that was somewhat Italian. In the shading from the minuet into the final noble bars, too great a change in the use of the pedals was noticeable.

The simple melody of Franck's "Cantabile," relieved the severer effects of the nobility of style in the overture. In a modern expression of classical beauty, a skilful interpretation of the religious and mystic elements intended by the composer, was accomplished by the organist. Debussy's well known "Sunken Cathedral," was rendered as well as the audience can ever expect to hear it. This tone poem of an old legend demands subdued effects for a successful rendering, no matter what the instrument may be. The applause for this number was evidence of Dr. Moure's unusual ability in keeping a sense of restraint in the easily exaggerated bizarre mechanisms of the work and in rendering a Debussy piece, that somehow affects not merely the ear and mind but the whole being of the listeners. An organ transcription of "Arabesque" fails to do that. A very ordinary "Etude" written in orchestral style by Shelley concluded the program. Dr. Moure far exceeded the usual possibilities of this rather vicious number.

H.C. Players' Guild

Perhaps most widely known for his play "Six Characters in Search of an Author," and most famous for "Henry VIII," Luigi Pirandello looms up on the horizon of the English theatre as a gigantic, powerful, rather un-life-like figure. The tendency to immortality and the suggestion of insanity, even in his writings, only increases his fascination for his by no means insignificant public.

"The Vise," which is to be presented at the U.C. Players' Guild to-day under the direction of Mr. Stanley

With the Theatres

GLOBE THEATRE

Last night we visited the Globe Theatre and came away disgusted with the Ontario Board of Censors. Not that they have cut the show to pieces or anything like that. On the contrary we doubt if a censor ever goes near the place. If we were a censor we would consider it our duty to visit this theatre regularly and would certainly think it more in our line with our business to use our influence against the rat we saw running across the floor one day this year or to inquire into the exact meaning of the jokes at which the whole house roared with uncertain laughter at frequent intervals, or even to discover if the chorus girl in blue really was wearing the clothes generally required as the minimum for decency in Toronto, rather than to carefully ban from motives of sham patriotism a remarkably produced film like Hell's Angels, or to render disgusting because suggestive about one out of every five films shown in this city by cutting the dialogue in perfectly obvious situations.

The Globe is an interesting theatre. More students ought to go there. Only don't go with a girl who is inclined to blush. It might be embarrassing.

Last night there was a 1928 silent picture with Ruth Chatterton, called The Sins of the Fathers. Ruth Chatterton has improved after all. Then there was a slapstick comedy—very slapstick. And then of all things in this year of grace, the eighth reel of a thrilling serial. This section ended with the villain cracking the hero over the head with a china bowl, and the hero falling through a curtain into a mysterious dark hole.

Then came the vaudeville; and the audience, 90 per cent. men and 10 per cent. women, rose from their slumbers. There were eight chorus girls dressed in five kinds of costumes, dancing the same step (they only know one), to the music of an orchestra (piano, saxophone and drum). Make-up emphasized red on the cheeks and blue on the eyes. By the way, next week there is an Amateur Contest on Monday night. Tuesday is devoted to chorus and whoopee. And for Wednesday night, the management has arranged a garter contest.

The humour of the three comedians was interesting. "He who laughs last, laughs best," was a jest that brought down the house. "Give her an edge of a cushion (education)," was almost worthy of Groucho Marx. "No, there ain't no single bed bug there; they have all married with families," was the high light of the evening in the opinion of many.

The song hit of the show was an effort rendered by the comedians at a mock revival meeting:

Reform, reform, Oh, we'll reform the world,
Oh we'll reform the world that's being spoiled.

to the tune, Hurrah, hurrah, my father's going to be hung. The revival was broken up by a cute voice from inside the Cabaret, "O sweet daddy, kiss me".

THREE POINTS ESSENTIAL TO TRUE ROMANTICISM

Development of Romanticism Traced by ather Bondy at St. Joseph's

Romanticism has three essentials, individualism, religiosity, and the painting of external nature. Father Bondy told the French Club at St. Joseph's College last evening. In its quality of fascination it has great power. It is better not to imitate romanticism, but to read it only, he stated.

Chateaubriand, le grand peintre de la nature, and a romanticist of the first order, was in the toils of the mal du siècle. Rousseau, the father of Romanticism, introduced sentiment into religion and literature. Romanticism must come from the heart, Father Bondy said, as did that of Rousseau, of Lamartine, and de Mussey. Sometimes Romanticism has been called liberalism in literature.

Ryerson, has been called a study in suspense. Psychological tragedy at its most gripping intensity is the category of this play.

We have so many attractive excuses to offer for writing a short Cat to-night that we cannot set them all down without going beyond our space quota. Suffice to say that we have writers' cramp, croup and partial mental paralysis, complicated with galloping chilblains and a touch of jungle fever.

THOMPSON, O.A.C., FINISHES FIRST IN INTERFACULTY HARRIER

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Plans for the organization of badminton are going ahead apace. At University College, the club, which has been in existence for two years, held its first meeting on Tuesday and the draw for the tournament will be posted at once. At St. Michael's College plans are being held by lack of gymnasium or hall in which to play. If the Double Blue do form a club, the two colleges should go one step further and have an interfaculty tournament. Enthusiasm for this game is increasing rapidly, and such a move would almost certainly lead to the organization of badminton as a regular intramural sport.

Instead of the annual tag-day to raise money for the trips of the basketball and hockey teams, the different colleges have been taking charge of parking stations every Saturday at various strategic points around the stadium, and so far the venture has been very successful. It is much more satisfactory to raise the necessary funds in some such way as this than through theatre nights and tag-days and "miles of nickels", as has been the custom in former years.

The schedule of the interfaculty baseball will be announced to-morrow. It is thought that the games will not begin for at least two weeks, since some of the teams are having difficulties in getting gymnasiums and coaches.

Girl students at Hood College, Frederick, Md., have been allowed only one bath a week for the past few weeks, because of the water shortage which has kept the town on a restricted consumption basis.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

The intercollegiate invades the Molson Stadium Saturday and only the well-known miracle will prevent another Blue victory, although McGill are considerably improved since the opening game here. Bill Lovering, trick knee and all, is back on the Red half-line handling the kicking. Lovering is far from being in Sinclair's class as a booter, but at that he is miles ahead of Al Swabey, who kicked for the Redmen in their last appearance here.

We figure that the Blue and White are good for a ten-point win at least, unless there is a train wreck on the way down to Montreal.

So far, the outstanding feature of every senior intercollegiate game has been the great booting of Jack Sinclair, whose toe has accounted for every one of the twenty points scored by the team. Without taking away any of the credit due to Sinclair's great efforts, we want to point out one or two facts which are apt to be overshadowed by Jack's phenomenal work.

To begin with, no kicker, no matter how good, can be effective without protection. This is obvious to anyone who knows the game, but the average fan often overlooks the fact. In all three games to date the Blue linemen have accorded Sinclair just about perfect support in getting his hoists away.

The "T" wings also come in for a big share of credit for the team's showing. Keith's tackling has been outstanding all the way, but Bennet and Gooderham have not been far behind.

When it comes to line work we back the Blue front line against any in the Union, and with the possible exception of the Western machine. Even the Mustangs failed to show any great margin over Varsity, however, and we consider the Londoners to have one of the best-drilled and most powerful lines in senior rugby.

KEEN PLAY-OFFS FORESEEN

St. Mike's Likely to Win Their Group to Meet Sr. Meds,
Sr. School, Vic

With the aim of winning the Mulock Cup, emblematic of the interfaculty rugby championship, the teams of the various faculties have been showing a great deal of friendly rivalry to date. Many hard fought and interesting games have resulted and when the schedules are completed the play-offs between the group winners should be more than worth the price of admission. In each group half the scheduled games have been played and it does not seem hard to pick the ultimate winners. However, upsets have occurred before this. The remarkable showing of St. Mike's occasioned little surprise. The Irish were expected to play smart rugby and the scores they have piled up against their opponents shows that they have done so. It seems absolutely certain that they will win Group IV and many pick them to beat for the Cup. In Group I, Sr. Meds have so far gone undefeated, and will be hard to dislodge from the top. Sr. School also boast of a clean sheet in Group II, but a defeat at the hands of Pharmacy will tie things up. Vic, 1929 cup holders, have so far encountered little opposition in Group III and seem to be headed for the play-offs also. A summary of the group standings to date is given below:

GROUP I

Senior Meds	3	0	6

R. Thompson, of O.A.C., nosed out Wally Graham, Meds, by 2 seconds, in the annual interfaculty harrier race held at Upper Canada College yesterday. His time on a muddy course was 32 minutes, 7 seconds. Kendall, also of O.A.C., placed third. O.A.C. won the Brotherton Cup, defeating Meds by a scanty three points.

The race was keenly contested and despite the slowness of the track the times were fast.

The team that will wear the Blue and White colours at the intercollegiate harrier race at Kingston, November 15, has not yet been chosen. Don Smith, who has represented Varsity for the past two years, did not run yesterday. He will be given a tryout before the squad is selected. Hayward is another strong contender for a place.

Wally Graham, intercollegiate champion for the one and three mile runs, has definitely stated that he does not choose to run in this year's intercollegiate harrier. His loss to the team will be greatly felt.

ST. HILDA'S BUSY TRAINING

St. Hilda's are going to have a busy week-end getting into condition to meet Senior Vic next Monday in the first of the interfaculty basketball games. The team has not yet been decided upon and a great deal will have to be done in the next practice to get into shape. Bea Symons, Sally Ballard and Fran Crooks, as forwards and side-centre, are the strong points of the team. A side-centre and one guard have yet to be chosen. No material has been taken from the freshmen, though there are some good prospects for next year.

S.P.S. DEFEATS DENTISTRY IN ONE-SIDED STRUGGLE

S.P.S. defeated Dents two goals to nil last night in an interfaculty soccer match. Dents were handicapped by not having a full turnout, only nine men being available. This may have affected the score as they put up a stiff fight. Franklin and Billett got the counters for S.P.S. The players on both teams were inclined to bunt, thus spoiling some of their effectiveness.

THREE TOUCHES

The School Juniors took their ancient rivals in to camp for the second time, when they ran up 17 points to whitewash the Jr. Meds yesterday afternoon on the back campus in a Mulock Cup fixture. This places the School Juniors at the head of their group standing with three straight wins and no losses. In outclassing the Meds the high lights of the School play included three touches by Hewit, Lichty and Hallett; some wonderful tackling by Stubbs, and the broken field running staged by Hallett. Stuart was the only outstanding player on the Meds line-up. Meds lost a valuable line man when Chenoweth was carried off with a slight concussion as a result of a nasty kick on the head.

Cat. "In fact," said he, "I think it is the best part of the paper."

"Some people," said he, "take exception to the sensationalism sometimes seen in 'The Varsity'. Personally," he said, he enjoyed reading about Rudy Vallee and bathtubs. He also pointed out that "The Varsity" was the potential mouthpiece of the University.

Following the urge of B. Wieler, that if the Governors chose to withdraw their support, everyone should feel bound to keep up the paper by voluntary subscription as well as by moral support.

Speaking on Industrialism, Fred K. Dell, in an elaborate argument, pointed out that waste was essential to culture. He said that mass production called for mass consumption and that though there was a limit to the necessities required, there was no limit to the amount of merchandise that could be wasted. Producing happiness and therefore culture. The speaker made mention that hair tonic was good for the feet.

Other speakers were J. Dore, H. H. Ford, Chas. Henry. The following were elected members: J. H. Davidson IV, G. Gallagher IV, B. J. Ryan III, G. P. O'Connor II and W. Bennett I.

It's a hell of a life, said the Queen of Spain . . . but a man's a man for 'a' that. What would a man be if he weren't a man? An archangel? Answers must be accompanied by a self-addressed envelope with a loose stamp attached. Was it Spain that issued a stamp and then recalled it because it was too loose? Picture of torrid maiden seeking relief from tropic sun in manner approved by the Eden fashion club. Toronto has no such prejudices. See illustrations on one of the bills issued by a well-known Canadian bank. Well-known Canadian bank reports serious run, bills of high denomination particularly in demand. Other banks plan new issues. Maybe the censors don't know about this scandal of pornography in our midst. Obvious reason. Change cars.

Went downtown to-day to see Amos and Andy. Funny show (adv.). Don't go (adv. paid for by Loew's). Speaking of this and that, who's been to the Globe? Hot, eh? Those . . . and those . . . not to mention those . . . Change cars.

Bathtubs. Hurr! Always good for a laugh. It seems that North House was suspected of making the donation. Those generous college boys. Maybe they didn't need it themselves. Why not? COMMEMORATE VIRGIL fessor Conway concluded his lecture by reading and translating some of the beautiful and stirring passages of the Aeneid.

Professor E. Goggio of the Italian department in University College followed Mr. Conway's lecture with an informal talk on the value of Virgil to the people of Western Europe. He interpreted his speech with reading selections from Virgil.

Though a great deal of the lecture was delivered in English, the meeting was held primarily for Italian students and Mr. Conway held an informal discussion in Italian at the close. Professor N. D. DeWitt of Victoria College, was in the chair.

VICTORIA RECEIVES ITS BASHFUL FROSH

Formalities Are Cast Aside at the Annual Victoria Reception

MANY SIDE ATTRACTIONS

Casting formality to the winds, Victoria College held its annual freshman reception recently. Remaining true to the college tradition, the students dispensed with dancing for the night.

Freshmen unwittingly were introduced to shy freshmen by their knowing seniors. Off they went to partake of the joys of a promenade, or venture into some wicrd fortune telling booth to learn their fate.

This year's reception was the best managed that "The Varsity" has ever attended. There was a program in the college chapel of just the right length, which struck a new note in college entertainment.

The guest artist of the evening was Mr. M. B. Bodington, radio artist of station CKGW. His entertainment was extremely popular, the audience demanding several encores.

During the evening, several side attractions were run off. The dramatic club staged a very fine one-act play in the Alumni Hall. Everyone enjoyed Madame Tussaud's wax works. "The Varsity" heard several inquiries regarding the take off on E. B. Joffile. It was good.

Such attractions as a ghost house and a college Woodbine all drew large groups of spectators. The hour of departure came all together too soon for the merry-makers.

Twenty-six per cent. of the annual income of residents of the United States is spent on food.

MEDS CONQUER VIC 1-0 IN TIGHT SOCCER MATCH

Med's nosed out Vic 1-0 in an interesting, well played soccer match yesterday afternoon. The game was hotly contested from start to finish, both teams displaying air tight defences and fast, hard working forwards. Meds, though hardly displaying as much form as the scarlet lads, put a large amount of "go get 'em" in their play with the result that they had a margin in territorial play. Meds led by some fine playing by King and Whitlaw, pressed at the outset for some minutes until Victoria, about midway through the half, relieved, due to fine work by Organ and Norman.

In the second half Meds continued to be the aggressors, and after about 12 minutes of play were rewarded. Victoria—Little, Simpson, Ingles; Medcalf, Organ, Beacon, Hughes; Hughes, Norman, Grills, Searle. Meds—Hobbs; Haugh, Webster; Nodwell, Lee, Huffman; Robinson, Steen, King, Dickson, Whitlaw.

Marble Pool on Palatial Liner

The cautious miss in the corner (left) who evidently does not believe the assurances of the two already in the tank that the water is warm need not test it for one of the features of the 26,000 ton liner is that the golden dolphin seen in the background apouts warm or cool water as desired. One hundred and sixty tons of water are needed to fill the tank.

Surrounded by dressing rooms, showers, and electric baths, the swimming pool has its own cafe with rubber-cushioned chairs where attendants serve warming drinks with Oriental impassivity.

CHARMING LECTURER DISCUSSES INDIAN POLITICAL TOPICS

First Indian Woman Admitted

FIRST CLIENT MURDERESS

Wide Open Spaces on Campus Impress Visiting Lecturer
as Unusual

"I was the first Indian woman to go to Oxford; they opened the law schools to me," stated Miss Cornelia Sorabji, secretary of the Indian Federation of University Women to "The Varsity" last night. "On my first case I defended a woman accused of murdering her husband. Yes, I won it, and after that I applied all over for entrance to the courts, to help the women of India previously handicapped by having no legal support."

Miss Sorabji in 1892 got her degree at Oxford, then her L.L.B. at Bombay. She has an office in London, but feels that she is needed more in India to help India's women. Coming from a wealthy intellectual class, the Parsi, Miss Sorabji is charming in appearance and manner. "I once had an elephant for a client. I must tell the students about that," she concluded.

Though she was most unfortunately delayed due to a passport misunderstanding, her first impression of Toronto was one of the wide open spaces of the University grounds. She has toured America, and is entering Canada for the first time.

During her three days in Toronto she is lecturing on Indian politics, the women of India, and similar topics. On Friday afternoon before leaving Miss Sorabji is to speak to a mass meeting at Convocation Hall. "We have an exchange market of friendship with you. India has as much to take as to give," she said, adding, "I am divided between India and England. America now claims my love, and now that I have set foot in Canada, perhaps I shall be divided in four!"

COURSE PLEASES FRESHIE

"The men in my year more than compensate for the absence of other girls," confided Miss Cowan, only co-ed in first year Dentistry, when interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday. "Even having to wear a collar and tie the first week didn't upset my dignity in the least."

"There's absolutely no other course," stated Miss Leslie Leitch, fifth year Dentistry. "There are so many opportunities for women in the dental profession that it's a shame more of them aren't interested."

"We're so isolated from other women of the university that the outside life is rather boring," said Miss Milner, second year. Long hours and hard work are the main features of the course, but we're all faithfully keen on it. We only regret that more girls don't view it in that light."

LIBERAL PARTY EMERGES VICTORIOUS FROM CLOSE DEBATE AT HART HOUSE

Confidence in Government

Bennett not Given Voting Majority in Recent Elections

Breaking down the established traditions of Tory Toronto by defeating the motion, "Resolved that this house has every confidence in His Majesty's government at Ottawa," University of Toronto male undergraduates gave a majority in favour of Liberalistic doctrines at the first Hart House Debate of the season held last evening. The official count showed that 159 members voted in favour of the motion, while a bare majority of 7 votes allowed the dissenters from the motion to defeat it with 166 votes.

For the supporters of the motion, J. W. Binning of Victoria College, and R. J. Gunn of St. Michael's College, upheld the Conservative cause, while E. B. Jolliffe of Victoria College, and T. J. Gallagher of St. Michael's College, spoke against the motion.

"This motion would have the support of every Prime Minister in Canada," J. W. Binning stated, in introducing the subject. Briefly he sketched the history of the Conservative party in Canadian politics, declaring that the people have again entrusted the party with a sacred duty, that of solving the present condition of depression.

Assailing the Bennett administration for the manner in which it "held the smoke screen of Mr. Bennett's necessity for departure to the Imperial Conference while at the same time legislation was railroaded through the Parliament without due opportunity being given the opposition for consideration," E. B. Jolliffe vigorously decried the policies of the Bennett

MANY FAMOUS SPEAKERS

Rt. Hon. Sir Thomas White, distinguished as a politician and a financier, will be the guest of honour and principal speaker at the opening dinner of the Commerce Club, which will be held in the Great Hall of Hart House on Tuesday, November 4. Sir Thomas White, as Minister of Finance in the government of Sir Robert Borden, rendered distinguished service in piloting the country through the war years, in charge of the finances. It was he who devised the measures which were subsequently incorporated in the War Finance Act at the time of the emergency of 1914.

In past year the Commerce Club has had such distinguished speakers as the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Sir Joseph Flavelle, chairman of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; C. L. Burton, president of the Robert Simpson Company, and Sir Robert Falconer.

HART HOUSE POOL CLOSED

The swimming pool in Hart House will probably not be open for the rest of this week, "The Varsity" was informed to-day. This is due to the fact that the work is done at night when the water can be cut off.

The present filter has been in use for six years and will take several days to repair. This will cost in the neighbourhood of $400. While this is being repaired valves leading to the tank are also being overhauled.

There are four men on the job every evening after 11 o'clock when the water is turned off.

Corset Clasps, False Teeth Vie; Hart House Debater Mounts Chair

By A. E. F. A.

"Upon what authority does the honorable gentleman opposite base his contention that a country needs government?" was the high spot of an evening of some of the dullest and most ineffectual verbal barrage that has ever drubbed a Hart House Debater into the arms of Morpheus. Mr. Gallagher, Hon. member from the corner of Bay and St. Joseph's, was the daddy of this mot . . . Mr. Gunn had felt that government of some kind was essential.

"Where is Gunn going?" became a pertinent question for a while. But the Speaker was more worried about the fate of the mace, which seemed in danger of seeing service as a toast-clip fork.

The Doukhobors and the Ottawa charwomen were dragged into the discussion, while the false teeth—unmounted—were extracted from the midst of the Dunning Budget. Corset clasps, too, had their day when a government speaker rolled his tongue lovingly about the phrase to remark that it brought a picture to his mind . . . Corset clasps, however—according to the Speaker—were "unknown to this house."

The question as to whether an hon. gentleman "said no such thing" or did not say "no such thing" became increasingly moot.

After having announced, in a manner which would have brought joy to the heart of a D'Oyly or a Carte, that he agreed with Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan in letting the punishment fit the crime, Mr. Hermant not only saw Mr. Bennett as "raw material," but saw "The Varsity" as "the petit publication of this University." Only, he pronounced it petit, and went on to remark that Mr. Bennett was holding his end up . . . Mr. Hermant is what is known as a suggestive speaker.

With consummate grace, Mr. Dignan was able to drop casually into a Lower-East-Side patois to suit his purpose. Mr. Dignan does not know what it is to be out of a job; that's why he's at university, he says.

"The Roman holiday of the Saturnalia is closely allied with our Christmas," said Professor R. S. Conway, in a lecture held yesterday in Trinity College library. "From Dec. 17th to Dec. 20th, the birthday of the sun was observed in Rome in the centuries before Christ. People roamed the streets, calling 'Happy Saturnalia', just as we call 'Merry Christmas', wore fools' caps, and gambled openly in the streets. Romans were not thought much of, who stayed sober all this time."

Many objections were raised to the establishment of a group sickness insurance scheme at Varsity, by several undergraduates.

The following are typical of the statements made to "The Varsity": "Altogether impracticable, in a university as large as ours. It may be feasible at Western where there are comparatively few students," says a Trinity undergrad.

Art Bridges, 3T4 U.C., remarked: "If they brought that system in, everybody would be sick all the time." "It would be of value only to rugby players and jay-walkers," said W. E. Beamish, 3T3, U.C.

ACTRESSES NOT APPROVED

"Husbands in ancient Rome often died at the hands of their wives, who resorted to stern revenge if undue restrictions were imposed," stated Miss Hughes at the meeting of the University College Classical Association at the home of Professor E. T. Owen last night.

"Roman suffragettes surrounded the homes of the tribunes and forced them to withdraw their opposition to women's emancipation. Noblewomen left their household duties to hail men on the street in order to solicit votes, and women of the first rank owned and operated the largest brick factories."

"Emancipation of women," continued Miss Hughes, "oddly enough did not extend to the stage, where women players were frowned on by the best circles."

Discussion of a second paper read by the president of the association was followed by refreshments.

LITTLE ENERGY LOST IN ATHLETIC WORK

M. T. De Pencier Delivers
Lecture to Trinity Science Club

INSULIN PROPERTIES

"The value of training in athletics is due to the fact that practised movements lose little energy in the form of heat," declared Mr. M. T. De Pencier, in a talk on Muscular Activity to the Trinity College Science Club last night. He went on to say that the muscular viscosity of Percy Williams was abnormally low, hence his supremacy as a sprinter.

Mr. De Pencier, a graduate of Trinity, has been working with Dr. Best in connection with insulin for the past three years. As a preface to his address he outlined the properties of insulin, how it occurs as a white powder, which is taken up in alcohol, and how injections of it will reduce the concentration of sugar in the bloodstream. To demonstrate this fact he injected about ten units of it into a rabbit, and the resultant torpor was observed; later the rabbit was dissected in order to show Penstalsia.

Passing to his main topic, the speaker demonstrated the properties of voluntary striated muscle by stimulating an isolated gastrocnemius muscle of the frog, both electrically, mechanically, thermally and chemically. He explained Minimal and Maximal Stimuli, and discussed the elasticity and sensibility of striated muscle.

Mr. Gelber and Professor Underhill succeeded in smelling out the old mouse a few minutes before Mr. Binning closed the proceedings with a pious ipse dixit.

CAMPUS BUILDINGS LACK AN ADEQUATE FIRE PROTECTION

No Means of Warning Students
When Fire Breaks Out
Any Time

WYCLIFFE ONE EXCEPTION

Alarm Sent Out All Over City
if University Alarms Are Sounded

Except for Wycliffe College, apparently none of the faculties and colleges of the university have any means of warning the occupants of their several buildings in case of fire. There are several fire alarm boxes placed at strategic points round the grounds to summon the various sections of the Toronto Fire Department rather than to warn the persons immediately concerned.

Victoria College has a unique and economical fire alarm system. The building has an automatic buzzer on every floor, controlled from the ground floor. These buzzers, when not being used for fire alarm, are sounded at the beginning and end of each lecture. In case of fire they can be rung by hand.

Wycliffe is equipped with special fire gongs which can be operated from any floor and which sound on every floor. There is also an efficient fire brigade, under a student fire chief, which consists of every man in the college. Fire drill is compulsory and in the event of fire every man knows exactly what is required of him.

Officials at Trinity College and St. Michael's College were unaware of any system. The S.P.S. and Medical buildings are apparently sufficiently fireproof and do not warrant the installation of alarm systems.

Fire alarm boxes are at the following University buildings:

Northwest Corner of the Mining Building.
Southwest Corner of the Medical Building.
South side of the Observatory Building.
West side of University College, north of Round Room.
Opposite Men's Residences.

In the event of one of these being sounded the alarm is sent all over the city and every available apparatus is immediately rushed to the spot. "The Varsity" was informed by the Fire Department.

That the wonders of Canada should be better known to the people of Ontario, was the plea of J. B. Ontario people are so well satisfied with their own province that they are not sufficiently interested in the rest of Canada, he said, in urging the embryo teachers to travel and know their own country.

For the many graduates of other universities present, the Warden explained the function of Hart House in unifying the colleges and faculties of the University of Toronto, and told

CO-OPERATION

Recent surveys of student opinion regarding the undergraduate newspaper, as revealed in published interviews by members of the staff, show that undergraduates and officials have no hesitation in expressing their true opinions. While our columns have provoked certain individuals, of whom we will say nothing further, to make use of such adjectives and expletives regarding them, as "Piffle", "Good Fertilizer", "Hot Air" or "Trifling", we have, we believe, a solid body of student opinion arrayed behind us.

Although we take little account of the vacuous ravings of the few, nevertheless we are willing to concede that our news columns have from time to time suffered under severe handicaps. In spite of almost tireless efforts on the part of a co-operating, organized staff, through no fault of their own, it is frequently found that their greatest endeavours are futile. It is, and always has been, our aim to make "The Varsity", in its own field,—that of the University,—a newspaper of the first rank.

Leaving memories of past events to be interred where they rightfully belong, we might mention several influences that conspire to bring about our failure in this regard.

A great deal of our news must, from its very nature, come from official sources. While few of the higher powers of this University bestow their paternal blessings upon our heads, nevertheless the position of the undergraduate newspaper demands at least that measure of respect and co-operation that is accorded to members of the downtown press of this city.

We have never tried to curry favour; rather we have made an honest attempt to take a bold stand on any matter pertaining to the undergraduates of the University. Yet when our reporters are sent in an endeavour to obtain information on important matters, too often they are sent away after a comfortable, fatherly admonition has been given them as to the advisability of publishing anything regarding the matter. Too often they are met by the close-mouthed, official stare of disapproval, and sent away downhearted. Petty misunderstandings of the past provide excellent excuses for refusing to divulge present information. A few hours, or days, later, it is deemed perfectly advisable and discreet to make important announcements in the course of a downtown luncheon, where the daily press find a great stamping ground. Our columns are deemed more suitable for the semi-weekly publications of bulletins pertaining to the activities of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, for example, rather than for the discussion of important news events in which the average undergraduate is interested.

With many officials we have no complaint. On the part of a very few, a splendid spirit of co-operation is shown. But, we do say, that hampered by official reticence or official dislike, it is increasingly difficult to always present the type of news our readers prefer.

We are sending up no cry for sympathy, no weak appeal for allowances on our own shortcomings. We desire to place no blame that is justly ours upon another's shoulders. We would say, however, that the time is ripe for the cultivation of a broader degree of tolerance and understanding, on the part of its officials, than this University has ever enjoyed, and for the elimination of the small, cramped, viewpoint which at present maldews this institution.

Marxes Mixed

Mr. Editor:—
In yesterday's issue of your worthy sheet there appeared an article by an individual who most aptly terms himself "Nemo". This worthy person thought it incumbent upon himself in the midst of reviewing some burlesque act, to display the philosophical depths of his intellect by stating that certain ribaldries of the theatre were worthy of "Groucho Marx". That my learned friend is quite competent to attest as to the relative value of this or that burlesque, I should never dare to doubt. But when a self-complacent imbecile begins meddling with matters concerning which his ignorance is rivalled only by his impudence, a few comments are necessary.

One must, however, state that Nemo's part this intended mark of profundity was far from original. On the contrary, several times in the past few weeks there appeared similar comments on "Groucho Marx". We must not, then, seek the circumstances prompting this brilliant outburst of wit in Nemo's personal despicability. Rather let us regard our most clever journalist as a type.

It would perhaps surprise my friends, the Nemo's and Co., to learn that to reveal the sources whence flow

"On the level plains simple mounds look like hills, and the imbecile flatness of the present bourgeoisie is to be measured by the altitude of its great intellects." In these words Marx summed up the nature of that stage of bourgeois degeneracy which produces the Nemos; in these golden phrases Marx indicated the putrescence of that epoch in the future ideological leaders of capitalist society, the men of the Universities, concern themselves with such philosophical questions as the length of knee-pads, the parking of petting parties, etc.; in these words Marx revealed the nature of that period of bourgeois civilization whose Sphinx, Mr. G. U. OF T., WESTERN, O.A.C., McMASTER TRACK MEET TO-MORROW

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The baseball schedule announced today includes games for a University College team, although just now it is extremely doubtful whether they will be able to field a team. It seems unnecessary for a college the size of University College to drop out of contention for lack of enough players. Even though they are handicapped by the loss of five of last year's regulars, they should not have to drop out on this account.

Vic held their first practice last night and although there were only eight out, there was a large turnout for the year games held last week, and more are expected next time. St. Michael's will open their season next Tuesday night, and pre-season dope indicates a big year for the Double Blue.

Due to a curious oversight, the interfaculty basketball schedule included two games on Thanksgiving. This, of course, means a revision of the timetable, and the corrected version will appear as soon as it is available.

Fran Dale, 370 U.C., has been trying out with Toronto Ladies basketball team and has been very successful. Coach Joe Leake is very much pleased with the showing she has made to date. Besides playing basketball, she is coaching University College Juniors in the interfaculty league.

BASEBALL SCHEDULE

The schedule for the women's interfaculty baseball was announced by the executive of the Club last night, and is as follows.

Week of Nov. 17—Vic at St. Michael's; St. Michael's at U.C.

Week of Nov. 25—U.C. at Vic; St. Michael's at Vic.

Week of Dec. 3—U.C. at St. Michael's; Vic at U.C.

BLUE ATHLETES TRAIN FOR MEET

Intermediate Team Chosen for Coming Track Events

VARSITY HAS STRONG TEAM

The annual intercollegiate intermediate track meet will be held this year at the U. of T. stadium, Friday afternoon, commencing at 1.30 with Varsity's second team, McMaster, O.A.C., and Western competing for the honours. The Blue and White have a strong team of athletes competing this year and are sure to give the other contenders hard battles for supremacy in the various events.

Fulton is attempting to do the iron man stunt. He is entering in four events and is counted on to score at least 10 points for Varsity. He is competing in the broad jump, the shot put, javelin and discus hurling events. Byrne is expected to come through for Varsity in the pole vault. At present he is going over the bar at the dizzy height of 10 ft. 6 inches. Laing and Vennels should place in the high jump. Both are doing around the 5 ft. eight mark.

Seaborn and Hayworth are likely to place on two in the three mile run, while Lee is counted on to break the tape in the mile stretch. Howey is another wearer of the Blue and White colours in this race. It is his third year with the team. Vila is competing in the half mile. Two years ago he was a member of the senior intercollegiate squad. Howe is expected to give Rivers, the Western flash, a hard race in the century.

The Varsity team is as follows:
100 yards—Howe, McLaren, Davison.

220 yards—Davison, Howe, McLaren.

440 yards—Eaton, Holmsted, Fulton.

Half mile—Vila, Burnett, Lee.

Mile—Howey, Lee, Hayworth.

Three miles—Seaborn, Hayworth, Lee.

Broad jump—McLaren, Fulton, Davison.

High jump—Laing, Vennels.

High hurdles—Puddy, Black.

Low hurdles—Puddy, Black.

Pole vault—Byrne, Black.

Discus—Greer, Emery, Fulton.

Javelin—Fulton, Vennels, Laing.

Shot put—Fulton, Eaton, Greer.

Medley relay race consisting of a 40, 2 220's and a half mile—Eaton, Holmsted, Howe, Davison.

Knox defaulted their scheduled Muflock Cup fixture with St. Mike's last night.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

With the intercollegiate playing McGill in Montreal this Saturday, football interest locally will be centred at the U. of T. stadium where the fans are to be treated to a delectable double-header. The Orphans play Balmy Beach in the opener which starts at 1.30 while the Montreal Wheelers and Argos clash in the second game. Both games should provide all the thrills and color to satisfy the most blasé spectator. Lou Carroll's Orphans are faced with elimination at the hands of the Beaches, but should they come through with a win, another game will be necessary to break the deadlock for the group championship and the right to enter the playoffs. An epic struggle should result when the Rovers and the Montreals lock horns. Both teams are distinctly in the running in the Big Four. The Wheelers upset the proverbial dope when they held Hamilton Tigers to a 5-5 tie in Montreal last Saturday. The Argonauts are a much improved squad with Turville and Munroe occupying stellar roles on the backfield. The Rovers are in a more favourable position in that two of their remaining three games will be played on their home grounds.

High hopes were held out for the success of the Orphans prior to their first meeting with Balmy Beach at Ulster stadium but they suffered a bad beating, 18 to 3. On Saturday they should give the Beaches a better run for their money. When a loss means extinction, the Orphans can be counted on to serve up a real battle. Until last Saturday's game with Camp Borden, Bernie Hodgetts had not kicked like he has done in practices. He did not start in last Saturday's game and perhaps the temporary rest did him a world of good because when he finally got into the fray he performed in stellar fashion.

Les Blackwell was not out last night to see his hopefuls work out with the Argonauts. The two teams lined up at the 5 yard line with each team taking turns at attempting to take the ball across the line. For a while the Oarsmen made the Blue line look sick, but as the scrimmages continued it tightened. Strange enough, Varsity enjoyed more success by their extension plays with Richardson carrying the ball than by the line-plunging tactics. Richardson was impressive last night. He is quick to see an opening and to take advantage of it. However, it is hardly likely that he will secure a regular place on the line-up, yet he is a mighty valuable man to have on string.

Captain Johnny Keith was in uniform, but took no part in the practice. He is quickly recovering from facial injuries incurred in the game against Queen's. Mal Henderson was at snapback in his place. Prior to the scrimmages with the Argos the team was trying out some new plays to add to their bag of tricks and incidentally to add a scoring punch that is needed.

When University College won the interfaculty rowing honors on the Toronto Bay last Saturday it was the first time that an S.P.S. crew has not figured prominently in the finals. U.C. defeated Victoria by a foot for the championship. The fact that School's string of victories has been broken should do much towards increasing the interest and competition in this sport among the other faculties.

KEEN COMPETITION IN SOCCER GAMES

University College and Knox Lead Their Groups With Two Wins

CROWDS ENTHUSIASTIC

The interfaculty soccer games this year have been particularly evenly contested and consequently none of the groups are decided, although the season is drawing to a close. Knox College, champions for the past two years, are leading their group with two victories and no defeats. In Group II, U.C. and S.P.S. are tied for the lead although the former are undefeated and the Schoolmen have lost one game and that to their rivals from U.C. There is also a tie for the leadership in Group III. Pharmacy have gone without a loss to date, but have been held to a tie twice by Trinity. Wycliffe, though defeated once by the Pharmacy students, have two victories over Trinity to their credit, and so equal the leaders in points earned.

The interfaculty soccer matches this year have drawn large crowds of cheering enthusiasts and a high-class brand of the game is being shown. The standing of the groups is as follows:

GROUP I			W	L	T	Pts.
Knox			2	0	0	4
Victoria			1	2	0	2

PLAYERS IN GOOD FORM

This week sees the junior, intermediate and senior Varsity basketball squads getting out to the workouts in preparation for the season's schedules. With the addition of the football players next week, the squad will assume even greater proportions than at present, and it is expected that eventually the number will reach 165. With the greater influx of players, it is thought that this year's turnout is the largest yet. Coach McCutcheon stated yesterday that much difficulty was being encountered by the coaches in cutting the squads because of the large number of players of equal calibre.

Daisies Never Tell or Sartor Resartus

By Paul A. Gardner

"How did I get this egg-shaped scar on my thigh?" repeated Irish Stew. "Well, boys, it happened like this:

Seventy-five years ago, on leaving the University of Gibraltar with the degree M.B., which, as you know, means Mail Bandit, I took up the profession of pearl diving, and chose the Rocky Mountains as my locale. Business was splendid for a time, and some days I would have as many as forty people in my grocery store at once. The overhead, however, was so great that I was forced early in the latter part of the year to close down my developing-room, though I still retained the padding house. This music-hall proved such a source of revenue that soon I was turning out thirty jars of shaving-cream daily. In fact, had it not been for the competition offered by a nearby cigar-factory, I would have supplied every Abyssinian in the neighbourhood with wheel-chairs and paint-boxes. However, my motto is, "Never say die: say deasee."

"Success followed upon success, so that in a few years I was able to pay my creditors eight cents on the dollar, and prepared to settle down on a comfortable little estate in Borneo, amongst the head-hunters, who had already examined and rejected my head. I soon found, however, that the call of business was stronger than that of leisure, and I left my Eskimo friends to plunge heart and soul into the worthy project of placing a Presbyterian prayer book in every home in the Sahara. This mission was not without its dangers, as I lived in constant peril of assassination by the Episcopalians, who were making a four hundred per cent. profit on their prayer books, and so would stick at nothing to promote sales, especially as they hoped to make a good deal out of sidelines of machine guns and Krackdy-Nut, which they advertised as accessories. However, Right is Might, as the Czechoslovakian proverb has it, and by virtue of my noble mission I soon had placed a Visible Gasoline Pump in every garage over the length and breadth of the Pacific.

"After a few summers under the midnight sun, suddenly the urge came upon me to acquire a wife. The longing for companionship and cooked food burned within my breast, so I came to America, promoted a company to bore for oil on Broadway, and from this enterprise made a tremendous fortune, though the oil turned out to be Jamaica rum. From the rush of eligible maidens who flung themselves at me, I chose Lillian Gish, the IT Girl of the Mutual Circuit, and took her away with me to my palatial hut in Australia, where to this day we have lived happily on rabbit stew and cassowary eggs.

"My retirement from business has been permanent, except that in an idle moment one day, after a couple of years' thought, I invented a double-action two-purpose reversible pouch for kangaroos, whereby they are enabled not only to keep the little kangaroos in safety, but also to carry a sufficient quantity of ham sandwiches and honey-dew to feed them while away on business trips through the desert. This device has gained great favour among university students in Siam, and is expected soon to replace the Frigidaire in all countries of the world. . . . What's that you say? How did I get this scar? Oh yes, of course. This morning, while thinking out a new scheme for cultivating pink lemons for circuses, a step gave way, and I fell downstairs, and landed on the door knob, which I had forgotten to gather up when the door fell to pieces last week."

 fessor Conway traced the history of Christmas.

Early Christians were perplexed as to the date and manner of observing the birth of Christ. Due to the excesses of the Saturnalia no Christian celebrated a birthday or indulged in "the most devilish practice of giving presents". The date of Christ's birth is nowhere given in the New Testament, so finally December 25th was settled on. The pagan Saturnalia was transformed to a Christian celebration, keeping the merry and the best parts and leaving out the bad.

The prospects for all the teams are very favourable at present and it is expected that this year's teams will round into excellent form by the time the schedules begin.

Sniderman, Sakler and Cock made their first appearance on the floor yesterday and O'Leary is expected to be out on Friday. Collins will be on hand after his track work is completed next week, and Riggs is expected after football. Burns, who was ineligible last year, is back again with the squad, while Horton, who is ineligible this year, is turning out to keep in condition for the exhibition games where he will be used in the line-ups. Carr, of last year's intermediate quintet, is turning out now, and Malot, a freshman, who played with the Ottawa Gunners last year, is also seen at the practices. At present the three squads are working together but it is expected that there will be separate practices when all the prospective players have made an appearance.

 little henchmen, the Nemos, are indistinguishable in their Philistinism.

In a time when the bogey of capitalist society grips capitalist monarchy once more by the throat, in a time when the intellectuals of the bourgeoisie, the professors of economy are disclosed in all their helpless inanity, in a period when Marxism is hammered into the thick skull of the bourgeois by the hammer strokes of history, in a period when the heathens, the pearls of capitalist anarchy, unemployment, starvation, prostitution, blossom forth in all their satanic splendour; in a period when the imperialist robbers ("democratic" Britain included), are preparing another world blood-bath, in the period of the PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION, we, the followers of "Groucho Marx", alone are historically justified — the Revolutionary movement moves on.

 government, both past and present, and laid the blame for the recent failure of the Imperial Conference wholly upon Mr. Bennett.

"The people of Canada did not give a voting majority for the Conservative party, although they secured a parliamentary majority through the present system of unproportional representation," he said.

R. J. Gunn based his case against the Liberal party on the electioneering and vote catching tactics of the party, mentioning the "five cent speech of Mr. King" as an example of the Liberal attitude.

In his turn, T. J. Gallagher attacked the Ferguson administration as being corrupt and quoted examples of compulsion being used on public employees. The threat alleged to have been used by Mr. Bennett on the eve of the election in trying to unload the responsibility upon the opposition was roundly scored.

The debate being thrown open, a considerable number of undergraduates availed themselves of the opportunity of speaking from the floor of the house, as well as several graduates and members of the faculty.

A plea for less narrow nationalism and greater international understanding was made by Earl Lautenslager of Victoria College.

Quoting a particular case, that of the duty placed on the manufacture of glass, which was subsequently removed after a storm of protest, H. Underhill, Professor of History, stated that this was but one evidence of the inherent weakness of the present administration. "In my opinion," he stated, "such a government is unworthy of confidence, it shows evidence of weakness of the very worst kind."

In addition to hunters' specials over Canadian Pacific lines from Toronto to Sudbury on Saturday, November 1 and Monday, November 3, it has been decided to attach extra equipment for the use of the sportsmen to the ordinary daily trains leaving Toronto for Sudbury at 9.45 in the morning and 9.25 in the evening, from October 31 to November 7, inclusive. Announcement to this effect was made last night by the Assistant General Passenger Agent, W. Fulton, who stated that the services provided for hunters on the railway this year were more extensive than previously.

Vancouver, B.C.—Failure to adopt modern advertising methods to create demand for her products, general economic conditions, and internal governmental troubles are responsible for China's present plight, according to Allan Cameron, Oriental manager of the Canadian Pacific railway, who is a visitor here.

Canadians with their eyes on the vast potential market represented in China's four hundred million people, can increase their chances of sharing more extensively in that market by increasing their purchases from China to create wealth with which the Chinese can buy back from Canada in greater volume.

"Canada cannot help but benefit from such a reciprocity," Mr. Cameron said. "Especially if it is true that the real future of Canadian trade lies in the Far East."

Mr. Cameron is sailing from here Thursday on the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Japan", for his headquarters in Hongkong after a two months holiday in Canada.

I.F.U.W. Pays Visit to Toronto

"It is thrilling to be in Canada, one of the far western rooms of the House of Empire of which I have so often dreamt; and to see the University College 'freshers,' as we call the undergraduates in Oxford to-day, and to hear their college songs and cries with a greater thrill still. In India there is a day on which the aged 'worship' or pay reverence to the young. That is what I hope to do tomorrow when I have the pleasure of speaking in Convocation Hall. You are one of the big inspirations which I shall carry back to India."

This was the special message given to "The Varsity" by Miss Cornelia Sorabji, yesterday, after her visit to the Women's Union. Miss Sorabji is president of the Calcutta branch of the Indian Federation of University Women, having served for a time as secretary for the All-India Federation. She came to America in response to an invitation to attend the conference on India in the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, U.S.A. Her trip to Toronto has been made under the auspices of the I.O.D.E.

Miss Sorabji was the first woman student at Oxford and was called to the bar in 1894 by a special decree of convocation. In this respect she

CITY CHAMPION TAKES ALL GAMES

Noted Chess Player Repeats Successes of Former Years

The city chess champion, George Eastman, made a clean sweep when he won nineteen simultaneous chess games last night at the University of Toronto Chess Club. Mr. Eastman on former occasions played the Chess Club in this way. In 1925 he won 15 games and drew one, while in 1928 he played 15 players and won all.

After the meeting, the president of the club stated that these simultaneous exhibitions were to be continued and that at the next regular meeting, G. Blumin, a well known city player, was to be the guest player. He also stated that the club would meet every second Wednesday. All newcomers and novices are urged to turn out. Mr. Sim, Secretary of the Chess Federation, has invited the University of Toronto Chess Club to enter a team in the Toronto League.

"It is possible to play chess at five seconds a move," said Mr. Eastman, champion chess player of Toronto and also runner-up to the Dominion championship, in answer to the charge that chess is a slow game. Asked by "The Varsity" whether he considered chess dead and dying, he replied that in Europe to-day chess has been never more flourishing. "One's chess game may be improved," he continued, "only by continual practice and by the mastery of two openings for the White and two openings for the Black. The Varsity players last night put up a very good fight and their play was of very high order."

IMPORTANT U.C. SOCIAL EVENT NOVEMBER 1ST

The U.C. autumn tea, one of the most important social events of the season, will be held on Saturday, November 1st. This is the function to which the undergraduate women welcome all the alumnae. The wives of the faculty are being escorted by seniors, the freshies by sophomores.

After the tea hour, 3.30 to 4.30, in the East Hall, U.C., there will be speeches and a musical program in West Hall. Miss Jean Robertson will be toastmistress. The toast of the University will be responded by Mrs. Wallace, in the absence of Lady Falconer. Toasts to the college, to the wives of the faculty and to the freshies will follow.

BRANION DIRECTS BURBOT TO TABLE

Fellow in Biology Raises the Humble Ling in Gourmand's Estimation

FORMER "VARSITY" EDITOR

The fairy tale of the ugly duckling that was transformed into a beautiful swan has its modern parallel in the romance of the common ling, erstwhile scum of the Great Lakes. The unhappy fish has for centuries been regarded as a nuisance and a menace to the trade. But thanks to the efforts of Hugh D. Branon, senior fellow in the department of biology, the stigma has been removed.

Mr. Branon has succeeded in converting the repulsive Burbot into a palatable commodity to be relished by the most critical gourmet. The lucky creature was formerly considered unsuitable for human consumption.

Initial experiments were made by Professor W. J. K. Harkness at the request of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries. The ling was feeding indiscriminately on other fish, and frequently included in its menu the nets of the poor fishermen. It was held that the finny citizen had no right to consume without producing, and Branon took up the task of discovering if it could be utilized commercially. He found that its liver oil was an adequate substitute for cod liver oil, and with the co-operation of Household Science, proved that it could be served as a successful meal.

Branon was born at Dunnville, Ontario, and attended Upper Canada College, and attended Upper Canada College. He was managing editor of "The Varsity" during the editorship of L. J. Ryan, and graduated from Trinity in 1928. He is twenty-four years old.

Clinical Work Absorbs Large Part of Medical Students' Time

Twenty-five per cent. of the time of students in the faculty of Medicine during their six years, is spent in clinical work. This time is spread entirely over the last three years of the course. Twenty-seven per cent. of the fourth year, half of the fifth year, and about three-quarters of the sixth year is devoted to clinical work.

During the fourth year the clinical work is taken mostly in the clinical theatre of the Toronto General Hospital. In the fifth year the work is performed at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto Western, and the Hospital for Sick Children, besides the Toronto General. Clinics to which students are admitted are also held at the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital and Riverdale Isolation Hospital.

LIBRARIAN NOTES ADDED DILIGENCE IN READING ROOM

BUSIER THAN OCTOBER, '29

Only Recommended Students
May Have Access to Stacks

According to W. S. Wallace, University librarian, the library is being patronized even more heavily this year than last. No figures have yet been compiled to support this statement, but the increase of last year over the year before was 25 per cent. and Mr. Wallace believes that this October is busier than the same month in 1929. "We have had more assistants at work this year," he announced, "but I don't think there has been much congestion in the reading rooms. They are not overcrowded as yet, but probably will be along about examination (Continued on Page 4)"

BRITISHERS MEET VARSITY DEBATERS

Will Discuss Economic Unity
Within the British Empire

"Resolved that this House would welcome the establishment of closer economic unity within the Empire by means of general tariff barriers." This is the appropriate subject of a debate scheduled to take place in Trinity College Library, on Wednesday, Nov. 5, at 8.15.

The affirmative will be upheld by a University of Toronto team, composed of E. B. Jolliffe, president of the Victoria College Union, and C. L. M. Douglas, speaker of the Trinity College Literary Institute.

Their honourable opponents are H. Trevor Lloyd and John Mitchell, both graduates of British Universities. Mr. Lloyd is a graduate of the University of Bristol, and for the past year has been doing post-graduate work in Education. Mr. Mitchell, a graduate of the University of Aberdeen, holds the degrees of M.A. and LL.B. at that University. Both of these gentlemen have had extensive experience in debating on the other side of the Atlantic; they were nominated for their positions on the British team by student bodies in their respective countries.

POLICE INACTIVE AS PATHS APPEAR IN QUEEN'S PARK

Hurrying Students Disregard

MAY ISSUE SUMMONSES

Appeal to Pride in Appearance of University Vicinity

"The police are not making a practice of using force to prevent people from crossing the park by means of the lawns, but if it continues, they are empowered to issue summonses," said W. J. Love, of the Department of Public Works, when interviewed yesterday concerning the making of pathways across Queen's Park.

In a very friendly way, he asked for the co-operation of all students. He realized that it is only natural to take a short-cut, but the harm that is caused is considerable and it should be a matter of pride for the men to wish the grounds in the vicinity of the University to look well. He added that although nothing definite had been arranged, something might be done soon to better the conditions.

One student told "The Varsity" that during wet weather the walks are in no fit condition for traffic. "They are so muddy that it is necessary to take to the grass in order to get across."

COLLEGE ORCHESTRA TO GIVE CONCERTS

Student Musicians From All Colleges Invited to Participate

The Victoria College Symphony Orchestra got away to a flying start last night when a large number of undergraduates under the direction of Mr. Frank Blachford, turned out for the first practice at Amesley Hall. This orchestra is solely for the training of aspiring musicians in concert work. Usually at the end of the year the orchestra gives a large concert, but it is doubtful if one will be held this year. However, some informal afternoon recitals will take place, which should prove very interesting.

WILMA STEVENSON WILL GIVE RECITAL PROGRAM

Miss Wilma Stevenson, pianist, will be the artist at the Recital to be held in the Music Room of Hart House on Friday, 31st October at 5 p.m. The program has been arranged as follows:

PROFESSOR SYNGE PREDICTS WIZARD

Foresees Great Mathematician

100 Years

"I would be greatly surprised if, within the next hundred years, Canada does not produce a great mathematician," said Professor Syngé, of the Mechanics department, at the meeting of the Mathematics and Physics Society, in the Physics Building, on Thursday evening.

Professor Syngé, formerly of Trinity College, Dublin, gave an interesting address on the life and work of William Roland Hamilton, famous Irish mathematician, and professor of astronomy at Trinity College, Dublin.

After refreshments had been served, the meeting was opened by Miss Mary Hall, president of the society. She called upon Howard Alexander, the first speaker. Alexander gave an interesting talk on "Stereoscopy and Geometry", explaining the difference between binocular and monocular vision.

Lectures S.C.M. Study Group on "Art As Popular Hobby"

The initial meeting of the Art Appreciation Group of the S.C.M. was held last evening at the Women's Union under the direction of Mr. F. H. Brigden. "Art as a hobby," he said, "is becoming increasingly popular. Even your own Dr. Banting takes to water colours during his short vacations. Winston Churchill and Vincent Massey also have very good pictures in art exhibits."

"Although France and Italy have produced most of the great art, England alone has credit for the water colour work, and I consider Turner the greatest genius England, and even Europe, has ever produced in this phase of art."

Trinity Provost Avers College Has Adequate Fire Protection

Trinity College, in its main building, in Trinity House and in St. Hilda's, possesses complete and up-to-date systems for giving alarm to occupants in case of fire, Provost Cosgrave of the college told "The Varsity" last night. Yesterday a letter reached "The Varsity" office from S. H. Jones, bursar of the college, saying that the report in the issue of the previous day was inaccurate in saying that Trinity College had no means of warning the students in case of fire.

The group insurance scheme proposed to Western University was unanimously endorsed by those interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday, although there was some doubt as to its practicability.

Mr. Dunlop, of the University Extension began as follows: "I suppose that what I say to-day will be the subject of an editorial to-morrow. However, if the question is not controversial." Then he proceeded to write his opinion out for the reporter. "With satisfactory safeguards such as surround most modern insurance schemes, this seems to be a possible advantage to undergraduates, particularly those whose homes are many miles from the university. If protected by an insurance plan of this kind, a student would be free from a certain amount of worry over the expense entailed by a protracted illness."

NO SPECIAL RATE FOR M'GILL TRIP

Raise in Price, Poor Showing of Reds, Dampens Enthusiasm

"No enthusiasm has been shown and there will be no excursion of Varsity rosters to McGill," said A. G. Burns, B.A., Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C.

From inquiries at the Athletic Office, Hart House, it was learned that out of the very small number of sixty tickets placed on sale this week only forty have been disposed of.

The raising of the price by McGill this year to $2.50 per ticket coupled with the poor showing that the Redmen have made to date has been chiefly responsible for a slight decrease in the number of supporters who will attend from the U. of T.

Unless the standing of the intercollegiate group depends upon the conquering of the Red and White team there has never during the last four years been anywhere near a record attendance such as witnessed the triumph over Queen's last week in the Limestone City.

In Trinity House every floor is equipped with a glass panel, the breaking of which sounds an alarm bell on every floor. Fire escapes which are inspected weekly by college officials and by the city as well as by the representatives of an accident insurance firm. In a recent fire drill the building was cleared in three minutes. St. Hilda's has the same system of fire signals as Trinity House. During the day fire alarm could be given by gongs that are on every floor. The building itself is absolutely fire proof.

LUCIFER

That the Hart House Debate, like Lucifer, is fallen from its former glory and is come upon evil days, is the inevitable conclusion to be drawn from Wednesday night's two-and-a-quarter hours' display of verbal and cerebral adolescence.

Time was when the Hart House Debate stood for all that was keenest and most mature in Canadian university life. Men of affairs, both national and international, were not ashamed to appear before this House when it assembled in solemn parliamentary session, and to advance to the Speaker's dais for the purpose of offering their contribution to the discussion on the paper. In the annals of the Hart House Debates appear records of evenings of wit and wisdom which would do credit to the university debating societies of the Old Land, where men are trained for leadership in the great political parties.

Good-bye to all that! With the exception of two speeches—neither of which were delivered by undergraduates—Wednesday night's session would not have done credit to a high school literary society. The thinly veiled satire of Mr. Plumtree, standing—like Camille Desmoulins at the Tennis Court—on the furniture, was directed only too justly at the infantile howlings and squawking which had marked the sallies of the previous speakers and the general decorum of the House.

A few years back no daily newspaper would have appeared on the day following a Hart House Debate without a detailed account of the proceedings, featured in a prominent position. Yesterday morning a prominent Liberal daily did not consider Wednesday's debate worthy of so much as a two-line filler, despite the fact that a representative of that paper had sat faithfully at the press table throughout the evening.

If it were merely that the Hart House Debate had, like so many old institutions, arrived at a period of decadence in which a somewhat soured humour and a slightly bitter wit had supplanted the earnest eloquence and profound documentation of a stouter day, the worst that could be said would be that times had changed. But the situation is more serious than that. In the first place, this particular institution is neither old nor decadent. It is just a brilliant idea of a few years back, degenerated into puerility.

The university student is at present regarded by the initiate as a person possessing a certain grasp of the facts of subjects which he is supposed to be studying, as well as a certain originality of thought engendered by the so-called higher learning. For the sake of this illusion and the alleged fair name of the U. of T. undergraduate, we humbly suggest that the Debates Committee cancel all further Hart House Debates until they can assure themselves and the world generally that the calibre of the speeches to the paper will not be such that the shallowness of our educational veneer may be discovered and that reputable speakers from without our walls will be ashamed to associate themselves with an institution neither significant nor amusing.

Trinity French Dramatics

There is a new dramatic club in the University. It is the Trinity College French Dramatic Club, which presented its first play yesterday afternoon in Trinity College.

Miss Erica Mundy is the president of the new organization and Mr. Ross Parmenter is the secretary-treasurer. It is the intention of the club to present five or six short French plays in Trinity College, the first of which was Les Deux Sœurs, yesterday, and to present a more ambitious work early next spring at an evening performance on a larger stage than any at the local college.

We believe this is the first similar organization in the university to attempt such an ambitious season.

Victoria Dramatic Club

The Victoria College Dramatic Society is going to produce Lady Windermere's Fan, in Hart House Theatre, on December 10, 11 and 12. This play, an English drawing room comedy by Oscar Wilde, is perhaps as difficult a piece as any Canadian dramatic society could attempt. If the Victoria Society makes a success of this presentation they will have succeeded where many have failed before them.

Of equal interest with the announcement of the Victoria society with re-

With the Theatres

Next Week's Shows

Brief notes on next week's shows at local theatres. Nothing very serious in this line-up, but lots of laughs spect to their main production, is their decision to produce as many short plays as is possible during the year. We commend the idea, as we consider the informal production of good drama should be part of the program of any society large enough to support such ventures.

The try-outs for Lady Windermere's Fan will be held on Saturday morning at ten o'clock when Mr. Edgar Stone will be present in Hart House Theatre to hear and interview all Victoria students who wish to be considered when the play is cast.

We wish the Victoria players every success. Their attempt is bound to be interesting. If they succeed they will open a new field to those interested in University theatres.

INTERMEDIATE INTERCOLLEGIATE TRACK MEET AT STADIUM TODAY

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

With the opening games in the interfaculty basketball set for Monday, enthusiasm in local cage circles is at fever heat. The final announcement of the schedule has been made and it is to be hoped that no more corrections will be necessary. It is rather important for the coaches to know whom they will be up against in order to put the finishing touches on plays and to round out their team's defensive work. Although no definite selections of line-ups have been made, in most cases, the squads have been reduced to the minimum of nine players.

University College juniors and freshmen are been practising together and Coach Fran Dale is very well satisfied with the turnout to date. There is a large number of enthusiastic freshmen and their showing has been very satisfactory. Although several members of last year's Junior team are this season with the Seniors, the Juniors have benefitted by the addition of some players who were on the freshman squad in 1929.

At the conclusion of their regular practice on Wednesday night, St. Hilda's scrimmaged for about fifteen minutes with their rivals from St. Mike's. Both teams profited from this short set-to, since it gave the respective coaches a chance to see how their theories were working out in actual practice, and also enabled them to form an idea as to how their players will stand up under fire.

EXPECT TO SCORE FOURTH VICTORY

Unbeaten Seniors Meet McGill as Second Round Commences

FITZPATRICK IN ACTION

Varsity enters the second round of the Intercollegiate rugby union tomorrow afternoon in Montreal when they clash with McGill for their final game with the Red team this season.

The Blue team took McGill easily in the opening game here and should repeat on Saturday with the same ease. McGill are reported to be much stronger on the rearguard since their eleven to one defeat at the Varsity bowl, but the great improvement in the "T" machine since then will more than offset any added McGill strength.

The decisive defeat of Queen's by Varsity in Kingston last Saturday placed Varsity at the head of the College Union. Two more victories will assure the U. of T. the Intercollegiate title.

Varsity's team to-morrow is expected to be at full strength. Johnny Fitzpatrick's knee has recovered from the injury received in the exhibition game with the Argonauts at the first of the rugby season and if it can stand the strain he will probably be given plenty of work in the game to prepare him for the game with Queen's here next Saturday.

Injuries received in the Queen's game kept Varsity from any really heavy drill on Wednesday although the line had a strenuous workout against the Argo line. Captain John Keith fared the worst in the battle with the Tricolour. The popular Blue captain came out of the game with a broken nose, his optics colored and a few minor cuts on the face. Keith is expected to be ready for the game.

With the addition of Johnny Fitzpatrick, and Witzel, late of the Orphans, the personnel of the Blue team will be the same as that which encountered Queen's a week ago.

Miss Hilda Layman, Secretary, and Miss Dorothy Amsden, Treasurer. A fee of 50c was decided upon to cover publicity, refreshments for social meetings, and any necessary repairs. Public ownership of equipment was voted down, but plans were made to enquire into procuring birds and racquets for students at wholesale prices.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Reports from the rival camps on the eve of battle indicate that both the McGillmen and Coach Blackwell's warriors will be at top strength for to-morrow's struggle at the Molson Stadium. Neither side will be able to offer any alibis along this line. It will be the first time this season the Blues have started with no one on the injured list, Johnny Fitzpatrick's knee having improved sufficiently for him to be used on the half-line to-morrow. Although Fitz is not likely to start he is sure to see some action during the contest and his return should bring a big improvement to the Varsity extension plays which have been the weak point, if any, on the team so far this season. The only other change on the "T" squad is the exchange with the Orphans of Witzel for Ferguson. Those who saw the Camp Borden-Orphan game last Saturday will remember that the same Witzel was the big cog in the Blue attack, and his addition certainly adds strength to the senior team.

The Red and White promise to provide plenty of opposition and even expect to make it close. There is no doubt that they are a much improved outfit over their initial effort here three weeks ago, but for that matter the Blues have gone ahead a long way since then also, and the chances for a McGill victory look to be just about non-existent.

The Queen's-Western game looks like one of the season's closest and we wouldn't like to bet on the result. However, if it comes to a choice we are inclined to favor the Mustangs, even though the struggle takes place in the Tricolour backyard. The big attraction at the Stadium (no reflection on the Orphans or the Beaches) when Argos are at home to the M.A.A.A. squad, is another hard one to pick, but with all due respect to Turville and Co., we think that the Wheelers will be on the long end of the final score.

"We should win on Saturday if the boys hang onto the ball and play football. The team is in top condition right now," says Lou Carroll, Orphan mentor. Here's hoping the boys do. The Beachers are going to take a lot of beating, but if anybody can do it, the Carrolls can, provided they play the game they are capable of. There is no doubt that the Lost Legion have the material and the coaching to turn the trick, and with elimination staring them in the face they may rise to the occasion and give the East-enders and the wise boys a big surprise. The Orphans have always had the reputation of being in-and-outers (excepting the famous 1928 crew), but we are willing to bet that before the well-known smoke of battle clears away to-morrow the Beachers are going to know they have been in a game and the O.R.F.U. officials may find a tie for the group leadership on their hands.

U.C. INTERFACULTY GROUP CHAMPIONS

Defeat Dentist 4-0 to Cinch Title in Soccer Section

U.C. captured their group title in interfaculty soccer yesterday when they trounced Dents by 4-0 on the front campus. The tooth-pulling forwards were completely outclassed and only superb work by their backs and goalie kept the score down. The U.C. goalie enjoyed quiet naps during the greater part of the game, while his teammates were keeping up a persistent and combined attack on the enemy citadel.

Carbert of Dents, the individual star of the game, repeatedly relieved pressure on his goal by his clever blocking and rushing. U.C. showed splendid team-work and it will take a clever aggregation to prevent them from winning the Arts Faculty Cup.

THIRDS MUST WIN IN KINGSTON GAME

Face Elimination at Hands of Smart R. M. C. Outfit

The Blue intermediates swing into action against R.M.C. at the Stadium on Saturday morning. A defeat means elimination for the "T" squad and they have been put through a week of heavy drilling under the eye of Coach McFadyen.

McFadyen set the squad against the juniors in last night's scrimmage and both squads went at it hard all the way. DeMille, ex-Victoria star, was booting them high and far in the practice and expects to hold his own in any kicking duel to-morrow. The out-sides showed considerable improvement in tackling and Freddy Ship was hitting the junior line for some nice gains.

The team showed improvement when they downed the strong O.A.C. outfit in an exhibition tilt last Wednesday.

The invading Army from Kingston have a strong aggregation this year, as witness their pre-season defeat of McGill seniors and their league victories over Queen's and Varsity. The bright lights on the soldier squad are Devoud and Storms, the latter having starred in every game so far.

The Cadets are a colourful bunch as well as great football players, and a real struggle should ensue when they tangle with the Blue thirds.

Horatius, B.A. Will Award a Prize To The Girl Who Will Best His Friend Advise

To All The Girls,
Dear Girls:—

Will you please help save a young man's happiness? He has appealed to me, and as I have had no experience in affairs of the heart, I am quite unable to advise him at this important period in his life. But you will know what should be told a young man, scarcely more than a boy (he is only twenty-two), who feels that he stands alone on the brink of an abyss, fearing that his next step will lead him out of the frying pan into the fire. Only you can help him tell him the truth, but you, with your infinite tact and friendliness, can guide him along the primrose path of a young soul's great need. Please don't be retiring in this day of a young soul's great need. Please all come forward with your suggestions to all who are experts in questions of hearts and homes come now to the help of a youthful spirit that for many years more it may love and live. Here is the problem:

The young man, Harold, finds himself madly in love with a young lady, Joan, who is on the verge of reciprocating his passion. He is aware, however, that Joan's best friend, Mary, to whom he has for some time been paying considerable attention, is quite madly in love with him.

Harold wrote to both Joan and Mary, confessing to the first his eternal affection, and expressing to the latter his regret that he could feel no attachment for her. Unfortunately he mixed the letters and posted them in the wrong envelopes.

Neither letter bears the name of the girl for whom it was intended.

Harold has discovered that the two girls have revealed to each other the contents of their letters.

What should he do now?

Yours very truly,

HORATIUS, B.A.

P.S. In order to encourage all you girls to come forward with your suggestions, I am offering to the girl who has the most helpful advice two tickets to any moving picture show in Toronto for each of two weeks. ADDRESS YOUR REPLIES TO HORATIUS, B.A., "THE VARSITY" OFFICE, HART HOUSE.

HINDU LECTURER UPHOLDS BRITISH POLICY IN INDIA

Miss Cornelia Sorabji Points Out Benefits Under British Rule

AIDS EDUCATION, BANKING

"It's Impertinence to be Your Brother's Keeper, That's God's Business"

"It is gross impertinence to be your brother's keeper. That is not your business, it is God's business," Miss Cornelia Sorabji quoted a Hindu's words in illustration of the difference in the Indian and Western attitude towards life, in her lecture on "India", in Convocation Hall on Friday afternoon.

Miss Sorabji outlined British policy since her entrance into India. "She found the country devastated and disintegrated. I've gone to places so lonely that other women have never been there. It was wonderful to see how the British boys have kept peace and order—as if at any time they were expecting their mothers and sisters to visit them."

Extortionate interest has been done away with, by the introduction of the banking system under British rule. (Continued on Page 5)

SPRINT STAR GRID HERO

When Johnny Fitzpatrick, of Olympic sprint fame, made his appearance on the field in the second half of the McGill game, Varsity looked like a new team. He missed scoring a touch by inches in the dying moments of the game, Jimmy Sinclair taking it over on a buck to tie the score.

Men, Women Debaters Disagree On Hart House Oratory Question

Mary Winspear Admits Debates Are Often Puerile and Feeble

"WOMEN AFRAID TO SPEAK"

"No Woman Will Speak Unless She Has Something to Say"

"Stop Hart House debating? I should say not!" Thus the women of the University came out in unexpected support of the struggling orators of Hart House.

"If the debaters are puerile now, it simply means we have reached the peak of reaction against ponderousness," Mary Winspear, Trinity graduate, told "The Varsity." "Debating has its ups and downs," she continued. "Nothing could have been more feeble than the Hart House debate where women were admitted two years ago. On the other hand, I have heard debates which were worthy of Oxford or Cambridge. If, within another student generation, conditions don't improve—then let the Hart House debates be scrapped."

The trouble with the last debate, according to Miss Winspear, was "the bad taste shown in choosing such a subject when most university students know nothing about politics."

"But the advantage of university debating itself," she concluded, "is the excellent training it gives to the man who speaks from the floor. He has a much harder task than the prepared self the psychological moment when his speech will sound best." This, Miss Winspear was certain, was a training impossible to obtain outside the university.

"Give hidden geniuses a chance," was the opinion of Miss Patricia Godfrey, U.C. "If this is a bad year, next year might be brilliant."

HUDSON BAY LINE WILL FOSTER TRADE

Dr. Innes Tells Engineers of Value of Hudson Bay Railway

LOCAL TRAFFIC FIRST

The Hudson Bay Railway will probably find its real work in handling local traffic rather than in taking the western wheat to the sea, Dr. Harold A. Innes of the University of Toronto Political Economy Department, told a meeting of the Toronto Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada held in the Mining Building recently.

The wheat trade might serve as a means of attracting boats to Churchill, the terminal port, and, as they would bring cargoes of the things needed in the nearby country, such as mining equipment, local trade would be fostered, he said.

"Speakers on Paper Good, No Inferior Quality," Says Lautenslager

OTHER STUDENTS AGREE

Dignan Deplores Absence of Forcefulness in Ranks of Liberal Party

"My impression was that the speakers on the paper were exceptionally good, especially two of them, and on that account I cannot agree with the editorial in 'The Varsity' of Friday," was the opinion of Earl Lautenslager, of fourth year Victoria, member of Hart House Debates Committee.

"The speakers from the floor, with the exception of the Faculty speakers, were poor, but the debate was one of the best I have heard in Hart House. In the four years I have been attending debates, the standard has certainly not been lowered and there is no inferior quality of speaking," he stated.

Another member of the Debates Committee when interviewed, did not desire to be quoted, but his opinions were of the same type. Student opinions varied to some extent, many agreeing with the contention of the Debates Committee, while others voiced the opinion as laid down in the editorial of "The Varsity" on Friday.

Fix "Varsity" Status At To-day's Meeting

Action on the future status of "The Varsity" is assured at the meeting of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council this afternoon. It was ascertained by "The Varsity" from members of the Joint Executive's committee that a report would be given at this meeting. This committee was appointed to meet a like group from the Board of Governors to discuss the policy of the undergraduate newspaper.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH ON TRIAL AT VIC

Victoria Debaters to Meditate on Confidence in Church

FRANKNESS EXPECTED

"Resolved that the House has every confidence in the Christian Church," the subject of the bill which the Liberal Government is presenting to the Victoria College Parliament, to-night, is a topic that promises mighty discussion, and heinous wit, especially from the Tory opposition.

The Liberals, being the party in power since the government was overthrown at the last session, and ably supporting the bill with such speakers as A. Reynold and Margaret Cairns, and the King's Royal Opposition are being represented by Harold Day and Marion Scott.

That there will be much opportunity for debate is evident from the subject, and extreme frankness is to be expected. The students are showing interest in examining the church for such details that will be necessary in order to speak fluently on the subject.

START EXCAVATING FOR RESIDENCES

Prepare to Accommodate Men of New Emmanuel College

READY NEXT AUGUST

Work has started on the excavation for the new Emmanuel College Residences. The excavation to a depth of 10 feet will be finished on Wednesday. Laying of the cement will commence on Friday. The new building will be 200 feet long with an L extending 80 ft. from the southern end. The new residences have no entrance into Burwash. The end wall connects with the south end of Burwash and being of the same stone, it will give a finer appearance to Burwash.

"The one big feature of these residences is the fact that there will be a study for every bedroom" said Mr. Nichol, superintendent for Jackson and Lewis, contractors for the structure.

"Our contract calls for the completion on August 31st, and we expect to have it completed in plenty of time for the '31 term."

Nu Sigma Nu Initiate Entertains Hallites

Early Friday afternoon a boy who was being initiated into the Nu Sigma Nu Fraternity, caused considerable interest when he appeared before Queen's Hall with a large club bag. Setting it on the ground and taking off his hat, he began to turn around, singing the well known ditty:

I'm a little prairie flower,
Growing wilder every hour;
No one wants to cultivate me,
I'm as wild as wild can be.

After about fifteen minutes he picked up his bag and walked off, taking three steps forward and two back.

MISSING SKELETON RETURNED TO VIC

The "missing skeleton" of Victoria College has been turned in. Despite the fact that everyone in Vic disclaimed all knowledge of it, the skeleton costume was returned soon after the notice appeared in Friday's Varsity.

A member of the Freshman Prom Committee stated that it was a very nice form-fitting garment and that the committee were quite satisfied to have it back without worrying about who took it. He did not know its present whereabouts nor to whom it had been returned.

Boys in Blue Rally After 7-1 Beating in Surprising First Half

Varsity Fumbles Baoly

McGill Just Misses Winning in Final Seconds of Great Game

Special to "The Varsity"

By Tory Fleming, Staff Writer
Montreal, Nov. 1.—In one of the greatest rugby upsets of the past few seasons McGill battled to a 7 to 7 deadlock with Varsity at the Molson Stadium this afternoon. The Blues were odds-on favourites before the start of the contest by virtue of their easy win over the same team three weeks ago, but half-time found them trailing on the short end of a 7 to 1 count after being completely outplayed for the greater part of the second quarter. In the second half Varsity returned to the field and staged a desperate rally to tie the score and stave off the final spurt of the Redmen in the dying moments of the game. Jack Sinclair's drop in the last quarter which went for a point and a touchdown by Jimmie of the same name, from one yard out after the Blues had secured on Doherty's fumble, gave them the necessary six points. With seconds remaining to play McGill nearly took the verdict when Lovering booted to Bell from thirty yards out. It was a short high spiral which Bell took while standing on his own line surrounded by tacklers. A fumble would have been fatal, but Billy made no mistakes and just managed to fall outside the line to save a point and the game. Another two feet back and the McGill rooters would have had something to celebrate.

The game was a complete reversal of form. The Red team played an inspired game after a poor start, while Varsity certainly did not look like the (Continued on Page 3)

TRINITY DEBATERS CENSURE SPEAKING

Meeting on Swearing Adjudged One of the Poorest Ever Held

WOMEN OUTSWEAR MEN

A debate which was adjudged one of the poorest debates ever held, and for which the government, as the debating committee, was strongly censured by speakers from both sides of the House, and on the head of which was finally put out of office on a vote of want of confidence, featured the sitting of the Trinity College Literary Institute last Friday evening.

Speaking on the resolution "that this House views with trepidation the future of swearing," one member of the government benches declared that swearing, which had long been regarded as the prerogative of men for the expression of strong emotion, was no longer peculiar to the masculine sex. Continuing, he said that in his opinion and experience, many sisters could outswear, oath for oath, their com- (Continued on Page 6)

FIXERS

We seem to have, on this campus at least, a generation of university undergraduates entirely devoid of the capacity for criticism. Small wonder our debates have degenerated!

We are hemmed in on all sides by a generation of fixers.

These plausible persons fix everything. If the universe is out of joint, they give it an anaesthetic. Their only dread is that the windows may be opened to the clean winds of healthy controversy.

They want things done decently and in order. They table motions and refer things to committees. They do business behind closed doors, and shudder exquisitely at the thought of open discussion.

Discretion is their God.

If the undergraduate newspaper takes a definite stand, if it lines up rows of definite allegations, the fixers scurry about like the crawling things when a stone is lifted.

"If you were on the inside and saw how these things work . . . if you knew the difficulties we are up against, you wouldn't criticize," they say.

What they suggest, in effect,—although they do not know it—is practical suicide.

Of course, there would be no criticism if one half knew exactly how the other half lived . . . and why. There would be no friction. The wheels would stop. The incentive would be gone, and the very means of locomotion.

It is possible to commit suicide by passively permitting mortification to set in. You don't have to do a thing except lie down and take it.

It is possible to be fixed to death.

If dying is to be done, we don't propose to rot with the "Butt-soft-we-are-observed" Boys.

We choose death on the barricades, where there is at least heat and blood and fire . . . Or official crucifixion, with a pious hand-washing fixer to write a smooth inscription at the head of the cross.

OUR CREED

When any body of men works together for a certain length of time to produce a joint work; when their labors, their anxieties, their hopes, and what they may possess by way of inspiration are together blended to serve one common activity, inevitably there develops among them a goal of workmanship and an ideal of service. If the work to be performed outlasts the lifetime of the individual, then that conception of common purpose becomes a binding tradition and a unifying religion. So it is with nations, with armies, with institutions of business and learning. So it is with us.

Throughout the years of this paper's existence, despite periods of turmoil and confusion, the editors have endeavored to maintain an ideal of service to you who read. Briefly, it is this: to give you both in news form and in argumentative form as clear an understanding of the issues which face you as it is possible to do. This is the tradition of our predecessors down the years; the creed of our endeavour; the excuse for our being.

Whatever else they did, our long succession of editors has maintained, and we do maintain, that this ideal arising out of common endeavour transcends whatever duty we may be said to owe to the organizations which brought us into being. The parents may give birth to a child, may nurture him and educate him—but when he is become a man and has found his God, he shall turn from them and follow this God of his even to the grave. It is this belief which has made your paper known throughout the continent.

That we must of necessity resolve ourselves into a clique against which the accusation may be levelled that we are not perfectly representative of the whole student body, no one can regret more than we do. From the fact that in moments of heat unnecessary offense may have been given individuals, we take no pride. But for our motives we apologize to no man. In the many issues we have raised we have been utterly sincere; have been prompted only by an earnest desire for the truth, and by the belief that to fail in any minor occasion would be to fail in the entire undertaking.

Art, Music and Drama

Sunday Evening Songster

On Sunday evening Mr. Campbell McInnes conducted the first songster of the season and the debt which the men of the University of Toronto owe to him is increasing. That this consummate musician and cultured gentleman should give of his time and energy so freely in our interests is a favour which we cannot regard too highly.

As a singer, as a lecturer on musical subjects and as last season's coach for the Metropolitan Opera Company, Mr. McInnes has a fine reputation. But his greatest contribution has been in the field of old English music and folk-song. Gifted with unusual power in reviving the atmosphere of a period and with a fine dramatic sense he himself is one of the foremost performers. He has also done signal service in organizing and directing the Canadian Singers, now famous for their programmes of madrigals and folk-songs, who have done so much to familiarize Canadian audiences with this type of music. It is also interesting to note that it was on the suggestion of Mr. McInnes that Mr. Cuthbert Kelly organized the internationally famous English Singers.

I believe that historians of the next generation will not find any figure who has made a more significant and valuable contribution to Canadian music than Mr. McInnes.

To men who are at this University for the first time and to those who have heretofore failed to avail themselves of this privilege, one can suggest no better way of acquainting themselves with excellent and very "singable" songs, of gaining an understanding of the development of formal music and of the manner in which the life of a people is reflected in their music than by attendance at the Hart House Songsters.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Miss Wilma Stevenson, pianiste, who has just returned from a two year course at the Royal Academy of Music, London, England, was the guest artist at Hart House on Friday afternoon.

In many ways the recital was quite impressive. There is restraint, poise and maculinity about Miss Stevenson's work which makes it much more valuable and also one had the feeling that there is a large reservoir of technique which the player could draw upon. Features such as these do much to put a recital on the way to success.

The program opened with a Handel Minuet which was really successful because Miss Stevenson secures a beautiful warm tone and because it is one of the few Handel numbers which is not ruined by the substitution of piano for harpsichord.

There was a Chopin group which provided some nice shading and pedal work. Four Debussy numbers received a wonderful reception and it is with this type of writing that the recitalist was happiest. Paradoxical as it may sound, Miss Stevenson "listens" to her own playing. The fact is clearly revealed in the tone, rubato and phrasing which she uses. Debussy is apt to be silly and there are many pitfalls for the thoughtless performer.

Four numbers by modern Russians and two short encores from Eugene Goossens and Chopin completed the program.

Never will I forget my first impression of Miss Sorrelle Cornabji as I stepped into her suite at the Royal Fork Hotel. Comfortably seated among several bales of richly coloured cushions, she was finishing her breakfast of Cobra steak with Jute sauce when I entered the room.

Behind her was a guard of honour composed of five husky Daughters of the Empire armed with dainty British flags.

"Ah, you English, how I like to be here among you all!" she was saying. At her words the five husky daughters applauded vigorously and waved their flags.

"Are you a propagandist, Miss Cornabji?" I asked.

"Not exactly, I am an Anti-Ghandist," she replied. "You see, my sympathies are with the British government."

"Hurray!" cried the husky daughters, waving their flags.

"How do you find conditions in India to-day, Miss Cornabji?"

"Oh Just Ghandi!" she returned.

"But the British Government—"

"Three cheers for the British government in India!" shouted the daughters of the Empire.

"I am so sorry my cheerleader is out just now, Mr. Noles," Miss Cornabji apologized. "She is trying to pick up a picture of the Royal family for me."

"God save the King," sang the five husky daughters.

"Well, good-bye, Mr. Noles, we are going to Ryans," said Miss Cornabji, after we had chatted at some length. "Is that where you have come from?"

she added slyly, as the five husky daughters marched me to the door and handed me over to the hotel detective.

Deplores Dodging

Dear Sir:—

Now that we have our pet political peevish off our chests it is time to look around for a Hart House debate subject that will attract an equal amount of attention and produce an equal amount of verbal verbosity. I believe that we can strike at something that is very obviously forcing itself upon our peaceful (yourself included) souls.

I hope that you have noticed that our last remaining male refuge, Hart House, has been invaded by a battalion of troops, that on our campus we find the young blood-curdling hopefuls of the coming generation learning their tricks and blowing their horns much to the disgust of the people trying to do something constructive by taking lectures. And last, but not least, we have a very powerful man (perhaps too powerful), around this University preaching militarism and condemning intelligent and true accounts of British and other "bravery" from the pulpit. In view of these regrettable facts, I would suggest that the debates committee, at your request, head the cry of the masses and not dodge, as they have done in the past—"Should military training in the schools be tolerated", or "We have confidence in the modern war novel and play".

Sincerely,

However, unless in the depths of my "bourgeois degeneration" I have read

ORPHANS ELIMINATED BY BEACHES; JUNIORS DEFEAT SAINTS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

The result of Saturday's game in Montreal just goes to prove that you never can tell—least of all in rugby. Before the game there wasn't a person, outside of a very few dyed-in-the-wool McGill fans, who would concede them more than a hope of holding Varsity to a respectable score. What happened? To begin with we have never seen such an improvement in any team in such a short space of time. The only similarity between the McGill team of three weeks ago and that which performed on Saturday is the fact that they both wear red sweaters. Couple this with the fact that the Blues were getting a bad game out of their systems and it just about tells the story.

One thing that was noticeable from the start was the absence of Johnny Keith from the line-up. The Blue captain who suffered a broken nose in last week's scrimmage with Queen's, was forced to sit on the bench and it certainly made a big difference in the defensive work of the team. Mal Henderson, who replaced him, turned in a nice game, but he is not yet in Keith's class. In fact very few are. It is almost certain that a good many of those runs of Hammond's and Doherty's would have been stopped before they started with the Varsity regular centre in the game.

For the first time this year it has been demonstrated that good kicking alone will not win every game. Sinclair out-kicked Lovering on nearly every exchange, but the chart of the game showed that, outside of the first quarter, most of the play took place in Blue territory. For one thing Jack had to hurry some of his hoists and couldn't place them as he usually does. Then the McGill end runs and effective plunging gained a lot of ground as well.

The hand of Frank Shaughnessy could be seen in some of the trick plays uncovered by McGill. One shift in particular had the Varsity defence baffled for a long time and the Redmen succeeded in making yards four times with it.

The tie makes it necessary for Varsity to defeat Queen's here on next Saturday in order to win the title. A loss to the Tricolour gives them the laurels no matter what happens in Western, always provided that Queen's can down McGill in their last game. A victory for the Blues means that they win regardless of whether they beat the Mustangs the week after or not.

Fitzpatrick's long lay-off doesn't seem to have done him any harm. The sprint star got into the game in the second half and proceeded to show why he deserves a regular berth. With Fitz out there the Varsity extensions become a real threat, which is something they have not been so far this season. In addition Johnny made some nice gains through the line. Some of the other players who have starred in most of their games to date were away below form on Saturday.

In any case we never want to see another game as close as the last one. It came within an ace of being a loss instead of a tie and only Billy Bell's sure hands and the fact that he never backs up when tackled saved the day on that last minute kick of Lovering's.

Varsity Defeats R.M.C. by 3-0 Score in Soccer

Blue and White Win Easy Victory Over Kingston Cadets

University of Toronto took R.M.C. into camp on Saturday morning, in an intercollegiate soccer game, to the tune of 3 to 0. Varsity's offensive attack was much stronger than that of the boys from the Military School. They showed good combination throughout the game, and deserved to win by a bigger score.

The work of MacPherson at centre for Toronto was sensational. He was always the big scoring threat. His efforts brought two goals for the Blue team. Carbutt, Ward, King, and Goldenberg were all very effective for Varsity. McTavish in goal, and Webbas, centre, were the best for Kingston.

TWO MUFFED BALLS GIVE JUNIORS WIN

Defeat St. Mike's 15 to 6 in Fourth Straight Win of Season

ENTER EASTERN PLAYOFFS

Varsity juniors won their fourth straight victory over St. Michael's College 15 to 6 on Saturday and will now meet the winners of the Eastern Intercollegiate Junior Group in the rugby playoffs.

St. Mike's have improved a great deal since their last appearance against Varsity when they were defeated 25-0. However, the game as a whole, was not a very creditable exhibition of rugby, being marred to a great extent by many costly fumbles. In fact two touchdowns were made because of muffed balls.

The Double Blue seemed to have a decided edge in the first half, but in the second, the Varsity team got down to business and pulled out a well deserved win. The Blue and White line had much more weight than their opponents, but could not make any advantage of it, and many of Varsity's plunges were thrown back for losses. However, in the kicking department, Arnup of Varsity outdistanced Willet of St. Michael's. His lofty punts often got Varsity out of some serious holes. Leachman, Arnup's partner on the half line, did some spectacular running back of kicks and paired up well with his team mate.

First Quarter—Shortly after the kick off, McNulty, the St. Mike's quarter, made a brilliant 40 yard dash which was followed by a rouge for St. Michael's, thus drawing first blood. The Blue and White got down to work after this and ripped through their

By W. A. L.

After about three weeks of hard practice, the basketball teams will finally swing into action to-night, with three games on the bill for the opening. Junior Vic are at home to University College Seniors, St. Michael's take on U.C. Juniors, and at 7 o'clock St. Hilda's, last year's title-holders, will play Senior Vic.

The Saints-Senior Vic struggle should be the pick of the three, since the Red and Gold were one of the strongest teams in the league last season, and the champions have almost as strong an aggregation as represented them before. Both the other games should be quite closely contested, however, with St. Mike's and U.C. Seniors getting the call over their opponents.

The brand of basketball displayed at this point in the season is apt to be erratic, to say the least. Three weeks is never a long enough time in which to get a team functioning properly, unless the players are far above the average. However, experience in actual games is what the players usually need most, and by the first of next week most of the teams should be at top strength.

So far the teams which will represent Social Service and Occupational Therapy are unknown quantities. Social Service have a number of players who formerly starred for McGill, and who are expected to make a good showing. This is their first entry in the league, and it is the second time for Occupational Therapy. Both these teams are handicapped in developing good teams, because the courses are only two years. Incidentally, the Therapists wish it understood that the team from Occupational Therapy includes players from both this course and Physiotherapy.

VARSITY ORPHANS LOSE TO BEACHERS

Blue and White Outclassed by Champions of Eastern Division

LOSE BY 22-4 SCORE

Fighting a gallant but hopeless battle against a team which outclassed them in all departments of the game, Varsity Orphans were vanquished at the Stadium on Saturday by a score of 22 to 4. Even their most ardent supporters must admit that at times it was a woefully weak exhibition of the gridiron pastime put up by the Blue and White, and although Beaches had to fight for their points, the East Enders were never in danger of being beaten. Smashing line plunges, lightning thrusts around the ends, a powerful aerial attack, and defensive tackling ability combined to produce a strength which the Varsity squad could not match, and in winning this game and the group title, Balm Beach looked like worthy champions.

Varsity kicked off, and ran into disaster in the first five minutes. Wood made a short return of Box's punt, and Teddy Reeve ran the ball to Varsity's 50 yard line. "Red" Foster ripped through for 8 yards and Taylor made it first down. Then Teddy Reeve plunged his way through the whole Blue team for 35 yards and a touchdown. Harris returned the kick-off and Wood's fumble was recovered by Beaches, enabling Box to boot 50 yards for a point.

Long kicks by Ab Box drove Varsity back to their 25 yard line, and a fumble was recovered for a 20 yard loss. Heavy line plunges and another fumble by Varsity gave Box his chance, and he sent up a beauty to make it 7-0. Finally Solandt blocked same squad which defeated Queen's last week. They were outplayed for more than half the struggle and in addition made several costly fumbles. In addition, the breaks with very few exceptions, went against them and if it had not been for Sinclair's booting a McGill victory would probably have been registered.

McGILL, VARSITY, BATTLE IN SURPRISING GAME

Jack Sinclair was once more the mainstay of the team. Despite the fact that he was forced to hurry many of his kicks he outbooted Lovering consistently and drove McGill back time after time when they threatened. Billy Bell could not get going in his usual manner, most of Lovering's holds being short and high giving the wings plenty of time to get down. The "T" wings, on the contrary, looked had more than once, much of the advantage from Sinclair's kicking being lost when Doherty and Hammond broke loose for big gains. The absence of Johnny Keith was felt in this department, the defensive strength of the squad being greatly reduced when he was unable to start. Dewar, Jim Sinclair, Adams and Witzel were the pick of the plungers, while Fitzpatrick, who was injected into the fray at the start of the second half, also turned in some good work in this department. Fitz certainly made a big difference on the Varsity extensions. He carried the ball to the Red one-yard line after a fifteen yard run to enable Jim Sinclair to go over for the Blue touchdown.

Hammond and Doherty starred on the McGill half-line although the latter's muffs gave Varsity their first real break and paved the way for the tying five points. Young, at quarter, and McTeer, Church and Granger also played brilliantly.

The Blue and White had the best of the play in the opening quarter. Sinclair's hoist forcing the McGillmen back on the defensive for the whole of the period. He kicked over the line to Hammond for what looked like a sure point, but the McGill star ran it out fifteen yards. Another "T" chance went west when Doherty took Sinclair's long kick deep behind his own line and while surrounded by tacklers, passed to Hammond, who ran it out. Just before the end of the quarter, McGill began working one of Shaughnessy's trick plays and made yards four times in a row to carry the ball to Varsity's 48 yard line where the teams turned around. Richardson replaced Bell in this period. A Blue fumble on their 35 yard line cost them possession, and McTeer went through for yards twice and McGill were only eight yards out. Don Young tried an onside kick and Sinclair had to run it to the deadline for McGill's first point. Hammond took a long hoist from Sinclair's boot and passed to Doherty and the McGill captain sprinted fifty yards through a broken field to Varsity's 35 yard line. It was the longest run of the game. Lovering booted from there to Richardson who fumbled the coach three yards out and Granger fell on it for the Redmen. It was a disastrous break for the Blues as Lovering went over on the first down for a touch which Doherty converted, making the score 7 to 0 for McGill. After the kick-off which was returned to centre, Varsity made yards for the first time, and on an exchange of kicks were in a scoring position on the Red 27 yard line. Sinclair kicked from there to Doherty who was rouged for the Blue's first point.

Varsity started well in the third quarter, but Jimmy Sinclair's fumble lost them a scoring opportunity and some nice running by Hammond shoved them back. Billy Bell dropped a kick on the Varsity 35 yard line and Urquhart grabbed the loose ball for McGill. Penalties to the Redmen eased the pressure for a while and after Fitzpatrick and Traynor found holes in the opposing line Sinclair got off a 65 yard punt and McGill were back on their 15 yard line. Lovering kicked to Bell, who passed to Sinclair and the latter pulled one of his famous long returns on the run. Hammond took it on the Red and White line.

The fourth quarter saw the Blues still facing a six point deficit. Two nice gains by Fitzpatrick gave Sinclair the chance to boot over to Doherty for a rouge, but the play was called back, Varsity getting a first down. A placement was muffed up behind the line and Sinclair tried a drop which went for a point. Doherty muffed a punt on his own twenty-yard line and Varsity recovered. It was the deciding point of the game. A beautiful Varsity end-run with Fitzpatrick featuring the play, carried the ball almost over the line. Witzel was held on the first down, but on the next Jimmy Sinclair went over to tie the score. Bell missed the convert. With only a few minutes left McGill put on a spurt that nearly gave them the game. A succession of plunges put them in Blue territory and with Varsity two men short from penalties to Witzel and Jim Sinclair, Don Young hoisted an onside kick which was recovered by Hammond. The McGill flash ran it to the Varsity 30 yard line, where Lovering kicked short to Billy Bell right on the Blue line. Bell saved the point and the game by getting out by inches.

Varsity Orphans LOSE TO BEACHES

Gold caught the error fever, and lost the ball, but they soon plunged it back to the 20 yard line, from where Mackenzie's attempted drop went for a single. Varsity stiffened for the first time, but Kirkpatrick finally slipped through for 25 yards. Mackenzie added 10 more, and the old steam roller gave the Ponton-coached squad another touch, with round Jimmy Keith making the final plunge. Hodgetts punted a beautiful long spiral, but Mackenzie nullified the Varsity gain by running it back 20 yards. Beaches led at the half way mark 13-0.

In the third canto Varsity made their best showing, holding the winners to two points. For the first five minutes the University boys were hemmed in behind their 25 yard line until an off-side relieved the pressure. A barrage of line smashes and wide bucks brought play to the Blue 25 yard line where Varsity rallied and Box was forced to kick for a single. Fighting desperately, the Orphans repulsed three line plays, but lost the ball right away on an inexcusable fumble, and Box punted to the deadline.

Ferguson slipped through for 15 yards, Varsity's first real gain, and Hodgetts' long kick rolled to Beaches' 35 yard line; a no yards penalty gave the Blue 15 more. Then Wood fumbled and lost 20 yards, but a mistake in the East Enders' signals gave Doyle a loose ball. A Hodgetts-to-Snyder extension made 20 yards and gave the fans something to cheer about. Hodgetts promptly booted a long one for Varsity's first point. Then Johnny Copp made a wild pass, and the spheroid came to rest under Keith. Copp made a valiant effort to run out Box's mammoth punt, but was nailed.

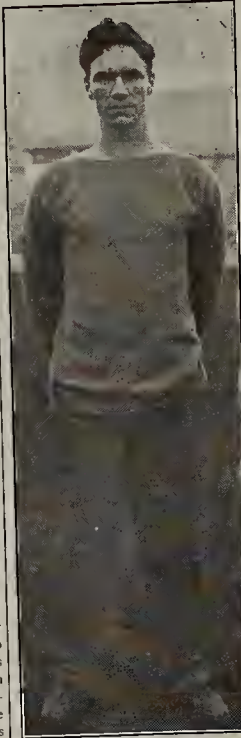

Art Snider drew cheers for his brilliant tackle of the shock-haired Mackenzie, and then did it again for good measure. Teddy Reeve cracked the Orphan line for 15 yards, and Alex Mackenzie shifted and dodged his way 35 yards for the prettiest touchdown of the game. Snider ran a short kick back 16 yards, and Balmy Beach were on the defensive for a change. Varsity pounced on a fumble, and Don Wood dropped over a well-timed placement to end the scoring.

Coach Lou Carroll's team was clearly outplayed throughout, but terrible ball handling and inexcusable fumbles made the score higher than necessary. Solandt was the only lineman who could make any consistent gains, but the tackling of Snider and Wood on the secondary defence was effective. The latter had an off day, and Britnell made a good impression when he replaced him in the third stanza.

Balmy Beach fielded a well-balanced aggregation, with Reeve, Taylor, Jones and Reid leading the plungers. The entire backfield played stellar football and though Mackenzie could have passed to good advantage on several occasions, his work was sensational. The tackling of the outsiders was deadly, especially Jimmy Keith.

TRINITY GRIDDERS CINCH SECOND SPOT

Defeat U.C. 18-5 to Capture Second Place in Mulock Cup Group

CLOUGH OF TRINITY STARS

Trinity College easily defeated University College, 18 to 5, in the Mulock Cup game, played Friday on the former's field. The score tells the story of the game. The Red and Black forced the play for three periods and held off the final efforts of the U.C. men in the last stanza. U.C. fought hard throughout, but were outclassed.

Clough of Trinity was certainly the star of the game. Three times he crossed the U.C. line for major scores and was dangerous every time he carried the ball. Herbert did the kicking for the winners and did it very well. His long hoists were always hard to catch and had plenty of height. In the third period he kicked a field goal from U.C.'s 40 yard line. On the backfield he had a steady partner in Murrell-Wright, who made several long runs and caught well. The heavy tackling of the Trinity men was another feature. Time after time they broke through to bring down plungers before they had reached their own line of scrimmage. Hass was outstanding for U.C. His kicking was, perhaps, the only bright spot of the game for the Red and White. The greatest weakness on the U.C. team was the tackling. On several occasions the Trinity men made long runs when the U.C. tacklers missed the man (Continued on Page 5)

DENTS WIN FIRST MULOCK CUP GAME

Defeat Senior School 1-0 to Cinch Top Rung for Senior Meds

SCHOOL BORROW ONE MAN

Dents defeated Senior School 1 to 0 Friday afternoon on the back campus in the Mulock Cup series. This was Dents' first win and put them in second place in Group I. School were playing short several men and borrowed a man from Dents, but offered stiff resistance throughout the game. S.P.S. kicked off and a few minutes later Sinclair kicked the solitary point of the game. School played nice rugby the rest of the game and were only in danger twice, when Sinclair's drop kick was blocked in the third quarter, and when Howe's kick went into touch at School's 15 yard line. Shortly after this disastrous kick, the School recovered on a fumble. The game was featured by end runs, many of which were very successful.

The Dents had the better of the kicking due to Sinclair's good work. The receiving on both teams was very faulty and many yards were lost this way. Dents moved the yard sticks many times by their nice end runs. Several of the blue team's short end plays were nabbed by the watchful Dents men.

The standouts of the game were Sinclair, Simpson and Dore for Dents, and Howe, Keith and Dewar for S.P.S. This game gives Senior Meds undisputed leadership of Group I. Sr.

Dents—Halves, Sinclair, Conn, Oliver; quarter, Simpson; snap, Mitchell; outsiders, Kahn, Milne; middles, Gibson, Wachna; insides, Merritt, Wylie; flying wing, Dore; subs, Cook, Hudson.

School—Halves, Balachew, Dewar; quarter, Kirk; snap, Fotherington; outsiders, Howe, Parks; middles, Butler.

opponents to get in position for a placement kick. The ball was muffed behind the line and Varsity lost a royal chance to score. Score, Varsity 0, St. Michael's 1.

Second Quarter—In this quarter Varsity played very ragged rugby and the play was concentrated in their territory for the whole of the quarter except for the last forty seconds. The St. Mike's team were breaking through the Varsity line almost at will and no less than six kicks were blocked. But Leachman, the stalwart Varsity half, took advantage of a St. Mike's fumble which changed the whole complexion of the game. In the dying seconds of the first half, he picked up a loose ball and ran 80 yards for a major score which barely missed being converted. Score: Varsity 5, St. Michael's 1.

Third Quarter—Varsity had apparently been given a good talk by Harry Bales, their coach, for in this half their playing was much superior to their adversaries. They held the line much better and made very few fumbles.

In the first three minutes Varsity added to their score with a rouge. The greatest surprise of the game came when Regan of St. Mike's intercepted a pass at mid-field and before any-Weakness in First Year Mathematics is a fruitful cause of failure in the May examinations.

Non-attendance or inattention at lectures before Christmas, (and the resulting low term-marks), will account for many of these failures; some are owing to weak grounding at school, and to the difficulties presented by a novel branch of the subject.

Five or six private lessons will smooth out the difficulties and give the student a firm grasp of the subject. If interested, see Mr. A. Norton at Trinity House, or phone Junction 0624. (Adv.)

body knew it was away for an unconverted touchdown. This made the score 6-6 and seemed to take the heart out of the Varsity players. Soon after this, however, Arnup kicked a long field goal which put Varsity on top again. Score Varsity 7, St. Michael's 6.

Fourth Quarter—This period proved Varsity to be much better than their antagonists and they were continually pressing. In the space of five minutes they added three points to their score by means of a safety and a rouge. The playing see-sawed up and down the field until Dennison of Varsity made a fluke unconverted touchdown after the ball had been handled by six different players, to end the game. Final score: Varsity 15, St. Michael's 6.

Varsity—Wing, Webber; halves, Patterson, Arnup and Leachman; quarter, Oille; snap, Keith; insides, Calvert, Bean; middles, Watson, Dennison; outsiders, Mustard, Henderson; subs, McGinnis, Corrigan, Warren, Austin, Bryers, Woodnough.

CORRESPONDENCE

the letter wrongly, or unless the whole thing is the colossal impudence of someone's misplaced humor, our friend DOES seem to have confined his Marxes a bit, doesn't he? I should like to bring the two together—the jolly actor and the great proletarian—and see how they would react were the letter read to them. I think poor Groucho would be quite dazed at such magnificences as "the imbecile flatness of the present bourgeoisie", while citizen-champion Karl would probably wonder in a preoccupied way who was tossing his words around like that. Anyway, it would be interesting.

Another thing, I wonder if friend correspondent has wandered about the old globe to inspect the places where these conditions of "capitalist anarchy, unemployment, starvation, prostitution, blossom forth in all their satanic splendor". I think he would find them "blossoming" to best advantage in Russia. No, wait a minute, that's the place he says they AREN'T, isn't it? So that won't work. Let me see . . . oh, well, I can't think of a better place right now.

Say, d'you know, I like that phrase "bourgeois degeneration", which our friend uses. It rolls from the tongue in a very satisfactory way. Of course, in my ignorance I had never before seen that word "degeneration", and neither, to my surprise, had Mr. Webster, of dictionary fame. The word Mr. Webster gives us for the "state of having become degenerate" is the good old one we all know, "degeneracy"—but if our literary friend has the noble motive at heart of simplifying the language, why, give him a hand, say I!

Follower of Groucho Marx

Editor,
"The Varsity",
Dear Sir:—

I was somewhat surprised to learn recently that I am historically justified in being a follower of Groucho Marx. I have followed Groucho Marx from theatre to theatre with a loyalty which rather surmounts myself, but really I never sought to justify myself historically or otherwise, I regarded my action as simply unjustifiable wantonness.

Now, in consequence of my aforesaid loyalty, I consider myself as a bit of an authority on Groucho Marx; but I must confess that I never heard him say (at least through the medium of the squawks) that the bourgeoisie was a bit of flat space with messy little bumps scattered hither and yon. As a matter of fact Groucho's ideas on political economy strike me as being rather immature and by no means connected with "philosophical depths of intellect". The salient features of Groucho's theory of political economy are: (1) That the country needs an eight cent nickel; and (2) the state of matrimony should be revised to include at least two women, preferably not more, and one man or possibly none.

The former point is, if I gather, a somewhat paradoxical statement that the purchasing power of money be increased by, supposedly, a fall in the general level of prices. The latter point strikes me as being rather silly insofar as a possible combination of contracting parties excludes a male. Now we males may be generally a useless lot, but we certainly have some uses and I believe that at least one of us being included in a marriage contract is one of them, if not the only one. I frankly do not believe there is an historical precedent where only females figured in a marriage contract, so how then can we followers be historically justified?

I would be deeply indebted to Mr. Krehm if he would enlighten my benighted mind as to how we followers of Groucho Marx are "historically justified", and wherein his theory of political economy calls upon us to explore the "philosophical depths of intellect", and lastly the name of the picture in which our renowned leader delivers his comical attack on the bourgeoisie. This picture must be extremely amusing and I all a-twitter to see it.

Yours truly,
Apinakosapo (Vic.).

HUDSON BAY LINE WILL FOSTER TRADE

"I think that enthusiasm for the railway in Winnipeg, where it really started, has waned considerably since Mr. Bennett made the first of his speeches on the St. Lawrence Waterway there last summer," he said.

Relying on the wheat trade exclusively, meant that for nine months a year the railway would have no custom, but if the local traffic were developed on it, prospects for its success were much brighter, he said.

UPHOLDS BRITISH POLICY IN INDIA

Formerly if a man borrowed two rupees to marry off his daughter, his grandsons would be slaves to the money-lender; so high was the rate of interest.

Education has been extended throughout India, for women as well as men. Under the child-marriage system, education for women was impossible. There could be no school at all for a child married at the age of five. In justice, also, the influence of Britain was noticeable, so that the Indians now speak of "British Justice" where no distinction is made in caste or race, and "Native State Justice".

"Ghandi is an astute politician. He is our worst enemy," said Miss Sorabji, speaking of present-day India. "He did wonderful work in Africa, but he is economically unsound in India."

Miss Sorabji pointed out the paradoxes of Ghandi. "His popularity is due partly to his religious position. But no Hindu holy man ever sought to attain temporal ends by using spiritual means."

"His saying, 'I am fasting for the sins of the people', attracted many followers. But he has brought more suffering to India than any single person. "He has made public declaration, 'I realize that the mob does not realize my doctrine, and translate it into violence and storm'. But he continues to preach what he cannot believe in as interpreted by the mob."

Miss Sorabji concluded by telling of a vision she often sees—a picture of wide marble steps upon which people are going—pilgrims of light moving towards light.

this new building as far as possible" said W. T. Little, accountant at Victoria College, when questioned by "The Varsity" as to the construction. Georgetown rubble stone will come from the Credit Valley and sandstone from Queenstown.

The residences are made up of 5 different houses. They are built on the entry staircase plan, there being no corridors connecting the houses. The five houses will accommodate 67 students. On the ground floor house numbers 1, 2, 3 and 4 will have a student's common room with fireplace, telephone booths and other necessities; four bedrooms 7 ft. x 14 ft. and each bedroom has a study 12 ft. x 14 ft. which adjoins. House number five will have a large Theological Commons. This Commons will prove to be one of the many features of the residences. The houses have 4 bedrooms and 4 studies with one central common room on each of the other three floors. The fourth floor bedrooms being smaller than the other ones on account of the tapering roof.

altogether. Dickinson, on the half-line for U.C., kicked a field goal in the second period, and on attempt of another, scored a single in the last period. This victory assures Trinity of second place in their group and leaves U.C. in the cellar position.

The line-ups were:

Trinity College—Coleman, flying-wing; Clough, flying-wing; Herbert, halfback; Murrell-Wright, halfback; Edwards, quarterback; Martin, snap; Fair, Pearnan, inside; Skeg, Lemon, middles; Perdue, Cassels, outside; Dickinson, Finningley, Mann, Popall, substitutes.

University College—Hass, flying-wing; Phelan, flying-wing; Schulman, halfback; Dickinson, halfback; Caldecott, quarterback; Keith, snap; Burson, inside; Clarke, inside; Daly, middle; Bringle, middle; Scott, outside; Agnew, outside; Shaw, Smith, Hamilton, Jones, White, substitutes.

WESTERN CAPTURES CLOSE TRACK MEET

Intermediate Title Decided by Result of Relay Race

VARITY LOSES BY 2 FEET

Western University beat the University of Toronto to the Intermediate Intercollegiate track supremacy when they nosed Varsity out of first place in the last event of the meet held at the Bloor Street stadium on Friday. The results give Western 55 points, Varsity 53, McMaster 17, O.A.C. 10. The 220 low hurdles left Varsity and Western tied with 50 points each. The relay is not usually counted as a point gainer unless it is necessary to break a tie. The intercollegiate title depended on the result of the relay and Western broke the tape only two feet ahead of Varsity.

In many events the contestants looked like senior performers. Shue, for Western, threw the discus almost 110 feet. Laing, for Toronto, had no difficulty in clearing 5' 8" to take the high jump and afterwards attempted a record of 5' 10", but could not make it on account of the cold weather. He is a pretty jumper. Chillingness prevented several from making their best showing. Wright, for Western, was the outstanding athlete of the meet. Following are the results:

Discus—1, Shute, (W); 2, Lawson (M); 3, Emery (T). Distance, 109' 9 3/4".

Poule Vault—1, Black (T); 2, Byrne (T); 3, Salmon (M). Height, 9' 6".

880 yards—1, Fraser (W); 2, Kendall (O); 3, Vila (T). 2 min. 8.6 sec.
120 high hurdles—1, Wright, (W); 2, Thompson (W); 3, McGowan (M). Time, 16 sec.

100 yards—1, Rivers, (W); 2, Wright (W); 3, McLaren (T). Time, 10.2 sec.

High jump—1, Laing (T); 2, Dilworth (M); 3, Vennels (T). Height, 5' 8".

Shot put—1, Fulton (T); 2, Salmon (M); 3, Eaton (T). Distance, 36' 1-4".

Broad jump—1, Wright (W); 2, Luke (W); 3, Baldwin (M). Distance, 21' 10".

One mile—1, Lee (T); 2, Kendall (O); 3, Little (M). Time, 4 min. 45.8 sec.

220 yards—1, Rivers (W); 2, Davison (T); 3, Thompson (W). Time, 23.4 sec.

Javelin—1, Fulton (T); 2, Galbraith (W); 3, Canover (O). Distance, 134' 3".

Three mile run—Hayworth (T); 2, Thompson (O); 3, Seaborn (T). Time, 16 min. 33.2 sec.

440 yards—1, Holmstead (T); 2, Eaton (T); 3, Schram (W). Time, 55.4 sec.

220 yards low hurdles—1, Wright (W); 2, McGowan (T); 3, Loft (W). Time, 26.8 sec.

Relay—1, Western; 2, Toronto; 3, O.A.C. Time, 3 min. 35.4 sec.

WOMEN DISAGREE ON SUBJECT OF DEBATES

U.C., agreed. "But the main thing needed in debating is a sound argument embellished by the light and happy touch. If the Hart House men are tending to neglect the argument for the sake of wit alone, then the value of debates is lost." She refused to condemn the present state of men's debating, because she knew nothing about it.

That debating is the Cinderella of university activities was the opinion of Isabel Jordan, U.C. "The men hide it away in a scholastic corner and so it is the last thing they think of doing," she asserted. "If the present speakers are bad, there must be better ones." Miss Jordan agreed with Miss Godfrey that the standard of men's debating is better than women's. "Women are afraid to speak," she said.

Miss Marion Haugh of Victoria disagreed. "Women certainly seem keener on serious debating than men," she told "The Varsity". "So if keenness alone can make up for ability it is about time we stepped into the breach and made things hum. A woman might raise the standard of debates, for no woman will speak unless she has something to say."

Miss Haugh was convinced that the new system at Victoria of an open parliament for men and women would be beneficial for both. She herself is the leader of the opposition.

On the subject of men's debating Miss O'Dea of St. Michael's approved, but preferred not to say anything further.

MEN STUDENTS EXPRESS OPINIONS ON DEBATE

was the opinion of Al Dignan, of third year Victoria College. The Liberal speakers on the paper were woefully weak with regard to their debating in his opinion. "I consider," said he, "that the speakers on the paper should be more forceful, but the large attendance shows the power of appeal that the debates have. Everyone seems to have enjoyed the debate, and from a student standpoint they are very valuable."

"This was a particularly poor debate," said A. Schwartz, of fourth year University College. "Despite its interspersing of mirth, it was quite interesting to hear the methods of obtaining votes for the different political parties."

G. W. Brown, Professor of History in the University of Toronto, and the chairman of the Debates Committee, was out of town at the time of the debate, and as a result did not wish to offer any comment on the subject. But in his opinion, the idea of the Hart House Debate was as a valuable medium for student expression, and the Debates Committee were striving to carry out this object and to make the debates worth while.

CHAMPION CADETS
TAKE EASY GAME

Varsity Intermediates Lose to Strong R.M.C. Team by 23-1

HAVE LOST EVERY GAME

Varsity intermediates did not offer much opposition to Royal Military College in an Intermediate Intercollegiate rugby fixture played at Varsity stadium Saturday morning, the Cadets winning easily 23-1. R. M. C. also are the champions of the centre group, not having lost a game. One game remains to complete the schedule, Varsity at Queen's next Saturday. The intermediates have not won a game this year, but have been up against two strong teams. R.M.C. defeated McGill in an exhibition game at the start of the season while the Queen's team is the Tricolour's second squad.

Fumbles were frequent on the Varsity team Saturday and several chances for single points were missed. Davoud, on the Cadet backfield, stood out with his stellar playing and broken field running. Storms was quite prominent for the winners, as was Carr at quarter. McMullen showed up very well on the backfield for Varsity, while Riggs gave a good exhibition at quarter. Smith booted well for the Blue.

Shortly after the commencement of the game, Davoud booted to Smith, who was downed for the first point. Davoud broke away in centre field and carried the ball 45 yards to Varsity's two yard line. In two downs the Cadets advanced the pigskin but one yard, but on the third down they plunged across for a major score which was converted. Before the quarter finished, Davoud added another single on a kick to McMullen. R.M.C. 8, Varsity 0.

Varsity did better in the second quarter, holding the Cadets to a draw, each team getting a point. Varsity secured the ball on a fumble at the R.M.C. 45 yard line. The Cadet backfield fumbled Smith's kick and Varsity secured ten yards out. On the third down, Smith booted to the dead-line. Smith was rouged on Davoud's kick. Score at half time, R.M.C. 9, Varsity 1.

Smith ran the kick-off back twenty yards to Varsity's 30 yard line, but a fumble gave the Cadets the ball. R. M.C. pressed Varsity hard and three more singles were quickly added. McMullen fumbled Davoud's hoist and White fell on it to score a try. A convert brought the score at the end of the third quarter to 18-1 for R.M.C.

Davoud picked his way through a broken field for a fifty yard gain, being stopped at Varsity's five yard line. Carr plunged over for a touch, but it was not converted. Varsity, with the wind in their favour, had an edge in the kicking and forced the play into the Cadets' half. Davoud caught faultlessly and was able on each occasion to carry the ball out. Final score, R.M.C. 23, Varsity 1.

R.M.C. — Flying wings, Storms, Smith; halves, Davoud, White; quarter, Riggs; snap, Buchanan; insides, Coy, Farwell; middles, Fere, Patterson; outsiders, Spott, Salter; subs, Reid, Longstaff, Winrow, Gibb, Shipp, Sheppard, Waring, Watherspoon, DeMille.

Varsity—Flying wings, Hume, Litowitz; halves, McMullen, Smith; quarter, Riggs; snap, Buchanan; insides, Coy, Farwell; middles, Fere, Patterson; outsiders, Spott, Salter; subs, Reid, Longstaff, Winrow, Gibb, Shipp, Sheppard, Waring, Watherspoon, DeMille.

Officials—Bartlett and Prendergast.

Possibility of Ghandi having reached the zenith of his power in India was voiced by Lt.-Gen. Sir George Gort, former deputy chief of General Staff, India, who said aboard S. S. Duchess of Richmond for Liverpool recently. "Time will very likely cure India of her ills, as it has done before," was Sir George's view.

The hunting grounds of eastern Canada abound with big game and with wild fowl of every description as a result of wise game laws and conservation measures of the various provinces, according to A. O. Seymour, general tourist agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, who announces that opportunities for hunters in Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces were never better than in the present season.

Ron. C. A. Dunning, formerly minister of Finance in the King Administration, has accepted the position of vice-president and general manager of "Lucerne in Quebec" and will enter upon his new duties at once. The appointment was made public recently by E. W. Beatty, as president of that organization. Directors of "Lucerne in Quebec" make this announcement with a great deal of satisfaction, said Mr. Beatty, in view of Mr. Dunning's achievements in Canadian affairs and his outstanding personal character.

Anrus Hodgson, well known Montreal big game hunter, back in that city from Banff and the Canadian Rockies, reports that he shot one moose, one elk, one black bear, two deer and two Rocky Mountain goats. He almost added a grizzly to this total which, however, got away after a six day chase. "Why on earth more Canadians do not go to Banff for their hunting beads me," Mr. Hodgson declared, adding that cost was reasonable and big game abounded there.

Unveiling of the memorial to Bliss Carman, noted Canadian poet, took place at Fredericton recently and was broadcast at Mr. Dunning by Canadian Pacific radio network. Sir George Foster, well known Canadian statesman, spoke, expressing the sentiments of all Canadians in regretting the loss of the great national bard.

A French-Canadian wedding of a hundred years ago was one of the high lights of Quebec's first Folk Dance, Folk Song and Handicrafts Festival which was given at the Chateau Frontenac in that City October 16-18. Dances of Old and New France and of the Metis from the prairie provinces were among the other features of the festival which was conceded to have been the most successful of the many produced under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The Nova Scotia apple crop from the Annapolis Valley is now valued at $3,000,000 and the significance of this figure will be realized when it is recalled that the return from last year's crop was approximately $1,000,000. Growers affirm there never was a better year in the history of the industry than the present.

In 1900 there were 11,906 acres under tobacco in Canada which yielded 11,267,000 lbs. Preliminary estimates for 1930 indicate an area of over 40,000 acres and a production of around 35,000,000 pounds. The greatest increase is in Ontario which grew 30 per cent. of the crop in 1900 and 75 per cent. this year.

IMPERIAL DEBATING TEAM ANNOUNCED BY UNIVERSITIES

Two British Debaters to Meet University of Toronto Speakers Soon

DISTINGUISHED GRADUATES

H. T. Lloyd Met Canadian Team in 1928 Debates on Other Side

In the Imperial Debate between the University of Toronto and Great Britain the British team will consist of Trevor Lloyd and John Mitchell distinguished graduates of British Universities, and prominent debaters in the Old Country.

H. Trevor Lloyd graduated from the University of Bristol in Geology and Geography, and has spent the past year doing post-graduate in Education. He is a vice-president of the National Union of Students of England and Wales, the body by which he was nominated to the British team.

During the past three years Mr. Lloyd has represented his University in many inter-varsity debates, in England, Wales and Ireland. He met the Canadian Debating team in the fall of 1928. This, however, will be the first occasion on which he has been on this side of the Atlantic.

In addition to debating, Mr. Lloyd was Head Student of the large Hall of residence of the Bristol University, and in the following year was President of the Bristol University Union. During the period of his stay at Bristol he represented the University at Association Football. He was present at the International Confederation of Students Council Meetings at Budapest in 1928, and acted as Director of Commission in place of Mr. Iverson Macadam who was absent in Canada.

John Mitchell has been one of the most distinguished students of the University of Aberdeen and graduated with the degrees of M.A. and LL.B. Debating and Public Speaking have

COOY AWARDS GO TO VICTORIA MEN

Carson and Jolliffe Both Fourth Year Victoria Students

AWARD IS ANNUAL

The First Maurice Cooey Scholarship, of the value of $300, has been awarded to E. H. A. Carson of Victoria College. The Second Maurice Cooey Scholarship of the value of $200, has been awarded to E. B. Jolliffe, also of Victoria College. These Scholarships are awarded annually through the generosity of friends of the late Maurice Cooey. An examination is tried before the opening of the university in Constitutional History of Canada, Economic History of Canada, and a special subject.

E. H. A. Carson is in fourth year Philosophy, English or History, is the editor of the Acta Victoriana, has taken part in the interfaculty debates, and is a member of the Victoria College Dramatic Society.

E. B. Jolliffe is in fourth year Modern History, a member of the Students' Administrative Council, a member of the Debates Committee, a member of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, president of the Victoria College Union and he has taken part in Hart House debates.

IMPERIAL DEBATING TEAM

On the LEFT, John Mitchell, one of the most distinguished students of the University of Aberdeen, and on the RIGHT, H. Trevor Lloyd, a graduate of the University of Bristol, who will debate to-morrow night in Trinity College Library.

SEES PALESTINE AS EMPIRE LINK

Palestine Paradise for Men, Since Women Do All the Work

ILLUSTRATES WITH SLIDES

"Palestine is essential to Britain's foreign policy," said Dr. W. R. Taylor, head of the department of Oriental Languages, in the course of an interesting illustrated lecture on "Palestine, Past and Present," delivered in University College before a large audience yesterday afternoon. Dr. Taylor expressed the opinion that Britain is pursuing this policy in order to retain control of the Suez Canal and also because of the unrest in Egypt. Later in the lecture, when thousands of well-kept graves were being shown on the screen, he remarked, "This shows what it cost Britain to capture this country."

Many beautiful coloured views of temples, mountains and shepherds with their flocks, were shown. When a scene in which a native was ploughing with a team made up of a camel and an under-sized ox appeared, Dr. Taylor remarked:

"I've never seen an even team in Palestine. The reason is that he owns the ox and has hired the camel. He's saving the upkeep of one animal—so he's not so stupid as he looks."

The caravans shown were small, as they are being rapidly replaced by motor cars and trains for crossing the deserts.

"The lake of Galilee is shaped like an Irish harp," explained Dr. Taylor. (Continued on Page 4)

Queen's Hall Strives To Avoid Blind Dates

Queen's Hall held an informal dance on Saturday night to which about fifty men from residences and fraternity houses came. The girls did not invite particular men as they do for the formal affairs, but the seniors introduced them to those present.

Miss Sophie Boyd, Dean of Queen's Hall, was the originator of the idea. She said she thought that the girls, particularly the freshmen, should have some way of meeting men which would help to do away with blind dates. There will probably be another in the near future.

ADVISES WOMEN ON JOB SEEKING

Highest Immediate Salary not True Indication of Satisfaction

COMPATIBLE WORK SOUGHT

"Do not look for the job with the highest immediate salary, but the one which will eventually satisfy you," was the advice given by Miss True Davidson of the new Vocational Bureau, sponsored by the Canadian Federation of University Women, to a meeting of the undergraduate women at Wymilwood on Monday afternoon. "When deciding upon a vocation," she continued, "ask yourself what appeals to you and whether there are sufficient possibilities of development in that certain field."

She expressed the belief that the main difficulty for the college girl is the prejudice against University graduates, adding, "The chief complaint is that they hold themselves aloof." The speaker stressed the opening in the field of Social Service for sympathetic, tactful graduates. She also discouraged dieticians, saying that applicants far outnumber available positions at the present time.

"Find out what you want to do, then analyse yourself, form a graph, and all aptitudes will point to one job," stated Mrs. MacKenzie, the other member of the Vocational Bureau. After making a decision concerning a job, she advised the girls to follow it up summers and to read about it in spare moments. "The individual can do a lot of vocational guidance for herself," concluded the speaker.

IMITATION OF PROVOST WINS COSTUME PRIZE

Seniors Revert to Kindergarten As 75 Trinity Girls Frolic

About seventy-five girls, resident and non-resident, frolicked at a Halloween party at St. Hilda's College, on the festival of spooks and goblins on Friday. Pumpkins were an item in the effective orange and black decorations.

The second year girls represented Old Mother Hubbard and her family. Three choir boys were noticeable. The engaging young members of the Provost's Kindergarten proved to be the fourth year.

The first prize was captured by Miss M. Tamblin as the Provost, and the second, by Miss M. Lamb, as Scrooge.

Debating Parliament Upholds Motion of Confidence in Church

By a vote of 50 to 42, students of Victoria College upheld a motion of confidence in the Christian Church at a meeting of the Debating Parliament last night. The attendance was smaller than usual, and many members left before the speeches were concluded.

At the conclusion of the debate the Speaker congratulated the house on the courtesy extended to the speakers on the paper, as evidenced in the infrequency of unnecessary interruptions, remarking that in that respect the recent Hart House debate deserved some of the criticisms levelled at it.

In the opinion of many present, there were few interesting speeches to relieve the general monotony of the discussion. Opinions were expressed after the meeting, however, that a greater preponderance of light humour was not desired by the majority of those who attended.

Earl Lautenslager delivered the outstanding address of the evening, which was branded by J. W. Binning, leader of the Opposition, as pure sentimentality. An amendment to the motion, which cleverly changed it into a vote of confidence in the Government, was introduced by Binning and defeated by a large majority.

Some amusement was aroused at the beginning of the meeting by a resolution to the effect that students taking partners to college functions be required to submit to the caput the partner's name with a certificate of character. The resolution was shelved for six months' consideration.

It was announced that the subject of the next debate would be a resolution that the house would desire to remain pacifist in the event of a future war.

MOTOR VEHICLES SEEN IN BABYLON

T. A. Russell Traces Motor Development from Earliest Days

BREAKS DOWN ISOLATION

"Chariots shall rage in the streets, jostling one against the other in the broad ways, seeming like torches, running like lightning," quoted T. A. Russell, president of the Royal Canadian Institute and president of the Willys-Overland, in a lecture on "The Motor Car in World Affairs," in Convocation Hall on Saturday. In the present day, Dr. Russell said, one could easily see a fulfillment of the above prophecy.

Stating that the true inventors of the automobile were the Babylonians, Dr. Russell traced the history of the development of the motor car. After 1875, rapid advances were made in the manufacture of pneumatic tires, of paved roads, and of storage batteries. At the beginning of this century keen rivalry existed between the steam car, the electric car and the internal combustion vehicle.

ENGINEERS ROOM U.S.A. ON TOUR

Negro Workman at Steel Plant Recipient of Bowler Hat in Buffalo

HAMILTON VISITED

Thursday was "Travel Day" at S.P.S. The upper years of Mechanicals, Civils and Electricals, made trips to Buffalo and vicinity, first year Mechanicals visited the local plants of the Goodyear and General Electric.

Five buses took about two hundred students to Buffalo. Electricals in one bus stopped at Hamilton, and in the morning were shown through the Westinghouse East End plant. In the afternoon they visited the Ois-Pensom and the Standard Underground Cable works. After doing a show, everyone had a good sleep in the bus on the way home which most reached by one a.m.

Civils had an alleged "whale of a time." They arrived in Buffalo in time for lunch and then went through the Bethlehem Steel works. The plant covers three square miles and all were tired when five o'clock came. When first entering the building the cry "Hats off," was heard. One unfortunate gentleman did not respond and his bowler was given to a negro workman and has not since been seen.

Supper and a show came afterwards. Several private cars from Hamilton joined the Civils and the combined number all but bought out one Buffalo theatre. In deference to the audience one actor appeared wearing Varsity colours, but was promptly given the hook.

Editor Should be Elected by Joint Executive, States Report

TOLERANCE RECOMMENDED

Viewpoint of Downtown Press Unsuit for "Varsity" Says Committee

As a result of yesterday's meeting, the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. is recommending to the Board of Governors that no change take place in the present status of "The Varsity", although they do suggest that a new method be devised for the appointment of the Editor-in-Chief. The Sub-Committee reporting back to the main body presented a voluminous report, in favour of maintaining the publication of "The Varsity" and of a compulsory fee; and including a commentary on the news and editorial policy of the paper.

It was the opinion of the committee as outlined in their report that the present policy of "The Varsity" was not entirely in harmony with the opinions of the majority of the student body. They suggested that "The Varsity" realize that it has a different outlook from the downtown press and should not follow their example from a news point of view; and went on to note that "The Varsity" was very widely read all over the continent and should do nothing to prejudice the University in the eyes of outsiders.

"Tolerance and Co-Operation" were stressed as examples of the kind of spirit that should influence the staff of "The Varsity". Personalities and vulgar and suggestive expressions should be carefully avoided, in the opinion of the committee.

The report went on to state that no one in any way connected with the University seemed desirous of interfering with the rights of free speech on the part of the Editor, and that no one was unwilling to be criticized, providing that a proper form of expression.

A. E. AMES WILL SPEAK TO S.P.S.

Former President of Exchange and Board of Trade Discusses Finance

MEETING AT 4.00 P.M.

A. E. Ames, known as one of the leading financiers of Canada, will be the guest speaker at the Engineering Society meeting to-day at 4.00 p.m. His subject will be "The Financial Situation in Canada". Mr. Ames, who is president of A. E. Ames and Company, stock brokers, is considered eminently qualified to deal with this subject. His first connections with finance were formed forty-nine years ago when he left Brantford Collegiate Institute, and entered the Owen Sound branch of the Merchants' Bank. At the end of six years' banking experience he became manager of the branch of the Ontario Bank at Mount Forest; and after an additional year in this same capacity at Lindsay he came to Toronto and founded his present business. In 1897 he became the president of the Toronto Stock Exchange and four years later president of the Toronto Board of Trade.

"We are expecting a large crowd," W. E. Algie of the Engineering Society told "The Varsity". "What Mr. Ames has to say should be of interest to everybody because of the heavy financial crisis through which we have just passed."

SINGING IS THE THING

Once more the women of this University read within the pages of this paper enthusiastic reviews of Songsters held for and by the male undergraduates in Hart House under the invigorating leadership of Campbell McInnis. In vain may they search for announcements of similar functions for women. Yet surely women have as deep an interest in and as certain an ability for singing as men. Far be it from us to thoughtlessly suggest the forming of any more societies within our already over-organized midst, but it does seem lamentable that the women should not have an equal opportunity for such informal fellowship through singing as the men now enjoy.

This subject may seem relevant only to a college music club. Mindful, however, of the inclusive nature of the Hart House Songsters, we disagree. The women of the various colleges have all too few opportunities for meeting together on interfaculty occasions. There is, therefore, an inevitable feeling of strangeness and undeveloped camaraderie between college groups which are theoretically one in paying allegiance to the same alma mater. Lectures and interfaculty games excepted, the women of each group move through their four or more years here for the most part within their own circle. We are in reality strangers within our own gates. Interfaculty Songsters for women are but one suggestion offered to remedy this situation. Songs shared together have a well-known effect of promoting good feeling and friendliness. But is there anyone sufficiently interested to create the necessary opportunity? Are the women themselves sufficiently concerned to want the opportunity created?

After all, the whole thing comes back to the old subject—the need of a women's Hart House in this University. With such a centre would come the remedying of just such a deficiency as we have decried. Perhaps the men did not think of singing together until the possession of a Music Room suggested it to a committee man's eager mind. With the women it may be necessary to reverse the process. Perhaps if they joined in song in a great interfaculty group, it would serve as yet another reminder that the women of this University want and need a building their own where they can meet in definite interfaculty activities, not the least of these being Songsters. Wherefore, all together, let us sing!

It seems that two Norwegian Snake Charmers, whom we shall designate as Sandy and Ike, had been fishing all day entirely without success, when Sandy or perhaps it was Ike, I forget which, suggested that they change their location and row over to the opposite bank.

If you have heard this one before please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope restating your question.

Well, anyway, Ike, or maybe it was Sandy, or Sandy's grandmother, who was along with them to put the worms on the hooks.—(see Hookworm, Diet of Worms, Grandmother, Old Age Pension Act in Glossary at back).—rowed the boat over to another spot, where they cast out their lines.

And such was their success that

Sandy, or Ike, or perhaps one of their twin second cousins, whom I forgot to mention, advised them to mark the spot so that they could find good fishing for the next time.

Or no, wait a minute, it was after they came back from the fishing trip that the ten year old twin suggested it to the twelve year old one, who had been obliged to stay ashore to give Junior his cough medicine.

"Did you mark the spot, Jakey?" "Yes, I made a mark on the side of the boat with a piece of chalk, Dudley."

"You utter imbecile, Jakey, how do you know that we will be able to rent the same boat next time?"

Have you heard about the disappointed squirrel?

Ask your friends. Ask the man who owns one.

We wonder what this Cat would be like if it were written in a sober vein. We would like to hear the undergraduates express varicose opinions on the subject. But whether vein or not, we admit that to-day's colm is bilge. —But why to-day's?

—Gaspard McGuffey.

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Amos 'n' Andy are in town. So are four pictures with revolvers figuring in the cast. But it is not such a bad week at that: Whoopie is here, which helps a lot; and The Spoilers, now at The Uptown, is not so bad.

Of course, Eddie Cantor gets all the individual plaudits of the week. The bisses are directed at the cast of Up the River, but they did not have much of a vehicle to get anywhere on. Vaudeville at the Imperial is the best in the city for this week.

Imperial. Up the River. (-1). Just another of those penitentiary comedies, and it isn't even funny. Spencer Tracy and Claire Luce, the comedians, call a few laughs, but are immediately dampened by the hero and heroine. We give credit to the fade-outs, however, which are effective. Vaudeville is better than usual, featuring the new master of ceremonies, Jack Pepper, who puts over a few songs, imitating Rudy Vallee. Fred Lightner, who is Winnie Lightner's brother, has a good company.

Whoopie. [(1) or (2)]. Good, by Crickey! Here is a musical show that is worth a visit—the first of all the song and dance affairs to really appeal. Eddie Cantor is there, and so is Flo Ziegfeld and his American Beauties, ditto Samuel Goldwyn, and a whole crew of imaginative technicians. Away out in the wild west with Indians and six-shooters. Eddie Cantor is a great man!

The Last of the Lone Wolf. (0). A very impossible tale of intrigue in an imaginary country after the manner of The Prisoner of Zenda. Bert Lytell is really quite admirable as the pro crook gone amateur, and Patsy Ruth Miller is not so bad as the countess, his joint accomplice and opponent. But what fools they all are in Saxonia—lots of ingenuity but no common sense. The first four vaudeville shows made us wriggle our toes and want to die; but the Four Orions were darn good; tight-rope walkers, real and faked, and a goose or two.

Check and Double Check. [(1) if you believe in Amos 'n' Andy; (-1) if you don't.] The question is, would this show be acclaimed as a success if Messrs. Gosden and Correll had not spent a year gathering together a vast number of radio disciples convinced of their leaders' comic divinity? Are Amos 'n' Andy figures of Clay so magnified by high pressure advertising as to seem really funny? We don't know. But we laughed at parts of the picture, and we think them dull over the radio.

The Spoilers. (0). Gary Cooper as a strong silent hero in Alaskan gold fields is convincing; so are the Messrs. Green, Summerville and Kirkwood with semi-comic character roles. Neither Kay Johnson nor Betty Compson—the good and bad heroines respectively—look quite natural among the he-men. The plot is good, even if the artificial happy ending.

Please see Atlantic coming to this theatre to-morrow.

WATERWAYS ARE BURNING QUESTION

Canada Should Not Pay More Than One-third of Proposed Cost

DIVERSION PROBLEM

Canada should not pay more than one-third of the cost of the proposed St. Lawrence waterways project nor should she allow the United States rights on the Canadian section of the system until settlement of the question of diverting water from the Great Lakes System was reached, B. K. Sandwell, Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, noted economist, novelist and humorist, and formerly on the staff of McGill University, told a dinner meeting of the Young Canadians' Club in the Royal York Hotel last night.

The United States has only practically valueless navigation rights on the river where it runs through Canada by an 1871 treaty, stated Mr. Sandwell. On the cost question he pointed out that at present American vessels on the system would be more than Canadian vessels in a 5 to 1 proportion, nor was there much prospect of Canada increasing her traffic enough to lessen the difference. Therefore Canada's share of the $355,500,000 cost involved should not be more than $120,000,000. Of this she had spent more than $100,000,000 on the Wel-

JR. MEDS DEFEATED BY PHARMACY 3-0 IN MULOCK CUP GAME

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

St. Hilda's had a tougher time winning from Senior Vic than anyone expected. The Saints showed only an occasional flash of the form which carried them to the championship last season. Perhaps, too, Senior Vic have been underrated, and they certainly showed last night that they will give any team a hard fight.

With one bad game out of their systems, St. Hilda's will probably settle down and display their old-time steadiness. There is one point in which the Blue and Grey have a big advantage over any of the other teams at the University and that is in the matter of support. Invariably at their games, there is a large turn-out of enthusiastic rooters, both male and female, who never fail to voice their approval in hearty fashion.

In the other games, more or less the expected happened, but all the games were characterized by a great deal of sloppy basketball, and unsteady shooting. The U.C. Seniors alone were at all sure of their shots, and the other teams missed many an easy score by too hasty attempts. The foul shooting, too, was noticeably weak, but this has never been a particularly strong point of University teams.

ST. HILDA'S TAKE SENIOR VIC GAME

Saints' Basketeers Have Hard Time to Win from Scarlet and Gold

PLAY IS ERRATIC

St. Hilda's basketballers last night took Senior Vic into camp by a score of 36 to 25. The game was very exciting all the way through with the Saints drawing away from their opponents only in the dying moments of the game. At the interval the score was 12-11; during the second half neither team was able to hold any sort of lead until near the end of the game, when the Saints forged ahead. Play was extremely erratic, with the Blue and Grey uncooking an occasional nice play which carried them right down the floor to score. The Vic attack was led by Eleanor Sedgewick, speedy side-centre, who scored most of Vic's points and was in on every play. For the Saints, Sally Ballard was particularly outstanding, with the rest of the forward line combining well. Fran Crooks played a stellar game at centre.

PHARMACY DOWNS JUNIOR MEDS

Druggists Show Superior Play in Mulock Cup Clash Yesterday

FINAL SCORE 3 TO 0

In a hard fought battle on the back campus last night, Junior Meds bowed to Pharmacy by a score of 3-0 in a Mulock Cup fixture. Play was about even in the first half, but Pharmacy showed superior condition and pressed Jr. Meds continually in the last half. There was no score in the first half, and both teams were guilty of many fumbles in mid field. Eaton made several good tackles for Meds and was in nearly every play. McGladdery made the most sensational run of the game in the first quarter, a fifty yard dash through the Pharmacy squad.

In the third quarter Pharmacy intercepted a pass and kicked for a point. Meds' finest chance to score came when they grabbed a loose ball on Pharmacy's twenty yard line, but kicked weakly and failed to score. In the last quarter play was confined entirely to Meds' territory, but Pharmacy failed to score a touchdown, getting two points on a kick to the dead-line and a rouge. Final score was 3 to 0.

Pharmacy—Halves, Wadland, Vincent, Walsh; flying wing, Muldoon; snap, Theal; quarter, Clegg; insides, Fox, Craw; middles, Robb, Lazinley; outsides, Campbell, Webber.

Junior Meds—Halves, Stewart, McKay, Coleman; flying wing, Eaton; quarter, McGladdery; snap, Nicholl; insides, Mather, Bonnycastle; middles, Kingsbury, Tait; outsides, Barber, Magnier.

VIC WATER POLO DEFEATS SR. MEDS

Victoria defeated Senior Meds 3-2 in a close, hard-fought struggle yesterday afternoon in the second game of a scheduled interfaculty water polo double header in the Hart House tank.

Play was strenuous throughout and Victoria had to make a gallant, uphill fight to win out in the last second of play. The first half was featured by the fast play of the two rival forward lines. Play ranged from one end of the tank to the other without any score. Finally the pressure was relieved when Allin, Meds' starry forward, scored a pretty goal. Victoria rallied and in short time Patterson evened the count at 1-1. Meds came back into the lead once again with Sutherland scoring from centre with a hard bouncing shot. The first half ended with Meds leading 2-1.

From the beginning of the second half Victoria forced Meds into their own end of the tank and after two minutes of play, Edmison scored the equalizer. Meds strove hard to check the Vic onslaught, but in the dying moments of the game the winning goal was scored from a scramble in front of the Meds' nets. The line-up:

Victoria—Garton, Smith, Patterson, Seal, Gould, Edmison, O'Neal.
Sr. Meds—Bremer, Sutherland, Allyn, Irwin, Jackson, Kimear.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

After the smoke of battle has cleared away it becomes apparent once again that "there is nothing so uncertain as a horse race in an election", or in a football game, for that matter. Which is a moral for Varsity's senior intercollegiate football team! Varsity was lucky to secure as much as a tie against McGill on Saturday. If the players had been less certain of victory before the game the result would have been more favourable. Naturally when a team has beaten everyone else in the league they get a little cocky. This was the trouble with the Blues before the McGill game. They expected an easy game, and it took two periods to get the cockiness knocked out of them. This is not only the opinion of the writer of this column, but also of one closely connected with the team.

Undoubtedly the U. of T. missed the brilliant tackling of Captain Johnny Keith, who was out of the game with a broken nose. The Blue and White wings were unable to hold Doherty and Hammond, the McGill halves. Fortunately, Johnny will be back in the line-up for the Queen's game next Saturday. He and the wings will have to be at their best if they are to hold "Red" Gilmore and Howie Carter in check.

Contrary to the opinion of many spectators, including Foster Hewitt, McGill's line bucks were not all through centre, but spread equally along the line. Keith's spectacular tackling was missed and his absence was also a moral drawback to the team.

Johnny Fitzpatrick, although wearing a knee brace, will be in Saturday's game with the Tricolour. It is expected that he will make many yards as there are none in the game as fast as Fitz. He should certainly strengthen Varsity's extension plays.

"Rich" Richardson should not be panned too severely for the fumble that later gave the Red and White a major score. He went on when Bell got his shoulder hurt, and was not on long enough to redeem himself after the fumble. It was unfortunate that it should occur at such a critical moment. Every back has to fumble sometimes, Bell doing it later in the game.

Heavy practices are in order for Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and light work on Friday. There will be 30 from which to choose the line-up.

Major Forbes' psychology stunt of having his team practise against a scrub team decked in blue sweaters had its effect. This, coupled with a fighting spirit and the fact that the team they faced thought all it had to do was go through the motions, was sufficient to cause the greatest rugby upset of the current season.

Lou Carroll, coach of the Varsity Orphans, stated last night that he was trying to arrange a game with Windsor. It is altogether likely that the Orphans will be used in practices against the intercollegiate this week.

TRINITY WORMS WIN GRIDIRON ENCOUNTER

With Much Better Material on Hand, First Year Win 29-1

Trinity College Worms defeated their sophomore masters by the score of 29-1 in the interyear championship series. As the score indicates, the game was quite one-sided.

With two of their players on the Varsity juniors and two others on the intermediates, the first year team showed early superiority and after the first quarter it became only a question of by how much the second year team would be defeated. The teams lined up as follows:

Worms—Snap, Wilkinson; insides, Fearman, Lemon; middles, Skey, Coy; Cassels, Grimley; flying wings, Dennison, Murrell-Wright; halves, McFulken, Herbert; subs, Wodehouse, Cromarty, Lazier, Harris, Hill, Reville.

Soph—Snap, Skiles; insides, Burpee, Stewart; middles, Brown, Seabrook; outsides, Bashell, Rapsey; flying wings, Martin, Waterspoon; halves, Dickson, Thomas; subs, Wilson, Bowden, Moore.

The University of Missouri has charged the University of Kansas of "recruiting and subsidizing athletes", and the latter has been refused permission to enter the rugby union next year unless a house-cleaning is made.

VIC JUNIORS BOW TO U.C. SENIORS

U.C. Seniors decidedly had the edge of the play in their 24-17 victory over Vic Juniors at the initial women's basketball game of the season yesterday, but their opponents put up a good fight against the predicted winners. U.C.'s strong forward line were shooting well, and their steadfast player, Louise Crouch, turned in a peppy game. Vic's passing made good headway, and, judging from yesterday's showing, should develop into a speedy team. Enthusiasm and pep were the order of the game, but both teams showed the need for more practice.

The line-up:—
U.C. Seniors—Forwards, Wilma Hazlett, Madge Newman, Louise Crouch; jumping centre, Jean Allen; guards, Dorothy Starr, Florence Moritz.

Vic Juniors—Forwards, Mabel Curristan, Beth Jenking, Margaret Waugh; jumping centre, Patricia Palmer; guards, Bessie Mountain, Bea Longley.

The senior year, Victoria, held an enjoyable Hallowe'en party at Wymilwood last Friday night. During the course of the evening, an apple ducking contest was run off between the different men's residences. It was won by Charles House. The decorations and the refreshments were in keeping with the Hallowe'en season.

IRISH SWIMMERS DEFEAT TRINITY

St. Mike's Upsets Water Polo Dope in 2-1 Victory Over Trinity

TRINITY IMPROVED

In what proved to be the biggest upset of the year, St. Mike's water polo team took the measure of Trinity 2 to 1 in an interfaculty game last night in Hart House tank.

This is St. Mike's first year at the game and with the season only two weeks old, they certainly proved that they must be considered as contenders when they defeated such an experienced team as Trinity who themselves showed marked improvement in combination and speed.

St. Mike's took full advantage of every opportunity and fought hard all the way, whereas Trinity, although smoother and faster, could not get the ball on the goal.

All the goals were scored in the first period, Kelly and Henry scoring for St. Mike's and Bill Cuttle for Trinity. Miron, Kelly and Henry stood out for St. Mike's, while Cuttle, Hunt and Macdonald were best for Trinity.

St. Mike's—Miron, Carson, Mulcahy, Skelly, Kelly, Henry, Flanagan, Lacy, and Hyde.

Trinity—Hamilton, Archer, Davies, Winyard, Macdonald, Hunt, Cuttle, Mervynne and Minett.

ST. MIKE'S TAKE JUNIOR U.C. GAME

St. Michael's women's basketball team got off to a good start by taking their first game against U.C. Juniors by a score of 26-18. The Red and White started strong, and at one time were on the long end of an 11-4 count. However, St. Mike's gradually settled down and by displaying a more effective combination, soon had a six-point advantage. Through the second half, play was fairly even, but towards the end of the game both sides tired badly and play was very ragged. On the play, the Double Blue deserved a greater margin, but poor shooting ruined any chance they had of a larger score. For St. Mike's, the standouts were Olive Macklin, who led both teams in scoring with 12 points to her credit, and Loretta McGarry on the defence. For U.C. Anne Corfield at side-centre, and Betty Thomas on defence, were most effective.

land Canal and so there is only about $7,000,000 yet to be contributed by Canada.

United States wheat in the Middle West, which would naturally have outlet through the system, ripens earlier than Canadian wheat, so that it was not in danger of being stopped in Montreal by the freeze-up, continued Mr. Sandwell, pointing out that this was another argument from the American point of view favouring the project.

Showing some of the advantages that would accrue to both countries on the completion of the system, he demonstrated that the products of the most heavily productive sections of both Canada and the United States were situated so that an outlet would be most cheaply provided by way of the St. Lawrence.

SOCIAL SERVICE GAME SHOWS LACK OF PRACTICE

Household Science displayed unusual strength on the forward line when they defeated Social Service 36-4 in the Lillian Massey gym last night. Social Service were greatly handicapped by the fact that they had not had a practice together before the game. Led by their clever forward, Household Science rolled up most of their points in the first half of the game. Social Service have some very promising material and should make it interesting for any team in their group.

His Honor R. Randolph Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, his niece and chaperone, Miss Margaret Bruce MacKenzie, and Lady Rosalind Northcote, guest at Government House, lent their presence to the list of more than 350 guests at one of the major functions of the Vancouver social season when Triple Entente Chapter Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire held their ball aboard the Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of Japan, recently, on her second visit to her home port. The newest and largest liner on the Pacific coast was in gala attire for the event.

Sweeping changes in operating methods affecting handling of Canadian Pacific trains throughout the west can be expected in the next few months, W. M. Neal, general manager of the company's western lines, announced recently. Locomotives will pull trains over several divisions instead of over a single division, permitting the railway to make use of its newer and more powerful engines capable of hauling a train more than 1200 miles instead of about 125 miles under the present divisional system.

Outmatching all other entrants to the British Columbia Boys and Girls Swine Club second annual judging contest held last Nov. Westminster recently, Ernest Naughton and Wilbert De Leeuw, 14-year-old livestock experts of Kamloops, annexed the Canadian Pacific Railway cup and medals, as well as a free trip over the company's lines to Toronto to attend the Royal Winter Fair where the final judging contests of the Dominion Boys and Girls Swine Clubs will be held.

Interviewed as to a press despatch that the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company had large stores of unsold metals and was reducing wages, J. J. Warren, president of the company, said that at the end of September a little more than half a month's production of lead was on hand unsold and a little more than two months' production of zinc, while October sales had been heavy. He added that while the metal bonus paid employees varied with metal prices from month to month, the base wage scale had not been cut.

An indication of the value of Canadian agriculture is given in a recent official estimate of the agricultural wealth of the Dominion. Total value is placed at $7,978,632,000 of which $3,316,061,000 is for lands.

Patrols carried out by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police by dog-team and boat in the eastern and western Canadian Arctic during 1928 totalled approximately 25,000 miles—sufficient to circle the globe at the equator.

occupied most of Mr. Mitchell's time in undergraduates activities at the University. In his first year on the Students' Representative Council he held the office of Convener of the Law Faculty and was elected as one of the Council's delegates to the annual Conference of the Students' Representative Councils of Scotland, and in the following year he was elected to the Presidency of the Students' Representative Council. This was followed by the Presidency of the 1930 Scottish Students' Conference and the Chair of the Student Organization in Scotland.

In consideration of his work in politics he is now President of the Aberdeen University Unionist Association and was 1929 chairman of the South Aberdeen Junior Unionist Association. In the University Contingent of the Officers' Training Corps he is one of the senior cadets and is President of the O.T.C. Committee. He has also been on the Committee of the Men Students' Union and the Aberdeen Juridical Society and for two years on the Committee of the University Debating Society, of which body he is meantime the treasurer.

MOTOR VEHICLES

Dr. Russell expects as great a change in the motor car in the next twenty-five years as in the last, particularly in an absence of vibration and a change in the position of the motors. In the future, perhaps, acetylene or alcohol may take the place of gasoline and a development of the Diesel engine may be expected.

"The automobile is a potent factor in breaking down isolation for the interiors of China, of India, of Africa, are brought nearer to civilization by the motor car," Dr. Russell stated. "The effect of the motor car on the world is unrealized."

Speaking of present-day Palestine, Dr. Taylor remarked: "It's a great country for gentlemen, because the ladies do all the work."

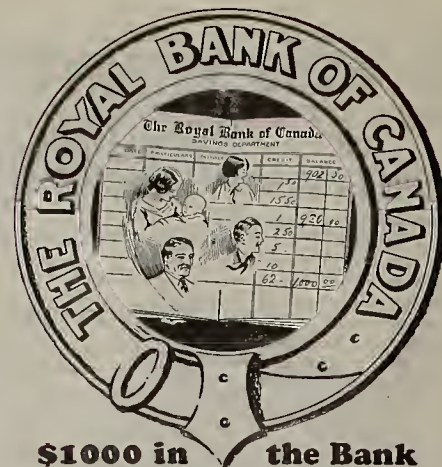

DISTINGUISHED SPEAKERS

"Christianity and Politics" Will be Discussed by Woodsworth

The Student Christian Association has arranged a series of addresses to be delivered by gentlemen well-known in Toronto. The meetings will be held every Wednesday in November and are open to all men students.

The subject of the first address to be given on Nov. 5 is "Christianity and Politics"; the speaker will be J. S. Woodsworth, Esq., M.P. On Nov. 12 the subject will be "Christianity and Destitution", and the speaker will be Professor G. E. Jackson, of the Department of Commerce and Finance. The following Wednesday, Nov. 19, Dr. Salem Bland, a former minister in Toronto, will speak on the theme, "Christian Socialism". A week later, Nov. 26, Dr. Richard Roberts, pastor of Sherbourne Street United Church, will give the address on "Christianity and Nationality". These addresses will be given in the Music Room, Hart House, at 5.15 on the days given above.

Considerable discussion took place before the Joint Executive could agree on the wording of a clause of the report with regard to the appointment of the Editor. The final form of this section embodied the idea that each spring the Joint Executive should receive from the retiring Editor a list of the possible candidates for the position for the next year. From this list the Executive would appoint the Editor. This clause was suggested by E. B. Jolliffe of Victoria College.

The whole report was adopted unanimously by the voting members of the meeting. The Editor of "The Varsity", who has no vote, though he is otherwise on the Joint Executive, declared that if possible he would have voted for the report as presented, had it not contained the final clause regarding the election of Editors of "The Varsity".

NEED FOR CONTACT WITH OUTSIDE MEN STRESSED BY WHITE

Believes that Combination of Theory and Practice is Best

COMMERCE CLUB SPEAKER

Emphasizes Cultured Mind as Valuable Asset in Life

"Men in the Commerce and Finance course should come in greater contact with the business and financial world than they do during their undergraduate years at the present time," said Sir Thomas White last night at the banquet held in Hart House to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the Commerce Club. "Students of Commerce should be given the opportunity of combining theory with the practical side of business."

"The man who has a college education is able to assume a detached view instead of being influenced by his own desires as is the untrained man who doesn't want to see the truth," he declared in stating the advantages of the college graduate over the ordinary untrained business man. "The college man has the advantage of a cultural and a practical knowledge."

"No possession is equal to or more valuable than a cultured mind. A man should know everything about something, and something about everything. A university course opens up realms of knowledge, but this is only the beginning for one should be a student all his life," he concluded.

Warden Bickersteth in replying to the toast to the University made by Gordon Garden, remarked that the free speech we have here at the University was one of the customs brought over from England. He also said the name of Vincent Massey will be remembered centuries hence in this university for his great generosity.

ADDITION TO MUSEUM TO RISE IN DECEMBER

Unskilled Labour Being Used to Aid in Relieving Unemployment

PLAN OF WING ANNOUNCED

"With a view to doing something for the relief of present unemployment conditions, the excavation work for the new wing to the Royal Ontario Museum at Bloor Street and University Crescent, will be done by day labour using pick and shovel," B. J. O'Brien, chairman of the board of trustees of the Museum, said yesterday in announcing the plans of the structure.

Fifty men commenced excavation operations to-day, and the building will probably begin to rise in the early days of December. Completion is anticipated for the spring of 1932. Excavating will occupy about seven weeks, it is thought. It will cost nearly $1,500,000, it is estimated.

The five departments of the Museum are to be distributed as follows: The old section and the gallery connecting the old and the new sections will be occupied by the archeology show rooms and workshops. In the new section, the ground floor of the north wing, will be the geology section. The basement of the north

Students Express Satisfaction With "Varsity's" Present Policy

Baby Abandoned On Front Steps

Eight husky young men were caught in the act yesterday at noon when they attempted to lift a Baby Austin into the Physics Building. Professor Burton watched the men at their prank until he was sure what they were up to and when half the car had disappeared through the entrance he hurried out and interrupted the fun. The men refused to co-operate in extracting the pet of the automobile world and left it there to be laughed at. The owner of the car could not be determined by "The Varsity". No participant could be persuaded to say anything for publication.

MEN WORK OVERTIME ON NEW BUILDINGS

Extensive Program this Year Results in Exceptional Activity

OLD BUILDINGS CONVERTED

"We are busier and have a larger staff this year than ever before," stated the superintendent of grounds and buildings, in an interview with "The Varsity" yesterday. "Our staff includes tradesmen of all kinds," he continued, in speaking about the various departments under his supervision. The erection of new buildings and conversion of old buildings for new purposes is keeping the plumbing, carpentering and electrical and other departments busy to the extent of necessitating some overtime work.

The addition to Hart House this year, by way of extending the kitchen facilities, kept the department occupied for a considerable time, while the new University College Women's Residence will occupy their attention for some time to come. Considerable detail was involved in the addition to the Mill Building. Plans are now under consideration for the new Botany Building. Excavation for the new Royal Ontario Museum has commenced; this work also necessitated the tearing down of old Argyle House, the women's residence that was 100 Queen's Park.

The department has also undertaken this year the erection of the Athletic Field wall and the installation of chemical laboratories in the old McMaster University building. Number 47 St. George Street has been converted.

McINNES OFFERS TO LEAD SONGSTERS FOR WOMEN

Still Lack Place of Meeting and Someone to Lead in Organization

Are Songsters similar to those held in Hart House to be reinstituted for the women of the university? That they are desired in feminine circles seems evident. The greatest difficulty appears to be in finding someone to take the lead in organization and in finding a suitable place for meeting. Campbell McInnes, who leads the Songsters in Hart House was entirely in favour of women's Songsters, he told "The Varsity" yesterday and added that he would volunteer as a leader for the women if plans could be carried out for organization. He felt that there was considerable talent around the university which could be discovered in this way.

Consider Paper Presents News of Students

NOT EXTREME ENOUGH

Unbiased Opinions Essential to Give Satisfaction to Readers

The present policy of "The Varsity" is not at all prejudicial to the interests of the university as a whole, nor is it out of keeping with the spirit of the student body as a whole, in the opinion of undergraduates of the university, interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday.

Complete satisfaction was expressed by most undergraduates with the present conditions under which the student daily is published, and with the present editorial policy of "The Varsity", when asked their opinions regarding the report of the sub-committee of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council, published yesterday. The report stated, in part, that the present policy of the undergraduate daily was not entirely in accordance with student opinion.

Following are the opinions of some of the students interviewed:

F. McKenzie, Meds: "It is not cheap and common, and should certainly be different from the downtown press. It looks good to me as it is, and I can't see where it could prejudice outsiders."

C. W. Rump, 3T4: "The Varsity" is good enough now, but occasionally it prints things that do not benefit the school. It presents news in a way to interest the students, from the facts and from the students' point of view. I think it should be of interest to outsiders as it is now."

E. A. Smith, U. C.: "The paper is all right now. I don't know how it suits others, but I know that I read it through and put it down satisfied."

H. O. Sanger, Meds: "There should be several writers handling the editorial column, to express several opinions, and they should not harp on one thing. The column should take in things outside the campus. The paper as a whole is all right now, but some things are not extreme enough. It should certainly be of interest to outsiders."

W. G. Goddard, U.C.: "The Varsity" would be of no use at all if it was unable to give unbiased opinions. It is written by students who are in

LEADING FINANCIER EXPECTS FAVOURABLE POSITION FOR CANADA

Dominion Will be Constantly

GIVES FINANCIAL HISTORY

Immigration Should be Slow to Help Assimilation of Peoples

"It seems reasonable to expect that very shortly Canada will be continuously a creditor nation," said A. E. Ames, outstanding Canadian financier, in his address on "The Financial Situation in Canada", at the meeting of the Engineering Society in the Mining Building yesterday.

Mr. Ames expressed the opinion that a high order of citizenship in the Dominion could be hoped for, so long as immigrants come into the country in such a way as to assimilate with the people and not congregate in large groups.

"I will try to give you a bird's-eye view of the financial situation during the 34 years from 1896 to the present day," said Mr. Ames, at the beginning of his address. "The period from 1896 to 1912 was, on the whole, one of constant expansion. It marked the opening of the prairie provinces. In this period, the Canadian government was able to borrow from

NOVEL FEATURES PROMISED FOR ANNUAL MASQUERADE

Hart House to be Transformed to Please Costumed Dancers

Final arrangements for the decorations at the Hart House Masquerade Ball to be held on Friday, November 14th, were approved by the House Committee in session yesterday afternoon.

"Many novel and pretty decorative effects have been planned to give the House a most pleasing appearance on the night of the greatest social event in the University year," said B. A. R. Dignan to "The Varsity" after the meeting.

The feature of the decorative scheme will be originality throughout. Fancy crepe paper will be used in all the rooms and coloured lights will turn the House into a veritable fairyland.

Record Crowd for Queen's Game Fans Line Up in Cold Grey Dawn

A new record in attendance will be set at the Varsity Stadium this coming Saturday. Intense enthusiasm over the approaching Varsity-Queen's game led to a complete sell-out of the tickets offered to University undergraduates and staff by two o'clock yesterday afternoon. Commencing at 8.30 a.m., with a one hour shut down at noon, the tickets at the athletic office in Hart House sold rapidly.

By eight o'clock over 300 students had collected in a long queue awaiting the opening of the wicket. Early in the morning the first corner was discovered asleep with a rug and pillow before the office door. The earliest arrivals were let into the building out of the cold around the hour of five. Between nine and ten o'clock, when the line was longest, it stretched from the office door downstairs to the basement, past the barber shop, sketch room, squash courts, rifle range, upstairs and along the athletic wing corridor, past the Great Hall, as far as the West Common Room.

The seating capacity of the stadium has been given a net increase of 2000 with the addition of a new row of temporary seats, six tiers deep, set on the track from the north-east to the south-west corner. These have been built to replace the benches formerly used.

The total capacity will be over 20,000, including standing room. Last year's Queen's game, which now holds the attendance record, saw a crowd of 18,300 spectators. This year there are seats for 19,000.

New Society Proposed For Embryo Lawyers

The formation of a University of Toronto Law Society will be discussed at a meeting of Honour Law students of all years on Thursday, Nov. 6, at 2 p.m., in Hart House Music Room.

The professor and students who have promulgated the plan intend the society to be a serious course of lectures to discuss legal questions that are now occupying attention or that may arise in the future.

It is important that every student in Law should be present at this organization meeting.

CLAIMS UNIVERSITY AND POLITICS WEDDED

Liberal Politician Considers Government Interference Exists Here

LIBERALS WOULD REFORM

A. S. Winchester, who stated at a Liberal meeting this week, that politics were being injected into the affairs of the University of Toronto, told "The Varsity" that he thought that in the advent of a Liberal majority in the next provincial legislature, the University would be free from political interference. "I am fully convinced that the government would formulate some scheme by which the University would not have to go to the government asking for this or that on condition that certain things like 'The Varsity' would be suppressed or other concessions granted."

Mr. Winchester stated that he thought that freedom of expression was essential for a university. "I think that is what a university is for. Freedom of thought and expression is invaluable to a student."

He was convinced that a Liberal government would guarantee these essentials and would not interfere with either professors or students. In his estimation "a Liberal government would divorce the university from politics."

Mr. Winchester thought that the editor of "The Varsity" should not be shackled with the prejudices of the party in power. He felt that if, however, the student body disagreed with the editor, it could make its protest as would a congregation if it disagreed with its minister.

Referring to the present controversy regarding "The Varsity", he stated, "This squabble is insignificant compared to the one about 1908, when John Cleanse wrote articles. Boys in his time had to tussle for freedom of expression and they won out in the battle." Mr. Winchester thought, but was not sure, that they were expelled from the university. He felt that except for the odd scrap, there was a good deal of freedom of expression

WOMEN SOON PURCHASE ALL AVAILABLE TICKETS

In spite of the fact that some six hundred season tickets were disposed of among the women students earlier in the fall, the eight-thirty line-up yesterday at Room 22 for the Queen's Varsity game tickets was a large one.

The first co-ed ticket seeker arrived at half past seven and began a parade which lasted until noon, when all of the five hundred tickets had been sold.

The hours of waiting were spent in various occupations. Some made thorough perusal of the various volumes of Torontonensis, others were engaged in masticating "The Varsity", and still others were obviously taking advantage of this opportunity to catch up on back notes.

MUDDY LAKE WATERS ENGULF PRETTY COED WHO BREAKS CUSTOM

"JUST LEGAL PROCEDURE"

Girl Pleads "Love of Lawyers" to Justify Entering Law Temple

Boulder, Colorado. — Probably for the first time in the history of the University of Colorado, the dirty waters of the Varsity lake closed about a feminine form.

Solemn student lawyers were avenging a desecration of Guggenheim temple. Virginia Tasher, a mere woman Arts student, had dared to walk up the sacred steps of the shrine. The gods of tradition were incensed.

After a serious trial in Moot court the young and pretty offender was sentenced to immersion in the campus lake. Nothing less would satisfy the gods.

The situation almost precipitated a civil war. A group of engineers, ostensibly outraged by the lawyers' lack of chivalry, planned an attack on the legal temple, an attack that was forestalled by unfavourable conditions and University authorities.

Five other fair culprits were summoned before the court to answer similar charges. Mildred Whiteside, seeking release by legal subterfuge, pled not guilty on the grounds of an abnormal love of lawyers, an uncontrollable passion that — quite beyond her will — directed her steps toward the law edifice.

Miss Whiteside, on the recommendation of the jury, was released after demonstrating her affection to the satisfaction and enjoyment of the court.

A more understandable form of insanity was cited by the attorneys of Miss Tasher, the lady of the lake. Their client, they claimed, was suffering from

ALL ENGINEERS WORK IN SUMMER MONTHS to Get a Degree at School

GOOD WAGES PAID

Six months of practical work is required of every man enrolled in Mining, Mechanical, Electrical and Metallurgical Engineering. This work is usually divided so that each student is employed during the last three summers previous to his graduation. He is employed by a concern which does the type of work that he intends to make his specialty. For this work the students ordinarily receive a fair wage so that the student who is paying his own tuition suffers no loss in his earning capacity.

Students in the Civil and Mining Engineering Departments are required to spend the months of August and September between their second and third years at the University Survey Camp situated on the shores of Gull Lake which is about 100 miles from Toronto.

Students of the fourth year in Civil Engineering who are taking the Astronomy Option, are required to spend two weeks at the camp, beginning on September 6th, after completing their third year.

GLAD HAND

On a muddy gridiron beneath grey November skies on Saturday afternoon fifty men will engage in physical conflict for the space of about an hour and a half. Twenty thousand people will watch, breathless. Twenty thousand more will be outside the stadium bemoaning their inability to obtain pasteboards.

To-night in the scholastic calm of Trinity College Library four men will engage in verbal combat for the space of about two hours. Considerably less than two hundred people will be present. Those who are not present will not give the matter a thought.

It is this fact, that the visit of a squad of athletes from a university town one hundred and sixty-five miles away serves to work the local campus into a fever and to jam an incredible number of single-minded human beings into a comparatively small enclosure, that makes it hard to inject the note of sincerity into an expression of welcome to a pair of distinguished university students who have travelled four thousand miles to debate a pertinent question with two of our leading undergraduate speakers before a mere handful of people.

We do not decry the fervour displayed toward the gridiron classic, even on the part of members of the so-called intelligentsia. Quite the contrary. The Homeric qualities often evident in these tense clashes as autumn afternoons wane into smoky twilight, provide an element of catharsis for the benefit of the crowd in the packed stands as truly as did the ancient dramas for the watching throngs on Grecian hillsides.

When we add our word of welcome, therefore, to the visiting British debaters, we do it in the hope that this question of aberrated proportions between the physical and intellectual phases of the extra-curricular activities of university people is an old question with them. We are sure that, even apart from to-night's debate, the visit of these gentlemen to our midst will be instrumental in further cementing the bond which exists between this university and the great universities of the Old Land. We devoutly pray, however, that our visitors' attitude toward this oft-repeated sentiment will not be rendered cynical by any seeming discrepancies in our corporate actions.

The Joint Executive, we are told, suggests that "The Varsity" carry on as before without changing things.

Of course, everyone realizes that the appointment of the Editor-in-Chief is hardly a fair way to select the best man for the job because the staff of "The Varsity" will only elect a man of considerable experience. This is rank favouritism and should be done away with so that someone else can get a chance at it.

Another thing that must be remedied is the fact that the Editorial Policy is not entirely in harmony with the opinions of the student body. This might be adjusted in two ways. They might go about converting all the students to the same opinion (an attempt which, we believe, is being made at the present time), or they might set aside nine or ten editorial columns in "The Varsity", each giving a different set of opinions under a different editor, with each editor independent of his associates.

"Tolerance and Co-operation" were stressed as examples of the kind of spirit which should influence the staff of the paper. Sure. We will tolerate the Board of Governors if they will co-operate with us.

"The Varsity" is to realize that it has a different outlook from the downtown press and should not follow their example from a news point of view, especially when University officials have refused information to the former and then given it to the city papers.

But no one ever really found out whether or not the wise old Owl could iron the wrinkles out of a prune.

—Gaspard McGuffey.

Correspondence

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I should like to inquire of the university public at large if it is absolutely necessary for those students of (presumably), engineering, to carry on their operations beneath the windows of the English seminar with a vocal accompaniment which would shame the rooters at a rugby game? If it so happens that the writer is mis-

Art, Music and Drama

M. C. Players' Guild

That the literary propagandist of the Five Towns and the teller of the Old Wives' Tale, can extend his scope into the realm of the drawing room comedy with considerable insouciance, is demonstrated by The Stepmother, which has been chosen as to-day's presentation of the U.C. Players' Guild.

The play is being directed by Miss Jocelyn Moore, and the cast is composed of people who are either new to the Guild or have done but little acting there before in pursuance of the Guild's policy of affording every member a chance in its work. The Stepmother shares with A Good Woman, the honours of being the best known of Mr. Bennett's polite farces. In it he toys in an airy manner with the love affairs of a fashionable lady novelist and her secretary, not without easting satiric glances at the idiosyncracies of the former genre.

Sketch Room

One of the best exhibitions of recent years is on view in the Hart House Sketch Room at the present time. No undergraduate should fail to see it.

The exhibit is the result of a two months' tour of the Arctic country made in August and September by two well-known Toronto artists, A. Y. Jackson and Lawren Harris. At one point in their travels the two artists were only a few hundred miles from the North Pole. Their sketches, some sixty-seven in number, bring us a clear impression of the majesty of our own far north, and show us the very soul of that barren land. The map displayed in the Sketch Room enables us to trace the wanderings of the two men; the sketches graphically illustrate the route.

It is difficult to select any particular pictures from such a collection. Nevertheless the following particularly impressed me: "Aurora", by A. Y. Jackson (No. 6), a remarkably realistic painting of Northern Lights; "Eskimo Gent, Pangnirtung", by Lawren Harris (No. 19), and "Warchain Island", by Lawren Harris (No. 25), in which a most beautiful sky effect is achieved. The paintings of ice and snow are unusually fine. "Icebergs" (No. 14), and "Iceberg, Smith Sound" (No. 2), by Harris, and "Floe Ice" (No. 6), by Jackson, are outstanding.

Chatter

Doctor Knock is a memory. (Strangely sad, how the product of a month's work by many persons glitters for a few nights upon the stage and is gone forever.) But his ghost may be summoned for a moment while we consider how we should pronounce his name. At Hart House they say "K-nock", or if they cannot manage the slight German "k", "Ku-nock".

But it seems that in the original French production the "k" was silent, as the German origin of the word was ignored. And, by the way, at that time the name of the play was Knock, not Doctor Knock.

It might have been wise for Hart House to be thoroughly English and stick to the silent "K". Had they done so, the whole cast would at least have used the same pronunciation of the name.

Do you know that they give a snap shot of their leading chorus star (de-colletée) with every ticket you buy for the Globe Theatre in this town?

There, and at the Standard Theatre also, and at one or two others, there are peanut sellers and ice-cream vendors who go up and down the aisles during the show to cater to your desires.

The idea is fine. The theatre should be informal. We don't believe in dress clothes or party manners when either watching a play or listening to a concert. That is one way in which the Shakespearean theatres were ahead of the modern palatial playhouses.

Even if we could afford the loges we should still stick to the gods on principle. But why are the seats in Massey Hall and in the gods at the Royal Alexandra so close together that a reasonably tall man cannot slouch down and be decently comfortable?

BIG BLUE TEAM HARD AT WORK FOR SATURDAY'S EPIC TILT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

When Junior Vic administered a 53 to 1 defeat to Social Science last night, the work of one of Vic's forwards was undoubtedly the outstanding feature of the game. Bea Longley not only accounted for 25 of the points scored by the Red and Gold, but showed exceptional ability on the floor. She was in on almost every Vic play, and has an amazing turn of speed. She shot with surprising ease from every position, although not for the whole game, and scored practically half of Vic's points. With experience in interfaculty games behind her, she should make it interesting for all comers in the intercollegiate tryouts.

However, Social Science deserve credit for their enthusiasm. Considering the fact that last night was only their second workout together, they did remarkably well, and they have a couple of players who show great promise.

Occupational Therapy took a very close game from the U.C. freshies last night, 30 to 28. Although very exciting, play was rather erratic and the passing unsteady at times. This is the second year that the Therapists have entered the league, and their win should revive the somewhat flagging interest. On their showing last night, they will give Senior Vic and St. Hilda's, the other teams in their group, real competition before a winner is declared.

St. Michael's had their first baseball practice last night and there was a very gratifying turnout. They are still without a coach, and it looks as if they will have to make out without one. It is too bad that good coaches are so scarce, because a strange lack of enthusiasm is noticeable in college baseball circles. The Double Blue are lucky to have Marion Shaidle, the pitcher who led the league last season, and should not have much trouble building a successful team around her.

FORESTRY OVERCOME FIGHTING KNOX TEAM

Clinch Second Place in Group
After Close Struggle with Presbyterians

BILL EDWARDS STARS

Overcoming a one-point lead, gained early in the second quarter, Forestry defeated Knox College 6 to 1 in a hard fought Mulock Cup game yesterday afternoon on the back campus. The play throughout was close and the result was never certain until the end. The Forestry men showed an advantage on the backfield, which was nearly offset by numerous fumbles. This game completed the schedule in Group IV, and as it was Forestry's second victory over Knox, it gave them possession of second place in the group.

The running and kicking of Bill Edwards, a frosh, on the half-line, was the strong point in Forestry's attack. It was his long kick to the deadline in the second period that tied the score, and shortly after half-time he ran thirty yards for the touchdown that won the game. Heggie, who teamed with Edwards on the half-line, did some very good catching and made several long runs. The Forestry men appeared well coached and their plungers were not afraid to hit the line hard. Meyers and Howard were down on every kick and made some fine tackles. For the losers, D. Davidson was outstanding. His kicking during the first two and the last periods was very good, and several times he broke away for long runs. He earned his team's only point early in the second period when he kicked to the deadline. In the third stanza, W. Jack took over the kicking assignment, and although his kicks were not as high as Davidson's they were the long bouncing variety, and hard to catch.

Forestry—Flying wings, Meyers, Howard; halves, Edwards, Heggie; quarter, Christie; snap, Bullock; insides, Boulte, Crealock; middles, McEwen, Crutcher; outsiders, Sewell, Young; subs, Townsend, Switzer. Knox College—Flying wings, Bullock, Stevenson; halves, D. Davidson, W. Jack; quarter, Knowles; snap, McDermid; insides, Hamilton, Symons; middles, Lowry, H. Davidson; outsiders, Roe, Milligan; subs, D. Jack, Bush, Ritchie.

Victoria have had only two practices, and are handicapped by the loss of Daisy Quance, their stellar pitcher. University College have not yet held a workout, and are experiencing a great deal of trouble in organizing a team. It looks as though Vic and St. Mike's will compete among themselves for the cup, and there should be some interesting struggles.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

After a rest on Monday the intercollegiate were hard at work again yesterday. Coach Les Blackwell put two squads, including several members of the Orphans, through a strenuous drill and the players entered into the practice with a will. Richardson and Fitzpatrick were used together to good effect on extension plays. Both are fine broken field runners. It becomes more apparent that "Fitz" will break into the game with the Tricolor after his performance against McGill last week. Jack Sinclair took no part in the heavy going, Coach Blackwell taking no chances of injuries to Varsity's surest point-getter.

* * *

It looks as though the Orphans are through for the season. There was talk of an exhibition game with Windsor, but it is not likely to materialize. Several men have been drafted to help out in the senior practices. Hodgetts, Copp, and Rog Baker were up at the stadium working out with the squad.

* * *

The Blue juniors will face McGill in the first of the intercollegiate play-offs at the Stadium, Saturday morning at ten o'clock. Last year Varsity's junior gridders handed the Red and White two clear-cut defeats, to qualify for the Eastern Canadian finals. This year, however, McGill is reputed to have a much stronger collection of football stars and are counted on to extend Harry Bales' outfit to the limit. St. Michael's College never offered any serious trouble to the local freshmen, who went through their four game series with the Irish in a convincing manner. Consequently, it is difficult to gauge the brand of rugby that the Blue and White are capable of producing. At any rate, they will have to be at the top of their form if they hope to vanquish the Montrealers. All those who prefer to watch a fast, open style of game, will be well advised to support the juniors at the stadium Saturday morning, and whet their appetites for the classic struggle between Queen's and Varsity that afternoon.

* * *

The race in the interfaculty soccer league is narrowing down with winners declared in two of the three groups. Knox, champions for the past two seasons, made sure of first place in Group I by downing Meds 1 to 0 on Monday. The Presbyterians have yet to lose a game. U.C. have clinched the honours in Group II with four wins against no defeats. The third division is still uncertain. Pharmacy and Wycliffe are still in the running, having battled to a deadlock in Monday's game. They will likely play off before the end of this week.

TRINITY SENIORS OWNED BY EXPERIENCED JUNIORS

Abraham, O'Flynn and Farwell Are Best for Winners in Hard Game

Trinity juniors' experienced team defeated the senior year by 7-1 in a tight game on the Trinity campus yesterday afternoon.

The juniors scored on a touch by Abraham in the first half and two bucks to the deadline by Rea in the second. The seniors' only point was registered in the second quarter when Mann kicked for a rouge. The plunges of O'Flynn and Farwell gained repeatedly for the third year men while Edwards, Yates and Rapsey played well for the seniors.

BEA LONGLEY PLAYS WELL AS JUNIOR VIC TRIUMPHS

Junior Vic had no trouble defeating Social Science at the Metropolitan gym last night, the final score being 53 to 1. Led by their sensational forward, Bea Longley, Vic were on the long end of a 33 to 0 score at half-time. Vic flashed some remarkable combination and their plays from centre were working extremely well, although their passes around the basket were somewhat unsteady. Social Science were unable to score a field goal, and their single point was the result of a free shot by Anna Sacks, their versatile forward.

KEEN COMPETITION AMONG BASKETEERS

Newcomers Are Making it Hot for Men on Teams Last Year

SENIORS SEEM STRONG

Monday's basketball practice saw the appearance of all of last year's intercollegiate players who are eligible for this year's team. They include Riggs, Davey and Collins of the forward line; O'Leary, last year's star centre; and Sakler, Cock and Sniderman. With seven positions already filled the two remaining will be hotly contested. At present it is doubtful who will make the grade, but Burns, MacCallum and Hynes, seem to have the edge to date. In the near future several practice games will be held, after which the intercollegiate squad will be completed definitely. These games will be played against some of the local senior teams, and it will be easier then to determine the ability of this year's team.

Carr, Dick Douglas and Humphreys of last year's intermediates are on deck again and are still eligible for the team. Kay, Grant, Newman and Coles of last year's juniors are past the age limit and automatically move up to the intermediate squad. Ted Douglas and Magwood are still within the junior age limit.

Newcomers are plentiful and are already making last year's men step lively to hold their places on all three teams. After the big cut last week the squad, which includes candidates for all three teams, now numbers about sixty.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY DEFEATS U.C. FRESHIES

Occupational Therapy and U.C. freshies met in their first game at U.T.S. last night. The O.T. team scored a goal in the last minute, giving them the game, 30-28. At half time U.C. were leading 20-14, but towards the middle of the second period O.T. had tied the score and it was either team's game till the last. When Mary Stewart ran in three baskets in a row for U.C., O.T. put all the fight they had into the game and just succeeded in keeping their opponents down. There's real material in some of the U.C. freshies—they were a little unsteady in their shots, but tried to work out their plays.

Corresponding Don With Knocking Knee Suggests Where Editor of Rag Might Be

By A. E. F. Allen

The following letter, we are led to believe, was lost in the mail somewhere between University College Cloisters and a week from next Sunday. If we are wrong in our supposition, we will be the first—in the interests of truth and prompted by a desire to avoid the semblance of stirring up controversy—to retract hastily and retire in confusion to the bushes behind the Physics Building or the row of potted palms which will shield Hart House Masquerade musicians from the wrath of the perspiring populace. Or, as the Romans so beautifully put it—
But, then, we must avoid rousing controversy on the question: Did the Romans, after all, put it?
 The Editor,
 "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:
 The cloistered calm of my study behind the seminar room of the Department of Institutional Syrupy has been rudely shattered by an alleged Report issuing, so I am informed (though, God knows! I may be misinformed, as it is so easy to be in this mad day when solemn dons play pasture pool for loving cups with almost the same breath—if my colleagues will pardon the expression—with which they refuse to commit themselves for the benefit of a gasping public). . . . But, in case you don't follow my period, this report—I am assured—has been issued by the Disjointed Executioners of Undergraduate Journalism in the interests of Those Whose Ultimate Aim is to Establish a School for Writers of Blank Verse and Bulletin Board Notices on this campus. Now, I assure you, that no matter what you may think I am saying, Mr. Editor, I have absolutely no intention of saying it. Nothing could be further from my thoughts . . . if, indeed, I may be said to have any thoughts on any given or implied subject which may or may not exist either here or hereafter or in the mind of any alleged individual . . . Oh, Mr. Editor! this might be a serious thing for me!

But serious or not, I must say it. A man has his duty to himself and his family and his job and his pay envelope, it is true. But one also may be said to have a Duty to a Greater Power which is behind All and above All. And that Power prompts me to say that there is one feature of this Report which might repay reconsideration. The Disjointed Executioners leave, so they are alleged to have said, certain matters up to the "good judgment" of the Editor-in-Chief of "The Varsity".

Oh, Mr. Editor! this may be fatal. No one, I might go so far as to submit (especially since the Editor-in-Chief of the undergraduate newswag is the one person in an official or semi-official position who does not appear to have any political power or any say in the distribution of the pay envelopes or any designs on the Rhodes Scholarship). . . . I might go so far as to submit that this alleged "good judgment" is a purely metaphysical concept and as such is erroneously applied in the present context.

Oh, Mr. Editor! call off your dogs, I beseech you! Let us have done, I do beg of you! Go over into Macedonia and help them there, Mr. Editor . . . but, in the name of all that is in the best interests of this University as a Hole and a source of Revenue, stay over in Macedonia!

Yours in righteousness,

X. X. Mildew, B.A.,

(Professor, Dept. Inst. Syr.)

BULLETIN BOARD

MEDICAL STUDENTS

All medical students who would be interested in a Study and Discussion Group led by Dr. J. L. Little of the Banting Institute are invited to attend the first meeting in the Student Christian Association Library, Hart House, at 5.15 to-day.

BASKETBALL

All basketball players who have not tried out for the Varsity teams yet are asked to turn out as soon as possible. Practices are held Mon., Wed., and Fri., from 5 to 6 p.m.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

If you play a violin, viola, cello, bass viol, flute, clarinet, bassoon, harp or other orchestral instrument, bring it to the Vic Symphony Orchestra rehearsal to-night at 7.15 in Annesley Hall (Charles St. entrance). This gives every undergrad an opportunity to study in a real symphony. Try it out.

SOCIAL SERVICE GROUP

A visit has been arranged for the members of this group of the U. C. S.C.M. who were unable to go to Willard's, to go to Neilson's chocolate factory on Wednesday, November 5, at 2 p.m. Take a Carlton car going west to Gladstone. Factory is one block south.

BAND

Every bandsman is reminded to bring his band trousers to the S.A.C. office to-day so that they can be sent out to be cleaned. Also everyone is urged to be at our Thursday night practice for our preparation for the Queen's game this Saturday. Extra uniforms will be allotted.

SENIOR TRACK

All members of the senior inter-collegiate track team will assemble in the locker room, Hart House, Thursday at 1.15 p.m. sharp, for the team pictures.

R. C. Ellis, Commerce and Finance:
 "I do not think 'The Varsity' carries sensationalism too far. It should be carried on from the point of view of the students. The style is fine now."

Ken Trelford, U.C.: "The paper is all right as it is. It takes a common view on most subjects. It might possibly antagonize outside readers in matters like campus parking, and Rudy Vallee. There have also appeared a few jokes which would not go over big with outsiders. But it is an interesting paper, and the style is very good now."

The ground floor of the south wing will be devoted to mineralogy. The basement will contain workshops for mineralogy and paleontology, together with a lecture room seating 100.

The ground floor of the gallery joining the new section to the old will contain the display of ancient and modern arms and armour. Off from the connecting gallery is a Chinese garden, in which will be shown the bulkier objects of the museum, Chinese tombs and arches.

The building will be in Credit Valley stone dressed with Niagara.

As the University of Toronto and the Province of Ontario shares equally in the management and cost of the Royal Ontario Museum, Colonel Le-Pan, U. of T. Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds and his staff at Simcoe Hall are looking after the supervision of the building operations.

POLISHED BRITISH DEBATERS DEFEAT TORONTO ORATORS

House Returns Decisive Vote Against Inter-Empire Economic Unity

EXPERIENCE TELLS TALE

Maintains Empire-Wide Tariff Would Destroy Industry of Dominion

By a vote of 123 to 53 the House voted down the motion of closer economic unity within the Empire by means of general tariff barriers after a vigorous debate in Trinity College Library last night.

The policy of a tariff barrier was strongly brought out by the University of Toronto speakers, but the brilliant refutation of the experienced debaters from Bristol and Aberdeen Universities gave them the majority vote.

"We cannot accept Empire Free Trade as set out by Lord Beaverbrook but we must promote Empire unity by means of a general tariff barrier," was the claim advanced by E. B. Jolliffe, first speaker of the affirmative. "This is the only means to save us from our predatory commercial rivals abroad. There is a desirability of economic unity on cultural grounds and as far as it effects world peace. Our empire possesses undeveloped resources which would make us self-sufficient and most prosperous. Free Trade is only an Utopian ideal and impossible in every-day trade."

"To save Britain from two million unemployed there is sufficient undeveloped land in the Empire. It is to be an institution of sentimentality, or the other alternative, an economic empire on a political basis. The imposition of a tariff barrier against foreign competition."

DATA OBTAINED IN PERSON

Dr. E. J. Pratt, noted poet of the sea, and professor of English at Victoria College, read selections of his poetry to a large and enthusiastic audience in Wymilwood Tuesday evening at the first open meeting of the Victoria Women's Literary Society.

In his engaging manner Dr. Pratt related the narrative account of the "Roosevelt and the Antifone", which, he stated, was the most heroic rescue since the advent of the steamboat. He then explained how he obtained the data of the event from a visit to Roosevelt last year, and pointed out the incidents most charged with drama. The extracts which he chose to read were filled with the courage which characterized the rescue.

During the short business meeting which preceded Dr. Pratt's address, Anne Scott, who was pianist during the evening, was elected first year representative to the society.

General Meeting of "Varsity" Staff

There will be a general meeting of the staff of "The Varsity" at the Women's Union at 4.15 this afternoon. Attendance is obligatory for all members of the staff.

S.P.S. and Dents in Half-time Burlesque

There will be the usual half-time skit at the Varsity-Queen's game next Saturday. S.P.S. and Dents will have charge of this performance, which will be directed by Ken Joyner, S.P.S. "The Varsity" was unable to obtain exact information as to the character of the skit, but the spectators are assured of ten minutes of laughable burlesque.

A. G. Burns, Secretary of the S.C.A., intends making arrangements with the Toronto police, so that in the event of a Varsity victory, a triumphant parade may be held without danger of police interference. Mr. Burns expects to have no difficulty in obtaining the necessary permission.

PEEPS INTO ANCIENT HOME

Egypt and her flesh-pots, in the days when women wore garb in their hair and danced to a tricky stringed guitar, when roof-gardens were first the rage, when men (according to admirable wall-paintings), were even then assisted home from parties on the shoulders of the "Jeeves" of the Nile, and women first learned the powers of palm and olive oils. These were high lights in the picture of Egyptian domestic life presented on Tuesday at the Household Science building by Miss Ruth Home, of the Royal Ontario Museum, in the first of her series of lectures on the home. The hall was filled and nearly a dozen men were to be seen diligently taking notes.

As the first civilized country of whose home life we have a more or less complete picture, Egypt, in its earliest phases teemed with interesting detail. In a series of lantern slides, Miss Home illustrated her lecture with pictures of the house plans, the beds and hat boxes, the kitchen help, even the beauty aids used by the men in those good old days—the alluring eye shadow and the eyebrow tweezers, not to mention the fetching crocheted linen wigs.

Five Continents Represented On Graduate School Roster

There are more students registered in the department of Graduate Studies according to the approximate figures obtained from the Secretary, Miss N. Mackenzie.

This year there are 403 graduate students on the lists and 60 candidates for the degree of D.Paed., in contrast with last year's 369 and 55. The figures are only estimates, as students are still registering and many applications are at present before the board.

The students represent in all forty-five different institutions. Among those represented are Riga, New Zealand, Prague, Cape of Good Hope, China, Japan, and many American universities. There are over 150 students from other universities, while Toronto supplies the balance.

Some of the graduate students were interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding their impressions of the university of Toronto.

Student opinion found many excuses for the difference in the attendance at student debates and at rugby games.

"Rugby is a recognized Saturday afternoon entertainment, while debates are not always entertaining. Figuring mathematically, fifty men on two rugby teams against four men in a debate, should draw an audience of at least twelve to one," said G. M. Thompson, IV C. and F.

B. A. Armstrong, also IV C. and F., thought that if facilities such as Massey Hall, and the traditional publicity afforded rugby games were given to debates, the attendance might pick up.

STEEL USED THROUGHOUT

"The work on the new Mills building is getting along fine," stated Col. LePan, superintendent of the buildings, when interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity". "It is progressing so well that we expect that it will be finished somewhere about the middle of next March. It is a steel structure right up to the top and will be modern in all details."

This building is connected with the mining department, and will contain examples of all kinds of mining apparatus. It will be a valuable addition to the university, and a building that will be a great help to S.P.S. students.

wick, Fredericton, N.B., is pursuing her M.A. studies in chemistry: "My first impressions of the university was a feeling of extreme loneliness, which was, no doubt, due to the vast size of the institution, in contrast to the enrollment of less than 400 at my own university, and my very few acquaintances among the students here. Everyone appeared to strictly mind their own business and extend little sociableness to newcomers; but first appearances are often untrue and I am now enjoying an excellent time."

Miss Nancy Azlin of the University of Otago, New Zealand, has come to the university as an instructor in Food Chemistry. Miss Azlin is working on her Ph.D. When asked to give her impressions of the University of Toronto, she hesitated to give a direct reply, but stated that she enjoyed her work here.

A. M. Fulton, who hails from the University of Mt. Ellis, was also impressed by the size of the university. "What I can't see is how the freshmen manage to get by."

"A financial dictatorship" was the way that J. S. Woodsworth, Labour M.P., described the government when he spoke on "Christianity and Politics", in Hart House Music Room under the auspices of the Students' Christian Movement yesterday afternoon.

"I have tried to watch the forces at work and more than ever am I forced to the conclusion that our politics are controlled by large financial and industrial organizations," he said.

Quoting from the writings of several prominent modern politicians to prove his contention, he said that nearly all men in public life were motivated by purely selfish considerations.

He also called to witness his affirmation, his own experience in politics, observing the way that campaigns at election time were conducted.

"The state has always been the instrument of some powerful individual or some influential group," he said.

He was introduced by Rev. F. J. Moore, director of the S.C.A.

GHOST STORIES SEND CHILLS UP S.C.M. SPINES

Cambridge Professor Enlivens Supper Party at Union

Orange eats and black witches decorated the walls of the Union Tuesday night, when the women of the S.C.M. were having their first supper party. After the supper, a sepulchral game called "Graveyards" livened up the proceedings considerably.

The women then demonstrated their musical ability in a lusty singsong, such as only an S.C.M. meeting can sponsor.

Professor C. F. Angus of Cambridge University, England, then entertained the company with a series of ghost stories, which caused delightful shivers to run down the vertebral column, and the capillary filaments on several craniums to stand erect.

Students Originated Queen's Hall Dance

In an interview with "The Varsity" about the informal party held at Queen's Hall on Saturday night, and incidentally about the question of blind dates, Miss Boyd, the head of Queen's Hall, stated that she had not been the originator of the party, but that the suggestion had come from the girls themselves. Their reasons for wanting such parties are threefold—firstly because they are constantly going out and feel it would be very nice to occasionally dance at home. With this Miss Boyd was heartily in sympathy. Secondly, there are girls who want to return the entertainments provided them by men, and who would naturally ask their friends to come up to the house if they were living at home, but who do not feel inclined to ask them to play bridge in a large common room, especially when guests must leave before the quiet hour which is observed at ten-thirty.

A third reason is to introduce the first year girls to some of the men of the college.

NERVOUS ARE "RESCUED"

"Like summer tempest came the tears."

Although it is November, there are many such summer tempests at the Ontario College of Education this week as the sweet girl graduates of last spring face their first classes for practice teaching.

At the back of the room the critic teacher sits to come to the rescue or to pass judgment on the lesson taught. Orders are that nervous student teachers are to be "rescued" after ten or fifteen minutes of the half hour period. However, a few have more than held their own.

A fair haired "Saint" from Trinity College who has appeared on the Hart House stage, more than held her own, teaching a Shakespeare scene to a collegiate class. This little lady questioned back on work covered and had the critic teacher excusing the ignorance of his pupils. Her only difficulty was that some of the older boys kept whispering, "I seen her at the Silver Slipper."

Mr. Frank Blachford of the Toronto Conservatory of Music is trying to organize a symphony orchestra among the undergraduates in all colleges and faculties of the University of Toronto. The object of the orchestra is to keep students in touch with their music while at college and to give them a chance to get practice in concert work. This is the first time the University has had an orchestra of this type.

The second practice of the orchestra was held last evening in Annesley Hall under the competent leadership of Mr. Blachford.

Enigmatic Freshman Sweeps Street Car Seats Gallantly in Line-up for North-Bound Bus

An average of seven Varsity students per bus load take advantage of Eaton's free transportation it was observed by "The Varsity" yesterday. In the long line waiting for a north bound bus, forty undergraduates were counted, patiently waiting their turn.

Several of these hopefuls, when interviewed, admitted they were hurrying to lectures. "We don't have to wait very much longer here than we do for a street car, and this doesn't cost anything!"

"It's much warmer and quicker than walking."

"You don't have to walk much farther when you get off than from street cars," were some of the reasons that were offered.

These students, although willing to be packed with forty-five other people in a bus seating twenty-nine, refused to give their names to the press.

EMBRACES ALL COLLEGES

A large group of students from English and History met Tuesday afternoon at the U.C. Women's Union, at the suggestion of Miss Elizabeth Inkster, who wished to give the English and History people an opportunity of forming a club such as the Classical and Moderns people have.

Mr. George Brookes gave his approval of the idea in that it brought about contact among the students of the various colleges and years—"gave them an opportunity to find out what it is all about."

Should it be a club for lectures, discussions or parties, was the question before the house. Finally it was moved that "the meeting resolve itself into a club to bring about social and intellectual contact among the students of English and History, and Philosophy, English or History."

Miss E. Inkster, U.C.; Mr. Holmes, Victoria; Mr. Jack Ellis, Trinity; and Miss L. McAlpine, St. Michael's, were elected to plan the next meeting.

DEBATE

The majority of well over two-to-one with which the Empire Preference motion went down to defeat last night in the international debate held in Trinity College Library leaves one in the usual quandary which follows upon an open floor debate, as to whether the result is the voice of the House on the merits of the motion or on the merits of the speeches.

The calibre of the speeches delivered by the British debaters leads one to think that, in this case at least, the result reflected pretty well the House's reaction to the manner and matter of the arguments. To say that the University of Toronto speakers had a firm grasp of the subject is to admit nothing but the obvious truth—but to say that the British speakers outclassed them on the floor is also to admit what the Canadian debaters themselves would be the first to concede.

Which leads us to ask the rather pertinent question: Is it not possible that the whole mental and physical background of our home-grown variety of debaters renders them unfit for the peculiar style brought into sudden and complete vogue by the visit of the Oxford Debaters a few years ago?

The superiority of the open floor debate over the American system is not to be gainsaid, but it is upon those occasions—such as last night's tilt—when our imitators of the studied carelessness of the English manner meet the real article, that we stop to wonder if this is not the sort of thing which it takes eight or nine centuries to achieve. . . . Like the lawns of old castles and the smell of London in a fog.

Krehm de la Krehm

Mr. Editor:

Permit me to make a few remarks on the letter of one "Another Nemo" which appeared in the Varsity last Monday.

To begin with Nemo II lost no opportunity to let us know that we are dealing with an extremely perspicacious person. Not even a slip of the pen which caused "regenerescence" to appear as "regenerene" could escape the eagle eye of this man. To this mortal sin this intellectual Cyclops dedicates a whole paragraph (and no mean one at that). A very careful fellow this Nemo!

With the Achilles of classic lore the whole person was immune from physical violence with the exception of a mere heel. With our dung-hill Achilles, Nemo II, tables are however changed. After shedding much excessive sweat of the brow to show the heresy of the accidental omission of three letters, our hero lies in so clumsy a fashion as would make a two-year-old with water on the brain blush.

I refer to the statement of Nemo that "the conditions of capitalist (1) anarchy blossom in their satanic splendour in Russia."

The Soviet Republic goes to the great expense and trouble to publish for the benefit of non-Russians, the statistics of the Gosplan. Had our Nemo but spent a fraction of the time that it took him to consult the dictionary about what would obviously appear to anyone but a fastidious fool as an accidental error, he could have consulted one of these valuable publications.

As it is however our learned friend "overlooks" very conveniently the following details.

Despite the undeveloped state of Russian pre-war economy, despite the exhaustion due to the Imperialist war, the havoc wreaked by the counter-revolutionary bandits (Kolchak, Denikin, Judinitch, the British at Archangel financed by the "democratic" Entente (of Wilson's 14 points!)), despite the "cordon sanitaire", the economic blockade of the U.S.S.R. by the world-bourgeoisie, despite the sabotage organized even to-day in the Soviet Union by Britain, and France, despite the enormous expense necessary for military protection of the Socialist fatherland against the Imperialist thieves, the Russian proletariat has smashed once for all the reactionary myth about the impracticability of Socialist organization. In the period of the cyclic crisis when the crazy structure of capitalist society tumbles down about heads of its ardent sycophants, the Union of Socialist Republics can boast of the non-existence of unemployment within its bounds. Show me, O Wise Nemo, when the bourgeoisie, even in the most revolutionary period of its development, could show an annual increase of production of 27 per cent. This the Russian Five Year Plan has done. Over the graves of the martyrs of the Revolution there appears a Proletarian State, the first in history, the threat of defiance of the International Proletariat to the exploiters of the world.

And yet the Proletarian Revolution is international in its essence. Only

Art, Music and Drama

U.C. Players' Guild

One of the foremost of Arnold Bennett's "polite farces", The Step-mother, does not impose either the heavy burden of masterful drama or the almost as difficult burden of straight comedy, and as it is airy and amusing, it lends itself with facility to the embryo talents of the cast of the Players' Guild, which presented it yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Prout, an hysterical, literary madam in love with Dr. Gardiner, has cast her step-son, Adrian, out upon "the deserts of the city" in her attempt to keep her placid secretary a model of capability. After humorous complications, the two love affairs terminate favourably, leaving a pleasant taste with the audience.

Miss Jocelyn Moore, who directed the play, dealt with a cast having almost no previous experience, and considering this factor, the play ran with some smoothness, more perhaps, than is found in the average amateur production. On the other hand, its smoothness became mechanical and monotonous, losing that airy quality that Mr. Bennett had made the chief characteristic of the play. Patricia O'Reilly was well chosen as the secretary, who claimed to be utterly placid. Kay Stewart, as Mrs. Prout, might have made her hysteria a little more spontaneous. Arthur Marron made an excellent youthful lover, but as a newspaper man, was too naive. As for Dennis Chitty, a man of Dr. Gardiner's calibre would have been less shy and unobtrusive.

Despite this lack of polish on the part of the cast, their enunciation was good, and the play itself was clever enough to deserve the appreciation of both actor and audience.

U.C. Alumni Dramatics

The first A. A. Milne play of the local amateur season will be To Have the Honour, presented by the University College Alumni Association tomorrow and Saturday in Hart House Theatre.

This is the first time To Have the Honour has appeared in Toronto. It ran throughout 1924 in London with Sir Gerald du Maurier in the title role.

The production is under the direction of Mr. Edgar Stone, who has directed most of the Alumni Society plays in recent years.

The cast includes Brendon Mulholland, H. E. Hitchman, F. J. Mallett, John Patton, Ray Purdie, Agnes Muldrew, Alison Ewart, Eleanor Barton, Margaret Tytler, and Constance Shiell.

Atlantic. (1). A British film remarkable both pictorially and dramatically, that is nevertheless full of flaws. There is no plot. The whole picture seeks only to portray the gay life on board an Atlantic liner, and then the appalling three hours between the time the liner strikes an iceberg and the time it sinks with most of its male and a few of its female passengers. The chief merit of the piece is flash after flash of individually splendid bits of acting. Franklin Dyall, as the old and disillusioned novelist who sinks with the ship after inspiring many others to be brave, is very good. So are most of the rest, especially the extras. Two of the extras we noticed specially—one was a young flapper who acted perfectly, though she did not say a word; the other, seen only in a flash at the end of the picture showing some of the passengers all huddled up out of the cold on the upper deck of the sinking ship, was one of the most beautiful girls we have ever seen on the screen. See this picture.

when the working classes of Western Europe and America shall have established their dictatorship, only when the same fate which overtook the Russian Nemos in 1917 shall have overtaken our Nemos, will we be well on the way to Socialist society.

Again, had Nemo have consulted any 10-year old Pioneer in the Communist movement concerning "the great Proletarian", instead of learning so well the niceties of "Groucho" Marx, he would not have so idiotically referred the Marx as "the citizen champion".

In closing, Mr. Editor, let me suggest that the discussion of this subject be carried on further in the columns of the Varsity. I am confident that should prove far more interesting than the infantile balderdash concerning petting etc (which is, indeed, an insult to the intelligence of the undergraduate).

I may add that this challenge is extended to any member of the staff of

DENTS DEFEATED 12-0 AS SR. MEDS CONTINUE WINNING STREAK

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

University College Freshettes certainly upset the dope when they defeated Senior Vic last night by a score of 30 to 26. Although the Freshies showed surprising strength in their game with Occupational Therapy on Tuesday night, they were conceded hardly a chance against either of the other teams in their group. It is not often that a team composed entirely of first year girls, most of whom have not played together before, can be so successful against a team drawn from the third and fourth years.

This win for the Red and White means that unless the unexpected happens, St. Hilda's will win their group without much trouble. However, the Freshies may be counted upon to give the Saints a real battle before the group winner is declared. Indeed the Saints did not stack up as well as was expected on Monday night, and the remaining games in this group will be watched with great interest.

In the other divisions, things are not quite so complicated. Senior U.C. have the edge in Group 2, with a win over Junior Vic, their most formidable rivals, to their credit. This win was not decisive, however, and when these two teams meet again there should be an interesting struggle.

St. Michael's are in the same position in Group 3. The Double Blue squad defeated U.C. Juniors in the first game, and since the other team in this group is Meds, who this year have a rather weak squad, the race for group honours will likely be between the first two aggregations.

In the annual freshman "peeraide" at Haverford College, the freshman appeared attired in the manner of the famous Fisk tire ad, with pajamas, night-caps, candles and yawms.

MEDICALS RETAIN PERFECT AVERAGE

Defeat Dents 12-0 for Still One More Successive Triumph

SCORE TWO TOUCHDOWNS

Senior Meds kept their winning streak intact by downing Dents 12-0 on the back campus last night. The medical squad are undisputed group champions, and fielded a team which outweighed their opponents nearly 20 pounds a man. Line plunges and the ability to capitalize on the Dentists' misplays were the Doctors' sources of strength. Eddie Sinclair and his men fought valiantly, but were unable to pierce the winners' defence.

Meds crashed through to block Sinclair's kick in the first five minutes, and the burly Eddie came right back with a punt which rolled 60 yards. In the second quarter Long plunged for yards, and Caldwell took a short kick and ran it 60 yards to put the ball on Dents' 5 yard line. Captain Bartlett completed the distance for a touchdown, which was converted.

In the last half the forceps artists rallied, but the Red and Black team continued to smother Sinclair's kicks before he could get them away. Eddie relieved the pressure with a 35 yard plunge, but Graham ended all doubt as to the winners when he ran 35 yards for a touchdown on an extension play. The convert made it 12-0 for Meds and ended the scoring.

Sinclair, Dore and Conn kept the Dentists in the hunt, while Long, Graham and Murby were effective for the Doctors.

Senior Meds (12)—Flying wing, Bull; halves, Graham, Murby, Wensley; quarter, Caldwell; snap, Scandiffio; insides, Bartlett, Dunne; middles, Brown, Long; outsides, Gibbons, McCallum; subs, Allen, Marquis.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

No, the sports editors of "The Varsity" haven't any tickets!

So don't swell the number of those who think that we can "work it".

As a matter of fact there are no seats left. A complete sell-out and Mr. Reed has hung out the S.R.O. sign at the box office.

You can yell longer and more strenuously on your feet than sitting down. Why not obtain standing room pasteboards? Everyone will be on their feet anyway.

This Queen's-Varsity tilt is going to have them up on their heels every minute of the game. It promises to be a battle royal from start to finish. We have heard that the Tricolour like playing on our field. They do so much better.

At any rate, reports from the Limestone City state that Queen's are confident of turning the tables on the Blue and White and administering a defeat at the Bloor Street stadium.

Varsity will be at full strength for the epic struggle for the first time this year. Fitzpatrick will be back on the line-up and his speed is expected to give the U. of T. many yards. Johnny Keith will be back at snap. He has been attending the practices this week. Elliott, of Queen's, however, is an unlikely starter. He was hurt in a scrimmage yesterday. "Ga" Mungovan will probably replace Caldwell at quarter for the Tricolour. Otherwise, Coach Harry Batstone will field the same team.

Many of the boys are going down to the Union Station to see how much good Kingston currency they can induce the visitors to leave in Toronto. We know of one local lad who is willing to wager his entire allowance on Varsity. But no odds will be given on either team. Advance dope points to a close match in which the breaks may decide the issue. Here's hoping Billy Bell repeats his performance of Kingston and gobbles up all of Howie Carter's spirals. It is plenty to expect of the diminutive Blue quarterback.

PLAY TO SECOND DRAW IN FINALS

Pharmacy and Wycliffe Score Goal Apiece in 70 Minutes

GROUP TITLE AT STAKE

Pharmacy and Wycliffe College fought 70 minutes to a 1-1 tie yesterday in the playoff for the group title and the right to enter the inter-group play-downs. After the regulation 60 minutes the teams were tied, and played 10 minutes overtime without result. Last Monday the same teams finished their schedule with a scoreless draw, which forced this playoff. A third game will be played next week, to decide who will continue in the fight for the interfaculty soccer championship.

Wycliffe won the toss and kicked with the wind behind them. They kept the ball in Pharmacy's end for the better part of the period and only the fine work of the latter's backs kept them from an early score. Finally the Wycliffe forwards broke through and Geary scored with a clean kick, which the Pharmacy goalie had no chance of stopping. For the remainder of the period neither team were successful in their repeated attempts. Shortly after half-time MacQuillan of Pharmacy evened the score with a lovely goal on a pass from Ivey. Each team had several chances to add to their score, but could not capitalize on their opportunities before the whistle blew.

Pharmacy—Wilcox, Johnston, Rogers, Smith, Hyde, Robinson, Fisher, Ivey, Norris, Walton, MacQuillan; subs, Jackson and Fowler.

Wycliffe—Goldring, Smyth, Ruch, Crawshaw, Geary, Perains, Masters, Sage, Prior, English, Wood.

ELEANOR WALLACE EXCELS

U.C. Freshies took Senior Vic last night at Vic gym by a score of 30 to 26. Although the Freshies played well, Vic were not up to top form. Eleanor Sedgewick, who was best for Vic, did not turn in her usual game, and Eleanor Wallace, jumping centre for the Freshies, was the most outstanding player on her team.

At half time U.C. were on the long end of a 17 to 12 score. In the second half Vic tightened up and with five minutes to go, had the game tied up. U.C. were shooting exceptionally well, but the game was marred by a large number of penalties on both sides. The Freshies have their signal plays working quite well, and their passing was fairly steady.

Peace Confreres Moot Ends of Eggs As Zep Reduction Hangs in Balance

By P. A. Gardner

A cloud had settled over the Peace Conference. The reduction armoured Zeppelins had been brought to a point of mutual agreement by all except Messrs. Quince and Starvelin, representatives of two of the most powerful nations. Mr. Quince maintained that the proposed reduction was too drastic, while Mr. Starvelin was equally firm in his insistence that it was too slight. At length the meeting was adjourned, still under the cloud of these gentlemen's obdurate disagreement.

Both Mr. Quince and Mr. Starvelin, however, consented to a private discussion of the problem in a nearby cafe.

Arrived at the cafe, each, to the surprise of the other, revealed a fondness for boiled eggs at the evening hour. A slight but promising lifting of the atmosphere of grim uncompromise was at once perceptible; in fact it increased until Mr. Quince remarked with a gruff, shy giggle, "A trifle like the absurd old controversy of the Big-Endians and the Little-Endians, this impasse of ours, eh, Starvelin?"

"Well," replied Starvelin with a generous smile, "they do appear to have points in common, now that you speak of it".

"Though I must say," added Mr. Quince, pausing while the waitress placed before them their boiled eggs, "it always seemed to me that Swift's irony was a little weakened by the extreme unlikelihood of any question being raised regarding so unproblematical a point."

"I quite agree with you," replied Mr. Starvelin, inserting an egg into his cup with great care, large end foremost, "the veriest nit-wit must surely have known that the small end is the end to crack."

His laugh was interrupted by Mr. Quince, who paused with his fingers covering the large end of his egg to exclaim, "The small end, of course, my friend. For it must be obvious to the meanest intelligence that the large end of the egg was designed by nature to be cracked."

"Such tempers!" exclaimed the waitress to the cashier as she made an end of removing the remains of an egg from each of the opposite walls of the cafe.

"Eh bien!" replied the other. "One must forgive them. Remember, they bear on their shoulders the affairs of the world."

Three weeks later the Conference arrived at the decision that the proposed reduction of armoured Zeppelins was a little too drastic.

The evening before Mr. Starvelin had, to the expressed regret of all his colleagues, been forced to return home, because of acute stomach-trouble.

petition for the Empire of 1950 is the reason to vote for the motion."

H. Trevor Lloyd, first speaker for the negative, took exception to the definition of the subject as rendered by the affirmative, that British colonies, including India, and her mandatory territories, should not be considered as being in the Empire.

He then went on to describe the tariff barrier as a general wall like the wall of China.

"Imperial economic unity," he considered, "was going to blow up every viewpoint ever held by the British Empire. The position of the Empire is due to liberty and natural affection and to base all this on a temporary emergency would be fatal. All the Dominions are building up new industries, which a tariff wall would destroy, and the Dominions would have to sacrifice their foreign trade."

C. L. M. Douglas, second affirmative speaker, advanced the claims of the potentialities of the Empire and of her economic self-dependence. The interest of each part is insoluble and linked up with the action of the whole. It prevents disintegration. An artificial barrier is necessary, which, in time, may be removed when the Empire has sufficiently developed.

"We are bound together by ties other than sentimental, and general tariff barriers would imperil the whole," stated John Mitchell, the final speaker on the paper. "This is hardly the moment to raise prices on food-stuffs, which would be the result of a tariff."

Fine Goal-Tending Factor in 3-2 Water Polo Victory

DAVEYS IS OUTSTANDING

In an interesting interfaculty water polo match Tuesday night, Junior Meds defeated Junior School 3-2. As the score indicates play was close and only remarkable goal-tending by Meds saved a larger score for School.

Meds scored two goals in the first half, one by Daveys and the other by Culmer. Daveys was outstanding, but both sides showed some pretty combination.

School started out strong in the second half and Towers scored on a shot from centre, the ball landing in the corner of the net. Meds countered almost immediately on a nice combination play. Towers scored again near the end of the game.

Victoria nosed out Senior U.C. in a thrilling water polo match by 2-1, the winning goal being scored on a fine shot from centre by Edmison a moment before the final whistle blew.

Miss Home discussed the architecture of the home, the chief character of which was made necessary by environment. The terrific heat required thick walls and roof, few windows, and contrivances to create draughts. If you sat by a pillar, you had quite a bit of circulating fresh air. Reed frame, mud bricks, three compartments—that was the simplest home of all. It did not pay to put much money into one's domicile—for one thing, the gods grew wrathily about unseemly worldliness, for another, one was apt to descend from one's house-top some morning, not to one's court yard, but to the vast and mucky stretches of the playful Nile. If, on the other hand, you were head man, and maintained an establishment in safer parts, you would probably spend a great deal on your abode, always providing that you prepared a much more magnificent home for your mummy, when you became it. To be particularly swanky in that almost treeless land, you would surely have door posts of Lebanon cedar.

And as a tribute to the gods, your home would be planned in three courts, like their temples, which still stand in the desert, their magnificent inclined walls broad enough for the priestly processions to pass along, painted and carved with date palms and lotus blossoms in stone, crowning the colossal pillars of Isis, goddess of the hearth.

VIRGINIA WOOLF VETOS INERTIA

Miss Amy Lovegrove Speaks on Work of Stimulating Novelist

DEFENDS FEMININE ARTIST

"This is the secret of her vitality and of the everlasting quality of her writing,—that she never allows a reader's mind to stand still or stagnate." It was thus that Miss Amy Lovegrove analyzed the charm of the works of Virginia Woolf, at the meeting of the U.C. Women's Literary Society on Tuesday night. Miss Woolf has followed the literary tradition of Sterne in that she writes a novel which is not concerned with plot, but the begetting of ideas.

Recently Miss Woolf has taken up the cudgils in defence of the woman artist. In "A Room of One's Own", she takes up the case of an imagined sister of Shakespeare who, due to the restrictions placed upon her mental equipment because of her sex, died with all her plays in the unwritten book of her mind.

"Orlando" is Miss Woolf's most comprehensive venture, according to Miss Lovegrove, being a history of literature and of civilization, a treatise on sex psychology as well as a biography. In it she mocks in turn the England of Elizabeth down to the England of the present day.

During the short business meeting, Miss Margaret Atwood and Miss Maud Sexsmith were elected first and third year representatives respectively.

Twenty Earn Spending Money Carrying Stadium
Chairs

That the university can help unemployment to a certain extent was evident yesterday. Several students who act as ushers at the stadium were approached and told that they could earn a dollar and a half by helping carry extra benches for Saturday's game from trucks into the stadium. About twenty students were able to get spending money in this way, but only university people were used.

STUDENTS EXCUSE LACK OF INTEREST IN DEBATES

Bailey, II S.P.S. He considered that time had also something to do with attendance. If a debate were held at five o'clock it might be O.K. As it is, a student goes home for supper and then decides that it's no use trotting back for a musty debate.

"There is too much sport. We think more of sport here than of debates. The attendance should be at least 50-50. It is a bad thing for a University like Toronto not to turn out for outstanding debates," stated M. J. Setterington, III Meds.

"Studies have something to do with it," said R. T. Greer, III C. and F. "Saturday afternoon is usually free and a rugby game is a good place to start a week-end binge."

T. H. Hodgson, V Meds, said: "There is no use fighting the trend of the times." He also thought that the ability of student speakers is not great enough to attract other students who have the same intelligence as the debaters. Rugby appeals to the physical side of one's make-up, and this is what most people demand for recreation.

STANDARDIZED EXAMS A MIXED BLESSING DECLARE PROFESSORS

Would Tend to Bring All Standards to Level of

"SOUNDS LIKE ROT"

Professor Synge Gives Qualified
Approval to American Scheme

Standardization of university examinations, as proposed by a body now considering the question in the United States, does not find favour with Toronto professors. The idea is to have a standard examination in each subject, emphasizing factual knowledge and eliminating such considerations as English and handwriting.

The first opinion secured was that of Professor G. Glazebrook, of the department of History. Professor Glazebrook said he had never given the subject any consideration, never having heard of it before, but believed that such a system would pre-suppose that all universities were of the same standard. This, in the United States particularly, is not true. Various institutions of learning have different ideas of 50 marks and set a different value on their degrees, he declared. Therefore a standardized examination would either of necessity be brought down to the level of the lowest or else exclude the lowest.

Professor J. L. Synge, of the department of Applied Mathematics, was of the opinion that there was a good deal to be said for the idea. "It would certainly raise the standards of the smaller universities," he said. On the other hand, Professor Synge thought that the individual lecturer ought to have something to say in the matter of examination and thought perhaps a semi-standardization would be closer to the ideal. He said that to a person from the old country there appeared to be too much emphasis on standardization in the elementary education here. "As far as eliminating such subsidiary considerations as writing and English, one should proceed carefully," was his opinion.

"I have never heard of such a movement, but it sounds like rot," was Professor V. W. Bladen's comment. He declined to say anything further on the grounds of ignorance of the subject.

Schedule

ARGYLL PREFERS THE GAME

The biggest problem for women residents this week-end is whether to celebrate the Thanksgiving turkey at home—or whether to savour it in another fashion by staying in Toronto for the Queen's game.

Some of them, angry that two such events should take place at the same time, are doing both. At Queen's Hall for instance, there are only ten girls out of 113 who have decided to stay, but many of the 113 are going home for the Friday night dance and then coming back to town for the game.

At Annesley Hall and Wymilwood there is another compromise: some 90 per cent. of the girls are going home for the week-end, but 50 per cent. are (Continued on Page 4)

TRINITY REFORMERS DEFY CONVENTIONS

Appear at Formal Function in Colourful Reformed Attire

LADIES AT A LOSS

Dress reform made its second appearance of the year at the University last night.

At the supposedly solemn and stately senior dance at Trinity, tradition was shaken when the men of the fourth year renounced conventional evening attire and appeared in what the Bond Street of Dress Reformers prescribes as the ultimate.

Seen by "The Varsity" before the festivities, they were dressed in long trousers with highly coloured sashes around their waists, white shirts, open at the neck, and blazers. As the evening grew older, however, they brazenly discarded the blazers and revealed, in a great many cases, the latest in suspenders.

St. Hilda's had been forewarned of the move, but evidently the Saints had split on the subject of what should be worn on such an occasion for some were in evening dress and others had dressed informally. They were all entirely in favour of the new garb for men, however.

EDUCATED FEMALE MATES LOGICALLY

College Woman Has Advantage

SALVATION IN EUGENICS

"Eugenics will save the world," stated Dr. W. Hilliard at Wymilwood on Tuesday night. "It is the study of the way in which human beings may raise the level of civilization."

"The Relation of Men and Women" was the main topic on which Dr. Hilliard led the discussion. "Why does a girl react differently when meeting a male friend than when meeting a female one? Why does she become animated? Because of the instinctive wish to win the affection of a possible conquest, and thus head the competition and find a suitable mate!"

"The mind must govern the sex—that is the reason a college girl has an advantage over her undeveloped sisters."

The subject of "Petting" was greeted with many opinions. "Use your common sense and look ahead—don't hang a millstone around your own neck!" was the conclusion.

FINE ENGLISH STYLE DUE TO BACKGROUND SAYS DEAN COCHRANE

Contrasts English and American Styles in Debate

HAS HOPES FOR FUTURE

Long Tradition Not Necessary to Perfection in Style

"There has been a decided step taken forward in recent years as witnessed in the Hart House Debates," said C. N. Cochrane, B.A., M.A., Ox., Dean of men in residence at University College, in an interview with "The Varsity", "and I believe that the visiting of the Great Britain debaters has done much to cause this improvement."

With reference to an editorial concerning the probable reasons for the result of the debate against the representatives from Great Britain, the Dean voiced the opinion that he agreed with it in many ways, but that he did not see that it would take eight or nine centuries for the undergraduates of the University of Toronto to develop into debaters of equal, if not superior, calibre to those two young men from the mother land.

"One of the great drawbacks seems to be that we have not the necessary literary background. We do not read, let alone study our native tongue to as great a degree of perfection as at Oxford," said the Dean. "Formerly it has been the custom here to hold oratorical contests rather than debates. Thus the spouting, for that is what it developed into, of long winded phraseology which in its own way may be good, but which does not develop the art of thinking for one's self on one's feet."

"The American style varies again," he went on. "They use extensively prepared and well enumerated points. Here we find more actual preparation is necessary than initiative on the spur of the moment. One man seldom debates longer than ninety years and if we have any gumption there is absolutely no reason why we cannot pick up the Oxford debating style in one generation."

Dean Cochrane stated that he had every confidence that in the near future, with the aid of visiting debaters from across the seas, we would be able to do more than hold our own with any that might be pitted against us.

Plenty of enthusiasm was evident yesterday afternoon when the members of all the years in Law at the University met and formed the Law Club of the University of Toronto. Legal luminaries of the Dominion will address the meetings of the club, which are to be held periodically throughout the year. Every member of the Honour course in Law is eligible for membership as well as all the graduates.

The following executive was elected: President, White, IV; vice-president, Gray, IV; secretary-treasurer, Stewart, III; assistant sec.-treas., Hume, II. The first year will also be represented.

Last night three cars were parked in the memorial archway near the Soldiers' Tower at Hart House about 7 p.m. At 11 p.m. one of them was still there.

All evening passers-by raised loud protests at what they called a "desecration of sacred ground". So indignant were some students of local residences, that it was rumoured an attempt was to be made to exact summary justice. About 10.30 p.m. the passengers of one car were observed changing their front tires.

The University police took the number of each car and it is expected that proceedings will be initiated against the offenders in the city police courts.

According to the Athletic Office, Hart House, the Queen's-Varsity tilt on Saturday will be watched by a crowd which will probably exceed 20,000 in number. This will include Varsity students, Toronto fans, and a goodly delegation from Kingston. The following are the details of the distribution:

Season Tickets—5,027.
Queen's Allotment—3,150.
Toronto Alumni Reunion—3,017.
Men Students and Staff (2 per person)—2,802.
Students' Season Tickets—2,052.
Downtown—1,503.
Out-of-town Grads—1,137.
Women Students and Staff (2 per person)—479.
Team Allotment (4 teams)—450.
The total seats sold thus number 19,617. This total will probably be raised to over 20,000 by the sale of standing room tickets.

JOE MAHON IN CHARGE

Last night in Newman Hall the club held a men's smoker which was one of a series held every other week throughout the year. Over sixty club members were present and enjoyed an evening of unusual entertainment.

Joe Mahon was master of ceremonies for the evening and presented six of his proteges in three hair-raising boxing bouts.

One of the features of the entertainment was the moving pictures provided by Harry O'Connor. There was a comedy and three very interesting travelogues of Mexico, the Rocky Mountains and Brazil.

Vincent Webb, the club president, spoke to the members, and later with Bill Hurst at the piano, and some of his singers with him, the evening's good time was brought to a close with a medley of songs.

arrive in Toronto to-night fully confident of once more taking the inter-collegiate championship. The team is at full strength, having kept singularly free from accidents all year. In their battle with Western last week, the Tricolour displayed their old driving power which has been the downfall of many an opposing rugby machine. Their plays and interference are much better timed than in previous encounters and the speed of the middle wings, Stuart and Hamlin, accounted for many a gain into an enemy territory.

"Howie" Carter and "Red" Gilmore, two inseparables in everything, are counted on as the big threats from Kingston. Carter in last Saturday's game, showed unexpected ability in weaving his way through Purple tacklers, and when it comes to booting the oval, the big Samia laid places second to none. In addition to his ball carrying, Gilmore's specialty is the art of placement kicking.

In this fixture, more spectacular line work is looked for than in any previous game of the series. The two backfields are evenly matched and the hope is that the superior line will win the day. Harry Batstone, past master of rugby strategy, has been sending his men through tactics that leave the spectators on the side-lines in a daze.

PARADE IS PLANNED IF VARSITY WINS

A. G. Burns Secures the Permission From Downtown Police

FRATERNITIES HOLD TEAS

"No application has been made for a parade by the university authorities as yet." After a few unsuccessful attempts to decipher a broad Scotch accent, this was all that could be gleaned from the office of the Deputy Chief of Police. Taking warning from the exasperated tone of voice, "The Varsity" did not press him for more news. However, A. G. Burns, secretary of the S.A.C., advised that he was writing to secure the permit and in the event of Varsity winning Saturday's game, a parade will be held.

A few fraternities were phoned to find out if any arrangements had been made to celebrate after the big game. Some curtly refused to give any information at all, others did not seem to be doing anything special in the way of "making whoopee". Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Rho Sigma and Phi Kappa Sigma, all confessed that they were holding the usual tea dances.

It was learned on good authority that the skit to be presented at half-time was to take the form of a burlesque on the university band. A real humorous ten minutes was assured.

By Norm Dickson, Varsity Sports Writer

To-morrow afternoon, when Coach

Les Blackwell trots his gridders out onto the turf of the Varsity stadium to the strains of the "Blue and White" to encounter the Batstone-coached Tricolour invaders, twenty thousand fans will witness one of the greatest games ever played on the local grid-iron.

Saturday's struggle will decide the Intercollegiate championship. Varsity is leading the group, a half game ahead of last year's title holders; a win will give her the coveted honour which she has not held since 1926. Queen's are practically certain to down McGill in the Limestone City the following Saturday and a win to-morrow will undoubtedly assure them of their second straight championship. Varsity, for the first time this year, will be at full strength for the epic battle.

Through a week of torrid drill in order to bring the team back to the calibre which soundly trounced Queen's two weeks ago, not a casualty has occurred. Coach Les Blackwell stated last evening following a light workout that the team was in splendid condition and the spirit of the players is even higher than that which they displayed in the game at Kingston.

Following a half hour's signal practice this afternoon at the stadium, Coach Les Blackwell will announce his starting line-up and the eight substitutes who will dress. With all the injured back in harness fighting for regular positions and the squad of thirty fairly burning up the turf in the practices, Les has had considerable difficulty in making his final choice.

Captain Johnny Keith, termed by Mike Rodden, second to Ernie Cox as the greatest snaphack in Canadian rugby of all time, has recovered sufficiently from his broken nose that he will be back at his regular position ready to demonstrate that he deserves the highest ranking.

With the championship hanging on the outcome of the game, Varsity will face Queen's with every man keyed up to a fighting pitch.

THE "QUEEN'S GAME" COMPLEX

The subject of the Queen's game is guaranteed to throttle any other topic of conversation on the campus to-day. The "Queen's Game" complex has taken its annual grip on the University of Toronto imagination. Even a seminar tea will abandon its discussion of the perennial, "What is life?" to offer odds on the probable outcome of Saturday's gridiron contest, while begowned dons interrupt erudite expositions to recall the famous Queen's fracas of '98 or '99 when, So-and-So galloped the length of the field for a touchdown in the closing minute of play.

It must be a somewhat startling spectacle to the foreign student who is spending his first weeks in our academic atmosphere. Intellectual and moron alike will be seen in heated discussion on this Great Event. The lady or gentleman who has come to our shores in search of fresh environmental stimulus must find it all a bit disillusioning . . . or amusing.

The spectacle of returning grads trying frantically to recapture a little of "that old pep in there", or of grad and undergrad alike indulging in a series of clownish demonstrations or all-night brawls after the game, is not one to inspire any great feeling of confidence in the efficacy of our system of higher education.

But the situation exists, and since it must be accepted, perhaps it is as well to think of it as a welcome patch of colour in our drab horizon. If our average student and average graduate find it easier and pleasanter to grasp the purely physical idea of two hours in a packed and yelling stadium where two sets of athletes are pitting brawn against brawn, than they do to toy with some nice scholastic abstraction—that is merely their inalienable right as North American mammals and members of the Anglo-American race.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Scores Stadium Officials

Dear Sir:

I feel very guilty to have to usurp the space already spoken for by one who would like to challenge us to a spelling bee in your worthy periodical. I refer to our self appointed columnist, Mr. Krehm.

I feel, however, that what I have to say is more worthy of your attention at the moment. I noticed in an obscure corner (too bad you have not more of them), of this morning's "Varsity", a note in reference to the ushers of the stadium who were offered jobs unloading benches amounting to about a dollar and a half each, to be used by them for spending money. As one of those ushers who was offered the job and refused it, I feel at liberty to ask you to take some steps at a time like this to instill into those officials who have the power to create jobs like this, some public spirit and moral responsibility to their community. It seems to me that with the number of unemployed that there are in the city at the present time, and considering the fact that winter is already upon us, and that men have to rely upon the thoughtfulness of our citizens, that the conduct of those in charge of the work at the stadium (and it is not skilled work), ought to

PHARMACY DOWN WYCLIFFE IN GROUP SOCCER PLAYOFF

Knox Hard-pressed to Prevent Scoring as Victoria Holds Them to 0-0 Tie

Pharmacy downed Wycliffe 1-0, and Knox tied Victoria 0-0, in the inter-faculty soccer games on the front campus yesterday.

This was the second playoff game gives the druggists the group title. Play was very even throughout, and it was only on a penalty kick that the winning goal was scored by Rogers of Pharmacy.

Knox were as near to defeat as they have been this year and Victoria did well to hold them in check. The cup-holders kept play out of their own territory, but could not score on the lanky Vic goalie.

be severely criticized. There is absolutely no excuse for such thoughtlessness, and I believe that the students themselves, if they had thought of what I am now pointing out, would not have tolerated the actions of an obviously unthinking and hard directorate. At a time such as this we should be only too glad to help out, and I trust that even if it requires some hardship on the part of those in charge, the benches will be taken down after the game on Saturday by the unemployed.

Yours sincerely,
H.M.S., U.C.

CHAMPUS CAT

As yet there are no advertisements on the front page, but do not give up hope. The advertising department of this paper is doing some noble work and is gaining more ground all the time. Some local optimists are already of the opinion that our Daily will soon have its first sheet covered with "Want Ads" like that of a well-known evening publication downtown.

Fortunately the undergraduate staff cannot control the amount of advertising appearing in "The Varsity"; otherwise the misguided journalists would devote all the space to news.

We would like to suggest that the News section be removed entirely and replaced by more advertising. With this change we would not have to pay a dollar a year, and perhaps "The Varsity" could be operated under a profit-sharing system beneficial to all.

Incidentally there is so much advertising to-day that there is no room to write the Cat.

Next week, our readers, if any, are requested to look for the Cat snuggled between the School Girl Complexion and the Life Buoy (B.O.—Better Omitted).

TICKET SCALPERS APPEAR ON EVE OF BIG GAME

Allegations are being circulated that ticket-scalpers are invading the campus. The unusual demand for pasteboards for the Queen's-Varsity rumposium on Saturday has encouraged certain enterprising parties to buy up as many as possible in the hope of realizing big profits on the re-sale, it is said. One man is rumoured to have sold four seats for thirty dollars. Scalpers are said to be reaping considerable profits, due to the Alumni Conference.

CHAMPIONSHIP HINGES ON VARSITY-QUEEN'S BATTLE TO-MORROW

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

By virtue of their win over Occupational Therapy last night, St. Hilda's now lead their group with two wins and no losses to their credit. Senior U.C. are in the same situation in Group 2, while St. Michael's are in the lead in Group 3.

Officials of the Saskatchewan Women's Athletic Association have written to Miss A. E. M. Parkes, secretary-treasurer of the women's S.A.C., requesting that copies of the intercollegiate basketball rules be sent to 30 different organizations in that province. All girls' teams there will henceforth play the same form of the game as is in use at this university.

C. O. T. C.

Owing to the holiday there will not be a lecture to candidates for "A" and "B" certificates to-day, Friday, 7th November.

The next lecture will be given on Friday, 14th November at 5 p.m.

JR. BLUE TEAM MEETS M'GILL TO-MORROW

Varsity Beat St. Mike's to Win the Western Group Title

McGILL HAS BEAT LOYOLA

When the Varsity juniors strut out on the Blue gridiron here on Saturday to try their talent against McGill juniors, winners of the Eastern group in the intercollegiate junior race, they will use a team that has had no trouble piling up 102 points against St. Mike's 9 to win the Western group title.

The game will be played at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at the Bloor St. bowl. Classic rugby will be dished up to fans when Arnup goes into action with his booting. Coach Harry Bales lost Byers, an excellent flying wing, when he broke his collar bone last Saturday. Webber, a real back-fielder, will take his place. Otherwise the line-up will be the same as turned in such pretty rugby against St. Mike's. Henderson, the snappy middle is expected to play a fast game. Gordon Keith, at snap, looks like a repetition of his famous brother's record.

In a deep sea zoology course at the University of Miami, students don bathing suits and diving helmets and descend to the bottom of the Atlantic for a study of marine life.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

A championship looms on the Varsity horizon for the first time since 1926. On past performances, despite the weak showing at Montreal, the Blue and White looks the stronger team. They outplayed the Tricolour decisively in Kingston and should turn in another exhibition of football comparable to that to-morrow.

Whether you are going to the big game in the afternoon or not here's a real tip. Don't pass up the Varsity-McGill junior struggle in the morning. It promises to be the real thing in gridiron treats. The Blue freshmen have had things pretty easy so far, but to-morrow they stack up against real opposition. The Redmen are still irking under the trouncing they got last year and are reported to have gathered together one of the strongest squads in years. The kids play wide open rugby and a real game should result. The kick-off will be at 10 a.m. at the Stadium.

After watching Blackwell's cohorts for the past week, we are more than ever convinced that the Queen's squad will have to display more than confidence if they hope to go home happy. The locals have taken their workouts seriously and the way they hit the line is encouraging to say the least. Last night Blackwell put them through a light practice which will be followed by another this afternoon.

Here's hoping the Blues are the team as in Kingston and not as in Montreal. After watching them working out this week we are beginning to feel sorry for Queen's.

VIC KEEPS IN LEAD BY WIN OVER U.C.

Victors Confident of Game—Play Loosely, but Outwit U. C.

VIC TOUCHES IN FIRST

Vic kept their string of victories intact when they administered a 10-6 drubbing to U.C. on the back campus yesterday. As Vic were already assured of the group leadership they did not play their usual aggressive game. Their interference was poor and they fumbled quite frequently. U.C. tried determinedly, but were never dangerous. Vic scored in the first period when Purchase crossed the line for a touch. Clark repeated the performance for the Scarlet men in the third quarter to bring their final total to 10. U.C. scored in the second canto on a boot to the dead-line by Haas and a fine drop by Dickson. Haas booted two more to the deadline in the final session. Clark, Truelove stood out for Vic, while Keith and Haas played well for U.C.

Vic—Flying wings, Sirman and Doughy; halves, Bunt and Purchase; quarter, C. Ferguson; snap, Addison; insides, Truelove and Leslie; middles, Clark and Lindsay; outsides, Walls and Hayden; spares, Hendershot, Vaughan, Wylie, Searle, Colmer, and Stinson.

U.C.—Flying wings, Haas and Shulman; halves, Dickinson and Phelan; quarter, Caldecott; snap, Keith; insides, Burson and E. R. Clarke; middles, Pringle and Jones; outsides, Scott and Shaw; spares, Agnew, Hogg and Smith.

SAINTS DOWN THERAPY BY SCORE OF 32-6

St. Hilda's decisively defeated Occupational Therapy last night by a score of 32 to 6. Although Occupational Therapy were distinctly outclassed, they tried hard and it was due to the excellent work of the Saints' defence that the score was kept so low. On the other hand, the Saints' forwards were distinctly off their shots, and missed many easy attempts. Bea Symons turned in her usual good game and was given good support by the rest of her team.

Dartmouth College has completely abandoned freshman hazing. The governing body has provided severe punishment for such action, and explained its move by stating that the custom had out-grown its usefulness.

SCHOOL WHIPS PHARMACY IN GROUP RUGBY FINAL

Jr. School met Pharmacy last night in a group final of the Mulock Cup games. In the first half School scored 13 points and apparently had the better of the play. Pharmacy were held scoreless and seemed unable to get going.

In the second half Pharmacy only allowed School 2 points, these coming in the third quarter, but were unable to get more than one point themselves in the first of the fourth period. For School, Hewitt, Lichty and Hallitt were outstanding while Casteau and Walsh turned in good efforts for Pharmacy.

This win for School entitles them to get into the playoffs for the Mulock Cup, the schedule for which will be announced later. The line-up was:

School—Flying wings, Hallett, Farquhar; halves, Hewitt, Lichty; quarter Pearson; snap, Mabec; insides, Mitchell, Freeland; middles, Little, Coulter; outsides, Eaton, Bridgeland; subs, Wheaton, Ellsworth, Baker, Strachan, West, Stubbs, MacNichol, Moffatt, Wallbridge.

Pharmacy—Flying wing, Wadland; halves, Vincent, Muldoon, Walsh; snap, Theal; quarter, Clegg; insides, Swallow, Lazenby; middles, Robb, Casteau; outsides, Webb, Campbell.

FACULTY REPRESENTED IN NEXT U.C. DEBATES

Senior Undergraduates Will Also Argue on National Questions

The next meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, to be held next Wednesday, should be of unusual interest. In the past, debates have been entirely in the hands of the undergraduate members of the society, but the next meeting will show a departure from this rule. The U.C. Lit. executive have arranged to have members of the staffs in Economics and Law speak on the motion before the House. Two senior undergrads, one in Law and one in Commerce and Finance, will complete the teams. The subject for the debate has not been definitely decided, but it will have as its topic the international importance of Canada's economic and constitutional growth.

waiting to do so until after the game. Most of Saint Hilda's residents are going home, on the ground that "it's just too bad to be missing the best game of the year, but we really must see the home people between now and Christmas."

"I think most of us are keenest to see the game," one girl told "The Varsity," "but when you can do both, so much the better. It's hardest on the people who live in more distant parts of Ontario. They have to take the train on Friday in order to get to all the house-parties or weddings or whatever is going on."

Stuart, Hamlin and Morris are smarting under their defeat in the Kings-ton game, and are only too anxious for a chance to tear into the Big Blue line.

"Gib" McKelvie, of the famous 22-23-24 Dominion champions, Captain "Oot" Gourlay and Bob Ralph, will give the fans something to talk about in the line of speedy and deadly tackling. The old guard, Hastings, Nichol and Basserman, guarantee to stop anything human or otherwise that tries to get through centre.

Tickets for the game are at a premium in Kingston and every conveyance possible will be wending its way to Toronto to-day. About two thousand Queen's supporters will be there to cheer on the team.

SENIOR U.C. WOMEN OUTSCORES OITICIANS

Senior U.C. chalked up their second successive win by defeating Household Science 50-10 last night at the Lillian Massey gym. The Red and White turned in an excellent display of passing, and were able to work out their plays very well. The Dietitians put up a good fight against their more experienced opponents, but displayed a lack of shooting ability. Wilma Hazlett was high scorer, with 22 points to her credit, and Louise Crouch was outstanding in the plays. Jessie Martin was best for Household Science, and scored most of their points.

RALLYING PRINCETON STUDENTS RUN WILD

Tie Up Traffic, Wreck Statues and Theatres, Start Fires in Fun

"DOWNRIGHT MUCKERISM"

Princeton, N.J.—Forty-two Princeton undergraduates have been suspended by Dean Christian Gauss for activities after a football rally which he claimed would be "beneath the dignity of Communists".

Last Wednesday a gathering was held as a "send-off" for the team before it left for Chicago. Afterwards undergraduates wrecked a theatre booth, tied up traffic on the Lincoln highway, and dragged a statue from its pedestal. Some of the students stopped busses and rocked them back and forth until the passengers became alarmed; others started bonfires, turned on fire hydrants, and pushed parked automobiles about.

The students seemed to look upon the matter as a huge joke. Filled with the enthusiasm that their team would win, they went about oblivious of the remonstrations of the people around them. Authorities had to be communicated with and when they arrived (Continued on Page 6)

HYMN OF SUPREME SACRIFICE—

(Led by Victoria College Music Club)

O Valiant Hearts, who to your glory came,
Through dust of conflict and through battle-flame,
Tranquil you lie, your knightly virtue proved,
Your memory hallowed in the land you loved.

Proudly you gathered, rank on rank, to war,
As who had heard God's message from afar;
All you had hoped for, all you had you gave
To save mankind—yourselves you scorned to save.

Splendid you passed, the great surrender made,
Into the light that nevermore shall fade;
Deep your contentment in that blest abode,
Who wait the last trumpet-call of God.

Tricolor Fans Hold Triumphant Parades

Led by the Queen's band, about fifty Tricolour supporters, including several women, staged a magnificent parade on Saturday following the big game. The revellers fell in on Devonshire Place and proceeded along Hoskin Avenue to Queen's Park, singing lustily and calling upon other Kingstons to join them. They were chaperoned by a squad of General Draper's cavalry.

A smaller, but more amusing group was seen on College Street. About eight stalwarts, headed by a gentleman in a fur coat, kept up a series of howls and funny faces to the evident delight of the passing public. No coins, however, were thrown to the jolly visitors.

MUCH SCALPING SEEN AT SATURDAY'S GAME

Any Student Scalpers Caught Will be Disciplined by S.A.C.

POLICE KEEP LOOKOUT

There was considerable ticket-scalping before the big game Saturday. Between 12.30 and 1.00 on Saturday a "Varsity" reporter was offered two reserved seats for $10.00, standing room for $1.25, and a season ticket for $3.00. The reporter saw tickets offered to those in line for standing room, and in fact anyone who had a worried look. No actual sales were noticed.

T. A. Reed, secretary of the Athletic Association, stated that the practice of ticket-scalping was frowned on and against the law. If a specific case of a student scalping tickets were reported, action would be taken. The matter would probably be referred to the S.A.C., and some mode of discipline decided on. RESIDENCES DISMAL IN ASPECT FUNERAL AS STUDENTS DEPART

"Bahoo, Baha, I Want to Go Home," Cry Trinity Freshmen

THEOLOGS MUST WORK

Co-eds May Attend Weddings, Cocktail Parties or Dances

The men's residences of the University presented a funeral aspect over last week-end. The only sound that broke the dismal silence of the halls was the squealing floor under the steps of the "Varsity" reporter. At another residence, a telephone rang practically the whole time he was there. No freshman was on the job.

In Trinity House the freshman yell—"Bahoo, Baha, I want to go home to Ma and Pa, Freshman, Freshman, Rah, Rah, Rah," was almost literally interpreted. Only three freshmen out of fifty remained over the week-end. In the rest of the house about 60 per cent. went home. Those who stayed in residence, either lived too far away, had something better to do, or studied. Among those who studied were the ones taking M.A. work and divinity. These, according to Dr. Kingston, Dean of Residence, were finding it pretty difficult, and needed the week-end.

When asked by "The Varsity" just what "enjoying the week-end" meant, a girl from U.C. replied: "First, going to the game, and if you did not do that, you went tramping or riding. And then there were tea-dances, and (Continued on Page 6)

University Press Club Hears Sports Editor of Globe

Mr. T. A. Munns, assistant Sports Editor of the "Globe" addressed the members of the "Varsity" staff at a University Press Club luncheon held at Hart House on Friday last.

Mr. Munns proved an interesting speaker, relating many humorous incidents which took place during his ten years experience on the "Globe" sporting staff.

He gave the staff several important "don'ts" and answered many questions regarding sports writing.

Stadium Set On Fire Origin Is Unknown

A fire of unknown origin occurred Saturday in the small covered stand at the Stadium immediately after the game. The explanation offered was that a lighted cigarette had been dropped through the floor board, igniting the combustible material below. The fire was quickly extinguished with a couple of buckets of water brought in by the police.

RECORD CROWD LOOKS ON

Bell's Brilliant Playing Unable to Stem Tricolour Attack

By Tory Fleming

Prospects for a U. of T. intercollegiate title this season were just about wiped out on Saturday when the Blue and White went down to a 12 to 5 defeat before a smashing Tricolour attack. The result came as a surprise and a great disappointment to most of the 20,000 fans who jammed the Bloor Street Stadium to set a new all-time Canadian attendance record. Before the game everything pointed to a Varsity victory. On their showing against the same team in Kingston when they demonstrated a clear superiority and with the squad at full strength for the first time this season, Blackwell's men were favourites to win the game and the championship.

It was a different story, however, once the game started. The Blue defence crumpled before the opening Tricolour onslaught in the first quarter and Queen's ran up a total of nine points to gain a lead which Varsity were never able to overcome. Only in the second and last quarters did they show flashes of their real form, and they were outplayed in nearly all departments for the greater part of the struggle. The main cog in the Blue machine failed to function as usual when the great Jack Sinclair had an off day, although he kicked all five of his team's points. Jack was outbouted by Carter on most of the exchanges and the greatest scoring threat of the team was removed. It must be said, however, that the "T" ace was suffering from injuries which prevented him from giving one of his great displays, and in the final quarter he had to be removed from the game, Richardson replacing him. With Sinclair in form the result might have been different.

Ancient Engineers Toike Oike As Fans Celebrate Derby Day

By J. D. Arnup

Out of the gloom into which the University has been plunged, rises that scintillating backfield wonder, Billy Bell, the gridiron hero for 1930. Hats off to the Little Warrior!

The band played "God Save the King", and twelve thousand heads showed themselves—bald heads, grey heads, red heads, curly heads, and heads . . .

The students in the crush seats sang their usual marching song for those who dared to cross the field.

Press reports of this game should be "hot stuff". The "Varsity" staff writers sat in front of a huge gas heater. What's that about hot air?

Did you see the new ladies' usher? We wish we had a new hat. But not a derby. . .

All persons wearing derbies should print "Poison" in plain white letters on the top, and then wear them into section "R". If this doesn't work, try jumping off a cliff.

School of Science as usual demolished forty beers before and after each quarter. The Toike Oike (or is it Toike oke?) were given with true fervour, aided by all the S.P.S. grads since Noah headed the course in Architecture.

The game wasn't the only thing that was tight.

The inebriated Kingstonian aroused more interest and laughter than any skit has ever done, and young Stanley Laird, the half-pint mascot made the biggest Varsity gain of the day when he pinched that much-abused derby to hoof it around, to the evident delight of the spectators.

Bell used the Blue team for a dressing room in the third quarter. His shoulder straps were slipping.

"Curly" Graham, the most famous cheer leader Varsity ever had, and the holder of all intercollegiate popularity records, came back to lead the most torrid "Toronto" that has ever shaken the Stadium.

ARMISTICE

Twelve years ago the guns stopped. Twelve years ago the last shot was fired in the war to end wars. The world had been made safe for democracy. Might was no longer right. The day of bloodshed and inhumanity was over. The weak and the oppressed were freed from their bondage. The nations entered a new era of peace and goodwill, where reason reigned supreme over primitive passions, and war was an unthinkable thing.

The interim has been filled with voices, . . . voices of statesmen, telling one another, within easy reach of the ear of the all-powerful press, that a new spirit was abroad—the spirit of arbitration—the spirit of Locarno. Beside the lake of Geneva, with beautiful optimism, learned councillors have sought to erect a world-structure of international brotherhood upon a foundation of nationalism and suspicion. Delegates from the great powers have sat in the capitol singing anthems of armanent reduction to the accompaniment of jingling spurs and rattling swords in the lobbies.

The spirit of Locarno will seem a puny and ridiculous thing on that bitter dawn when the inevitable harvest of the spirit of Versailles must be reaped.

In our own country to-day we thrill to a vigorous catch-phrase: "Canada first—the Empire second—and the rest of the world after that!" The attitude embodied in this fine slogan, we are told, is based upon the laws of nature. It is based upon the instinct of self-preservation, first of all; the instinct of self-perpetuation and the family idea, secondly; and the tribal instinct, thirdly. The "rest of the world" is thrown in to show how far our civilization has advanced.

Murder is based upon the laws of nature, too, but there are few today who are willing to defend murder as an institution.

The spirit of Versailles is the only possible political expression of an economic organization which enshrines the competitive system because it is based upon the laws of nature. Our militarists are not to be held ultimately responsible for the suave and plausible nationalism which prevails today. These gentlemen are merely suffering from the display complex. But we shudder to think what sentence would be passed upon our practical economists if they were called to the bar of the world's unnumbered dead who perished in a war to end war.

We may indulge in all the pious platitudes we like, during our observance of Armistice Day. We may even let fall a few tears during our moments of silence. But we only fool ourselves if we believe that the spirit which exists among the nations today is the spirit of world brotherhood, of peace and goodwill.

Even the Christian Church—in most of its branches, at least,—having in the last great hour of need betrayed its Lord and its message, will do it again in favour of the existing order. Brought into rational alignment with the latest biological trend, and made safe for the service clubs, this powerful organization will once more stand by while its Christ is crucified upon a hill of hate.

Carven upon the very stones about us as we commemorate the sacrifice of those who died that the world might enter its new era, are expressions of the passions which prevailed when the dogs of war were last unleashed.

"Take up our quarrel with the foe," is an everlasting reminder in our own memorial arch, that men have died in vain and that the spirit we thought had prevailed is nothing more than a foolish dream, in the face of existing conditions.

In our Great Hall of Hart House are displayed the crests of all the great universities of the world—save those of the Central Powers . . . and these are omitted as a memorial to our fallen brave. A delicate and fitting memorial indeed, to the men who laid their good lives down that the nations might enter their era of eternal peace and brotherhood!

Let us celebrate our Armistice if we will . . . but let us not talk of Peace while the voice of the world about us is pitched on a note which tells us that our Peace is an empty mockery and a sham.

Friday Afternoon Recital

A small, but appreciative audience heard Mr. Frederic Winfield, violinist, and Mr. Weldon Kilburn, pianist, and organist of St. Alban's Cathedral, give this week's program.

For regular attendants the Brahms' Sonata in G major was a rather unexpected treat. With the broad lines and coloured depth so characteristic of this composer, the andante sweeps along with many curious rhythms and progressions in sheer beauty. The second movement, andante tranquillo, is unusual in interspersing the lyric subject material with two vivace movements. The allegretto makes very considerable technical demands and seems rather less effective.

Mr. Kilburn with considerable verve and insight, gave three piano numbers. Two Beethoven minuets were pleasing, combining very satisfactorily 18th century character with an essentially piano quality. A Dohnanyi Rhapsodie is interesting if of doubtful artistic value.

Three numbers for violin and piano completed the programme. The well-known Romance by Wieniawski, and an aria from a Saint-Saens opera, the French-Canadian folk-song, A la Claire Fontaine, with one of those unobtrusive and excellent accompaniments which Dr. MacMillan writes so well and the encore, Debussy's En Bateau—all found a great welcome and were well handled.

It is interesting that Dr. Fyfe, principal of Queen's University, was an enthusiastic listener.

U. C. Alumnae Dramatics

Not for a long time has an English drawing-room comedy been so successfully presented in Hart House Theatre as was To Have the Honour, by A. A. Milne, last Friday and Saturday by the University College Alumnae Association.

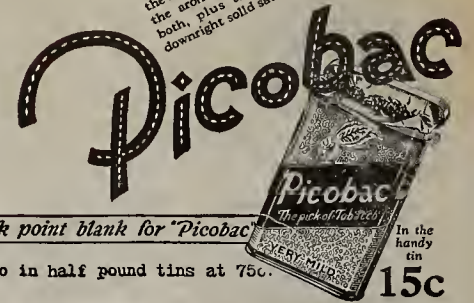

Mr. and Mrs. Brown, growing tired of married life, separate. Five years later they meet again in the midst of a set of typical English county gentle folk, to find each other enjoying life, one as Prince Michael of a mythical country, the other as Jennifer, widow of a mythical General Bulger. After satisfying complications they agree to try life together again.

Agnes Muldrew was superb in a role that admirably suited her capabilities. In five years we have not seen her do better work. John Patton, playing opposite, was dragged to success by her example in spite of occasional forgotten lines and slowness on cues.

Brendon Mulholland and F. J. Mallett were good because less themselves than usual. Eleanor Barton was a surprise as sweet sixteen and delightfully demure. H. E. Hitchman was quite good in a more serious role than he usually gets. His dark make-up was interesting. Margaret Tytler and Alison Ewart were the best of the rest. The whole cast did good work.

A great improvement over last year's production, and a nice piece of work by Edgar Stone.

DISASTROUS FIRST QUARTER SPELLED 12-5 DEFEAT FOR BLUES

CHRISTMAS TOUR FOR RUGBY TEAM PLANNED

British Rugby Team May Visit British Columbia for Exhibition Games

EXPENSES NOT ASSURED

The new departure of the British Rugby Club is the possibility of a tour in British Columbia during the Christmas vacation. This proposal was brought before the club at a dinner in Hart House last Thursday evening by S. Archbold, who has been corresponding unofficially with members of the B.C. Rugby Union in Vancouver.

Rugby is the major game in British Columbia, and it has been the custom for over 30 years to entertain a visiting team during the Christmas-New Year's season when very large crowds attend the matches.

Up to the present Dalhousie is the only eastern team which has taken advantage of this.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

What was the matter with Varsity? That is the question that everyone has been asking ever since the Blue and White lost their best chance of winning an intercollegiate title since 1924. Prior to the game the Toronto team were favourites to win. Betting odds varied from 3 to 2 to 4 to 3 on Varsity. The U. of T. squad was expected to come through with a win in view of the decisive beating they handed the Tricolour in Kingston.

When Varsity went to the Limestone City they hoped to win. Saturday they saw no reason to think they couldn't do it again. Perhaps they under-estimated the never-say-die spirit of the Men of Batstone. Queen's knew they had to win! And they outfought the Blues. The bitterest pill that all University of Toronto supporters, graduates and undergraduates, must swallow, is that Varsity could not match the fighting spirit of the invaders and that this is the consensus of opinion of the majority of the largest crowd that ever witnessed a sports event in this Dominion and a feature of the game that was emphasized by sports writers generally.

On the day's play, the better team won. There is no doubt about that. However, Queen's undoubtedly had the "breaks", and they passed up no opportunities to take advantage of them. In the disastrous first quarter Jimmie Sinclair muffed the ball on a buck and the Tricolour recovered. That put them in the driver's seat from the start and enabled Gilmore to score a beautiful placement kick. Then later in the same period Keith's wretched snap on the Blues' 5-yard line gave Queen's possession and from there Mungovan went over for the touchdown. The other point Queen's scored in that quarter they earned. So completely did Queen's outplay the locals in the first frame that the Blues never gained possession of the ball in their opponents' territory.

Varsity outscored Queen's in three quarters of the game and except for the eight points indirectly due to fumbles in the first canto the final count would probably have stood at 5 to 4. Varsity lost 15 yards by penalties, while Queen's lost 55 yards, and on one occasion, the ball. Sinclair and Bell had more success at running back kicks than did their Queen's rivals, Gilmore and Carter, making 108 yards to their 47. Billy Bell accounted for 81 yards himself. Both teams made 7 fumbles, Queen's recovered all but 2, while Varsity only recovered 3.

Except for Jimmy Sinclair's touchdown against McGill in Montreal, Jack Sinclair has scored all of Varsity's points this year. He has been the Blues' greatest scoring threat. But last Saturday he had an off day. Injuries no doubt had much to do with his poor showing. Yet he cannot be held responsible for the downfall of the team. His wings were slow in getting down under kicks and were taken out of the play regularly by the Tricolour line-men.

Too much praise cannot be given to Billy Bell. He was the outstanding performer of the struggle and his breath-taking running catches which were invariably followed by a substantial gain, brought the huge crowd to its feet. His run of 35 yards was the longest of the game, and his catching was well-nigh faultless. At all times he was fighting against heavy odds and he refused to leave the field after being laid out in the third quarter from a tackle by "Gib" McKelvey.

TURKEY TOSSING SCHOOL REVEL IN LIVELY PARTY

Turkey feathers flew on Thursday night at Parkdale Canoe Club, when ST2 S.P.S. held their "turkey trot" for 150 Schoolmen. The Lucky Number dance featured one 14 lb. Thanksgiving dinner on the hoof which was tossed into the middle of the scrimmage and emerged a few minutes later pinioned under the arm of the winner. There were no casualties, and the novelty made quite a hit. The turkey, however, refused to express an opinion fit for publication.

VARSITY JUNIORS WIN OUTMATCH RED MEN

Only Undefeated U. of T. Men Outclass McGill Squad in Every Play

ARNUP INDIVIDUAL STAR

Varsity juniors, winners of the local group, and the only Blue team remaining undefeated, advanced one step nearer to the Intercollegiate title by trouncing McGill juniors 14 to 3 at the Stadium on Saturday. The game was a sudden death affair with the winners playing Queen's here next Saturday. McGill had previously defeated Loyola, while Varsity eliminated St. Mike's.

Varsity clearly outplayed the Montreal squad throughout, and unleashed a scoring punch which the Redmen could not match. McGill were on the defensive early in the first quarter when Leachman ran a kick back 25 yards through a maze of tacklers and Arnup kicked one 50 yards to put play on the 1 yard line. When Craig touched a punt, Varsity was given the ball, and Arnup promptly booted to Huot for a rouge.

In the second canto Leachman ran 20 yards and Bean blocked a kick, recovering on the 25 yard line. Watson, Webber and Dennison made yards and Oille's inside kick went for a rouge. Arnup's long punt put McGill on their 5 yard line, and a minute later he ran a kick to the 25 yard line from where he added another point. The little half then came back with a 40 yard run, and "Big Train" Watson blocked a McGill kick. The huge middle plunged it over himself for the first touchdown of the game. An offside by the Varsity boys gave Huot a chance to boot to the deadline for McGill's first point. Henderson's tackling was a feature of this quarter which ended with the score 8-1.

To open the last half Arnup brought Varsity into scoring position by galloping to the Red 25 yard line, and on Oille's inside kick, Gordie Keith fell on Gilmore's fumble for another major score. McGill fought back hard and after a series of heavy plunges, Byers kicked to Leachman who was graced for Montreal's second point. Then Arnup punted one 60 yards and it rolled 30 more behind McGill's line for a point, a mammoth kick. In the final stanza the Red team rallied to hold the winners scoreless, although Webber once broke away for 25 yards. Craig, elouaged McGill half, redeemed himself for several fumbles by a 25 yard run, and he was able to kick for a point to end the scoring.

Harold Arnup, diminutive booting satellite, was the individual star of the tussle, but the entire team played heads-up rugby, and held command at all times. Coach Bales and Mgr. Charlie Vaughan have a great team, and should retain the title. McGill showed a well balanced squad, but Transcending any interest in games of their own at this time of year in the minds of most co-eds who take an interest in sports, is the fate of Varsity's big football team. The sincere feeling of disappointment which pervaded the campus in general at the showing against Queen's, is reflected just as much by the co-eds as by the most enthusiastic supporters among the men.

At least from the co-eds point of view, it was rather the weak display which the team made than the actual loss of the game which was disappointing. And the traditional lack of knowledge of the game which is attributed to girls in general was missing almost entirely.

Although the intercollegiate basketball season is not yet half over, there is already a great deal of speculation about Varsity's chances in the intercollegiate tournament. Practices will not begin until after Christmas, and the games will be played this year in Kingston about the first of March.

Of last year's championship team there are five still at college. The forward line is still intact, but all the defence except Jean Allen have graduated. This means that the coach will have to concentrate almost entirely on the team's defensive play, since the forwards have played together now for two years.

It is rather interesting to note that three of the intercollegiate players are now starring for University College Seniors. These are Wilma Hazlitt, twice intercollegiate captain; Louise Crouch, forward; and Jean Allen, defence. Eleanor Sedgewick, side-centre, captains Senior Vic's entry in the intercollegiate series, while Sally Ballard, sub forward, is one of the main cogs in the St. Hilda's machine.

Besides these five, there are two girls who were on the intercollegiate team of 1929 who did not play last year and are eligible again. Betty Thomas, who jumped for the 1929 aggregation and Bea Symons, who was sub forward on the same team, are both expected to play again, and they should be of material assistance in building up a championship team.

Senior XV Defeat Lansdowne; Seconds Down Bank of Montreal

HARD FIGHT FOR SENIORS

The Varsity English Rugby Club scored a double victory on Saturday. The senior XV defeated Lansdowne 19-8 and the 2nd XV the Bank of Montreal 3-0. Both teams were much below strength, many men being away for the Thanksgiving holiday.

In the senior game Lansdowne kicked off. The ball was caught by MacLean, the Varsity skipper, who gained considerable ground before passing. The play for a time was in midfield, both teams having an equal share of the game. MacLean, as stand-off half, made repeated break aways, but the the trip. The B.C. Rugby Union is prepared to guarantee $3,000 and half of the gate receipts. It is not yet known how the club will obtain the balance.

Mr. Archbold, who is a member of the Executive Committee of the Ontario Union, reports the official sanction of that body, and also states that the matter is before the University Athletic Directorate.

Father T. O'R. Boyle, the senior coach of the Varsity team, is very enthusiastic about the trip. He says the fighting spirit of the team is unparalleled in his experience of the game, and with hard, concentrated training the team should be well matched with any in British Columbia. Father Boyle says that Capt. Johnny MacLean is the greatest Rugby player in Canada to-day and that he would star on any team.

The British Columbia Union plays under New Zealand rules and 45 minute halves, making perfect training essential.

VARSITY HOPES LOWERED AS QUEEN'S TAKE GAME

on the play the one bright spot in the day was the great work of Billy Bell. Once more the diminutive star proved that he does not know the meaning of the word quit. Subjected to a hard battering by the Queen's tacklers, he never stopped trying and made the biggest individual gains of the day. Fitzpatrick also deserves a mention for some nice runs. Fitz was a continual threat and was closely watched by the Tricolour wings. The work of Adams and Jack White was outstanding on the line, both defensively and on the attack.

The first quarter caused the downfall of the Blues. With the wind behind them Queen's forced the issue from the kick-off. Jim Sinclair's fumble on the twenty-yard line gave them possession and Carter booted to Jack Sinclair, who ran it out five yards. This just delayed the first score, however, as Gilmore kicked a beautiful placement over from the thirty-five yard line. Varsity seemed disorganized in this period and play was almost entirely in their territory. Another attempt at a placement from Gilmore's toe went for a rouse when Bell was downed behind the line. An exchange of kicks forced the Blues back to the ten yard line. Then came the break which just about decided the issue beyond all doubt. On the third down a bad snap gave Sinclair no chance to get his kick away and the Tricolour secured ten yards out. Mungovan went over from there for a major score which Carter failed to convert. From then on Varsity were fighting in a losing cause and the big lead seemed to take the steam out of their attacks.

When the teams turned around in the second period the Blues raised the hopes of their supporters by playing a little of the rugby they are capable of. A great run of thirty-five yards by Bell gave them their first chance and Sinclair booted a long one over the line and Gilmore played it safe, letting the ball roll to the deadline for a single. Three more points were added in the same quarter when Sinclair dropped one over the cross-bar from twenty yards out. The ball hit a Queen's player but for once the breaks were with Varsity and it went over. It looked for a while as though the team had struck its stride at last.

The third stanza removed all hope, however. Once more the Tricolour got the jump at the start and Varsity were on the defensive. Gilmore lost no time in adding another three points on a placement. Towards the end of the period the Blues began to wake up a little and when Adams recovered Gilmore's fumble in Queen's territory it gave them a chance to get within scoring distance. Sinclair took one of Carter's hoists at centre and returned on the run for a point on touch-in-goal. This ended the scoring for the game and from then on it was just a case of Varsity battling desperately and hoping for breaks. The final quarter saw the play mostly in Queen's ground, but with a seven point deficit the "T" cause was pretty hopeless. They had a royal chance on one occasion when one of Carter's kicks was blocked and Fitzpatrick booted it up the field, but Stuart beat everyone else to the ball and a possible touchdown went up the flue. The Blues tried the old inside kick game in the dying moments but like most attempts along this line they were not successful. Carter's long hoists kept the Tricolour out of danger and relieved the pressure when the Blue and White threatened.

"Gaa" Mungovan, at quarter, "Red" Gilmore, the kicking of Howie Carter and the superb tackling of the Tricolour wings, were the main factors in Queen's winning effort.

High spots in the game as heard in the co-ed rooters' section:

Before the teams arrive—Do you know Doris says Jean told her that Dot Thing-na-jig—you know who I mean—has had three invitations to the Masquerade . . . my dear! With a map like hers! How does she do it? I'd like to see the men . . . Once! Here am I ready for a trip to the north pole and it's perfect for a May-day picnic. I feel like a turkey all ready for Monday's dinner. (Note the frequent allusion to rugby and the high tension of excitement regarding the game) . . . Bing! Hurrah for the cheerleaders! Finished already? We want Earl Davidson! . . . Oh! Here's the team!

First Period—4-0! What a mess . . . and to think I passed up a chance—Wheel that's Jimmy's neck! The mean brute, to do that to our Jimmy!

Second Period—Mungovan out! It serves him right, after that touch . . .

A "e'mon Varsity"? Earl would yell "right" when they've just knocked somebody out cold . . . Billie Bell this time? If he has to give up I'm going home right now.

Half-time—Oh, Curly!

Third Period—Fight to the eyeballs! Isn't he a scream? Not tight? No, I suppose there aren't many could turn hand-springs like that at any time. Whoops! . . . What's the excitement? Jimmy's rouged? I don't believe it, and besides you couldn't see it from there if he were.

Last Period—How can they kick out of the middle of that mob . . . allowed to for an offside kick? It went cock-eyed all right, but how do they know it's going that way when they decide to let them kick it? . . . That's about the tenth Queen's man out in the last five minutes—why don't they just say they don't want to play any more? . . . All over?

What a washout!

inpromptu fray became the referee. But it seems that all rules were tossed to the winds for the hall porter's endeavors to call time were all in vain. The bout was called off after the second fall because neither contestant was able to continue the gruelling contest.

Hall Porter Referees High Spirited Scuffle

A most unusual exhibition of wrestling took place in front of the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House recently. The participants were, slightly merry, graduates aspiring to wrestling fame. The shorter of the two charged the other with the famous "Sonnenberg Flying Tackle" in this manner the first fall for Sonnenberg occurred in five seconds. This, however, didn't lower his opponent's spirits.

The hall porter in trying to stop this

RECORD CROWD SEATED WITHOUT ANY CONFUSION

150 Ushers Guide Thousands to Proper Seats in Stadium

Despite the fact that Saturday produced the largest crowd in history, an estimated attendance of 20,600 was seated without the slightest confusion. Those who tried in vain to find their seats in the useless stands at Kingston appreciated more than ever the expert handling of crowds which is displayed by the Stadium ushers. Many of them were forced to go without their lunch, but 150 of them guided the huge throng to their seats without a hitch. Many favourable comments were heard, including that of G. Ross Workman.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

"Another Nemo" Indignant

Editor, "The Varsity":

First of all, Mr. Editor: My thanks go, through you, to Mr. Krehm for paying me the double compliment of selecting my letter to which to make his reply, of the two published last Monday, and of asking interested parties, inferredly including myself, to continue the discussion. My thanks go also to "Apinakaapo" (spelling?), Victoria's excellent humorist, who carried out the purpose of my letter in a far better way than likely would be possible to my too-serious mental make-up. That purpose was merely to level a little very lightweight chaff at a blast of oratory which went off prematurely because of the orator's lack of acquaintance with personalities of the talking screen. . . . I certainly had no intention of precipitating a weighty debate on the merits of Socialist Government, about which I know far less, probably, than our friend does about the theatre.

Now, like Mark Twain's Alfred Temple in "Tom Sawyer", I'm going to quit like a "coward and a pup"; my course will not give me time to pore over ponderous tomes in search of facts and figures not relevant to itself. But before I leave Mr. Krehm undisputed "lord of all he surveys", I'd like to have a last "go" or two. The first is from the depths of my political ignorance. Underneath our friend's grand and scenically magnificent mountain range of statistics, I'm going to put a tiny, ugly bomb, which is this: Why does it seem that every successive unbiased visitor to Soviet Russia, on his return, has found its social conditions just a bit worse, its people just a bit more unhappy, than the visitor before? My other word is a bit of advice I think fair to Mr. Krehm, and it is that he cut out the "mud-slinging". I mean that the use of such invective as "dung-hill", "contemptible little henchmen", "imbecile", "fastidious fool", which he sprinkles with prodigality, while they disturb their object not a whit, detract from and cheapen a style which, seriously, shows great oratorical possibilities. Now, "from falling hands I throw the torch" to the students of Political Economy, the very end and purpose of whose course is the study of subjects of government—as for the torch, they can catch or fumble it, as they please.

(Signed) Another Nemo.

P.S.—I will not again write over the signature "Another Nemo". My purpose in using it has been merely to show on which side my sympathies lay in this particular case, and not to violate the copyright of your truly excellent "with the Theatres" columnist.—A.N.

adian rugby. The way the team should get over this is by having a two hour fumble practice before every game. No player should be allowed to hang onto the ball once it touches his hands.

After such a workout it would be practically impossible to drop the pig-skin during the game.

C—C

The top row of seats in one of the temporary stands, (Section 11), gave way just before the game started and hurled its occupants, including some women, about eight or ten feet to the ground. This accident might have resulted not only in someone breaking a back but also missing the game entirely.

C—C

The stadium officials should not be allowed to get away with such careless, slipshod work. And besides, no intercollegiate game is by any means worth risking one's neck to see.

C—C

We wonder if the R.M.C. students have to wear those costumes as a punishment.

—Gaspard McGuffey.

WITH THE THEATRES

Our pet peeves: the silly music in Scotland Yard; the wasted chances for making something good out of The Sea God; the general inanity of The Storm; and a short illusion-shattering news reel of George Bernard Shaw making a fool of himself at the Tivoli.

Imperial.

Scotland Yard. (1). — Ooh-lala! You'll have to polish up your French before seeing this one. An excellent piece of work all round—good plot, good acting, good dialogue. Edmund Lowe gets through the dual role of crook and gentleman with flying colours, and Joan Bennett is a charming Englishwoman. Sloppy music disturbed the love scenes. Be sure to watch the London pickpockets act polite. Vaudeville is lousy. The only kick we got out of sitting third row front was watching the singer manipulate his tongue. Nice work, that.

Loew's.

Whoopie. (1) or (2). The best musical show to come to the screen. Flo Ziegfeld helped with a host of Eddie Cantor is the chief reason, but his pretty girls. We could not help noticing how skinny some of their legs were; and we grew tired of the star on the floor around which they kept dancing. Otherwise, no complaints. This is, of course, the second week for Whoopie at Loew's.

Shea's.

The Storm. (-1). Cast composed of two he-men, a girl, two extras and a snow storm. The two men fight over the girl, with different motives, of course. The storm confines them to the elaborately furnished and brightly lighted cabl. Lupe Velez is the girl and is definitely good. The snow storm is also good. Olsen and Johnson more than make up for a weak picture by their stupendously silly vaudeville act. By far the best in some time. Hope the morality squad keeps away.

Tivoli.

Africa Speaks. (2). Paul Hoeffer and a companion journeyed for fourteen months right across equatorial Africa to take these pictures of human and animal natives of the jungle and plain. A new high-water mark for travel films. I think it is the first time the death of a man has ever been shown and acknowledged on the screen in a feature picture. The sound recording is excellent. Wonder if any of this picture was faked? Ranked so high because the best of its class.

Uptown.

The Sea God. (0). Cast composed of two he-men, a girl, two extras and some Solomon Island cannibals. The two men fight over the girl with different motives, of course. The cannibals kill off the wicked men and somehow spare the good ones. Fay Wray is the girl and is not bad. Eugene Palette as a fat, honest sailor, is not bad either. Richard Arlen, the hero, wears a fine make-up. A lot of swell ideas go to waste in this show through poor direction, etc. —Nemo.

forwards did not take sufficient advantage of his openings.

Lansdowne scored the first try when they blocked a kick from Franklin, the full back; the try was unconverted, making the score 3-0 for Lansdowne.

Varsity immediately retaliated with repeated forward rushes, forcing the Irishmen behind their own 25 yard line. In a kick and follow-up play MacLean scored between the posts. The try was converted by Archbold. Score, 5-3 for Varsity.

With the Lansdowne team fighting hard to regain the lead, the game tightened up and the play saw-sawed up and down the field; the forwards seemed to keep the ball too much at their feet, but when they did let it out Varsity showed superior combination in the back field, and several times just missed scoring. Half time found the play in midfield.

Soon after the play was resumed, Lansdowne scored a well merited try which was converted. The Blue team had not been following up as hard as they should. Score 8-5.

The game then became a fight, Varsity keeping the Irishmen on the defensive. Telford, who was one of the best forwards on the field, came within an ace of scoring when he followed up a three-quarter movement and got within three yards of the opposing goal line. The Irishmen obtaining possession of the ball, brought the play into the Varsity 25 and it was only the splendid tackling of MacLean and Grimby which prevented them from scoring. At this point Archbold, intercepting a pass, made a sensational run of 85 yards to score a touchdown between the posts. He converted his own try. Score 10-8 for Varsity.

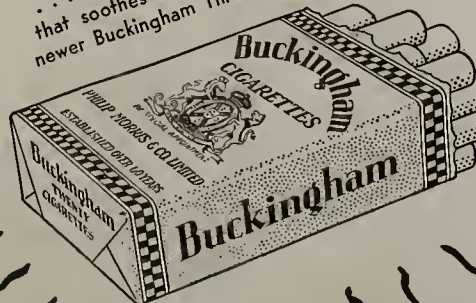

After this the play was evenly divided between the two teams and the final whistle found Varsity attacking.

The senior Varsity XV was as follows: Franklin, full back; Archbold, Kinsley, Bull, Bridge, Crany, three-quarter; MacLean (capt.), Lawson, halves; Telford, Allin, MacFie, Up-riehard, Grimby, Dunn, forwards.

The second team's 3-0 victory over the heavier, more experienced Bank of Montreal XV was very gratifying and gives great promise for next year's intercollegiate team.

for scalpers," he said.
The inspector in charge of the police at the stadium said that scalpers would certainly be locked up. If the charge were proved the scalper would be sentenced to jail or else a good stiff fine imposed with a jail sentence if unable to pay.

One student tried to scalp tickets in the sacred precincts of Hart House. His attempt met with little success and he was requested to discontinue his efforts or at least to scalp elsewhere. In the main, however, ticket-scalpers, aware, no doubt, of the penalties they were incurring, carried on their business as much as possible "sub rosa".

EXPLAINS ATTITUDE ON STADIUM LABOUR

Manager Asserts Unemployed Useless for Special Recent Work

TWD TICKETS GIVEN

The work of unloading and arranging the benches at the Varsity Stadium could not be done by the unemployed of the city despite the exigencies of the times, stated Mr. Ross Workman, Manager of the Stadium, when interviewed by the "Varsity" in reference to a letter which appeared in the issue of Friday 7th.

H.M.S., in his letter to the Editor showed an ignorance of facts which in Mr. Workman's opinion was only exceeded by his presumptuousness. Mr. Workman pointed out that it was necessary that the handling of the benches be done by the ushers in order that they might become acquainted with their locations.

Mr. Workman was loud in his praises of his staff of students who seek in ushering to do their bit for their teams for no emolument except the glory of wearing the sweater of their Alma Mater and louder still in his denunciation of the interfering meddler who took it upon himself to criticize his actions.

The stipend for this "unskilled" labour which was outside the ordinary sphere of the ushers' work was two tickets to the oncoming onslaught between Ontario's hereditary rivals, Queens and Varsity which would be of little value to one of our unemployed.

SPLENDID GIFT MADE OF LARGE SHINY MUG

Winners of Inter-Knox Game Presented with a Memento

LOVING CUP DRAWS THANKS

"On such a momentous and moving occasion as this," began Rev. Frank Baird, in making an impromptu speech from the head table in the Knox College dining hall last Thursday evening, "I can scarcely express my feelings in mere words." The speech from the dean of residence at Knox College came as a sequel to an inter-house rugby game played in the cold grey dawn of that morning, when East House succeeded in downing their rivals of Centre House by a 2-1 score. The speech was made at the request of Mr. James Munro, chairman of the House Committee, who had at the close of the evening meal delved into the depths of a large and bulky package and exposed a shiny and somewhat large mug to the great delight of the students.

Mr. Munro, after the gales of laughter had subsided, announced that the mug was being presented to the victorious team by the notorious Owls Club, a body of residence night-hawks. The dean of residence was then called upon to make the presentation, which he did in a very fitting and jolly manner. Dr. "Wally" Graham, dean of East House, accepted the cup and made a few pointed and witty remarks. He reminded his listeners in a crude way of the usefulness of the mug in question, stating that nevertheless "Old Jerry" was a loving cup to him. Since he had heard previous to the game that Centre House men were offering odds as heavy as 6 to 1, he was afraid that some of them might be financially embarrassed and suggested that the cup be passed around and any offerings received be devoted to their relief. Dr. Graham reminded the men that it was not out of the ordinary for the best house to perform such a feat as they had that morning, that in fact the one defeat that East House had received some years ago was due to indisposition or illness of some sort on the part of some of the members of the East House team. Such interhouse competition, in his opinion, did much to promote a spirit of fellowship among the men in residence, and he would like to see it carried out in other lines of sport.

How to Write a Letter Home After You've Been on the Roam

By C. L. Coburn

"Dear Maw'n Paw, I meant to write you last week but I was so busy after I came back from the game at Montreal I hadn't time You mean you didn't get back in time. Tell them how you got drunk after the game and spent the night down on Larriere Street, and woke up in the morning with all your money gone. Tell them how you got pinched in Colonel for speeding on the way home, and spent two days cleaning stables for the Chief of Police because you couldn't pay a fine. Tell them how you washed dishes in a cafe all one morning to pay for your breakfast. Tell them but what's the use? They wouldn't understand. Change cars. "I went to the Stadium and saw a game of tiddleywinks Saturday Yea. A bright guy you are. Paid a ticket-scalper two-fifty for a ticket and then spent all your time looking at a drunk instead of watching the game. Maybe you didn't know the game had started. Thought it was some kind of a burlesque skit down there. Maybe you thought it was a juggling contest. Change cars. "I meant to come home Saturday, but I had a lot of work to do, and spent my allowance on books Do you think they'll swallow that? Name ten people who would swallow that. Would an ostrich? Would Jonah's whale? Do you believe that about Jonah? Don't you think it sounds kinda fishy? Maybe he was writing a letter home. Who cares? Change cars. "My expenses have been rather heavy lately. . . . That's once you told the truth. Whynell didja bet that guy twenty dollars we'd win? What did you know about it? Do you know the players? D'y'even know the rules? Be a man! Tell them you gambled away all your money and couldn't afford to buy a railway ticket. "I've been gambling away all my money Don't be so damn dumb! rived, they experienced much difficulty in stopping the students. Finally, however, they were dispersed.

When interviewed by press reporters, Dean Gauss seemed indignant about the behaviour of his students. "From the standpoint of those who committed them, some of these acts were worse than lawless," said the Dean. "They were also in the highest degree gentlemanly. It is doubtful whether Communists or gangsters would have engaged in some of them."

Commenting on the bus-rocking incident, Dean Gauss termed it as "downright muckerrism".

Our suspicions as to the section just south of the Press box were justified, when the heavens opened at half-time and a shower of peanuts deluged the throng below.

SOUND ROYAL SALUTE

Numerous Organizations Give

The University of Toronto remembered those of her sons who died in France with impressive solemnity yesterday, when undergraduates, faculty and officials attended the Armistice Day Service at the Soldiers' Tower.

Led by the Victoria College Music Club, the throng sang the "Hymn of Supreme Sacrifice". This was followed by two minutes' silence and then units of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps and the C.O.T.C. band gave the Royal Salute. The Reveille rang out from the belfry of the tower.

Canon Cody, chairman of the Board of Governors of the University, pronounced the benediction. The names of the fallen were read out by R. D. Hume, president of the Alumni Federation. Hon. George S. Henry, provincial minister of highways, was present, representing the Province of Ontario. Sir Robert Falconer was also present, but took no active part in the service. The C.O.T.C. band were under Major J. Roy Cockburn.

Following the service James Richardson, University carillonist, gave a concert on the bells of the Soldiers' Tower.

Wreaths and other floral tributes were presented by the following organizations: The Province of Ontario, University of Toronto, Alumni Association, Athletic Association, Students' Administrative Council, Ontario Dental Association, Canadian Army (Continued on Page 4)

ESTABLISH NEW CLUB IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

Old Association Supplanted by the Commerce Club

ENTHUSIASM EXPRESSED

At an open meeting for all years of the Political Science course, held in Baldwin House, room 1, Thursday, Nov. 6, it was decided that a Political Science Club should be organized. Records of such a club existing in the University in 1921 are available when the course of Commerce and Finance was in its infancy. Since that time, however, the club sponsored by the latter course has assumed importance while the former ceased to exist. The constitution of the club, passed at the meeting, opens the club to all years of the course. A President shall be chosen from and by the fourth year, and with him on the executive shall be representatives from the first, second, third, and graduate years. The representative of the third year shall automatically become Secretary-Treasurer of the club. Meetings shall be held every three weeks and at the call of the Executive. Emphasis shall be placed on discussion, and outstanding men shall be asked to address the club throughout the year.

The open meeting was well attended, and the enthusiasm there expressed, augurs well for the success of the project.

Canny Chess Champion Creates Crucial Crisis

Boris Blumkin, brilliant young chess player, will demonstrate his ability at a simultaneous exhibition to-night at Hart House. Mr. Blumkin invites all those interested to pit their "chess wits" against his and will offer suitable odds to any of the weaker players.

Another feature of the evening is the match between the Varsity and the St. James chess teams. This is the first of a series of matches in which the U. of T. Chess Club will participate to decide the City Chess League championship. It is many years since an outside chess team has invaded Hart House and an interesting struggle is expected.

NEXT PROFESSOR GIVES HARVARD ALEXANDER LECTURES

Irving Babbitt, professor of Comparative Literature at Harvard University, will give the Alexander Lectures in Convocation Hall on November 26, 27 and 28, at 5 p.m. His subject is to be "Wordsworth and Modern Poetry".

This is the third season of the Alexander Lectures which were established on the retirement of Professor W. J. Alexander, for many years head of the Department of English in University College. The fund for this lectureship was raised by subscription from the former students of Professor Alexander.

DENIES THAT VARSITY IS OVERSEAS OXFORD

Canadianisms Are Striking,
German Student Declares

NARROW VIEWS EXPLAINED

"I cannot find this University, as some undoubtedly do, simply an overseas branch of Oxford. There are so many striking Canadianisms that it is impossible to defend this saying," Victor Lange, Davis Exchange Student from Germany at the University of Toronto told "The Varsity".

"Life in Canada appears externally in British easy chairs, English food, Scottish Sundays, American architecture and rotten newspapers. Internally it is hidden behind a strict matter-of-factness and behind all sorts of protests; against Russian coal, German Idealism and Rudy Vallee."

Asked regarding the University system here as compared with that of Germany, Lange stated that there is a very considerable difference. High school courses are much heavier there than here, and entrance to the Universities is based on an examination that might be compared to the second year pass examinations here. Except in Law and in Medicine, there are no prescribed courses and hardly any examinations before the end of the college course, which usually covers a period of at least three or four years. "It is possible," Mr. Lange said, "to spend a full six or eight terms in absolute academic liberty before getting your Doctorate, which requires Ph.D. standards. Your education here is less specialized and the field is wider and better organized than the special and narrow studies of a German trying to get his Doctor's degree."

The narrow outlook of the average Canadian student is due to his purely elementary High School days, where he hardly ever has to think personally, in the opinion of Victor Lange. "Of course the two systems grow out of different conditions and aim at different results," he stated. "Your system needs practical men with a sufficient and Everyman's Library in their hands."

Limitation of Registration
Has Noticeable Effect

There is an increase of almost 6% over last year, in the registration of the Faculty of Arts. University College and Victoria College lead the way with an increase of almost 11% and 7% respectively. The two smaller colleges show decreases in registration. St. Michael's College shows a decrease of 0.59% while Trinity College decreased over 3%. The Occasional Student and the Teacher's Course, which are included in the Faculty of Arts registration show an increase of 1%.

This is the second successive year that the registration of St. Michael's College has ever exceeded that of Trinity College. Trinity College registration is strictly limited and it is rumoured that over 75 students were refused admittance.

The following is a summary of 1930 Art's Registrations. The numbers in the right hand columns indicate the increase or decrease over last year's registration.

Subject

GUEST SPEAKERS PRESENT

Every aspect of our present system of national defence will be under fire on November 26th when the debaters of Hart House tackle the question, "Resolved, that this House considers all expenditure on national defence by the Dominion of Canada unjustifiable."

Public and high school cadets, our own C.O.T.C., the militia and permanent forces of the Dominion will all come in for vigorous criticism from the pacifistic members of the university. It is certain, also, that the Canadian "navy" and our system of air defence will not be neglected by the (Continued on Page 4)

Repaired Telescope to Be Used on Campus For Student Research as in y e Olden Times

The old telescope, which was moved from the Meteorological Building to the basement of Baldwin House, is soon to experience resurrection for purposes of student research. Of good magnifying and resolving power, and suitable for making accurate measurements, the telescope will be devoted to visual and micrometer work. With this in view it will be set up somewhere on the campus, although its future site could not be definitely determined by "The Varsity". This is

UNDERGRADUATE HEAD OF STUDENT COUNCIL MAY BE APPOINTED

Motion to be Made at Meeting
Suggests Important Changes

HOLD OPEN MEETING

Present Move Seen As Step Towards Student Government

The Students' Administrative Council of the University of Toronto may have an undergraduate president, if the motion to be made to-day at a meeting of that body by B. A. R. Dignan, of Victoria, is carried.

According to the present constitution, the president of the S.A.C. must be a graduate of the University, either engaged in post-graduate work in the University or a member of the Staff. The motion to be proposed to-day, as the latest step in the movement towards student government, will provide for an undergraduate president.

The meeting of the Students' Administrative Council is open to the students of all faculties and colleges. Although small attendances have been the order of the day in former meetings, members of the executive have expressed the hope that more undergraduates will appear. In view of the important matters that will be handled at the meeting to-day, it is anticipated that there will be a much larger attendance than usual.

No statement has been made by the authorities as to whether the report of the committee of the Joint Executive will be discussed. It will be recalled that the report proposed drastic changes in the present system of appointment of the Editor of "The Varsity", as well as bringing other recommendations regarding the control of the student publication.

Women's Sport Staff

There are a few openings on the women's sport staff. Will any woman interested please come to the Women's "Varsity" Office at 42A, U.C., between 12 and 1 on Thursday and 10-11 on Friday? Also, will members of the staff come in every day to O.K. assignments if necessary? The book will be made up by 11 o'clock.

Vain Alarm Warns Tardy Professor

Breaking the tranquility of a lecture in Physics which was being given by Professor E. F. Burton in Room 43 of the Physics Building, the shrill notes of an alarm clock were heard at exactly 12.43 p.m. yesterday. It is suspected that it was set to ring at 1 o'clock so that the class would not be held after that time, as it is said to have been at the last lecture. The attempt to disturb the class was, however, in vain, for everybody waited patiently for the bell to stop ringing and then Professor Burton continued with his lecture.

DISCUSSES METHODS OF STORY WRITING

Women's Press Club Informal Discussion Proves Helpful

PLAN FOR FUTURE

Short stories should have incident, but not a number of incidents, it was decided in an informal discussion on "Short Stories" at a meeting of the University Women's Press Club, yesterday afternoon, in the Women's Union.

Several original short stories, one a clever character study, another a sketch of human attitudes in the face of convention, were read and thoroughly discussed by the group. In the criticisms it was generally decided that the ordinary plot necessitated a number of incidents and was, therefore, too cumbersome for a short story. The short story lends itself more easily to characterization with one incident to shape it.

In the business meeting, two honorary members were voted associated members of the Press Club, Miss Mary Gordon, the daughter of Ralph Connor, and Miss Kilpatrick, Dean of Women at University College, who is keenly interested in the activities.

At the next meeting, Tuesday, Nov. 18, the Press Club will have for its guest speaker, Miss E. J. Reynolds, of Hamilton, president of the Hamilton Women's Press Club. Miss Reynolds will talk on play and book reviewing, in which she has had extensive experience.

FOREIGN INFLUENCES WILL BE DEBATED

Victoria Will Oppose Trinity
On Motion This Evening

"That the influence of Great Britain upon Canada has been more favourable than that of the United States", is the motion to be upheld by Trinity College against Victoria to-night in the Trinity College Library.

Miss Helen Groom and R. L. Seaborn of Trinity, will introduce the motion, and Miss Ada Anderson and Bert Carson of Victoria, will speak for the negative, after which the debate is to be open to the house.

Last year Victoria and Trinity debated at the invitation of Victoria; to-night Victoria students are the guests of Trinity. It is hoped that many will take advantage of the size of Trinity library, and in view of the popularity of last year's debate, a large attendance is expected.

It is rumoured that several Victoria people intend to uphold the quality of British influence, and not leave it entirely to those of Anglo-Saxon background.

HART HOUSE ASSURES STUDENTS COLORFUL SHOW AT MASQUERADE

Ban on Smoking by Students Who Choose Pool to Sit Out

PAY CASH FOR TICKETS

Tickets Must be Obtained on Day Before Dance

Final arrangements for the Hart House Masquerade, to be held on Friday of this week, have been announced by the House Committee:

The use of the Swimming Pool has been obtained as a rendezvous only on the condition that there be no smoking there. If this request is not adhered to the use of the Pool will not be granted in future.

Tickets will be distributed in the West Common Room to the student presidents of the various faculty and college societies by Mr. F. R. Brebner of the House Committee between 12 noon and 2 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 13th, the day previous to the dance. Please note that this is a change from last year of a day earlier. Distribution to the various members of Hart House committees will be made at the same place and time. Undergraduate representatives calling for tickets on behalf of the colleges and faculties are reminded that it is necessary to pay for tickets in cash or by check at the time they are received. If they have to send a deputy to get the tickets, they will please give him a letter to certify that he is the person to get the tickets.

The program for the Masquerade includes 20 dances, with the first supper at the end of the 7th dance, and the second at the end of the 12th.

Series of Five Concerts to be Given by Hart House Group

TICKETS NOW AVAILABLE

The first of the series of five concerts by the Hart House String Quartette in Convocation Hall takes place at 5.15 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 14. The tickets giving admission to all five concerts may be bought for $1.00 either at the Hall Porter's desk at Hart House or at the Box Office of Hart House Theatre.

A paragraph from a letter from J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, received by "The Varsity" follows:

"Modern civilization demands specialization, and the relief, or outlet for man's nature is best found in cultural growth. During the past few years, we have received many thankful letters from undergraduates who have been appreciative of our students' concerts in Convocation Hall. The low price of admission allows them to attend five concerts, which in themselves are a wonderful source of pleasure as well as education. We give these concerts, not to reap any benefit, but to give our undergraduates an opportunity which is not offered by any other university in America, to the best of our knowledge."

"UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO"

Dignified and learned academic centres do not take kindly to this age of nick-names. Last week we noted with interest that the university situated in London, Ontario, is making an effort to oust the popular abbreviation "Western", and reinstate the official nomenclature, "University of Western Ontario". We prophesy the old habit will die hard. In matters of sport the use of the shorter name is only natural. What a nuisance this week if, when referring to next Saturday's game, we had always to refer to our opponents, in awkward fashion, as "University of Western Ontario". In other realms, however, it seems only courteous that they should expect and receive their full name.

This has reminded us that we are situated in somewhat similar circumstances. "Toronto, Toronto, Toronto Varsity", is all very well in a yell, but officially we are named "The University of Toronto." Any official paper, crest, or ring, will inform you of that. Yet again and again we hear or see our alma mater referred to as "Toronto University". Repeatedly in the down-town press we are thus mis-called. Repeatedly, too, prominent speakers who have had opportunity to know better, refer to us as "Toronto University". Most deplorable of all, undergraduates can frequently be heard using the phrase. This is not only wrong, but is a breach of good taste, and to the initiated, it soon comes to grate on the ears. No doubt the offence is often made in ignorance. This, then, will serve as a gentle but firm warning. Surely it is conceded that "University of Toronto" as a name is far more in consistent keeping with the prestige and dignified tradition of our institution than the sloppy-sounding "Toronto University".

This is a small matter, perhaps, but one worthy of complaint. Educating one's friends is a miserable business, but as an undergraduate or a graduate, you have every right to lay claim to the proper use of your university's name. Shout and fight for "Toronto Varsity", but insist on calling it and hearing it called, "University of Toronto".

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Wants S.A.C. Publicity

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

The student body has been accused of an apathy towards the body which it is assumed, administers its affairs.

On the surface, it appears as if this apathy is entirely the student body's fault, but a closer examination reveals that the cause lies beside none other than the official student publication. Why? Because it has failed to surround S.A.C. meetings with sufficient publicity.

Here I shall question the reader as to how many meetings of the S.A.C. he has attended? When is the date of the next meeting? Does he know whether he is allowed to attend?

The matter of student government is no less important to the undergraduates than other interests and activities on the campus which claim his attention and time.

I shall bring up no hackneyed comparisons to illustrate what I am about to say. If the S.A.C. meetings were to be accorded the same space and advertising that is accorded extra-curricular activities, if the publicity was driven home in the same manner, the interest for affairs of student government would be no less keen.

While "The Varsity" has deplored a lack of interest, commenting upon the lamentable attendances at the S.A.C. meetings, it has done nothing to remedy the condition.

Let no one accuse the undergraduate of any apathy or lack of interest. The fault is rather a lack of publicity.

—3T2.

Editors' Note: Spurred by the above epistle, we are running on page one of this issue an announcement of today's meeting of the Men's S.A.C. Since this meeting—in common with all meetings of this body—is being held in the not-too-commodious Room A of Hart House, we foresee interesting developments if the students turn out in the numbers "3T2" appears to expect.

Co-eds at Stanford University are required to be in bed at certain stated hours. The rule, as it stands now, requires that the girls be in at 10.30 on week nights and 1.30 a.m. on week-end nights.

Art, Music and Drama

M.C. Players' Guild

"The Swan Song" by Anton Chekov, at the U.C. Players' Guild this afternoon, is one of the series of plays from foreign countries, which is part of the Guild's program for the year. In it the tragedy of old age is mingled with the triumph of the artist, in a delightful bit of character-study. In present-day Russia, a play of Chekov's would be tolerated about as easily as would a Christian miracle play: the serene, profound art of the master has in it too much that is inspired for the efficiency worshipping Soviet to consider it as anything but demoralizing. This play, though short, is a striking example of the great dramatist's earlier manner. It is to be introduced briefly by Mr. Victor Lange; parts are being taken by Mr. Stanley Ryerson (in charge of the production), and Mr. S. H. Dewdney.

How to Get the Most Out of the Masquerade:

1. Don't procure a ticket until Friday noon.
2. Get some well meaning friend to fix you up with a blind date.
3. Wait till late Friday afternoon to get your costume. Waltz into the store and tell them you just want something simple—in fact, the simpler it is the better it will become you.
4. Be sure to get a pair of trousers two sizes too small for you. The tighter they are the more fitting they will be for the occasion.
5. It is essential that your pants (trousers), have no pockets. It is even better if your coat has none also.
6. Take great care to fill out your program early. You'll probably click at least two dances all evening.
7. Use ginger ale as a basis. It will blow the cork when shaken.
8. Leave your ticket at home.
9. Spend all of the time between dances trying to reach the rendezvous for the next dance. You won't get there on time. If you do they won't.
10. Don't fall in the tank.
11. Bring your own chestfields.
12. Don't be afraid to go in the Grand March. You may be chosen as the funniest even if you aren't playing.
13. Go down town after the brawl and spend half an hour looking for a table.
14. Run out of gas—on Bay Street. —'Elsie Dee'.

NO ARMISTICE POPPY FOR SALE ON CAMPUS

Students Forced to Buy Their Tags Outside College Grounds

DEARTH OF TAGGERS

Taggers were nowhere to be seen on the university campus or in the vicinity of the university yesterday, the anniversary of the Armistice. The little red poppy, the emblem of our remembrance of those who fell in the Great War, was on sale at almost every street corner in the city, but around the university it was in evidence only on the lapels of those who had bought elsewhere.

The reason for this neglect was advanced by an employee at the Poppy Day Campaign Headquarters at the corner of Walmer Road and Bloor Street, when enquiry was made by "The Varsity". It was simply the lack of a sufficient number of taggers and especially of team captains. Many of the former captains withdrew this year and very few new taggers were available to replace them. The result was that several large areas were left without taggers or captains. Among these was the huge district extending from Bloor St. on the north to College St. and from Bathurst St. on the west to Bay St., including Queen's Park and the university grounds. Thus the six thousand students of the university and the employees of the Ontario Government were forced to buy their poppies where they could or perhaps even do without them.

When questioned by "The Varsity" as to the reason for this, Miss A. E.

Frat Men Disdain Karl Know Only Groucho Marx

"Karl Marx—is he one of the Marx brothers?" questioned many men from one fraternity house. The only Marx that proved to be at all well-known, or popular, was the witty and loquacious Groucho, whose weak attempts at humour have made some Scotchmen sit through two shows to get their money's worth.

Not one student was interested in the Proletariat's lot, nor the Russian problem. "Rushing," one said, was, at present, the problem," and also suggested that the business depression might have some effect on those who were thinking of being initiated.

The Krehm de la Krehm appeal to the student body has evidently not aroused a very keen interest, as those who were interviewed had not troubled themselves to read Krehm's letter in "Varsity".

M. Parkes, said that she knew nothing whatever about it. "The university is not concerned in any way with Poppy Day Tagging. Just like all other tag days, it is entirely carried on by a civic committee composed of captains who choose their helpers. Doubtless many of these helpers are co-eds, but it is a purely personal matter if they are asked to assist or not."

KNOX-PHARMACY IN INTERFACULTY SOCCER PLAY-OFFS TO-DAY

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

St. Hilda's practically clinched the championship of their group by defeating University College Freshies for their third straight win this season. They will meet Senior Vic to-night and since this will be the last chance the Red and Gold will have, an interesting game should result. It will be played at 5 o'clock in Vic gym.

The Saints have not yet shown the form which was expected of them. They have the material for an excellent team, but do not seem to be able to get going properly. If it had not been for the shooting of Bea Symons, their star forward, the team might have lost their chance for the cup.

Junior Vic, too, displayed great form in their game with Household Science. They have an unusually strong forward line, backed up by a steady defence, and although defeated by U.C.

INTERFACULTY SOCCER PLAYOFFS BEGINNING

Knox College Favourites As Leaders of Keen Fight

The playoffs of the interfaculty soccer series start to-day after the keen race in all three groups, in which Knox, University College and Pharmacy emerged the winners. Pharmacy had an unusually hard fight to come out on top, tying for the Group lead with Wycliffe and playing two other games before they could claim the top rung.

Knox and Pharmacy meet to-morrow in what promises to be a fast and hard fought battle. Knox, the cup winners the last two years, will be favourites because of the brand of soccer they have shown so far this year, but Pharmacy may surprise with their well known fighting spirit. University College have drawn a bye and so are sure of a place in the finals.

The final group standing is as follows:

	W	L	T	Pts.
Knox	3	0	1	7
Victoria	1	2	1	3
Meds	1	3	0	2

	W	L	T	Pts.
University College	3	0	1	7
S. P. S.	2	1	1	5

	W	L	T	Pts.
Pharmacy	2	0	4	8
Wycliffe	2	2	2	6
Trinity	0	2	2	2

Seniors in the first game of the year, should provide real opposition when they meet them again to-night.

In Group 3, St. Michael's are in the lead with two wins and no losses, one by the decisive score of 63 to 2. The championship of this group will be decided on Thursday night, when the Double Blue oppose Junior U.C. in what should prove to be one of the most interesting games played to date. St. Michael's came out on top when these two teams met before, but only by the slender margin of seven points.

When Household Science took charge of the University Women's Athletic Association parking stations at last Saturday's rugby game, they took in over $71.00. This was the most made on any Saturday, with St. Hilda's and the combined forces of St. Michael's and Meds as runners-up. The total amount taken was slightly less than is usually made through the theatre nights and tag-days, but if the women take charge when Argos and Tigers clash, the amount should be equal to that made in former years.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Football fans are still trying to solve the great mystery of what happened on Saturday. The showing made by the team was a blow to every one of the supporters who have followed the fortunes of the senior squad all season. Despite the display the week before in the tie game with McGill hopes were high for the first Blue and White title since 1926. Everything pointed that way with the form chart calling the Blues to down the Tricolour.

What actually happened is now rugby history, but there are innumerable explanations offered as to why it happened. We hear it discussed as the main topic of conversation everywhere. As a matter of fact there were many causes which contributed to the complete reversal of form shown by the team over their effort against the same outfit in Kingston. Jack Sinclair's injured foot which prevented him from at least holding his own in the booting duel with Carter, the mediocre protection afforded him by the line, and the sloppy ball carrying displayed by the line-plungers at times, were all potent factors in the defeat.

That which impressed us most, however, was the disorganized way the team played after they got off to a poor start in the very first minute of play. For some reason or other U. of T. teams have very seldom been noted for making strong come-backs. Give them a lead to work on and they can usually protect it, but when the opposition gets off to a flying start as Queen's did on Saturday, they seem to go to pieces more or less and fail to snap out of it until it is too late.

It must be admitted, however, that the Western and the second McGill game were by way of being exceptions to this, but on the other hand, neither of these teams measured up to the potential strength of the Blues. Against the Tricolour these tactics spelled certain defeat. Queen's have always been noted for taking advantage of the opposition misplays and the breaks.

Don't start hanging out the crepe yet, however. Varsity still has a mathematical chance to cop the title. McGill have been proving to all and sundry of late they are still a dangerous threat to any team and with nothing to lose they can afford to play wide open football. There is a not too remote possibility that they may pull a surprise in Kingston next week. A win for Redmen plus a Blue victory at Western puts us in. It's just one of those forlorn hopes, though.

Wrestlers to Compete with Navy at Annapolis

INTERMEDIATE ASSAULT

Considerable interest is being shown in boxing, wrestling and fencing this year and chances for an Intercollegiate championship appear much brighter than at this time last season. There was a large turnout at the first meeting of the Club, last Friday and several important matters were dealt with. Of primary importance was the suggestion of Dr. W. Easson Brown, member of the Advisory Committee and well known in many branches of university athletics. He made the suggestion of arranging an intermediate assault with McMaster and Western Universities and with O.A.C. This would be based on the same principle as the intermediate track and field meet, only second string men from Varsity competing. At the present time only one man represents the university in this branch of sport and this would serve to create greater interest in boxing, wrestling and fencing. The motion was passed by the meeting, and the officers of the club are going ahead with the matter.

The president of the club, Murray Wilton, Tr. III, remarked on the large number of men turning out this year. Practically all of last year's intercollegiate men are back and several new prospects have turned out. Altogether things are shaping up very well. Beginners' classes have started and the coaches are being kept busy by the large classes of aspiring athletes. There has been some trouble in securing a coach for the boxers, and as yet nothing very definite has been arranged. Cliff Chilcott is again out with the wrestlers and Mr. Walters is looking after the fencing men.

Tentative arrangements for trips for the boxers and wrestlers have been made. It is possible that the boxers will go to New York to compete against members of the N.Y.A.C.

Half

BEA LONGLEY STARS

Junior Vic basketballers defeated Household Science last night at the Lillian Massey gym by a score of 41 to 15. In spite of the small floor, the Red and Gold had their combination working extremely well. Their forwards were considerably off their shots and lost many chances to run up an even larger score. Although Household Science could not make it closer, they showed flashes of excellent play which were broken up because of over-anxiousness and too-hasty shooting. With the score at half time 26 to 2 in favour of the ultimate winners, Household Science managed to hold Vic almost even in the second half, and were outscored only by 15 to 13 in this frame. Bea Longley was the outstanding star for Vic, with 19 points to her credit, and Shirley Scott was the best for Household Science.

Junior Vic—Bea Longley, Beth Jenking, forwards; Margaret Waugh, side-centre; Pat Palmer, jumping centre; guards, Bessie Mountain, Grace Becker; subs, Mabel Currison, Joe Harley.

Household Science—Jessie Martin, Betty Fisher, forwards; Shirley Scott, side-centre; Eleanor Samson, jumping centre; Eleanor Kent, Grace Goocy, guards; subs, Jean Cranston, Blythe Spence.

Plans are also being made for the wrestlers to compete against the Navy at Annapolis. Both trips would be made early in January, if they come through.

This year the Intercollegiate Assault will be held at Toronto, and the fight fans will have an opportunity of seeing a first class display of mitt and mat game.

ST. MICHAEL'S SWAMP MEDETTE BASKETEERS

St. Michael's swamped Medettes last night at the Lillian Massey gym, 63 to 2. The Double Blue showed great form, although their shooting was rather uncertain at times. Their signal plays from centre were working almost perfectly, with the three forwards sharing the scoring honors. Meds tried hard all the way, and ruined their chances by sloppy passing and shooting. Besides the forwards, Loretto McGarry was outstanding for the Double Blue, and Margaret MacEachern, who scored Meds only basket, and Rome McCullough, jumping centre, were the best for Meds.

St. Michael's—Olive Macklin, Helen Darte, forwards; Victoria Quinlan, side-centre; Loretto McGarry, jumping centre; Eileen Harrison, Pauline Bondy, guards; subs, Marion Darte, Margaret Coughlin.

Meds—Margaret MacEachern, Chris Fraser, forwards; Marj Davis, side-centre; Rome McCullough, jumping centre; Margaret Bickle, Ruth Bradley, guards; subs, Elaine Cunningham, Effie Winchester.

The subject before the house is one which is continually being brought to the fore in Canada and which is particularly important at the present time. It is well known that many of the staff of the university have definite ideas on the subject of disarmament and it is expected that the student body will show a great deal of interest in the debate.

Arrangements are now being made for securing guest speakers who are authorities on the subject and who may be depended on to live up to the discussion.

New Queen Salutes Former Sovereign

When the new Empress of Japan, latest pride of the Canadian Pacific steamships fleet and holder of three new trans-Pacific speed records, steamed into Vancouver harbor from the Far East recently she dipped her ensign in homage to the dragon-curved figurehead of the old Empress of Japan, queen of the Pacific from 1893 to 1922 during which she cruised a total of 2,600,000 miles in 58 round voyages from Vancouver and Victoria to Manila Bay. The gallant old ship, on which most of the senior officers of the new Empress of Japan, including Capt. Samuel Robinson, C.B.E., R.D., R.N.R., once served, was broken up and scrapped in Vancouver eight years ago, ending the career of a ship which made history on the Pacific. Public spirited efforts by the Vancouver Daily Province resulted in the figurehead (right) being preserved in Stanley Park, Vancouver, between Prospect Point and Brockton Light.

FAMOUS QUARTET FRIDAY

The universities of Canada have been invited to send exhibits to the British Trade Fair at Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic. They have been allotted two booths adjoining the Canadian Government exhibit. Exhibits have now been received from the Universities of Toronto, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick and Mt. Allison, also from the School of Higher Commerce Studies affiliated with the University of Montreal. Others may be going in the near future.

The University of Toronto has sent a large number of beautifully framed pictures of university buildings, and a very comprehensive exhibit showing the production of insulin and some other products of the Connaught Laboratories.

Graduating Year
at U. C.

A STIFF-NECKED ORDEAL

The fourth year of University College has been having graduation pictures taken during the past week or two, and looking at proofs has become one of the chief forms of distraction in residence and classes. Witty comments on how foolish one feels during the ordeal are heard on all sides.

"What amused me was the way the photographer sat you down on a chair, then got you to lean forward till your back was at an angle of about seventy-five degrees, and, finally, told you to hold your head in such a position that you felt as if you had a stiff neck," remarked one co-ed. "If you look natural after all that it's certainly a miracle."

Considerable interest was also aroused by the manner in which Mr. Freeland used make-up on his subjects.

TEXAN FRESHMAN LOSES 71 POUNDS

Unlucky Frosh at A. and M.
Must Eschew Pie for Seven

SENIORS 'INHUMAN BRUTES'

Hazing which makes the S.P.S. initiation here seem very, very tame, evidently takes place at the Agricultural and Mechanical College in Texas.

A letter of protest written by a prominent public man of Texas to the president of the university recently says in part:

"The freshmen are beaten with 2x4 boards unmercifully and tortured in other ways, they are required to shine shoes, clean up rooms, make up beds, run errands, many of them useless and unbecomingly, and do every humiliating act imaginable. . . .

"One boy told me that he had to eat under the table half the time. A freshman is not allowed to eat pie for 34 days and they have to eat what the upperclassmen leave and sometimes they have to go without anything to eat at all. . . .

"I know of one boy (16 years old) that was beaten, cuffed around and not allowed to eat except what was left, that he lost 71 pounds in 10 days and had sores and bruises all over him."

High School System Held Responsible for Narrow Outlook

TRAVELLING CHANCES SLIM

"Yes, we are narrow-minded," "The high school system is responsible for our narrow outlook," "What does Mr. Lange mean by 'narrow'?" were the almost general replies received by "The Varsity" regarding the views expressed by Mr. Victor Lange in yesterday's "Varsity".

"How can the Canadian student be otherwise?" queried Miss Nora Doran, a 1930 graduate in Modern History. "In Germany one is right in the centre of Europe, and European culture. If you live within twenty miles of France you can't help absorbing French ideas and culture."

Earl Davison, III Vic, supplemented a similar statement by saying, "Until he enters the university, a Canadian student who has no chance to travel can have no contact with the great minds of the world, except through books, and matriculation has no place for that."

"Our narrow outlook is partly the result of the unpopularity in high school of those who attempt to spend more than the required time among books," was an additional comment of J. Ellison, III English History.

Men's S.A.C. Turn Down Dignan Motion by Majority of Three

VIC AND SCHOOL DWE $800

Composer Still Has Copyright of Much-Discussed "Blue and White"

By a vote of 12 to 9 the Men Students' Administrative Council yesterday defeated B. A. R. Dignan's motion calling for the seating of an undergraduate as President of the Joint Executive and the Men's S.A.C. Other matters discussed at the meeting were the status of "The Blue and White" and the payment of damages arising out of the recent Victoria-S.P.S. fracas.

The motion which failed to carry was worded: "That this Council favours a constitutional change providing that only an undergraduate may sit as president of the S.A.C. and that it desires to forward this as a recommendation to the committee of the Joint Executive on constitutional changes".

Those voting for the motion were: John M. Franklin, A. E. Tyson, J. G. Ball, J. C. MacFarlane, R. E. Dipburn, K. J. Erwin and A. E. F. Allan.

Those voting against the motion were: H. S. Dodgson, A. B. Ward, H. S. C. Archibald, Ralph Yates, J. J. Clancy, J. A. Warren, Harry Appleton, D. B. Murray, E. B. Joliffe, F. Burns Plency, J. S. Corrigan, and R. G. Newman.

The report of the committee appointed to determine what rights, if any, the Students' Council had in the matter of the University song stated that at the present moment the entire rights were in the hands of the committee. (Continued on Page 4)

Performance of Season

PRODUCE TWO PLAYS

University Settlement House is buzzing with excitement these days as its members prepare for the first performance of the season in the "Little Theatre." From tiny tots of four and five who recite A. A. Milne up to older club members all are turning their energy to drama.

Almost any time in the week some feature of the "Players Guild" may be seen in action. The whole house from roof to cellar is used. On the top floor, volunteers from the University are busy with needle and sewing machine creating the seventy-five costumes necessary for the performance. Queen owl's garbs and puppet costumes are beginning to appear to say nothing of the old fashioned dresses with their laces and frills.

MDRE SPECIALIZATION

"In France One Goes to University for Purpose of Studying"

The University of Toronto cannot be compared with any European universities, Dr. J. B. Phelan told "The Varsity" yesterday. Dr. Phelan has studied in universities in Germany and France and also at Cambridge.

"At Oxford and Cambridge, studies are on the tutorial system supplemented by lectures rather than being almost wholly dependent on lectures as in Canada. The Pass Arts course takes three years and exams are neither as frequent or important, except of course, the finals."

"In the French universities there are no athletics and no social life as it is understood here. One goes to a university in France to study. It seems rather strange, does it not?"

"In England athletics are a recreation and not a department as in Canada. Everyone plays games and a match does not attract the same crowds as here, because everyone is busy at his own particular sport."

HART HOUSE MEAL SERVICE SPEEDED

Coffee, Sandwiches, Ice-cream,
Now Served in Record Time

SIXTEEN MEALS A MINUTE

"The improvement all around in the dining room service this year is extremely satisfactory," stated Mr. Gunn, superintendent of Hart House dining hall, yesterday. "The new equipment which has been installed has made the kitchen staff more inclined to go to it, more eager to do the work than ever before."

One of the main factors contributing to the success of the new system is the greatly improved main serving room. In this room there is accommodation for 2,500 cups, which can easily be filled and taken to the Great Hall in a very short time. As many as 2000 ice cream sundaes can be made up and held ready to be served as long as 50 minutes. In five minutes all this can be taken into the hall.

At the recent Medical soph-frosh get-together 288 persons were served with coffee, sandwiches and ice-cream inside of four minutes.

"Perfectly Rank", Says Vic Freshette of Residence Rules

The rumour goes around that the co-eds of Stanford must turn out their lights at 10.30. Over the week-end, however, they may indulge in night life till 1.30.

"Perfectly rank" was one Vic Freshette's opinion of residence rules. "You have to be in by 10.30, and you only have one late leave a week."

On further questioning we found that a late leave is till 12.30 and that this rigid ruling holds only for the first and second years. The juniors and seniors may trip the light fantastic till 12.30 any and every night they please.

Police Break Peace Of Amorous Couple

Nipped in the bud by the prompt action of the University Police, an amorous young couple were forced to move away from the University precincts by a uniformed member of the local force last evening.

Seated in close communion on the guard rail along the walk leading from the west entrance of University College to the Women's Union, the untimely arrival of the constable forced them to retire to another rendezvous.

A reporter for "The Varsity" arrived too late to question the pair as to whether they had been influenced in their choice of a location by the recent attention given to the problem of campus petting by the student publication.

ZIPPER FOR STUDS ON DRESS SHIRTS

Most Beautiful Girls of Land to Entertain Students at U.C. Follies

CIVILIZATION SUCCESSFUL

"Resolved that a two-stud dress shirt is better than a one-stud dress shirt", was the subject of a humorous debate held last night by the University College Literary and Athletic Society in the junior common room. Since the University College ball is to be held in the near future, the subject under discussion appeared to be of great importance at the present time.

After many heated arguments for and against the resolution, the chairman called for a vote. The result being a draw, it was suggested that the stud or studs, as the case may be, should be replaced by a zipper.

The more important subject under debate was, "Resolved that civilization is a success." The affirmative was successfully upheld by T. Cook and W. J. Lawson, who defeated R. Wishart and W. M. Gray by a vote of forty-one to twenty-one. The subject was then thrown open for discussion.

Professor F. C. Aud commented favourably upon the speeches made in the debate, saying, "I do not say that civilization is unsuccessful, but it is not all that we would like it to be."

According to the report of the president, D. B. Murray, the junior common room is to be furnished with a radio.

"A very encouraging program is being provided for the U.C. Follies," declared the social director, T. S. Brownlee. "Nineteen musicians will be in attendance and dancing girls, the most beautiful in the land, will entertain the students." The attendance will be limited to 750 this year, in strict accordance with Hart House regulations. The dance will take place on Nov. 28th and the lists will be posted on Nov. 19th.

The freshettes of Queen's Hall are in the same predicament as those on Avenue Road. Sophomores, however, may have two late leaves a week, while the seniors are left to their own discretion.

A strange whisper reached us that the co-eds of St. Hilda's must be in by 8 o'clock. We found, however, that late leaves are quite easily obtained after an interview with the Dean. Both here and at St. Joseph's the rules are less "cut and dried" than in the other residences. They are not under student government and late leaves are under the discretion of the Dean.

CANADA RESISTS YANKEE PASSION FOR SUPERLATIVE

So Declares Trinity House As Victoria Debaters Defeated

BRITISH INFLUENCE UPHELD

Contrast U. S. Judicial Craft With Clean Politics
in Canada

British influence has been, and is, of greater value to Canada than that of the United States, was the decision by a vote of 64 to 42, of the House, at the Victoria-Trinity debate, held in Trinity College Library last night.

R. L. Seaborn, Trinity, speaking in favour of the motion, stated that the better actions and institutions of Canada are an inheritance from Great Britain. Tolerance, freedom and public welfare are our British traits, while the U.S. has contributed only a mad desire for economic wealth.

He pointed out that our very efficient parliamentary system, judiciary and civil service is modelled directly on that of Great Britain. He contrasted the political and judicial corruption of the U.S. with the comparatively clean administration in Canada.

Miss A. H. Anderson, Victoria, opposing the motion, accused the first speaker of dealing in half truths. Canada should not be regarded as a mere outpost of Europe, but as a distinctive nation culturally and politically. She inherits her democratic spirit from the U.S. She speaks the language of the New World, while Great Britain speaks that of the old, the speaker maintained.

Canada has not adopted the United States' craze for the biggest, stated Miss H. Groom of Trinity. She proceeded to show how the influence of the Republic was towards the destroying of those ideals of fair play which have helped to make Britain great.

FEMININE LIMBS SHOCK SPINSTER

Explains Slang

JULY 4 TALK BOMBASTIC

"I wonder what the Boston spinster who draped the limbs of her piano, would have said had she seen the world to-day, when feminine legs are the most stimulating part of the landscape," said Professor Henry Alexander last night during his address, "Is There an American Language", at the second meeting of the English Association, held at the College Reference Library. He was dealing with the extreme shyness of mid-Victorian people in using such shocking phrases as, "the naked eye", and "the naked truth", when the above remark was made.

In a very humorous speech full of excerpts from American authors and various American slang expressions, Professor Alexander outlined the fundamental differences between the American and the English language.

In illustrating the difference in the structure of the two languages Professor Alexander quoted Mencken as saying, "I can write English in this clause just as I can write American in this here clause". In several American plays published in London, a glossary was given, and in some of Sinclair Lewis' books a vocabulary of American slang was provided.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13th, 1930

S. A. C.

That the Students' Administrative Council is pretty well under the thumb of graduates and paid officials and that the students themselves don't care either one way or the other, was made fairly evident at yesterday's meeting of the Men's S.A.C.

Despite a letter, an editorial note, and a leading news story in yesterday's "Varsity" drawing attention to the meeting in question and stressing its importance, there were not more than a dozen undergraduate non-members of the Council present, and not by any means a full attendance of the members. The meeting was moved from Room A in Hart House to the Debates Room across the hall in anticipation of a large attendance, but as it turned out the former room would have been quite ample.

When the proceedings did get under way, the few interested student spectators were treated to as high class an exhibition of pussy-footing and jelly-caking as one would encounter in a normal lifetime.

This was the first meeting of the Men's S.A.C. in almost a month, and the agenda was heavy enough to keep the delegates in session for two hours and a quarter . . . the final matter being tabled because the quorum had slipped away in the meantime.

It seems to be perfectly reasonable to demand: Why are the meetings of this body not held more frequently so that the matters up for consideration may receive their full measure of discussion? If it is not the purpose of the powers-that-be to black-jack the undergraduate members into acquiescence on subjects on which the size of the agenda leaves them no time to be properly informed, then we suggest that the aforementioned gentlemen take steps to remove even the appearance of wrong-doing.

The amount of muddy reasoning which went on in the minds of certain of the members almost seemed to justify the present ascendancy of non-undergraduates in the student affairs of the University. Several gentlemen, for example, voted against a measure recommending that the proposed new constitution include a provision to the effect that only an undergraduate may sit as president of the S.A.C.—and voted against it because they felt that a graduate was more likely than an undergraduate to be in touch with majority student opinion and because his contacts down-town would lend more of something-or-other to the Students' Council. Other members stated that they were strong for student government, but that they felt that, if an undergraduate president were seated, he would—under the present system of representation by population—be chosen from the largest faculty. It was pointed out in answer to this objection that the proposed change would only be made if the new constitution included—as it is expected to include—a system of equal representation for all faculties. Still, the gentlemen voted against the proposal.

This proposal, if it had been passed, would have been a clear mandate to the Constitutional Committee, about to be appointed by the Joint Executive, to see to it that the new constitution permitted the undergraduates to take the initiative in student government out of the hands of certain graduates and paid officials who now control it. The defeat of the proposal may be taken as indicating an opposite desire on the part of the Men's Council. "The Varsity" would like to see what the result would be if the student body as a whole were allowed to ballot on the question.

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Uptown.

Our Blushing Brides. (0). Costumes and six mannequins; false hearted men and a suicide; a little bit of Street Scene and a whole lot more costumes . . . To satisfy morons and to prove that men really are not like that, the cynical and pure minded Pollyanna gives in to the reformed hero right at the end of the show. Joan Crawford is not so very bad. If she was, the show would be a real flop. Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian, as the gold diggers who regret it, are very, very average. Robert Montgomery is the hero. He acts like a perfect American Gentleman. The title is quite meaningless. There is only one bride and not a blush in the film. The four French costumes were really funny. Nothing else was.

M.C. Players' Guild

Anton Chekov's play The Swan Song, provided yesterday afternoon's program at the Players' Guild.

There are only two characters, one a sixty-eight year old actor who has fallen asleep in his dressing room and awakes to find the theatre deserted; the other is the doddering old prompter who is but a foil to the main personage.

The play is practically a monologue by the old actor who reviews his past life and seems to see the shadow of futurity overhanging all that he has done. Yet mingled with "the tragedy of the age is the triumph of the artist".

Stanley Ryerson took the leading role and was fairly successful. Perhaps he should have been more theatrical and less a gentleman. Certainly a little hysteria would have helped create the necessary illusion.

The whole play ran too smoothly and too mechanically; words flowed too readily from the sleepy half-drunken dotard; and there was little of the studied hesitation that is almost essential in the presentation of an incident of this kind upon the stage.

Nevertheless, Stanley Ryerson did the best acting seen this year at the Players' Guild.

Dewdney was satisfactory in the short part of the prompter.

The make-up was good. The scenery was carefully done and therefore quite successful in this instance.

Suggestion: If the Players' Guild hope to make a financial success or even to avoid financial disaster in their first evening production in Hart House Theatre it would seem to be essential that their business and advertising departments get under way immediately. It takes more than two weeks to sell out the house at Hart House Theatre.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

St. Hilda's made sure of their group championship by defeating Senior Vic by the close margin of 2 points. The Saints will need to improve greatly if they are to repeat their success of last year when they took the interfaculty title. They have the makings of a wonderful team but just now do not seem to be able to get going the way they should. However, Coach Athol Wesley has them working hard in practices, and expects to eliminate most of their mistakes before the play-offs begin.

Junior Vic created a tie in their group by defeating University College in a decisive manner last night. A close game was expected but the Red and White were favourites to take the game and group title. However, they could not seem to do anything right; they were rather badly off their shots and their floor play was conspicuous by its absence. It is likely that this was just an off night for everyone, and they expect to turn the tables on Vic when they meet in the playoff game. However, Junior Vic deserve lots of credit for their showing. Their shooting was excellent, and the work of their guards outstanding.

St. Michael's and U.C. Juniors meet to-night in the game which will decide their group championship. The former were victorious when the two teams met earlier in the season, but should not count on an easy game, for the juniors are improving rapidly and the result will be an interesting struggle.

Social Science have decided to withdraw their entry in the basketball series, since they were not able to get organized sufficiently this year. They will probably re-enter the league next

KNOX OUTSCORES PHARMACY SQUAD

Take Lead in First Game of Soccer Semi-final Series

DRUGGISTS OVERSHADOWED

By defeating Pharmacy 4 to 1, Knox piled up a substantial lead in the first game of the interfaculty soccer semi-final played yesterday afternoon on the front campus.

The outcome was never in doubt. Knox had the advantage in every department of the game and appear to be the team to beat for the championship.

Davidson opened the scoring in the first half on a sensational solo effort. He repeated this a minute later on a pass from Orans and ended the scoring for the period on a pass from Rowland.

Davidson, Weir and Bill Jack stood out for Knox and Wilcox, Rodgers and Ivey were best for Pharmacy.

year, and with a good coach should provide some real competition.

Players on all the interfaculty teams are reminded that their eligibility certificates must be signed by Dr. Edith Gordon, medical advisor for women, in order to be valid. These are supposed to be in before the girl takes part in any practice, and no other doctor's signature is sufficient.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

Varsity's brightest hope for a football championship this fall lies in Coach Harry Bales' juniors, who play Queen's Saturday at the U. of T. stadium for the Eastern Canada intercollegiate title. They have yet to be defeated in a game this year and have won all their matches handily. They were grouped with St. Michael's College and trounced the Irish in all four games by overwhelming scores. Last Saturday they eliminated McGill who had previously defeated Loyola, winning 14 to 3. And now they meet Queen's in a sudden death fixture and it is to be hoped that their early successes on the gridiron will not have the same effect on them as it had on the seniors.

The schedules of the interfaculty football and soccer games have been played and the group winners determined. The semi-final tilts are under way. Interest and competition will be keen. Senior Meds, Junior School, Victoria and St. Michael's, the group winners, sailed through their games without a loss. This afternoon at 2.30 at the Bloor Street stadium the first of the rugby playoffs takes place when Senior Meds and Junior School lock horns. Friday will bring together St. Mike's and Victoria. These latter teams seem to be the strongest in the series with St. Mike's having the strongest twelve ever to represent them. On their line-up are men capable of taking their place in higher company. Never have the Saints won an interfaculty championship and this year they are concentrating every effort on coping the coveted Mulock Cup.

The following figures are interesting. Since 1894 School of Science has captured the Mulock Cup 14 times, twice as many times as have Meds, their nearest competitor with 7. U.C. has won the trophy 6 times, but have not held it since 1911, while Vic have won it on 5 occasions. They are the present champions.

Knox College appears headed for its third successive championship in the interfaculty soccer. Yesterday they defeated Pharmacy 4 to 1 in the first match of the semi-finals. As there are only three groups in the series, University College drew the bye and will probably meet Knox in the finals. Should the Presbyterians hang up another victory, they will equal the record of O.A.C., who won the soccer championship in 1923-4-5.

Overlapping the rugby season, hockey commenced at the University of Toronto yesterday when the initial practice of the juniors was held at the Arena. Over 50 are trying out for the team and it was necessary to divide the squad into two groups, the others turning out to-day. Prospects of another strong Blue and White entry in the O.H.A. and S.P.A. series are good.

Varsity Juniors Initial Workout

Three From Last Season Form
Nucleus of Large Turnout

U.T.S. SEND UP THREE

The Varsity junior hockey squad turned out yesterday for the first time. The squad at present is divided into two groups because of the large number of registration cards handed in, but by the beginning of next week the two will be melted into one when the unnecessary material is dropped. The two squads together number about 50. The prospects for the team this year are certainly favourable, if the first performance, which was held yesterday, is any criterion.

Of last year's team, three remain, Hendry, Cunningham and Bennett. With this nucleus to work on, and some excellent material among the new players, Coach Frank Sullivan ought to turn out a real threat.

Hodgetts looked good on the defence along with Kennedy from Markham. May, who starred last year with Upper Canada, will probably be in the running for centre. Some of the other promising material includes Shipp, in goal; White, from Upper Canada; Dickinson, Boddington and Copp, from U.T.S.; Hodgson, of last year's Grimsby juniors; Ambrose, a goalie from Appleby; and Caslor from Brampton juniors.

To-day's turnout will undoubtedly bring some more good players out on the ice, so it may be expected that all the positions on this year's junior team will be hotly contested. Practices are being held every afternoon from 4.30 to 6.00 p.m. at the Varsity Arena.

Semi-final

MEDS DEPEND ON LINE

Junior School and Senior Meds meet this afternoon at Varsity stadium in the semi-finals of the interfaculty rugby championship. The winner of this game will meet the winner of the Victoria-St. Mike's tilt in the finals for the Mulock Cup.

Both Junior School and Senior Meds finished their groups without a loss. Junior School was grouped with Pharmacy and Junior Meds. The latter team they defeated quite easily in both games. Senior Meds, in Group I, eliminated Senior School and Dents. Meds' strong point is their heavy line. Bartlett, the captain, at inside, and Brown and Long, husky middles, have been great ground gainers for the Doctors. Caldwell at quarter, and Graham on the rear guard, have been quite prominent all season.

Junior School are worthy representatives of S.P.S. On the half line they have a nice pair of broken field runners in Hewitt and Hallett. Lichty is a smart flying wing and Mitchell a hard working lineman.

JR. VIC PLAYS RINGS AROUND SENIOR U. C.

Playing fine basketball all the way, Junior Vic created a deadlock in their group by trimming the Senior U. C. six to the tune of 22-11 last night in the U.T.S. gym.

The Scarlet and Gold had a decided edge on the play throughout and literally played rings around their opponents.

U.C. WATERMEN HOLD MEDICALS SCORELESS

Richmond and Seccombe Share Scoring Honours in
4-0 Victory

Senior U.C., displaying fine ball-handling and shooting, defeated Senior Meds water polo outfit by 4-0 last night. For a short time at the beginning of the game the Medicals held their own, but after the U.C. combination plays began to function the Doctors were never in the picture. Seccombe started U.C. on their victorious march when he scored on a tricky backhand shot from centre. A few minutes later he repeated the performance.

Senior U.C. — Thorburn, Dennis, Heintzman, Seccombe, Richmond, Brown, Beattie.

Senior Meds — Benson, Brennan, Irving, Sutherland, Allan, Kinnear, Jackson.

Vic started off strongly, running up a 6-0 score before U.C. notched their first counter on a foul shot by Louise Crouch.

SAINTS WIN CLOSE GAME SENIOR VIC NOSED OUT

In one of the closest games played to date in the interfaculty basketball series, St. Hilda's defeated Senior Vic by a score of 21 to 19, last night at the Vic men's gym. The Saints ran in five baskets before Vic tallied at all, and with their plays working out fairly well, were on the long end of a 13 to 5 count at half time.

After the intervals, Vic came back considerably stronger, and outplayed their opponents all through. The game was very rough, with a large number of personal fouls meted out. Becca Symons, of St. Hilda's, and Eleanor Sedgewick, Vic, were the high scorers, while the work of the Saints' guards was effective.

Honesty is NOT Best Policy Proves Wilhelmina Wipplemop

by P. A. Gardner

(The following is a transcript of the speech given by Miss Wilhelmina Wipplemop, A.T.C.M., to the audience of beaming parents and fond friends who attended the annual recital by her vocal pupils, in Ough Centre, Ont. Fed up with honey, Miss Wipplemop decided to speak straight from the shoulder, with the result that she is now building up a vocal class in Frothing Falls, B.C.)

Friends, Oh Min's, and country hens, I sure hope you've liked this little squawk-festival. The kids were pretty lousy, I'll admit—but hell! what do you expect for twenty five cents an hour? Never mind, give me ten years with the little devils and I'll make a Broody Vallee out of every damn one of 'em (God forbid!). Even if you didn't think the thing was so hot, think of the hell I've gone through listening to them all year! Surely you can stand it for a couple of hours.

And listen, ladies, I beg you on my bended knee, which is one hell of an uncomfortable position, to spank your kids once in awhile. Shut them up without any supper! Take their lollipops away from them! Anything, but for God's sake make them practise, and make them do what their teachers tell them. I know, I know all you parents have got your A.T.C.M.'s from the Bowmanville Conservatory, but all the same that was years ago, and I'm on to a few new dodges that you haven't even heard of. So listen! Teacher knows her stuff. Honest! Drill that into the little... er... beauties, for heaven's sake! and next year maybe two or three of my star pupils 'll be able to carry a tune without straining a couple of guts.

I'm sure our thanks are all extended as far as they'll stand the strain to Pansy Pillarpost, whose wonderful reciting would get her a sure refusal from the talkies any day. I think you folks are fine to have stood it like you did. Blue Jay corn pads helped me do it—they just fit my ears. What was your secret, folks? Five dollars in gold for the best answer without semi-colons.

And as for Limburina Little, who banged out her three tunes by way of help—well, she's a home girl: you give her a hand—I can't. Next year maybe I'll be able to get an accompanist. They cost too much money just yet.

Thanks again, folks, and remember, those who owe for more than nineteen lessons don't get the special half-price of a dollar lesson next year.

Love and kisses—I hope you all break a hip or two...

poser, who last spring had offered it to the Board of Governors, but had never received any notification as to its acceptance or rejection. The present copyright, it was reported, included complete control over public performance, broadcast, and parody.

The committee was instructed to take steps toward securing control of the copyright from the composer, either for control by the Board of Governors or by the Students' Council if the latter body were found legally constituted to control copyright.

A letter from Rudy Vallee was read, in which Mr. Vallee pointed out that he had no desire to use "The Blue and White" or other U. of T. songs if it were against the wishes of the students here. He would, however, he claimed, give the song a rendering suitable to its character as an alma mater song, and he felt that the fair name of the University of Toronto would not suffer thereby. The Secretary of the S.A.C. was instructed to reply to Mr. Vallee, stating that, although at present the body representing the students of this University had no legal rights in the matter of the song, it was felt that the majority of students were opposed to the use of "The Blue and White" in dance-halls or radio broadcasts; but that, since the song was at present so used in and about the city of Toronto, the matter was left entirely up to Mr. Vallee's discretion pending proposed transference of copyright. Following a lengthy discussion on the fixing of financial responsibility arising out of the damage due to the Victoria-S.P.S. battle, the matter was referred back to the Students' Court. The sum of $811.77, it was announced, had to be raised out of a body of 500 first- and second-year Schoolmen and 100 Vicmen in residence at Burwash Hall. The Caput was said to be awaiting a decision from the Men's S.A.C. regarding an equitable apportionment of this sum.

DEANS JUSTIFY PRESENT SYSTEM OF LATE LEAVES

At Smaller Colleges Definite

INDIVIDUAL FREEDOM BEST

Student Government Sets Rules for Co-Eds
at Vic

"Individual freedom is, to my mind, the best way," Miss D. H. Kilpatrick, Head of the Women's Union at U.C., told "The Varsity," when asked why there were rules in the residences restricting late hours. "But, as in a family, rules grow up from living together and that is why the aim of student government is not to restrict liberty, but to make wise rules which will conserve every girl's health and academic standing."

Miss M. E. T. Addison, Dean of Victoria, held a more moderate view, and was convinced that "residence life cannot be based on every individual's private wishes. It must be co-operative and that is what student government makes for. No rule or amendment is passed without the students' consent; moreover, they do not come into residence without knowing the rules. They know there are compensations which make residence worth while."

Interesting conclusions were drawn from the other two colleges, where student government does not exist. "Someone is always trying to make out that the women are under strict discipline," Miss M. Cartwright told "The Varsity." "That may be so in the larger residences, but at St. Hilda's it is not possible to have more freedom than there is. The girls can't work all day and stay out all night. We do not have any hard and fast rules, but since someone in the house has to wait for them to come in, they can never stay out later than one."

At St. Joseph's the girls are given the key and are not watched or waited for. However, they know that the rules are not made to be broken. The general feeling is that they have chosen to be in residence, and so must abide by its laws.

Indian University "Abode

NO COMPULSORY LECTURES

At the University of Santiniketan, the students try no examinations, attend lectures only when so inclined, and do their studying under shady palm trees; it is not strange that the name means "abode of peace." Mr. Murray Brooks, the General Secretary of the S.C.M., told "The Varsity," speaking of Mr. Arian Williams, He is head of the middle school at Santiniketan International University and the intimate friend of the Indian poet and philosopher, Rabindranath Tagore. Mr. Williams is coming to Toronto on Friday, and will address university groups on "Five Years with Tagore in Santiniketan," "With Tagore in Russia," and "The Future of India." He is well qualified to speak on these subjects, as he has been for some years on the staff of Santiniketan University, and has recently completed a tour of Russia with Tagore, where he studied the Soviet educational systems.

Watch Your Coats!

The annual epidemic of coat stealing was continued yesterday despite the fact that Hart House was covered by plain-clothes men all day. This time it was a dark grey heavy overcoat belonging to J. D. Forsythe that was stolen. The coat was left outside the barber shop at 4.40 p.m. and when he returned ten minutes later the coat was gone. It seems to have been taken from under the very eyes of the police.

U.S.A. VARSITIES DEIFY ATHLETICS

State Universities Doomed to Acceptance of Inferior
Students

ALUMNI A HINDRANCE

Sydney, New South Wales—

Speaking at Melbourne University recently, Professor Grahame, of Washington University, deplored the recent tendency of the universities of U.S.A. to deify athletics.

Privately endowed universities could choose their students and set their own standards of work. But the state universities could not do so, and were overwhelmed by good, bad and indifferent students who more often were looking for a good time than for degrees or diplomas.

Another source of the lowering of educational standards and elevating of sport, lay, he said in the Alumni Faction. They seemed to regard the university more as a country club than as a seat of learning. But they furnished a great deal of money in legacies and endowments and so could not be easily ignored. Success in sport counted heavily with them, however, and intellectual attainments not at all.

QUEBEC ADMITTING VARSITY DENTISTS

Practise Formerly Restricted to Duly Registered Graduates

EQUAL STATUS RECOGNIZED

Up until last month it was extremely difficult for a graduate in Dentistry at the University of Toronto to practice his profession in Quebec, it was learned by "The Varsity" yesterday. This was the result of a regulation which made it necessary for any dentist who wished to practice in Quebec to register in that province before beginning his dentistry studies. Hence, a Varsity graduate in dentistry, if compelled by circumstances to go to Quebec, would learn that he should have registered there four or five years before.

However, a new regulation passed within the last month, gives the Quebec Dental Council the power to accept any outside candidate with equal standing. It is now much easier for an outside man to gain admittance to the dental profession in Quebec.

Dress Reform?

The Hart House Masquerade brings its disasters and trials and tribulations, but the one that takes the cake this year, is that of a popular gentleman of the third year who burnt one leg of his costume to dust and ashes. At least he will appear a la mode.

LAST REGULATIONS FOR MASQUERADE ARE ANNOUNCED

De Luxe Meters to Stop at Entrance to University

COSTUMES COMPULSORY

Masqueraders May Not Smoke in Gallery of Pool

Final announcements concerning the Hart House Masquerade have been issued by the House Committee. Holders of tickets are asked to pay special attention to the regulations concerning taxis and private cars, also to the location of cloak-rooms.

The south-west door of Hart House will be the main entrance. Cars will approach it from University Crescent only and will exit via College Street. The De Luxe Taxi Cab Company has arranged to have all meters stop at the entrance to the university grounds and all masqueraders are asked to pay their taxis before drawing up to the steps. This is very important and the co-operation of all will be appreciated.

The west door of Hart House will also be an entrance. Cars will approach from Hoskin Avenue and proceed south under the Tower to College Street.

Parking is prohibited in the west driveway and the police have been asked to strictly enforce this rule. The parking areas will be around the campus, both sides of Devonshire Place and the north side of Hoskin Avenue.

It is most important that guests should note carefully the cloak-room arrangements. Ladies will use the Billiard Room and the regular Check Room. Gentlemen will use the Sketel Room and the Locker Room. Ladies will wait for their escorts in the Lower Gallery, outside of the Great Hall. The ushers are asked to enforce this rule and the guests can save themselves time and trouble by noting it now.

Guests are again reminded that smoking will not be allowed in the Gallery of the Pool. This is an extremely important obligation on the part of every Masquerader and the committee ask every support in observing this regulation. The regular program starts at 8.30 p.m. and ends at 2 a.m. Every guest is asked to especially note that he or she must appear in costume. This is a change from last year and must be borne in mind by all.

The judges of costumes will be: Dr. Henry Sproatt and Mr. Arthur Lismar.

Football Forces Feel Frivolous When Weighty Workout is Over

Onlookers on Devonshire Place were treated to a rare sight yesterday afternoon when two prominent members of the intercollegiate rugby team whose names are withheld by special request, were seen pedalling merrily down the road on a bicycle, clad only in the barest minimum of clothing. It seems that these same two men had succeeded in soaking the rest of the team with a fire hose the previous night and the boys waited until after the practice yesterday to secure their revenge. After a chase and a scuffle the culprits were overpowered and their uniforms removed in toto and they were left to reach the safety of the locker room as best they could. A nearby bicycle appeared to be the quickest

WOMEN GRADUATES CONSIDERED SNOBS

Lessons in Walking, Talking and Dressing, Needed by Job-Hunting Women

EARLY DECISION URGED

"Employers judge women job seekers, not by what they are, but what they look like," stated Miss True Davidson of the Canadian Federation of University Women last night when interviewed by "The Varsity."

"Women graduates are considered good workers, but intellectual snobs and office peace breakers by business men," declared Miss Davidson, and stressed the fact that co-eds should pick their vocation while in first year and stick to it. "Before interviewing a prospective employer you should learn to enter a room, to walk and talk properly, and dress and act to fit your type."

In her two minute talk after dinner at the Women's Union, Miss Davidson said that the aim of the Vocational Guide for university women was to find positions for women and give them advice about the pitfalls and prejudices of the business world.

ANNOUNCE CONTINUATION OF SPECIAL LECTURES

BENNET ON INJURED LIST

Players Indulge in Softball Game As Pre-Workout
Diversion

Despite the fact that they have only the barest possible hope of an inter-collegiate title this year, Varsity's rugby team leaves for London to-day for their final game with Western on Saturday, and in the event of McGill upsetting the dope with a win over the Tricolour at Kingston, the Blue team are determined to down the Mustangs which will give them the championship.

Softball entered the program at the final workout yesterday as a diversion from the regular routine, and the players had a half hour's fun before they buckled down to a snappy drill.

Varsity will have one man on the injured list, Tubby Bennett, stellar outside wing, not having recovered from an injury received in the Queen's game. Jack Sinclair's leg is back in good shape again which augurs well for the squad on Saturday.

Saturday will see a somewhat different Varsity line. Captain Johnny Keith, Varsity's best tackler and one of the greatest snappers in the game, will be seen at outside wing. Bob Galloway moves over from inside to Keith's former position and Witzell takes up the inside vacancy. The lineup will be as follows:

Snap, Galloway; insides, Witzell, White; middles, Dewar, McQuigge; outsides, Keith, Gooderham; quarter, Billy Bell; flying wings, Jim Sinclair, Traynor; halves, Fitzpatrick, Jack Sinclair; subs, Richardson, Adams, Harrison, Ruddle, Twaite, Elson, Henderson, Ferguson.

FORESTRY GRADS ALWAYS EMPLOYED

Number of Frosh Restricted by Dean on Ethical Principles

PAPER MILLS CLAIM MANY

In the twenty-two years that the Faculty of Forestry has been in existence every graduate has secured a position. That is the enviable record held by his faculty, said Dean Howe in a long interview given to "The Varsity."

In those twenty-two years about two thirds of the graduates have entered either the Dominion Forest Service or the Provincial Forestry Branch of Ontario. The others have entered the private pulp and paper and lumbering companies. Until last year, however, the private companies were annually claiming a larger number, finally about half of the graduates. Last year, owing to the business depression, not one graduate was needed by the pulp and paper companies.

The Dean considers it "poor business and non-ethical" to allow more students to enter the first year than there will be openings for on graduation, although he does not guarantee positions. For this reason the entrance requirements have been increased this year and have been strictly enforced. The examinations are quite severely marked and approximately one third of the students do not graduate. This year, for the first time, students of the second, third and fourth years are required to obtain sixty per cent, as an average on all subjects.

NO INDUCEMENT TO BREAK LEAVES AT U. OF OXFORD

Students in European Schools

NO COMPARISON POSSIBLE

Specialization is Important at Universities of France

"It is not possible to compare the universities of France with the universities of Canada," said Mr. Debray of the French Department of University College. "A French student does nothing but specialize in his university course. The work of the Pass Course and the first or second years of an Honour Course is covered at the Lycee which corresponds to our high schools. The French student is introduced to philosophy, logic and psychology at an earlier age than in Canada. Of course, the educational methods of both countries have arisen out of the individual needs."

L. A. Mackay of the Classics Department, University College, gave "The Varsity" some interesting facts regarding the life of an undergraduate at the University of Oxford. "A student must be within the college grounds by 9 o'clock. A late leave allows him to stay out until midnight. The breaking of these rules is looked upon as a major offence which is punished by fines and may lead to the expulsion of the miscreant." He added that there is absolutely nothing to keep a student out until after nine o'clock.

"Oxford is about two years ahead of Toronto in its literary courses, but on a level in science. A graduate of the University of Toronto in classics, for example, finds that he has to do extra work to keep up to the standard of a third year student."

NO SPECIAL BUSES RUN TO WESTERN

Additional Tickets to Game
Expected From London
To-Day

BUS FARE REDUCED

About 150 tickets have so far been sold in Toronto for to-morrow's football game at Western. This is the total of the original allotment made to Varsity students. An additional hundred tickets are expected on this morning's mail, however, and may be secured at the Hart House Athletic Office. All tickets for the Toronto section of the stands are $1.50.

Bus tickets to the game are not in such demand, only a few having been sold thus far. These tickets are on sale at the S. A. C. office in Hart House. The buses leave Hart House Saturday morning at 7.30, and returning buses leave the Union Bus Depot in London on Saturday at 6.00 p.m. and on Sunday at 1.00 p.m. and 6.00 p.m. These buses are not being chartered outright by the Students' Administrative Council, but are the regular Central Ontario Line buses to and from London.

A reduction of fifty cents in the regular bus fare is being made to students to make the $4.50 rate possible. This price is exclusive of ticket to the game, which must be purchased separately at the Athletic Office. No rebate will be allowed on bus tickets, which are used for only one way of the trip.

COMMENT

We publish elsewhere in this issue a letter from Mr. Dignan, whose motion regarding an undergraduate president for the S.A.C. was defeated by a three-vote margin at Wednesday's meeting of the Men's Council.

While Mr. Dignan's position with regard to student self-government is not necessarily the position of this paper, we cannot refrain from expressing the belief that those undergraduate members who allowed themselves to be swayed to the extent of voting down the motion will find it hard to reconcile in the public eye their action with their constant avowals of faith in the ideal of student government.

Dignan's Stand

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

In answer to the many questions that have been asked me regarding the vote on a student president of the S.A.C., I am taking this opportunity to state through the medium of your paper why I proposed such a motion as I did, at yesterday's meeting of the Men's Council.

I believe that student opinion as a whole is in favour of student government. Such a condition at present does not exist. At the time of writing there is a body called the Joint Executive, composed of representatives of the Men's and Women's Councils. The president of the Joint Executive is also the president of the Men's Council. According to the present constitution, the president must be a graduate of this university, who is taking post-graduate work, or a member of the staff of this university.

In an attempt to get action, I proposed yesterday a recommendation to the about-to-be-appointed committee, which will have as its object the framing of a new constitution on student government. This recommendation, while not binding on the committee, proposed that only an undergraduate be the president of the Students' Council.

When the testing time came for the members to stand up and say to the student body whether or not they wanted student government, only nine men had backbone enough to say we stand for student representation. The hand of influence appeared to be hanging over the heads of those who voted against the motion. Every graduate member voted to have a graduate head of the council. Why wouldn't they vote in such a manner? They don't want any undergraduate to have the control of student affairs. They want the control in their own hands.

If any person can show reasons why the secretary to the president of General Securities Limited, can act as a mouth-piece for student opinion on this campus, I am willing to withdraw my agitation for a student president. But here is the rub, "It can't be done".

Furthermore, I have authentic information in my possession to show that the present PRESIDENT is not by the constitution eligible to sit as president. Let the blockers-brigade try to prove otherwise. This is a glaring example of how student affairs are run in this university.

Yours in freedom's cause,

B. A. R. Dignan.

Sport Is Sport

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I was much interested in your editorial yesterday on "The Queen's Game Complex".

As "a lady who has come to your shores in search of fresh environmental stimulus", I feel that you may be interested to hear that I not only find it very amusing, not a bit disillusioning, but also very much like home.

In my own country, as well as several others where I have been resident during the last few years, I have found that the atmosphere at any school or university, (with the exception of the Sorbonne in Paris, which consisting, as it does, of such a mélange of nationalities, types, sorts and species of students that it cannot be taken as an example), there is the same "heated discussion", general excitement and "series of clownish demonstrations" after the game as I hope to witness here this afternoon.

I myself, (no great sport fan in general), have been so far carried away by enthusiasm, that I have spent my monthly allowance on a ticket from Paris (France), to London, (England), to see the annual boat race between Oxford and Cambridge. I have travelled from Germany to Belgium to see the Université d'Anvers battle against the Dutch National team in football. I have been at rowdy parties after a hockey game in Germany.

Mr. Editor, in each of these countries, the "Game Complex" exists, and I, for one, not only accept but welcome it as a very bright patch of colour in an otherwise very drab horizon. I would like to point out to you, however, that in claiming this as "the inalienable right of North American mammals and members of the Anglo-American race", you are forgetting that "Sport is Sport" the world over.

I trust that I have not exceeded 300 words in this epistle, but I can't be bothered counting, anyway.

Yours sincerely,

—Betty Gourde, U.C.

JR. SCHOOL ELIMINATES SR. MEDS IN MULOCK CUP SEMI-FINAL

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The basketball situation becomes more complicated every day. As a result of the win of U.C. Juniors over St. Michael's last night, another of the three groups is faced with the problem of group playoffs, before the winners can face each other in the semi-finals and finals.

The weakest point noticeable at all these interfaculty games is the shooting. It is rather disappointing for the defence on a team to work the ball right through the opposing team, only to have the forwards lose the points through too-hasty shooting. Two examples of this have occurred in the last two days, one when University College Juniors were defeated by Junior Vic, and another when University College Juniors nosed out St. Michael's by the close score of 14 to 12.

Students of the University of Hawaii at Honolulu really have to work. They attend classes six days a week from 7.30 a.m. to 4.00 p.m.

JR. SCHOOL TAKE MULOCK PLAY-OFF

Senior Meds Bested in Close Game for Rugby Trophy

LOSERS OUT-KICKED

Junior S.P.S. eliminated Senior Meds by the score of 7 to 4 yesterday afternoon at Varsity Stadium in the Mulock Cup semi-finals. School had the best of the aerial attack, Lichty booting 40 to 60 yards consistently. Meds were the ground gainers, making yards 13 times to School's five. Meds got the only point in the first quarter, making yards twice and kicking for a rouge after three minutes of play.

In the second quarter, penalties forced S.P.S. back to their 5 yard line and when Meds gained possession an attempted drop went for a rouge. School then made yards twice and kicked 60 yards against the wind to force Meds back on their line. Shortly after, Lichty's kick to Meds behind the line, was fumbled, and Bridge-land fell on it for a touch, which he converted.

In the third period S.P.S. kicked for a point and then Long's run of 40 yards enabled Meds to boot a rouge.

In the final period Meds had a wonderful chance to score a touchdown when they gained the ball on School's 10 yard line with 2 minutes to go. The best they could do was a kick for a point.

Junior S.P.S. (7)—Flying wing, Farquhar; halves, Hewitt, Hallett, Lichty; quarter, Pearson; snap, Moffat; insides, Freeland, Mitchell; middles, Coulter, Little; outsides, Stubbs, Bridgeland; subs, West, Mabee, McNichol, Wheaton, Strachan, Eaton, Ellsworth, Baker.

Senior Meds (4)—Flying wing, Murby; halves, Bull, MacLean, Graham; quarter, Caldwell; snap, Seanduff; insides, Massig, Bartlett; middles, Long, Brown; outsides, Wensley, Gibbons; subs, Allan, Johnson, McCallum, Marquis, Spence, Dunne.

ST. MICHAEL'S DEFEATED
BY U.C. JUNIORS, 14-12

University College created still another tie in the women's interfaculty basketball series last night when they defeated St. Michael's 14 to 12. The play was very fast, with both teams going at top speed all the way. In the first half, the Double Blue outplayed their opponents by a small margin, and at the interval were on the long end of a 6 to 4 count. U.C. speeded up their passing in the second half, and went into the lead about half way through the period. The final issue was in doubt till the final whistle, the teams scoring basket for basket all through. The St. Mike's forwards were very weak in their shooting, and with a little more accuracy in this department would have made sure of their group.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

The results of to-morrow's games will in all probability decide the intercollegiate senior championship for 1930. The hopes and interests of the Varsity fans will be divided between London, where the Blues will face the Mustangs, and Kingston, where McGill will attempt to do us the favour of downing the Tricolour. McGill have always been fighters even when they are out of the contention themselves, and with the great improvement shown in their team since Frank Shaughnessy has been lending his expert services to the Red and White board of strategy, there is more than a chance that they will turn the trick than most people imagine. We saw these same Redmen perform against the "T" squad in Montreal and if they play the same kind of a game to-morrow Queen's may get a surprise.

In Hammond and Doherty McGill have just about the best running backfield in the Union, and with plungers like McTeer, Church and Company, and the great Don Young at the pivot position they are far from being easy marks. Their big weakness lies in the kicking department, Lovering being just average in contrast to Carter.

The Blues may also find their hands full when they tackle the Mustangs. Don't forget that the Westerners will be playing in their own back-yard and with that crowd of football-mad supporters to egg them on they are going to do some strenuous playing before the game ends. However, the Blues will be taking no chances and the team will take the field with the idea that the Londoners will require a great deal of beating. Several changes have been made in the probable starting line-up which are calculated to strengthen the team. Tubby Bennett, regular outside wing, is the only man on the injured list. Jack Sinclair's ankle has improved during the week and he will once more be able to take his place as the main scoring threat of the team.

The first senior hockey practice of the season was held yesterday, with eighteen men, including five members of last year's squad, turning out. There is a good chance for any aspiring candidates who want to try for the team and Coach "Red" Porter wants all such to turn out at the "T" Arena for the practice this afternoon at five o'clock.

BLUES FACE QUEEN'S IN JUNIOR FINAL INITIAL WORKOUT FOR HOCKEY TEAMS

Varsity Juniors Unbeaten; Take Seven Straight Games

QUEEN'S HALVES SPEEDY

To-morrow morning Varsity juniors, the university's only undefeated team, take the field against Queen's in defence of the Intercollegiate title and the Jimmy Douglas trophy. No other team in the city in either junior or senior rugby can boast of an unbeaten aggregation, but Coach Harry Bales' boys have hung up seven straight victories. To-morrow's tussle may bring to Varsity the only rugby title of the year, while Queen's are confident of taking both the junior and senior championships.

In Arnup and Leachman the Blue squad have one of the fastest breaking backfields in the sport and those who have not seen this pair in action are due for a surprise. The former does the kicking and his long hoists have been a feature of previous games. Leachman, the captain, is nursing a sore ankle, but will start.

On the line, Quarterback Bill Oille has an abundance of talent from which to choose his plungers, with Watson and Dennison the biggest ground gainers. Gordie Keith, at snap, shapes up more like his brother every time out, and his consistent ball handling and effective tackling have played a large part in the team's victories. Mustard and Henderson, the tackling artists at outside, have been drawing

REACH SEMI-FINALS FOR RUGBY TROPHY

St. Michael's Clash With Vic in Mulock Cup Semi-Final

NEITHER TEAM DEFEATED

St. Mike's and Victoria Colleges, both undefeated teams in their respective groups, clash to-morrow at Varsity stadium at two-thirty in what promises to be the best Mulock Cup game of the season. The fixture is a semi-final to decide who shall advance in quest of the historic cup and as neither team has lost a game this year, the battle should be exceptionally close.

Victoria are confident of taking the strong St. Mike's squad into camp and have been indulging in heavy workouts all week in anticipation of success. Special attention has been paid by Coach Menely to perfection of end runs and interference and he expects this to be the deciding factor in the game. Willis has been kicking well lately, while the team's tackling has been above average in practices. St. Mike's go into the game confident of victory and base their contention on the large scores piled up in league and exhibition games this year.

Harold to Regain His Loved One Learns to Emulate the Dew Worm

By Horatius, B.A.

Dear Girls:

Harold and I thank you for your so welcome letters of advice in the difficulty which faced my young friend. Below is the solution of the difficulty proposed by Myrtle Green, I Pass Arts, who has received the two theatre tickets as promised:

Problem—

The young man, Harold, finds himself madly in love with a young lady, Joan, who is on the verge of reciprocating his passion. He is aware, however, that Joan's best friend, Mary, to whom he has for some time been paying considerable attention, is quite madly in love with him. Harold wrote to both Joan and Mary, confessing to the first his eternal affection, and expressing to the latter his regret that he could feel no attachment for her. Unfortunately he mixed the letters and posted them in the wrong envelopes.

Neither letter bears the name of the girl for whom it was intended. Harold has discovered that the two girls have revealed to each other the contents of their letters.

What should he do now?

Answer—

Harold, if a manly fellow
 Straight will go and say hello
 To Mary, declaring that a yellow
 Cur, or one of the mad bulls that bellow
 In the fields all golden brown and mellow
 Could never be as wrong as he was wrong
 Or so deserve to feel the demon's prong
 As he deserved to feel each prong and throng
 In Hell. He'll then avow, "My love does not belong
 To you. Forget my note. . . I am a wretched fellow.
 Forgive when you are able my great wrong."
 Then like to a wriggling worm he will seek out Joan and try to win her back.

Thank you all very very much,
 Horatius B.A.

LAST PERIOD ONSLAUGHT SPELLS FINIS TO TORONTO TITLE HOPES

BREVITY FEATURES 1930 MASQUERADE

Determined on Coolness, All Superfluities Discarded
by Ladies

MALES NOT FAR BEHIND

Brevity was the order of the day at the Hart House Masquerade on Friday night. Perhaps in anticipation of a warm evening the ladies made a determined effort to wear as little as possible and some of their escorts made a valiant attempt to emulate them. Lady pirates were particularly plentiful, with ragged silk trousers and great leather boots, and not much else.

Every period and every country thinkable was represented. There were Dutch boys and Dutch girls, mid-Victorians and cave-men, hula-hula girls and geishas, innumerable cigarette girls and sailors.

Two couples dressed as people of the stone age, in leopard skins and primitive moccasins, and bearing stone hatchets, made up one of the most striking sights to be seen during the evening, and attracted considerable attention. Another couple dressed in Mephistophelian costume in black, with black lipstick and yellowed parchment faces, stood out sharply against the brighter costumes of the rest of the crowd.

The big gym was decorated with long streamers of blue and white that formed a cloudlike ceiling, brightened with the continual play of coloured lights. This year the acoustics of the gym were so improved by the hanging of burlap around the walls that the great tarpaulin used in former years to reflect the music downwards was unnecessary. A considerable improvement in the quality of the air was an indirect result.

DESERT LECTURES TO GREET SANTA

Meds Bring Skeleton to Watch
Annual Christmas Parade

S.P.S. EYES PULCHRITUDE

Varsity students were out in considerable numbers for the Santa Claus Parade on Saturday morning. From Bloor Street to College groups of students were scattered among the crowd. Most of them when interviewed by "The Varsity", said they were "in their second youth".

Meds used all the vantage points of their building. S.P.S. were out in force before the Biology Building. Mutual reprimands were hurled between Meds and S.P.S. Meds scored with "H2S, H2S, Dirty, Dirty, S.P.S."

A skeleton was an interesting onlooker, seated on the window sill of the Medical Building. There were loud cheers when Meds and S.P.S. students saw pretty girls passing in the parade. When Mother Goose, who was a pretty blonde, passed, there were acclamations from Schoolmen and Meds.

"Get his bowler," yelled an S. P. S. man when the Royal Canadian Grenadiers passed decked in busbies.

When Schoolmen were asked why they were watching the parade, one reason given was that watching the parade was easier than draughting.

With lollipops in one hand and note books in the other, two Vic students seemed to be enjoying the parade.

By A. C. Cochrane

London, Ont., Nov. 15.—Western U demonstrated to all those present at the Little Memorial stadium in London that they earned their 9 to 2 victory over Varsity Saturday in the last game of the intercollegiate series. The Mustangs would have piled up a greater score had they not passed up several chances in the earlier stages of the game. It was only the return to form of Jack Sinclair and the running of both Bell and Sinclair that kept the Toronto squad in the hunt. The Blue and White line was out-classed, the Westerners moving the yardsticks eight times to Varsity's twice on line plunges. The Purple and White tanks smashed through the "T" line as though it were mesh and blocked four of Sinclair's kicks, all of which were gobbled up by the Londoners. The last blocked kick in the final canto gave them possession of the ball just outside the Blue goal line and enabled Stull to go over on the (Continued on Page 3)

Luckily for the shockable sensibilities of the Puritans at the masquerade, the cave-men and cave-women didn't revert to type.

"Is there a doctor in the house?" Thank the gods, nobody yelled that or two hundred nurses would have been killed in the rush of internes.

The convicts for a while were the hits of the evening, especially when two of them were giving each other chair rides in the lower gallery. They and other things helped to make sloggish for position in the supper line worth while, but certainly gave one no appetite for the salad(?).

"Rendezvous." That's what it said on the programs for sitting-out places. To many it meant just so much of the French. But what a conception of "la francisque".

Knox Men Bluff Way Into Argo-Tiger Football Game Saturday

QUICK THINKING DOES IT

On Saturday afternoon "The Varsity" noticed ten Knoxites rolling down St. George Street, clad in their sailor suits.

When they arrived at the stadium they were refused admission, but succeeded in crashing the Tigers-Argos game with the help of officials who swallowed the gag, "We're going to put on a skit at half time."

Having secured ten good seats it was necessary to do some fast thinking amid the chilly breezes of the stadium. But the skit proved a successful feature of the game. They built a pyramid, did various rolling exercises, skinned a snake and gave a demonstration of the Argo rowing.

After lusty yells composed on the spur of the moment, the gate-crashers danced gleefully from the field, amid great applause.

"The nominating committee considered that they could nominate any graduate in some way still connected with student affairs," stated D. B. Murray, chairman of the nominating committee of the Students' Administrative Council and Vice-President of the Men's Council, in reply to B. A. R. Dignan's letter in Friday's "Varsity", which claimed that the present chairman was unconstitutionally in office.

"I am not aware of the exact words of the constitution, but everyone on the S.A.C. had the chance to complain when Mel Kenny was elected and no one did at that time." This fact was substantiated by another member of the committee, who was not aware whether there was a written constitution or not.

Article 5, Section T, of the constitution of the S.A.C. states, "The President, who must be either a member of the faculty of the university or post-graduate student of the university, shall be recommended by a nominating committee of three members of the incoming executive." This nominating committee is elected by the outgoing executive and last year considered at least two or three candidates before presenting their nominee (Continued on Page 4)

"The only restriction on medical students who wish to practice in the province of Quebec, is the necessity for them to have a B.A. degree," said Dr. E. S. Ryerson, registrar in medicine, when asked by "The Varsity" whether there was a comparable difficulty in medical practice in Quebec to the dentistry practice.

"A degree in medicine does not in itself confer the right to practice medicine in any part of Canada. To acquire this right a university graduate in medicine must hold the certificate of the Licensing Board of that province.

"We never have many students practice in Quebec because most of them are not sufficiently acquainted with the French language." However, the Medical Council of Canada conducts examinations whereby "any person who secures registration on the Medical Register of Canada by examination is entitled to register without further examination in any province of Canada."

In the case of a student applying to practice in Quebec they must comply with the necessary regulation of a B.A. degree.

FACULTY COUNCIL VETOES DECISION OF STUDENT BODY

W. E. Algie, Toike Oike Editor,
Suspended for One

FOND PARENTS COMPLAIN

Engineering Society Upheld Algie by Refusing Resignation

W. E. Algie, of fourth year S.P.S., editor of Toike Oike, has been suspended from the University for one year by the Council of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering as the result of objections that have been raised to certain materials appearing in the first issue of this humorous publication of the Engineering Society.

This action, the first suspension of a college editor within recollection, followed the refusal of the Engineering Society to accept Mr. Algie's proffered resignation. Mr. Algie offered his resignation some time ago, at the suggestion of Brig. Gen. C. H. Mitchell, Dean of S.P.S. Since Mr. Algie continued in office only at the request of the Engineering Society, the officers of that body regard the action of the Faculty Council of S.P.S. as a blow aimed at their own authority. Steps are being considered to reinstate Mr. Algie, who had the full confidence of the Engineering Society officers.

It is stated that the first trouble started some weeks ago when complaints reached members of the Council about the character of the articles in Toike Oike. These complaints are alleged to have originated in the homes of students entering the university for the first time. A letter from the parents of the students was addressed to (Continued on Page 4)

Appeal for Students' Support in Propagation of Religion

HAVE PERMANENT STAFF

During this week the students of the University of Toronto are being appealed to for the support of the Student Christian Association. The S.C.A. is a fellowship of students of all colleges and faculties in the university who are interested in religion or in questions related to it.

Special meetings conducted by well known student leaders from other countries are held, and many of the most interesting visitors to this university are brought by the S.C.A. A series of addresses is given each term in Hart House and there is a similar series amongst the women. Prayers are held daily in Hart House Chapel, and occasional services are held in Convocation Hall with visiting preachers.

The S.C.A. also puts at the service of all students two General Secretaries, the Rev. F. J. Moore for men, and Mrs. J. D. Hutchinson for women. Its objective this week is $2,000.00, a proportion of which goes towards the support of the Student Christian Movement of Canada, of which it is a part.

VARSITY OUTCLASSES TRICOLOUR IN JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP TILT

Eager to avenge the Tricolour seniors' victory, Varsity's undefeated juniors continued their triumphant march and retained the intercollegiate title by defeating Queen's juniors 9-3 at the stadium on Saturday morning.

Showing the effects of careful training by Coach Harry Bales, the freshman squad appeared better drilled than any team they have met this year and played clever rugby throughout the entire contest. Harold Arnpup, stellar half-back, scored all the points for the Blue, a touchdown and four singles.

Varsity opened aggressively and when the Tricolour fumbled on the 40 yard line, Arnpup booted to the dead-line. Queen's failed to gain on line plays, and when McNicholl's kick was short, Arnpup made a running catch and, eluding three tacklers, ran 35 yards for a touchdown. Leachman handed Patterson a perfect pass, and the latter ran 20 yards before being downed. Leachman followed this with another 20 yards, and Arnpup booted a perfect spiral to the dead-line.

Varsity had much the better of the play in this half, although the Queen's team were bigger and heavier, and fully earned the margin of 7-0 at half-time. In the third quarter Queen's came out fighting mad, and Fletcher tore off 35 yards on the kick-off.

Two successive penalties put play in Varsity territory and the Tricolour were pressing the Blue for the first time. Leachman's fumble gave Queen's a chance, and McNicholl put over a placement, his first in four tries.

The local squad came to life at last and Watson broke through for 40 yards. Arnpup punted for a single to make it 8-3. The midget half's long hoists put the Tricolour on their 5 yard line, and finally he kicked another to the dead-line, to make the final score 9-3.

The Blue juniors are still undefeated, and led by Captain Bill Leachman, win the new Jimmie Douglas trophy. Their entire line-up have been playing sensational rugby, and the big team should benefit next year.

Varsity (9)—Flying wing, Patterson; halves, Leachman, Arnpup, Webster; quarter, Oille; snap, Keith; insides, Calvert, Warren; middles, Watson, Dennison; outsides, Mustard, Henderson; subs, Corrigan, Monsaroff, Scott, Brebner, Lewis, Woolnough, Rogers, McGinnis, Bryers.

Queen's (3)—Flying wing, Whyte; halves, McNicholl, Jay, Fletcher; quarter, Filson; snap, Beatty; insides, F. Byrne, N. Byrne; middles, Loch-ed, Waugh; outsides, Doty, Sink-e-vitz; subs, Walker, Gusson, Marks, Defoe, Hall, Stidwell, MacBeth, Burnett.

CONSTITUTION

Following on Mr. Dignan's letter of Friday last, in which the allegation was made that the present President of the Joint Executive and the Men Students' Administrative Council was not qualified under the constitution to sit in that capacity, "The Varsity" took steps to ascertain what were Mr. Kenny's qualifications for the position and how they measured up to the qualifications required by the constitution.

The undergraduate newspaper was prompted by no personal considerations in instituting this investigation. It was felt that Mr. Dignan's assertion was such a serious one—even though it was not couched in the most specific terms—that an unbiased attempt to arrive at the truth was in the best interests of the parties concerned, the University as a whole, and the undergraduate body as represented by the S.A.C.

It develops that, if the constitution is to be interpreted as meaning what it says, Mr. Kenny has absolutely no right to occupy the presiding chair, either of the Joint Executive or the Men's Council; and that these branches of the S.A.C. have been—to all intents and purposes—struggling along this year without a president.

This is not a matter for the members of the S.A.C. to pass off lightly as if it were of no consequence. The most serious feature of the whole case is that graduate members of the Council and salaried officials have been allowed to interpret the constitution in any way they saw fit, while undergraduate members were perfectly willing to sit back and allow themselves to be fooled.

One is inevitably forced to the conclusion that the students of this University don't give a Continental whether they have student government or not; nor do they care what clique is permitted to govern them, nor who spends their money for them. It would appear, too, that "The Varsity" is in the amusing position of being gently but firmly put in its place by a group of people who—by their own admission—most certainly do not know theirs.

Art, Music and Drama

Sunday Evening Concert

Mr. Campbell McInnis, the well-known baritone and very good friend of this university, was the artist of last evening.

While Mr. McInnis is best known as a leading authority and exponent of folk-song, the program revealed his ability and artistry in a broader field.

The feature which distinguished Mr. McInnis' work from that of other singers is the exceptionally successful blending of consummate musicianship, consummate dramatic sense and above all, a high intellectualism which brings to life anything he presents.

Some interesting songs were a 17th century setting of Hamlet's "to be" soliloquy, and three very charming Elizabethan love-songs which Mr. McInnis does so well. A group of modern English songs, some composed especially for Mr. McInnis, traversed many moods, from the rollicking and amorous "See where my love a-May-ing goes," to an amusing "lament," "All 'wimmen' born are so perverse" which not only showed Mr. McInnis in a very clever guise, but delighted the audience so immensely that it had to be repeated.

Two foreign groups presenting Brahms, Debussy and Hahn, provided some exquisite and delightful singing. No program by Mr. McInnis would be complete without a ballad or two.

"The two sisters of Binnorie" reveals Mr. McInnis at the very peak of his art. In a dimly lit 13th century hall the singer revives the atmosphere so completely that the most unemotional could not but be paralysed by the drama of the tale.

The jovial roisterous Joe Tambour left the audience in a contented mood in which sleep is possible.

The work of Mr. Louis Crerar at the piano should be highly commended.

—R.A.McE.

Hart House String Quartet

The opening of their seventh season finds the Quartet not only more surely leaders in their field, but with even more finish than they have shown heretofore, and their friends who filled every seat in the theatre, gave them a most affectionate reception.

The Haydn Quartet in B minor, one of those delightful 18th century things in severely classic form which are especially revived by pianos and orchestras, was presented under ideal circumstances. The allegro moderato revealed very skilful playing. The minuet and adagio had most sympathetic handling but one wonders if music of such classic austerity gains through rather romantic treatment.

The Ravel F major quartet is modern, but not so modern as to go beyond the realm of art. The second movement "assez vite" is particularly interesting. Beginning with plucked strings it rises to real violence to subside in a beautiful lyric passage for muted strings. The adagio opening in stygian darkness with a 'cello recitative, gradually assumes brighter shades till clearest light prevails. The mood is carried over to the fourth movement "vif et agité" where lyricism is interspersed with unrest.

Mr. Seitz need not be introduced to any musical audience in Canada. His artistry and sympathetic contribution to the Dvorak A major Quintet added enormously to its effectiveness. Predominantly lyrical, this number deals with rather superficial emotions, but in precision, tone, and colour, the artists did their work exceedingly well.

The friendly intimacy of the concert was greatly enhanced when it was discovered that the quartet would meet their friends, which meant the audience, at tea on the stage at the conclusion of the program.

—R.A.McE.

Students' String Quartet

It is magnificent that the Quartet which carries a name inseparable from this university around the world should for the benefit of students present the major part of its formal program at a nominal and insignificant fee.

The audience on Friday evening was good, but considering the privilege offered, by no means what it should have been. If any cynic imagines that the quartet is merely practicing, one who has attended both concerts can assure him that they were equally excellent.

The Haydn F minor quartet, the one played at their Sunday Evening concert, was repeated with, one feels, rather more verve and assurance.

The Dvorak Quintet, new to most of the audience, met a great reception. Mr. Ernest Seitz, the well known Canadian pianist, did the delightful and difficult piano part with real understanding and enthusiasm.

One would suggest that students who have not yet bought tickets, do not hesitate to do so for even now the cost remains trifling.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

U.C. Freshies defeated Occupational Therapy 39 to 21 in a fast, well-played game at U.T.S. on Friday night. Although the Freshies had a distinct edge at the way, the Occupational Therapy outfit put up a great fight, and will probably give St. Hilda's a hard battle when they meet to-night.

Some of these Freshies should make a real showing when the intercollegiate tryouts are held. Eleanor Wallace, who jumps for them, and Mary Stewart, their sensational little forward, have been outstanding all season, and showed up particularly well in the game the other night.

Two of the basketball groups will play their last game on Wednesday. Unfortunately, there is a tie to be played off in each. U.C. Seniors and Junior Vic will meet in one of the group playoffs, while St. Michael's and Junior U.C. will clash in the other.

University College are apparently definitely out of the baseball picture. All efforts to organize a team have failed, so the interfaculty games will be between St. Michael's and Victoria, who will play a series of four games. The first is scheduled for Thursday.

S.M.C. ELIMINATE SCARLET AND GOLD

Victoria Stage Rousing Rally in Closing Minutes of Struggle

CERRE GETS TOUCHDOWN

Grabbing an early lead and holding it tenaciously against a sensational finish by the losers St. Michael's College defeated Victoria 7 to 3 in a semi-final Mulock Cup game at the stadium on Friday. The Scarlet and Gold staged a smashing offensive in the last five minutes, but lacked the punch to produce a major score. If the game had been five minutes longer, they might have pulled out a win. St. Mike's meet Junior S.P.S. on Wednesday.

Vic kicked off and on the first down Sheehy ran 20 yards on a fake kick formation. Burns tore through for 40 more, and when Bunt fumbled Sheehy's punt, Cerre fell on the oval for a touch. This lead in the first few minutes was enough to win the game, but Vic fought back and Willis kicked for their first point. Neither team was able to score again in this half, which was featured by spectacular kicking and tackling by both sides.

In the third quarter St. Mike's capitalized on a Vic fumble on their 25 yard line, and Sheehy kicked for a point. A lucky bounce three minutes later gave S.M.C. another point to make it 7-1. In the fourth canto Vic rallied gallantly and after St. Mike's touchdown was disallowed, pushed the Double Blue back to their own 25 yard line. Purchase, Vaughan and Willis fought hard for a touch, but two singles was the best they could produce.

St. Mike's — Flying wing, Nolan; halves, Schmidt, Sheehy, Cerre; quarter, Burns; snap, Pope; insides, Warren, White; middles, Cameron, Hyde; outsides, Kehoe, Whalen; subs, Loco, Ryan, Tennant, Harrison, Cavanaugh, Dell, Lacey.

with a fine baritone voice, gave a delightful interpretation of "Widmung", which, though conspicuously Teutonic, lightly-touched one's imagination, and the rich accompaniment which revealed to a great extent the deeper meaning of the text, was well done by Mrs. Weldon Kilburn. The Gretchen-inoff number was decidedly orthodox and Russian, and offered contrast with Massenet's "Le Roi de Lahore" aria that followed. The charming, sensuous and thoroughly French character of the latter, despite an occasional tinge of Wagner, was given a sympathetic rendering by Mr. Bai.

In the Scandinavian group, Mr. Bai was naturally more at home and missed none of the fine sense of colour and national vigour the Sinding and Borresen pieces demanded. Yet, the artist was equally at ease in "A Song of Canada", by Willan.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

Congratulations Queen's! Any team that can come from behind after taking a 6 to 1 lacing on their own field and completely outplay the same team later is deserving of the greatest praise. Queen's have always been noted for their courage and never-say-die spirit. It was these qualities more than anything else which have carried them to the top.

Another spinless exhibition of football was dished up by the Blues in London Saturday and hence the result, a 9 to 2 defeat. With the exception of Billy Bell and Jack Sinclair, and one or two others, Varsity simply went through the motions. A large contingent of local fans made the trip to Western in hopes of seeing the team finish the schedule with a win and the disappointment was bitter.

There is a mystery about the Varsity seniors. Everyone has been wondering and will likely continue to wonder why the team faded so woefully the latter half of the series. The pace they set in the first three games caused them to be regarded as the likely title-holders. They easily squelched McGill 11 to 1 in the season's opener; outplayed Western 3 to 2 here, and unmistakably demonstrated that they were potentially capable of winning the championship when they downed the Tricolour 6 to 1 at Richardson Stadium. Then the worm turned. A 7-7 deadlock in Montreal, a 12 to 5 beating from Queen's and, finally, Saturday's 9 to 2 setback by the Mustangs.

But it is all over now. Criticism is futile except for its news value. But it is time to do some thinking about Varsity's chances in the intercollegiate race next year . . . and some hard thinking, considering that Varsity, the largest university in the union, has won but one title since 1921 and that in 1926.

Varsity students may console themselves to a degree in the juniors capturing the intercollegiate championship when they outclassed Queen's 9 to 3 at the stadium Saturday morning. Much credit must be given to Coach Harry Bales whose team was much better drilled than any twelve they have faced this year. Harold Arnp, the Blues' diminutive half-back, accounted for all of his team's points, with a touchdown and four singles. He has been the Billy Bell of the junior squad, his running being a feature of every game.

WESTERN WRITE FINIS TO TORONTO CHANCES

second down from Western's first touch of the season. Sinclair was given wretched protection for his kicks all afternoon and considering this handicap he booted well. Time and again a Western player would break through and snare a Blue and White ball carrier for a loss.

Jack Sinclair had but a slight edge over Brown, who did the punting for the winners instead of the injured Patterson. Brown, however, kicking from behind a veritable stone wall, had great height in his kicks and placed them well. He caught faultlessly and did some clever running back of Sinclair's kicks. Patterson and Kennedy, with his tackling, were also prominent on the Western half line. It is difficult to pick out the stars on the local line as all played line rugby. Their interference was pretty and Hauch, Stull, Gugino and C. Valeriot found holes for long gains. The substitutes were no slouches either and Mike Valeriot, Tweedie and Dean figured prominently.

Billy Bell was again the star of the Blue and White aggregation. He caught faultlessly and hit long gains marked him a star. Johnny Fitzpatrick made yards on two occasions for the Blues on extension plays. The less said about the line the better. Jack White was as good as any.

Varsity had Western on the defensive at the start of the game and Brown ran a kick of Sinclair's out to the 10 yard line. Later Western blocked a kick and secured on Varsity's 42 yard line. Valeriot and Hauch combined to give the Purple and White yards and they had it on the 29 yard line. A drop kick went askew and Sinclair ran the ball out to the 35 yard line. It was a beautiful run, the longest of the game.

A kick by Sinclair put Western on their 40 yard line. Kennedy muffed a poor pass from quarter and Ruddell dribbled the ball behind the Western goal line and Patterson fell on it. For some reason it was brought out to Varsity's 10 yard line and the Blues given possession. Sinclair drove the ball to the deadline after the London line had held on two downs.

For the first part of the second quarter Varsity had Western on the run due to Sinclair's kicking and fine ball carrying. A mammoth boot by Brown drove the Blues back to the 35 yard line. Failure to give yards on a kick gave the Mustangs possession at the 40 yard line. They continued to press and Bell ran Brown's kick out and then passed the oval to Sinclair who kicked into touch at the 20 yard line on the run. Brown hoisted the ball to the deadline to tie the score at half time.

A mighty kick by Jack Sinclair in the third quarter put Varsity up, Brown being rouged by Gooderham. The "T" punter maintained the aerial attack and Western were backed to their 13 yard line. Western blocked another kick and it was dribbled the length of the field. Bell got hold of the ball but lost when he was tackled, the Mustangs recovering on Varsity's 5 yard line. The Blue line held and Bell was rouged after taking an attempted onside kick.

In the final period Western forced the play and still another blocked kick gave them the ball on Varsity's 18 yard line. Valeriot made 6 yards through centre and Stull almost moved the sticks. Brown's drop kick was knocked down but the London half recovered and made yards. Strange to say, he elected to kick on the first down and Bell was rouged. Western made it 4-2 when a snap went astray and Stull dribbled the ball behind the Blue goal line and Bell booted it into touch.

Varsity—Flying wing, Jim Sinclair; halves, Traynor, Jack Sinclair, Fitzpatrick; quarter, Bell; snap, Keith; insides, Galloway, White; middles, Dewar, McQuigge; outsides, Ferguson, Gooderham; subs, Richardson, Adams, Twaites, Riddell, Henderson, Harrison, Elson, Witzel.

Western — Flying wing, Bryant; halves, Paterson, Kennedy, Brown; quarter, C. Hauch; snap, Ward; insides, Quigley, Stull; middles, Gugino, C. Valeriot; outsides, McLaughlin, Horton; subs, Young, Thompson, Dean, O'Connor, Tweedie, M. Valeriot, Jewell.

Referee—Dave McCann, Ottawa; umpire, Harry Hobbs, Toronto; head linesman, Hugh Plaxton, Toronto.

"For the last three years the chairman has not come literally under the category of the constitution, but the committee have interpreted it as meaning in a post-graduate connection," stated A. Gordon Burns, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C. "The constitution has been construed accordingly and Mr. Kenny as the graduate member of the Hart House Debates Committee and on the executive of the N.F.C.U.S., was considered eligible for the position."

"This is the first time my attention has been drawn to the matter," stated Mel Kenny, when interviewed over the telephone. "I am totally unaware of that part of the constitution and you will have to see Mr. Burns about it. I have no idea of resigning at present as I understood that anybody connected with graduate affairs was eligible."

Professor A. T. DeLury, who was chairman of the Caput committee which investigated the student government and brought in its report last spring, said, "I have no recollection of ever examining the constitution for those details as we were mainly concerned on the matters which bore upon the administration of 'The Varsity'. Any discovery of that sort would have to be done by the Council itself."

Pistachio Pens Pungent Poems for Perusal of Pipe Puffers

By Pistachio Knut

These poems have been pronounced perfect by discriminating smokers. Only the other day I read them to a group of intellectuals at Karry's, and was permitted to go home alive. My work has been hailed as a new departure in Canadian verse. One critic has even suggested that it is a departure from Canadian verse, but I shall pardon his bad grammar.

TO HELEN KANE

I have searched every lexicon, thesaurus, tome;
I have quizzed every scholar from Peking to Rome.
How long must I wander? How long must I snoot?
O, tell me the meaning of boop, boopa doop.

BRUTUS

Yesterday I had a friend
And proudly bore the fetter.
Ah, yesterday I had a friend
To-day I know him better.

He took my one and only out . . .
How shallow friendship is!
He took my one and only out . . .
While I was out with his.

TO A GAL

If Shakespeare were alive to-day,
For you he'd write his greatest play.
If Don Juan were living now,
To you he'd make his one true vow.

If you by Bonaparte were seen,
He'd say good-bye to Josephine.

George Washington was frank and true,
But O, how soon he'd lie for you.

If William Tell had come your way,
He'd shoot an apple every day.

If you passed Humpty Dumpty's wall,
Why he'd have twice as great a fall.

And here my humble tribute closes,
O, lady, lady, let's rub noses.

the Dean, regarding humorous matter that appeared in the publication. Mr. Algie, on conferring with Dean Mitchell, was advised to put in his resignation as editor.

At a meeting of the Engineering Society Executive, that body expressed their confidence in Mr. Algie by refusing to accept his resignation.

It was only recently, some weeks after the issue of Toike Oike had appeared, that the Faculty Council overruled the decision of the Engineering Society. Taking the matter up at a meeting last week, members of the Faculty Council voted to suspend Mr. Algie for one year.

This action was taken despite the fact that Algie had followed the advice of Dean Mitchell and tendered his resignation. In the opinion of students of the Faculty, as expressed to "The Varsity", the action of the Engineering Society in refusing the resignation took all personal responsibility from Mr. Algie,

CRIMINAL LAWYER WILL MEET RABBI IN MASSEY HALL

Darrow and Brickner Debate Whether Man Is Puppet of Fate

CLEVELAND PUBLIC ROUSEO

Holy Blossom Forum Sponsors Debate to Take Place on Thursday

Forensic fur will fly next Thursday night when two of the ablest debaters and most profound thinkers of our time, Rabbi Brickner and Clarence Darrow meet in Massey Hall to debate the question, "Is man a machine?"

The origin of the debate is very interesting.

Clarence Darrow, the eminent American criminal lawyer, now retired, was raised in an atmosphere of agnosticism. Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" was the family Bible, and the works of Karl Marx and Ralph Waldo Emerson were read by a little group which gathered Sunday afternoons in the parlour of the Darrow home. It was a bitter blow to Clarence Darrow's parents when their youngest son attended a revival meeting, got religion, and "hit the sawdust trail". Accordingly Darrow spoke from conviction when he said, in addressing a meeting of a law association in Chicago, that: "Man is a puppet in the hands of Fate".

Rabbi Brickner, well known to Toronto after his pastorate of five years at the Holy Blossom Synagogue, who was raised in a deeply religious family, has crowded much experience into a varied career as medical student, educator, social settlement worker and professor, took exception to this statement of Darrow's and made it a subject for a sermon. Correspondence was exchanged between the two men, and it was finally agreed to debate the question from a public platform.

The debate, which was held in Cleveland, aroused terrific public interest, and without settling the question, only served to show that there was much to be said for both sides.

Next Thursday, under the auspices of the Holy Blossom Forum, a society which has been unusually successful in its aim to bring to Toronto prominent and worth-while speakers of every creed and philosophy, Brickner and Darrow will resume this debate.

Whether man is a machine or not, Brickner and Darrow are fighting debaters, and will provide a debate of unusual interest to university students.

U.C. Dramatist Aids Unemployment Relief

Joseph Gold, University College junior, has written a short play, "Dr. Expense", which he will produce on December 3 at Oddfellows' Temple. Mr. Gold has had considerable experience in amateur dramatics, having previous occasions attempted similar ventures. This time it is his intention to donate the proceeds toward unemployment relief. The play will be followed by dancing.

Interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity", Mr. Gold stated, "I am expecting an attendance of about a thousand. The dancing will last till one-thirty."

This is his fifth play.

A freshman at Emory University paid twelve dollars to watch a game of miniature golf. He was clamped in the local jail for refusing to leave the course promptly when it closed for the night.

Fictitious Magazine Fools Business Men

The latest in rackets came to the attention of "The Varsity" yesterday when it was learned that a certain gentleman has been selling subscriptions to a magazine known as the "Toronto Goblin", to west-end business men.

At least three employees in the office of the Swift Canadian Company are known to have been victimized. They were informed that the magazine was published by this university.

"The Varsity" is informed that charges will be laid against the offender.

STUDENTS VOICE NO PERTURBATION

Undergrads Apathetic About Matter of Changes in Constitution

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS

Prominent undergraduates interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity" concerning recent discoveries that the election of the president of the Men's S.A.C. was contrary to the constitution and void, expressed no perturbation about the matter. J. A. Bowle, president of 6th year Meds, had not read the article, but when informed of the nature of the discoveries stated, "I think we should stick to the constitution. I have every respect for Mr. Kenny. He is a good man for the job. But there are several men at the university who could very well meet the necessary qualifications."

G. E. Beament, chairman of the S.P.S. Debating Club declined to make any comment until he had seen the article.

C. L. M. Douglas, speaker of Trinity College Literary Institute thought that "the revelations indicate that the students are rather apathetic about it," since the last three presidents were legally unqualified for the post. "But," he added, "I don't think the blame can be placed upon anyone in particular. Nor do I think that there is a conspiracy among the graduates to control student government."

R. E. Diprose, president of the Dental Students' Parliament said, "It gives us more ground to work on. As far as Kenny is concerned we couldn't find a better man. He's one hundred per cent." He thought that these new discoveries should lead to further developments.

UNHEEDFUL FROSH SUBDUED BY WATER

Ohio Upper Classmen Attempt to Maintain Freshman
Cap Rule

Columbus, Ohio.—Thirteen masked knights of Ohio State University, helped to maintain the freshman cap rule when four neglectful freshmen were captured at the Ohio Union Tuesday evening and plunged into the river at the Olentangy Bridge.

The unknown upper classmen carried out their punishment in utter silence as they dragged the frosh from the building, buried them into waiting cars, and drove to the river. No words were spoken until the boys were ordered to remove their clothing and to dive in the chilly waters.

Shivering and subdued, the quartet rendered a wavering version of "Across the Field" and were submitted to an enumeration of the perils of a second offense. The black band drove away leaving the frosh to return alone and on foot.

WASHINGTON MAN CREATES FAMOUS GASOLINE ENGINE

Smallest Gasoline Motor in the World Designed by Dan Calkins

ENGINEERING STUOENT

Entire Machine Completed by Calkins Himself in His Basement Workshop

Seattle, Washington.—The smallest gasoline engine in the world is the prized creation of Dan Calkins, engineering senior of the University of Washington.

The tiny motor, which has brought its maker national fame, stands less than six inches tall. It has one cylinder with a three-quarter inch bore and a stroke of the same length. More than one-sixteenth of one horsepower is developed.

An eye-dropper full of the fuel, which consists of a light gasoline mixed with sewing machine oil, will run the engine for two or three minutes. Yet so powerful is the motor that it is impossible to stop it by holding the crank shaft.

Calkins designed and made every minute part of the machine in his basement workshop. He himself cast the crankcase and turned the miniature cylinder out of solid cold steel. One of the two small dry cell batteries which are used dwarfs the actual motor.

The engine when it is installed in a 40-inch boat, will send the craft along at a speed between three and four miles an hour.

RUSSIA LEADS IN EQUALITY

Every Individual Has Equal Chance of Self-Expression

EDUCATION CHIEF AIM

"No other country has gone so far as Russia in the development of the idea of an equal chance for every individual," said Ariam Williams, secretary to Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian poet, when addressing the Women's Interfaculty S.C.M. "Tomasha" in Annesley Hall Friday evening.

Religion to the Russian peasant stood for oppression, Mr. Williams went on to explain, and it is rather their organization than God which the Soviet government has overthrown.

Education, he stated, is the chief interest of the state. The children are under the control of the state from the age of three months to sixteen years.

Teachers and the privileged class are sacrificing and working overtime, not for personal gain, but for the good of the mass.

"True religion," Mr. Williams stated in conclusion, "is the recognition of the rights and privileges of the other man. This is what happened in Russia by violence and bloodshed and is taking place in India to-day by peaceful means."

The tea dance held by the Newman Club Saturday afternoon had an unusually large attendance. Two members of the executive, Miss Isobel Maloney and Miss Helen Dolan, received the guests.

LARGER NUMBERS OF STUDENTS COME TO PURSUE WISDOM

Registration Shows Increase of 8.6 Per Cent in 1930

PHYSIOTHERAPY LEADS

Small Faculties Grow Most,
Followed by S.P.S. and O.C.E.

The grand summary of the registration of University students for the session 1930-31, has just been completed. In the whole university there has been an increase of 8.6 per cent, or 570 more than last year's registration.

The smaller faculties show the greatest percentage increase. The course in Physiotherapy leads the way with the largest increase of 58.3 per cent, or 7 more than the 12 of last year. The department of Social Science is next with an increase of 34.1 per cent. The Faculty of Music follows with an increase of 32.2 per cent.

In the large faculties, School of Practical Science shows an increase of 21.6 per cent, or a numerical increase of 151 over the 697 of last year. O.C.E. follows with 20.7 per cent increase. Household Science is next with 13.3 per cent.

The Faculty of Medicine has an increase of 6.3 per cent. Last year Meds outnumbered S.P.S. by 65, this year, however, S.P.S. has 28 more students than Meds.

The Faculty of Arts, which has the largest numerical increase, has only a percentage increase of 5.7 per cent.

Other faculties show small increases. The School of Graduate Studies increased 9.6 per cent, and the Department of Public Health Nursing increased 2.4 per cent.

Four faculties show decreases in registration. The Administrative Course for Graduate Nurses has the largest decrease with 34.7 per cent. The Course in Occupational Therapy is next with 26.5 per cent. The Faculties of Dentistry and Forestry show decreases of only 2 per cent and 1.5 per cent respectively.

COMIC STRIP PRODUCTION SEEN BY VIC CO-EDS

Bewildered Women on Star Tour

Twenty-eight Victoria women took advantage yesterday of the trip through the Star Building, sponsored by the Victoria College Union. Youthful guides led the way through a maze of halls and stairways, and gallantly answered endless queries about funny sights, sounds and smells.

Through a narrow, murky passage the party wound its way to the rooms where roaring machines turned out Stars at the rate of 50 papers a second. This week's comics were flowing out like water from a spout.

"What's this, a telephone booth?" asked one co-ed. But it turned out to be the broadcasting room for the morning news flashes and weather reports. There was room for a man, the milk, and that was all.

Up to the top of the building, and out on the roof, and there was a bird's-eye view of Toronto, from her third highest building. Cars and men were crawling about like little black ants on the street below.

Then down 23 stories again in the fastest elevator of the city. "Seven hundred feet per minute," said the operator, "and you can work it out for yourself in miles per hour."

"Varsity" Staff Party

The full "Varsity" staff party will be held Friday, November 21, at Newman Club at 8.30. All members of the staff are urged to sign the lists on the bulletin boards. The Varsity Entertainers will provide the music.

SOCIAL BONDS DENIED TO WOMEN

Broader Culture Sought by Men, but Women Restricted at Oxford

WOMEN NOT ESSENTIAL

The men of Oxford University have uttered a new dictum concerning the women undergraduates: that women come to Oxford solely for academic reasons, instead of for the broader culture sought by the men.

"I think the reason is probably due to the European attitude to women," stated Elizabeth Brumke, I U.C., who recently returned from school in Florence, Italy. "Very few women go to university in Italy," she continued. "I imagine that since Oxford has already formed traditions that concern men only, it is hard for women to break into their societies."

"Why shouldn't they go for academic reasons?" queried Jocelyn Moore, III U.C. "They appear to come to Toronto to form friendships. Why should the government spend money founding a school for friendship?"

"Women are not the essential features of Oxford," said Mary Wallace, III U.C. "Oxford produces that rare and charming person, an English gentleman."

"The University of Toronto is broadening to its women, whether they come for that reason or not," said Miss Sophie Boyd, dean of Queen's Hall.

NO CHANGE MADE FOR OPTOMETRY

Pass Entrance Will Remain for the Meantime States Dean

NEW BUILDING PLANNED

Information given to "The Varsity" last night by Dr. J. C. Thompson, Dean of the College of Optometry, verified rumours that admission requirements are not likely to be raised next year coincident with changes in first year Pass Arts. "I hardly think it will be done this year," said Dr. Thompson, "but the standard will probably be raised some time in the near future. I expect that Honour Matriculation standing will then be required."

Though the smallest college on the campus, with a total registration of 22, Optometry draws students from the largest field, extending from Victoria, B.C., to Montreal, Que., although it is only a two year course, it is one of the most expensive.

Students in Optometry are not accepted as undergraduates at the university, according to Dean Thompson. They are registered as occasional students and take parts of their work in university buildings. The Dean did not anticipate any immediate change in this respect. "It will come in time," he said, when asked if there was any likelihood that Optometry would be made a faculty of the university. "We must still prove up a little more. Optometry is a young profession, and will have to become established first."

At present the government of the college is mainly in the hands of a

STUOENT FREEDOM UPHELO

Will Move That President
May be Undergraduate OR Graduate

Under the letterhead of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, the following letter has been received by "The Varsity", bearing the signatures of four U.C. representatives on the Men Students' Administrative Council:

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

Having been asked to publish our stand in voting against the motion for "student government", we submit that we do not object to student government. On the contrary, any clause in the Constitution ruling that an undergraduate ONLY may preside over the deliberations of the Men's S.A.C. is just as much opposed to the interests of the students as declaring that a graduate only may preside over the deliberations of the Council, for graduate students are subject to the jurisdiction of the S.A.C. just as much as undergraduates. The motion upon which the Council voted would have given the Joint Executive to understand that the Men's S.A.C. recommended the election of an undergraduate to the Presidency, totally excluding graduate students from their right of an opportunity to serve as President.

In support of student government, it is our intention to move at the next meeting of the S.A.C. that the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. be recommended to include in the proposed new Constitution a clause to the effect that the President may be either a graduate or an undergraduate student.

Permit us to point out the danger of having an undergraduate only seated in the President's chair. It is conceivable that one of the larger faculties could assume control of this office, excluding not only graduate students, but also undergraduates, which is a tyranny far more oppressive than the impartial administration of a graduate. The probable shifting of the Presidency from a graduate to undergraduate or from undergraduate to graduate would obviate this difficulty.

Further, the student body, in maintaining contact with the outside world, is represented better by one of our number who has known the university, in all its ramifications, both as graduate and undergraduate, and who is still intimately concerned with the affairs of the student. Upon this ground, also, we believe graduates should not be excluded from the chair.

In conclusion, allow us to re-state our attitude—let the President be either graduate or undergraduate.

DEFENCE

On page one of this issue we reproduce a letter signed by four of U.C.'s representatives on the S.A.C., in which these gentlemen defend their recent stand on the undergraduate president motion and seek to justify it in the light of their avowed friendliness toward student government.

We should like to point out one or two discrepancies in the beautiful structure which has been brought into being by the concentrated rationalizing of our correspondents.

The gentlemen point out that they felt it to be in the best interests of student government if the motion to exclude graduates from the presidential chair were defeated. They propose to introduce a new motion which will make either graduate or undergraduate eligible for the job. They feel that an undergraduate president would mean control of the S.A.C. by the faculty with the largest number of members under the present "rep. by pop." system. They see the advantage of having a graduate in office as lying in the fact that he has contacts with the business world.

If these gentlemen honestly believe that the motion they propose would result in the election—either at the end of this year or at any other time—of an undergraduate president, all we can say is that they permit themselves to be deluded. The very fact that they permitted themselves to be influenced at the last meeting of the Men's Council to support the "But-soft-we-are-observed" policy or the present regime of graduates, paid officials, and scholarship-seekers prevents us from taking seriously their statement in this regard.

They decry the possibility of control of the presidential chair of the S.A.C. by the majority faculty. Are we to understand that the gentlemen expect that any motion, under the present system, which would permit the election of an undergraduate president under any circumstances would obviate the possibility of this dire eventuality? If the majority faculty represented—as our correspondents appear to see it—ever felt within their grasp the power to elect a president from among their number an undergraduate president, do not the gentlemen think that these representatives would do it?

The whole "majority faculty" hue-and-cry, we submit is a thoroughgoing humbug, anyway. It is absolutely inconceivable that any single faculty could muster enough votes on the Men's Council to gain a monopoly of the president's chair. There is neither enough interest on the part of the undergraduate members, nor enough subtlety, to achieve the ascendancy which has been achieved by the present non-undergraduate regime. The fatuity of the phrase, "a tyranny far more oppressive than the impartial administration of a graduate," is perhaps the most telling comment on the situation which has been made to date.

Furthermore, it was pointed out at the meeting in question, and "The Varsity" has taken pains to point out since, that a clause in the proposed new constitution to the effect that only an undergraduate might sit as president would necessitate—in the wisdom of the Joint Executive committee—another clause by which the present system of proportional representation would be superseded by a system of equal representation for all faculties. We suggest to the gentlemen of University College that if, instead of taking up unnecessary cudgels in defence of minority groups, they confine their attacks to this latter clause, they will have a position which, though less altruistic, will certainly be more tenable.

STUDENT CHRISTIAN

The Student Christian Association of the University of Toronto is making its annual appeal for funds. This organization is a unit of the Student Christian Movement of Canada and, in turn, of the World's Student Christian Federation. The appeal which is being made is directed peculiarly to students. It is a chance for students at this University to help themselves by giving support to an organization whose every effort is directed toward the well-being of the undergraduate. Anything short of a generous and unanimous response to the present appeal will be an adverse comment on student life on this campus. We anticipate however, a generous response.

Trinity French Dramatics

At 4.30 this afternoon the second play to be produced by the Trinity College French Dramatic Club will be presented in Trinity College under the direction of Ross Parmenter.

This play, Le Garde Champetre, is not only directed by Mr. Parmenter, but was written by him. It is a light comedy, almost a farce, and is expected to prove amusing to all members of the club.

The parts will be taken by Ruth Harrison, Ruth Rous, Moyna Martin, Margaret Denne, and Ross Parmenter.

Loretto College Players

As You Like It, by William Shakespeare, will be presented in the college auditorium to-night at 8 p.m. by the Loretto College Players.

The cast of the play is made up almost entirely of third year students. The leads are said to be especially good, and the college expects to maintain the high reputation gained in former years for successful dramatic production.

Wants a Clean "Varsity"

Editor "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

There has been much talk lately concerning "The Varsity" and its policies. Under cover of the romantic claim to be fighting for "the freedom of the press" things have been published in "The Varsity" that are a disgrace to this or any other university. Do not misunderstand me. I am not opposed to having "The Varsity" entirely in the hands of a capable student body, but it would be madness to hand over the control of such a publication to

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Another fairly good week, though the vaudeville is nothing to boast of anywhere. Atlantic is still the picture you ought to see, and all the rest are above average except Dixiana. This picture (at Shea's) would be a marvel if the big scenes were not all too big and the little ones messy.

The best acting: George Arliss pursued by Genevieve Tobin, the one in Old English, the other in The Lady Surrenders; best direction: Africa Speaks; best plot: Old English; and best humour, possibly Dixiana. (It is not a very funny week.)

Our pet peeves: faking in Africa Speaks; lack of coherence in Dixiana; George Arliss eating in Old English; and Greta Garbo's voice in Romance.

Loew's.

Romance. (1). A superb picture if one is partial to Greta Garbo. But not as great as Anna Christie. Thwarted love between a young clergyman and a notorious singer. An all round cast that cannot help convince. The only evident criticism is that to hear you must sit near the front. Greta's voice does not yet carry perfectly, and is not improved when to her newly learned English, an Italian accent is added. Charlie Chase is barely funny in Looser than Loose.

Imperial.

The Lady Surrenders. (1). Very sophisticated and yet romantic and idealistic. A bored husband and wife run off to seek other loves. The husband finds Genevieve Tobin, who does the best acting in the piece. There is a bit of complication near the end when the poor husband finds he is a bigamist. But his first wife leaves to find a man for whom she would be willing to die. Because we do not like Boop-boop-a-doop Kane we were wearied by the vaudeville.

Shea's.

Dixiana. (0). Family pride, jealousy, Mardi Gras, duels, two clowns, and a lot of quite fair singing. But this show is too badly put together to rank any higher. Everett Marshall can sing, though we do not like watching him do it, but as a screen lover he is hardly convincing. Babe Daniels is the best of an average cast, though the two funny men are funny. Nan Halpern is here with a new vaudeville act. Yes, new. At least, we have never seen it before.

Tivoli.

Africa Speaks. (2). In spite of universal criticism of the faking this

JUNIOR U.C. SWAMPS TRINITY 4-1 IN WATERPOLO FIXTURE

THE SPORTSWOMAN

St. Hilda's managed to keep their string of victories for this season intact by defeating Occupational Therapy last night. Although the score was fairly decisive, practically the only difference between the teams was the edge the Saints' had in the shooting. If anything the Therapy squad had an edge on the floor play, but when they got the ball through, could not score.

U.C. Seniors will meet Household Science this afternoon in a game which was postponed from last night. The Red and White won quite handily when these two teams met before, but Household Science have improved considerably, and are out to give U.C. a good battle.

St. Michael's and U.C. Juniors are tied for group leadership, and unless Meds should defeat either of these teams in the two remaining games on the schedule they will meet in the playoff next Monday night. U.C. Seniors and Junior Vics are in the same position in Group 2, and this tie will also be decided on Monday.

At present there is some doubt as to which group winner will have to meet St. Hilda's in the semi-finals. All these teams have had a heavy schedule which finishes at the same time, and in fairness to all of them, this matter should be decided by a draw, rather than by an arbitrary decision.

Coaching from the side lines seems to be the order of the day practically at all the interfaculty games. This is a technical foul for which the penalty is a free shot. So far this has been checked up only once. St. Hilda's and U.C. Juniors are the worst offenders in this respect and have been extremely lucky not to be called offener.

A course in hymnology and the leading of congregational singing is now being offered at De Pauw University.

SAINTS SCORE LEFT AND RIGHT

Defeat Occupational Therapy by Huge Score in U.T.S. Gym

GODD SHOOTING

Saint Hilda's basketball team won their fifth straight game last night, when they defeated Occupational Therapy by a 28-14 score, in the U.T.S. gym. The Blue and Gray started off at great speed and mostly through the good shooting of their forwards rolled up a 13-2 score by half time.

Occupational Therapy played a very smart passing game and penetrated the Saints' defence almost at will. However, owing to poor shooting, this did little good.

Dot Burton at forward and Wally Gibson on defence, were outstanding for Therapy, while Bea Symons and Sally Ballard on the Saints' forward line played their usual good games.

Occupational Therapy—Dot Burton (12), Edith Milne, Betty Gamsalus (2), Audrey Coleman, forwards; Kay Hobbs, Molly, Gibson, Mary Walker, defence.

St. Hilda's—Bea Symons (15), Sally Ballard (11), Ruth Harrison (2), Margot Thompson, forwards; Naomi Slater, Gwen Murrell-Wright, Fran Crooks, Isobel Wright, Margaret Lamb, defence.

SENIOR BASKETEERS TURN OUT FOR TEAM

Stiff Competition for Positions Form Smart Workouts on Senior Team

PLAYERS MAY BE CHANGED

The senior basketball squad is fast rounding into form after some hard but beneficial workouts under the supervision of Mr. McCutcheon. There has been some stiff competition for positions on the team and although Mr. McCutcheon has divulged the names of most of the players he says that these may be changed. There are a number of men on the team this year who played last year and around whom the rest of the team is being built.

Earl Davis, last year's stellar forward, will play again, if his injured leg responds to treatment. P. Riggs and Hal Collins are two last year's forwards who are again playing on the team this year. George O'Leary the stalwart centre, has again made his position, which he played so well last year. Ben Sakler, Harold Sniderman and Gord Cook, complete the personnel of the team with respect to last year's aggregation.

Two freshmen of outstanding ability and of sensational calibre have made the senior squad for a certainty. They are McCallum of the Niagara Echoes, the Canadian intermediate champions, and Hynes, from Rochester.

Six or seven others will sign senior certificates but it has not been decided which of these will make the team.

Two Titles in Ten Years. Why?

By A. C. Cochrane, Sports Editor of "The Varsity"

Two intercollegiate senior football titles in 10 years! Why? We don't have to look far for the answer. Despite the fact that Varsity has had the material with which to build a winning aggregation, this is the lamentable situation. The fault obviously lies in the coaching, or rather the system of coaching that has been in vogue at this seat of learning.

U. of T. teams have been composed of players who for the most part have stepped into senior class from prep schools. Little effort has been made to develop or instruct other players from the time they entered college. There have been two principal reasons for this state of affairs. In the first place, no coach has had the time necessary for scouting for "finds" on the campus or even to drill them in the rudiments of the game. And the other reason is that a coach cannot be expected to build up a team of championship calibre when he does not know whether he will retain his duties for more than a single term.

In 1927 Ronnie McPherson was at the helm; the following year Blackwell was in charge. In 1929 the untimely death of Jimmie Douglas resulted in McPherson's being pressed into service again, and for the season just over Les Blackwell has looked after the coaching duties. Obviously none of these men have had an opportunity of producing a winning team. There is therefore a dire necessity that the Advisory Board of the Athletic Directorate appoint a coach with a five-year contract. Only then can a coach be given the opportunity to redeem Varsity's place on the football horizon.

But what man can the University secure under such a contract for the mere pittance, an honorarium, that the coaches have been paid? It is time that we got away from this silly twaddle that "the University of Toronto mustn't have a paid coach". Furthermore, "T" coaches in the past have had to sacrifice both time and money in tendering valuable services to their alma mater. It is too much to expect and it amounts to an imposition on the part of the Athletic Directorate to appeal to the loyalty of these men to the University. "The Varsity" knows for a definite fact that this has been the reason for the difficulty of obtaining a coach at the beginning of each season. It is extremely unlikely that the present coach will be prevailed upon to accept a second term under these conditions. Moreover, it is a fact that Joe Breen, who has had so much success with Western for the past two seasons, declined to accept an offer from the U. of T. on these grounds a year ago.

The fact is self-evident that what we need is a paid coach with a term long enough to show his ability.

A University whose teams draw gates of 20,000, and with plans underway for a huge new stadium, should be satisfied with nothing but the best in football coaches. At least so one would think,—but nevertheless the fact remains that when a man who is recognized as the peer of Canadian rugby coaches last spring offered his services on trial for one year free of charge to the University, his offer was rejected! We refer to none other than M. J. "Mike" Rodden, sports editor of the Globe, whose successes with Hamilton Tigers, Argonauts and U.T.S., have placed him head and shoulders above all other football mentors. He was rejected by the Advisory Board, which, by the way, is largely composed of graduates, on the nominal grounds that he is not a graduate of the University of Toronto. This ruling has not been very stringently applied in other cases, however, since Ronnie McPherson could not qualify under this technicality.

We should like to know what the real reason was for turning down Mr. Rodden's offer. We suspect that there is more in this than can be seen from the outside.

JUNIOR RUGBY TEAM DISCUSSED

Future of Intercollegiate Rugby Team in Hands of Athletic Directors

CHAMPIONSHIP QUEST

"Whether the Varsity junior intercollegiate rugby team will continue in quest of the Dominion championship lies in the hands of the athletic directors at their meeting to be held tomorrow morning," was the statement given by T. A. Reed, secretary of the U. of T. athletic directorate to "The Varsity" last night.

The juniors ran away with the intercollegiate championship when they defeated Queen's by 9-3 last Saturday, and now await the decision of the governing body before advancing further. At the present time there seems to be no reason why the team cannot go on, for to say the least they have won the honour. Coach Harry Bales' squad is the only Varsity rugby team to win an intercollegiate title this season, and it seems only fair to allow them to enter the playoffs.

If the squad is allowed to continue, then they will meet Montreal, the Quebec title-holders, next Saturday, the winner of that game to play the O.R.F.U. champions in the following week-end for the Eastern Canadian championship. With such stars as Arnpur, Leachman and Patterson on the line-up and stellar coaching by

JUNIOR U.C. WIN WATER POLO TILT

Were Superior to Their Opponents, Defeating Trinity 4-1 in Polo Series

WINNING STREAK

Junior U.C. continued their winning streak in the water polo series by defeating Trinity 4-1 last night. They outclassed their opponents in both halves, but particularly in the second. Play was fast in the first half. U.C. showed a keen combination and Leoric scored on a clean shot from centre. They threatened again, but Trinity saved another score by good work around the goal.

In the second half play slowed up considerably. Smith and Caplan scored in quick succession and U.C. had much the better of the play. Just before the final whistle Hunt scored for Trinity on a pretty shot. This is the first goal that has been scored against Junior U.C. this season.

Trinity—Lemon, Cuttill, Davies, Winyard, Hamilton, Hunt, Macdonald, Scott, Smith.

Bales, the team will certainly be hard to defeat and this will not be accomplished except after a hard struggle.

ENGINEERS AND IRISH TO BATTLE FOR CUP

Both Teams Evenly Matched for First Game of Finals

AERIAL DUEL FORECAST

St. Michael's College and Junior S.P.S. meet in the final game for the Mulock Cup to-morrow at Varsity Stadium. These teams are undefeated, but both had close calls in getting through the semi-finals, Junior S.P.S. eliminating Senior Meds 7 to 4 and St. Mike's defeating Victoria 7-3.

The Schoolmen's best threat is the sensational hooking of Lichty, while the Irish rely on the spectacular running of Burns and Speechey to gain ground. The lines are about equal in weight, but School will have to hold better than they did against Meds to stop the Irish plungers.

St. Mike's showed poor condition in their last game and if the Engineers can keep the score down in the early stages, they should take the game.

CORRESPONDENCE

students of such a calibre and sense of fitness, (or lack of it), as those who would allow such an article as that by P. A. Gardner in to-day's issue, to appear in print. I cannot be too blunt in registering my disapproval of the management of our undergraduate newspaper. If such is to be the tone of the publication, I would rather deny myself its services than have such nauseating effluvia issuing forth under the name of the University of Toronto.

Yesterday, you complained of the use of the term "Toronto University" in reference to our seat of learning and culture. To-day, you print such an article as would put "Hush" to shame. Which do you candidly consider is of greater importance to our university? It indicates a decided lack of judgment when anyone should begin to reform and better the university by starting at a name. I am rather of the opinion that if any reforming is to be done, it should start at rock-bottom and the name would take care of itself.

The position of critic, as we all know, is much easier than that of the actual worker. However, I have read "The Varsity" quite regularly and I have almost as regularly dropped it with a sick, flat sort of feeling, intermingled with surprise and chagrin that I should belong to an institution, supposedly uplifting and enlightening, which would allow such stuff to be printed. "The Varsity" has so deteriorated that its chief points of value now are its bulletin board and its sports review whereas a survey of its pages would indicate that it has much room for something in addition to this, and that it was probably originally intended for something better than that into which it has been turned. Then how is it that it has descended to its present level? Is "The Varsity" merely seeking to show its freedom by printing any matter whatsoever, however insipid and worthless it may be? A poor kind of freedom, this. If freedom means simply casting off the yoke of restraint and reserve and pandering to any inclination or desire, I would rather see "The Varsity" under an iron-bound censorship.

Fellow students, I frankly appeal to you. Do you want to see "The Varsity", your paper and my paper, continue to publish such choice morsels as in to-day's paper, or would you prefer something which, if not finer, is at least purged from its profanity and filth? The time has come when there should be a definite, avowed, student opinion on this matter. At present "The Varsity" seems to me to be seeking to ascertain how low it can delve and get away with it. As far as courtesy or respect for other people's feelings goes, I am led to believe that "The Varsity" cares not a snap of the finger. Apparently that would be limiting its freedom too much.

Hoping I have not been so frank as to be brutal and sincerely wishing for a clean "Varsity", I am, yours sincerely,

"The Canadian Government is co-operating with ranches and exporters in their efforts to secure a market in Great Britain for Canadian cattle," said Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, who visited Montreal recently to inspect an experimental shipment of western steers at the stockyards in that city. The cattle, comprising 116 head of shorthorns, Herefords, Angus and pure-bred steers, were brought to Montreal on Canadian Pacific Railway for shipment to Manchester, England.

Analyzing the causes of business depression in Canada, E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in a speech before the American Institute of Steel Construction, recently, recalled American suggestions that cancellation of foreign debts (the big feature of the war debts) present world conditions and benefit the country that cancelled them. "It is not surprising," said Mr. Beatty, "that our own great vision have reached the conclusion that if they (the war debts) were removed, industry would be stimulated, trade would expand, and prosperity would return, and out of the revivification of the world conditions would inevitably come great benefit to the United States."

A forty-mile ski marathon from Lake Louise to Banff will be one of the big features of the Banff Winter Carnival which will open February 1st next. The run will cross turbulent mountain streams and will follow ascending and descending ridges of great height. "No smooth travelling in the last half" is the way skiing experts who have planned it, describe the event.

Fur farming in Canada is now established as a leading industry. The latest available figures show that the industry to-day represents a capital value of $22,980,617, of which $16,401,453 is invested in fur-bearing animals. Prince Edward Island is the leader in the industry, with Ontario and Quebec not far behind. Ten years ago total value of fur-bearing animals on fur farms in Canada was placed at $4,723,105.

Showing of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for the month of September, which an increase of $1,721,845 was shown in net earnings over the total for September of last year, in the face of an actual decrease in gross earnings, is a tribute to a management's ability to adapt itself to unfavorable conditions, according to a financial authority of Montreal. The showing itself is not an indication of improved business, for gross earnings were only $19,192,325 as against $19,551,217 one year ago, a decline of $358,891, but it is a favorable development for the company itself. What was done was to cut down operating expenses from $14,540,597, shown in September one year ago, to $12,460,060 for September, 1930. Some indication of what reinforcement in overhead costs could accomplish was given in the August figures, when starting out with a decline in gross earnings of $2,182,387, the company was able to show a natural increase in net of $383,376 over the corresponding period of last year. The results for September are naturally even better than this.

Garrulous Gedunker Gushes Gently To Guileless Girl of Glamour

By C. L. Coburn

For the benefit of those bashful swains who habitually tie their tongues up in knots whenever they are inflicted on the presence of the fair (or unfair, or as our French professor usually explodes, LOAFAIRE) sex, we have drawn up a conversational plan to be followed, with the addition of the proper words and phrases in the blank spaces.

She—Isn't the moon beautiful to-night?

He—Why ask me? I haven't looked at it. There's too much competition nearer home. I could die . . . looking at you. (In this space place the name of the woman in question. If you do not know it, it is not wise to insert the word from.)

She—I bet you've said that to lots of girls.

He—Yes . . . (name again) I have. I used to flirt with every girl I met. But you must believe me when I tell you . . . (name once more); preferably the same name; any other is usually effective, but not pleasantly so that since I met you there has been no other girl in my life. I am not the man I was a . . . (day, week, month, year) ago. I feel clean, and pure, like an Ivory Soap ad. You wouldn't believe me if I told you about all the nasty things I used to do before I met you.

She—Oh, but I would! Do tell me.

STUDENTS DECIDE UNDERGRAD DAILY NOT A DIRTY RAG

Interviews Reveal Opinions

NONE AGREE WITH LETTER

"I Think 'The Varsity' Is All Right, and Not Dirty", Says Arts Man

Over a dozen students were interviewed yesterday afternoon by "The Varsity" in an attempt to find out if they agreed with the letter published in yesterday's "Varsity" under the heading "Wants a clean 'Varsity'."

They were all asked if they were disgusted with the paper; if they thought it was dirty, and if they thought it a fair expression of student opinion. Not a single one agreed with the spirit of the letter (they had not all read it), although a few considered "The Varsity" somewhat "dirty."

Leo Dault, O.C.E.: "It's all right, except the sparking stuff."

Miss Merm Parker, II U.C.: "Oh no. I don't read it very often. I don't take time. I don't read the daily papers either."

K. M. Valin, I Pass Arts: "I think 'The Varsity' is all right, and not dirty."

Two women answered unanimously and simultaneously: "No, indeed, I consider 'The Varsity' a pretty fair expression of student opinion."

George Watson, I Pass Arts: "No, hell, I don't think it's dirty at all, but I did object to the story of the dis-appointed squirrel."

GENERAL OPINION VAGUE

That the women of the university know deplorably little and care still less about the movements of the S.A.C. was evidenced yesterday when "The Varsity" investigated the matter.

"All I know is that there's one person from each year represented," said a fair U.C. soph, "otherwise I'm all in the dark!"

A Household Science junior was quite decided in her opinion that "most people just take it for granted that it's there, and think no more of it," while a Vic freshette could connect nothing with it except the compulsory feel.

The general opinion received by "The Varsity" was one of vagueness concerning the S.A.C. and might be summed up in the rather bold but emphatic statement of one U.C. girl: "The S.A.C. seems enormous to us of the common herd, and does not appear to vitally affect university affairs. As far as I can see, it is only concerned with debating a suitable colour for the Varsity blazer, and looks after the sale of athletic tickets, etc."

Even events printed in "The Varsity" do not throw much light on its tactics, and that is the only means of information which the ordinary student gets. Wouldn't it be a good idea to awaken more interest and enthusiasm in the minds of students by printing in "The Varsity" a list of the S.A.C. duties and regulations?"

M. OE CHAMP GUEST AT WOMEN'S UNION

The first of the series of weekly teas given by Miss Kilpatrick, Dean of Women of University College, was held at the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street yesterday afternoon. Those invited were the women of fourth year University College, the special guest being M. de Champ.

Miss Kilpatrick plans to have the first four teas for the women of the various years, the third year being invited next Tuesday.

PASS MODIFYING LAW

The modifying law which has recently been added to the Quebec Dental Act is now in force in the province of Quebec. Heretofore, a large percentage of Varsity graduates in dentistry were practically excluded from practice in Quebec, by a law which made it necessary for dentists to register in that province four years before beginning to practice. The new law will admit many more Varsity graduates.

It will be noticed that no mention is made of women in the following extract: "Notwithstanding all law to the contrary, the Board wishes to accord the license for the practice of dental surgery to all persons of the male sex who, having followed for at least four years a regular course in one or more Canadian universities outside of Quebec and completed it, and who have obtained the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery, provided always that such person meets the following conditions:

(a) To produce a proof establishing that before his admission to the study of dental surgery, preparatory studies had been completed, that in the judgment of the Board were at least equivalent to those required of the candidates of this province, or to pass the examination of the Board to obtain a certificate of competence."

BANQUET ENOS IN ROW

The frosh took the Cake, thus winning the annual soph-frosh fight for the possession of the first year cake which took place after the athletic banquet at Trinity House last night.

The Cake was presented to the first year president by R. F. Yates, the president of the Athletic Association of Trinity College.

The frosh immediately started a rushing movement towards the door which the sophs did their best to frustrate. For the next half hour it was impossible to distinguish one side from the other or the cake from the turf.

Finally it was announced that the cake was inside and the frosh were allowed to partake of their spoils unmolested.

Do Not Fear Preponderant Size of Larger Colleges Such As U.C.

Student opinion would seem to be heartily behind "The Varsity" in its fight for an undergraduate president of the Students' Administrative Council, as noted in opinions secured.

Leo Malania, Arts, U.C., expressed himself as being altogether in favor of making it compulsory for candidates for the presidency of the S.A.C. to be undergraduates. Under these conditions the larger colleges would to a certain extent have a correspondingly greater influence on the election of the president, he said. This would be quite fair, to carry out the theory of proportionate representation. The interest taken by the different colleges in electing their representatives would be a healthy thing for student government, he went on to say, and in the S.A.C. itself a certain amount of healthy friction would ensue.

A Victoria student who refused to give his name, expressed himself heartily in favor of limiting the candidacy for S.A.C. president to undergraduates. It would be better to have an undergraduate president, even if he were under the control of the larger faculties, than to have a graduate president who would probably be

Club Asks Everyone to

The University Italian-Spanish Club held its second meeting this year on Tuesday evening at Wymilwood. A large number of both men and women were present to enjoy the excellent program provided. After a few opening business formalities the president, Angus Ross, made a few remarks. He urged undergraduate members to take part in the program at future meetings. During the year the club will present both an Italian and a Spanish play.

Mr. Reginald Godden of the Conservatory played several delightful piano groups including selections from Italian and Spanish composers. Dr. Fontanelli spoke a few words in Italian, expressing his liking for Canada, especially Toronto. "Italy," he said, "is a country of love, but America is a country of gold."

The speaker of the evening, Dr. Sansone, gave an address on "State Education in Italy," which was well received. In the last fifty years, according to him, illiteracy has decreased from 66 to 10 per cent. The great change has, of course, taken place under Mussolini.

The gratitude of all to the speakers and to Mr. Godden was voiced by the president at the close of the program. The refreshment hour was spent in conversing in the two languages without mixing them seriously.

Possibility of a correspondence course for men taking the three-year apprentice course before entering the Ontario College of Pharmacy for the final two years of the Pharmacy course was discussed by the College Council holding their semi-annual meeting yesterday.

The course would tend to remove some of the danger of permitting the apprentices to handle drugs while they have little or no training, it is felt.

A further advantage of the plan would be in the higher standing among pharmacists in that they would be prepared for a stiffer course when they arrived at the college. In this way the standard of the college would be raised.

A motion of congratulation to Hon. T. G. Murphy, a former pharmacist, on his accession to a position in the Dominion Cabinet, was passed.

Blissful Ignorance Regarding S.A.C. Revealed By Inquiry

"Are they men or women?" "I neither know nor care!" "Who knows?" "My education has been neglected!" were some of the encouraging replies which greeted enquirers yesterday as to the personnel of the S.A.C. "I noticed from 'The Varsity' that B. A. R. Dignan appears to be a member of the S.A.C." was about the most intelligent answer received after a continued search for information.

One man, when interviewed, declared that the only S.A.C. representative he knew was W. L. May of Victoria College. On further investigation, however, it was found that the Mr. May mentioned is not an S.A.C. representative, but a member of the S.C.M. Answers such as these formed the only enlightenment received from assiduous attempts to secure from students of most of the different faculties a knowledge of the names of the S.A.C. representatives.

"The S.A.C. is the Students' Administrative Council, which is the supreme embodiment of the principle of student self-government in the Uni-

'PAPER BE FREE,' SAYS PROFESSOR

Victoria Men Disagree "They Have No Sympathy With Publication"

FEAR DAILY WILL IMITATE

"An undergraduate paper must be free or there is no reason for having one," said Professor G. Norwood, when asked what he thought of the letter which appeared in yesterday's issue of "The Varsity."

"Student opinion will eventually make itself felt and therefore there is no use trying to force a paper to be eminently respectable. The only dangers I can see which threaten an undergraduate paper are those of imitating the commercial press and stereotyping remarks."

Minerva Sinclair, IV University College, referring to the same letter, said, "If we didn't have Victoria to look after our morals no one else would. However, there seems to be quite a strong feeling against some of the feature articles which have appeared."

A Victoria student who did not wish to be quoted, said, "I have every sympathy with an undergraduate publication, but not for that sort of stuff. I'd rather be blackmailed in Hush than be quoted by 'The Varsity'." I think the writer of the letter is one hundred per cent right and I know that Victoria students are not the only prudish people on the campus."

A reply to this letter, written by Mr. A. C. Cochrane, sport editor of "The Varsity", will be found on page three.

Mr. Cochrane, Sports Editor of "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

We have been asked by the Rugby Club to reply to your article "Two Titles in Ten Years. Why?" which appeared in the "Varsity" Nov. 18th, 1930. The Rugby Club feels that some of the conclusions regarding coaching at the University that you have drawn are erroneous.

It is unfortunate that the article appeared at this time as the rugby season has just closed it appears to be rather a direct attack on the coaching ability and system of the present (Continued on Page 4)

HAMILTON WRITER ADDRESSES WOMEN

Women's Press Club Favoured
by Talk With Noted Journalist

MISS E. J. REYNOLDS, GUEST

"Critics are born, not made," declared Miss E. J. Reynolds, of the Hamilton Spectator, who spoke at the Women's Press Club yesterday, on the subject of play and book reviewing. "The critic and the creator are complementary to each other, but the critic can discern the impulses behind the forces and inspiration of the creation that is generally impossible to the creator himself."

Criticism is not destructive, she explained, but should strive to be constructive, kindly and unobtrusive. One should not destroy to destroy, or for the sake of cleverness. Sincerity should be the basis of all criticism. Also the critic must keep an open mind for truth, not sophistry; needs a keen mind and unimpeachable intellectual integrity.

"Few books to-day, other than poetry, possess spirituality, yet every book leaves us with a downward or upward look," she continued. "For play reviewing, the same qualities are encountered as in books, but one must know something of drama, and love the theatre. A real play is art that conceals art, dramatic machinery hidden."

"A wise critic will have its influence on the cultural life and production of the time; also to be kind one must be cruel. Criticism is largely a matter of growth and development. You can never impress the other fellow with what you have never felt. Put what you feel into your creative work, and subordinate your egotism to your artistic sense."

LOST!

A perennial editorial is that which proclaims "Lost—One College Spirit". And, so to speak, here we are again. College spirit (singular, please—we are tired of the pun about college spirits), is in ample evidence at the Queen's-Varsity game, perhaps a little at the Hart House Masquerade. Otherwise we have not noticed it around in any noticeable quantities. Intercollegiate teams have our support so long as they are winning. Elated by visions of the Big Blue's success, even the youngest freshman claps his neighbours heartily on the back and yells, "Yea, Varsity!" Discoveries, such as Dr. Banting's, which attract the world's attention, cause us to boast proudly that we belong also to this university. And so on. Yet it was shown last week how feeble is the undergraduate interest in his or her own representative student executive body. And that is only one current example.

The reasons are numerous and obvious. The Western-Varsity game last week showed one. There was an example of a small university, both team and supporters, filled with the same fighting spirit. But it is as platitudinous as it is true to talk of the great size of our institution as an excuse for this lack of college spirit.

Faculty loyalty is in abundance. Indeed, as an evidence of it, two colleges are now facing the payment of a bill for smashed doors and broken windows. That may not be commendable, but at least it reveals something stronger than apathy. Besides the quieter, finer side of college loyalty does not have to be sought far to be found.

Perhaps this situation is all for the best. Perhaps the university as a whole is too numerically incomprehensible, its composition too complicated, to inspire the larger loyalty.

Or is it that we have out-grown college spirit, being too smug and self-sufficient even to be aware that it is lacking from our midst? Or, yet again, have we become, like the women of Oxford, too academic to worry about group loyalty? Our crowded libraries, even at this early date, might lead us to that novel conclusion.

Whatever the reason, and whether the loss be for the good or for the bad, still it is a loss. It is only too evident that "Lost—One College Spirit", is a sign which has been hanging in the show-window of the University of Toronto for some time—and as far as the undergraduate interest in 1930 is concerned, it may continue to hang there.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Supports Demand For Pro Coach

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Congratulations to the Sports Editor for his biting editorial of Tuesday, 18th! It is about time a strong agitation by the student body was set into motion towards introducing a new coaching system. It is not hard to see that something is wrong somewhere.

A man is needed who can instill the "punch" into the Varsity team. It is the fighting spirit only which can produce full success.

That "Mike" Rodden's offer was rejected is lamentable. To one who has followed his great success at both Hamilton and U.T.S., this news comes as a terrible blow. Let us think of the team for a change, rather than the petty ideas of graduate favouritism.

That Mr. Cochran has started

Boyle, who is now president of the Maritimes Rugby Union and a member of the executive of the Rugby Union of Canada; first honorary vice-president, John A. MacLean, retiring captain and interprovincial player; second honorary vice-president, E. C. Knowles, M.A.; president, D. Telford, Med IV; vice-president, E. T. W. Nash, Med V; secretary, F. O. R. Garner, Med III; captain, H. S. C. Archbold, Trinity II; manager, Graham Lawson, Trinity I.

The retiring president, E. C. Knowles, congratulated MacLean and Archbold for the successful season of the two teams and brought forward several suggestions which the club will present to the Ontario Union, especially in regard to the selection of interprovincial teams.

something real in the way of an agitation is my real and sincere hope.

Art, Music and Drama

Loretto College Players

Last night the Loretto Players presented As You Like It by William Shakespeare, in their little theatre in the college building. In spite of a certain lack of reality necessarily incident to a play in which the male parts are performed by girls, the twenty actresses did infuse a distinct naturalness into the production, and at times were genuinely convincing.

Credit for the success just goes first to the director, Sister Estella, whose delicate and detailed knowledge of the possibilities inherent in Shakespearean drama was evident in almost every one of the fourteen scenes. Her handling of the forest scenes of Celia and Rosalind; of Audrey, Touchstone and William; and of the finale in which nineteen players were grouped on the stage, was almost perfect.

The most finished performance of the evening was that of Mollie Hopkins as Rosalind, though she was noticeably more at home in her part when disguised as Ganymede. Of almost equal merit was the work of Hester Moran as Jaques. A less melancholy Jacques we have never seen but she was by far the most successful of the girls with straight male roles. Isabel Maloney as Touchstone, was rather overshadowed by the others, except in her scenes with Emma Poupore, as the shepherdess. This pair of comic lovers were delightful.

Joan Hopkins as Celia was fair, quiet and restrained, a fine contrast to the dark and entrancing Rosalind.

More than any other isolated part of the play we enjoyed the two songs sung by Dorothy Smith, as the First Lord, though her slight soprano voice tended to emphasize the incongruity of the all-girl cast.

It was interesting to note the evident zest with which all the players entered into their roles. They must have enjoyed preparing the play, so there is no doubt but that the presentation was a success. We wish some of the other societies in the University would get rid of the mechanical melancholy with which they habitually perform, in favour of the more natural though occasionally stilted atmosphere of the Loretto Players.

university dramatics took place at Trinity College yesterday afternoon, when Ross Parmenter presented his own farce, "Le Garde Champetre" before the French Dramatic Society of the college.

The audience was amused by the action, which takes place in the kitchen of a large house. There the cook sits, reading "La Vie Parisienne", and complaining of the ill-treatment meted out by her mistress "who would make a good general, for she knows how to give orders." Her lover, the policeman, enters, and she is able to entertain him with the best wine of the house.

They are interrupted by the daughter, Jeanne, who is on the point of reporting his lack of duty when she remembers he might be useful in getting her out of a summons for driving 100 kilometres an hour.

The entrance of madame sends the garde under the table and the remainder of the play is concerned with his escape, while madame is making bonbons.

Ross Parmenter made a very dashing "garde champetre" and the mother and daughter were played with considerable enjoyment by Ruth Harrison and Moyna Martin. The great difficulty was the French accent and lack of familiarity with the way of speech.

M.C. Players' Guild

Shom, a social satire by Frank C. Thompson, is this week's offering at the U.C. Players' Guild, under the direction of Mr. Victor Lange. The cast includes Miss Patricia Godfrey, Mr. Andrew Allan and Mr. J. J. Knights.

The play has had rather an interesting history in the theatre. It was originally produced by Sam Hume as the dedicatory piece of the new Arts and Crafts Theatre in Detroit; and subsequently by Maurice Browne of the Chicago Art Theatre.

The action takes place in a suburb outside of New York and embodies a suggestion as to the ideal method of entertaining an unexpected guest in the person of a gentleman burglar. It also exhibits the eternal feminine in conflict with convention; along with this it contrives to satirize social pretensions very effectively and be quite amusing withal.

BLUE JUNIORS AND DANFORTH'S OPEN S.P.A. SERIES TO-NIGHT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Audrey Stevens, of Household Science, made her first appearance on their team last night, when she turned out against Senior U.C. She played for Humber College in the city league, and was on several championship teams. With a little practice she would be a welcome addition to any team.

Two of the basketball groups end their schedule to-night, one when St. Michael's meet Meds, and the other when Household Science clash with Junior Vic. Unless Meds or Household Science succeed in upsetting the dope, both these groups will be tied.

The other game scheduled for to-day is St. Hilda's against U.C. Freshies. On their showing last night against Senior Vic, the Freshies have a real chance to hand the Saints their first defeat of the season. They have been improving steadily, and have some very speedy forwards.

The baseball season opens to-morrow when St. Michael's and Vic will clash in the opener. For the first time in years, the Double Blue have a team which will be hard to beat. They have an excellent pitcher, and the rest of the team shapes up well. Vic will probably have their usual steady team, although handicapped by the loss of Daisy Quance, who has pitched for them for two years.

IN REPLY

By A. C. Cochrane, Sports Editor, "The Varsity"

We are pleased to publish in to-day's issue of "The Varsity" a letter written on behalf of the Rugby Club and signed by Robt. J. Galloway, secretary of the club, and John D. Keith, captain of the senior team. The writers take exception to the editorial which appeared in yesterday's "Varsity" headed, "Two Titles in Ten Years. Why?"

We deny that there was any reflection whatsoever intended upon the ability of Les Blackwell, the present coach. We regard Mr. Blackwell as being a first class coach in every respect and have not hesitated to say so on more than one occasion. Our criticism was not directed at the present coach, but rather at the system of appointing coaches at the University of Toronto. What we said was this: "The fact is self-evident that what we need is a paid coach with a term long enough to show his ability". And we do not hesitate to reiterate that statement.

The writers state that their answer was on behalf of the Rugby Club. But conversations with several members of the senior team have revealed that they were in accord with the sentiments expressed in our article of yesterday. Moreover, we know positively that we have the backing of the mass of graduates, undergraduates and persons prominent in University athletic circles in our stand.

We hasten to assure the writers of the letter that we were fully acquainted with the system of coaching that now exists, prior to the writing of the editorial. The fact remains that it has not been successful and it is high time that it be relegated to the scrap-heap. The reasons for a change we thought we had made clear. A coach cannot be expected to build up a championship team in one year.

The allegation that we have attempted to turn rumour into fact may be dismissed by referring the gentlemen to a speech made by Mr. Rodden at a U.T.S. banquet last spring. At that time Mr. Rodden stated that he had heard that he had been signed up to coach the Hamilton Tigers for another season, but that such was not the case. He thereupon offered his services as coach of the University of Toronto team for one year free of charge and deplored the fact that while we had here material capable of winning Dominion football championships, it was not being fully developed. We feel that it in no way lessens the prestige of Mr. Blackwell as a rugby coach when we maintain that Mr. Rodden's offer should have been accepted. Further, we know that Blackwell himself was strongly in favour of the acquisition of the Hamilton coach.

Perhaps the Athletic Directorate and the Advisory Board could inform us why this offer was turned down. There is no disputing the fact that the offer was made.

We do not retract the statement that Joe Breen refused to coach the U. of T. team on the grounds that "there was not enough in it". He was approached by an influential person in local athletic circles and urged to take the position. The time has come when it must be realized that it amounts to an imposition on the part of the Athletic Directorate to ask a coach to give his services to the University for the paltry remuneration they now receive.

SENIORS PREPARE FOR S.P.A. GAME

Last Year's Forward String Intact for This Season

PORT COLBORNE DEC. 2ND

The senior Blue hockey team has been practicing a week and already the team is taking shape as daily the squad is pruned of the members who cannot quite make the grade. Strenuous workouts are the order of the day for the senior sextette have drawn stiff opposition in the first S. P. A. game, playing Port Colborne at the Arena on December 2nd.

Paul, stellar defence man, and Marshall and McMullen, two fine wing men, are missing from last year's squad and their places are being contested for by last year's junior and intermediate squads, along with some fine newcomers.

Ames and LeBar will again keep goal. The defence will be selected from Dewar, Whitehead, who is at present out with quinsy, Smillie and Williamson.

On the forward line will likely be Stewart, Harley and Murray of last year's senior sextette. The remaining front rank places will be contested for by Brant of last year's junior team, Leake, Clute and Ferguson of the intermediates, and Lenahan, who previously played for Owen Sound.

This year's group will likely provide some of the finest hockey in Ontario as Varsity will be opposed by the fine National squad, an all star Marlboro outfit, and a fourth team, possibly Queen's.

Sydney University won the field hockey championship of Australia recently.

VARSITY JUNIORS MEET DANFORTH'S

S.P.A. Schedule Brings Two Fast Teams Together To-night

GAME AT MUTUAL STREET

To-night at the Mutual Street arena Varsity juniors, last year's Big Four winners, meet Danforth's in what promises to be one of the best S. P. A. games in the schedule.

Danforth's have added several strong players to their already strong line-up and are confident of their ability to eliminate Varsity in the first round. On the other hand the juniors, with a good nucleus of last year's men back, and a big assortment of last season's stars, have what looks like a big threat in junior hockey.

After starting the practices with a squad of fifty, twenty-five players were discarded last Friday. Coach Sullivan is taking a string of fourteen of his best players along for to-night's fixture.

In goal there are Frank Shipp and Hoddad from the Sudbury Wolves. On the defence, Copp, from U.T.S., Donovan and White, from Upper Canada, will provide a strong opposition to the Danforth attackers. With May, who starred last year with Upper Canada, Cunningham from last season's team, and Farrell alternating at centre, the pivot position of the Blue and White attacks will be well filled. On the wings, Hendry, the hard working attacker of last year's line-up; Boddington, McPherson, the flashy centre who has made fame for himself with Bloor Collegiate for the past two years; Hodgson and Kennedy, will form the remainder of the forward lines which are expected to bulge the Danforth twine.

U.C. VICTORIOUS OVER SENIOR VIC

Hard-Fought Basketball Game Won by Freshies of U.C.

VIC FIRM STANO TAROY

Last night at U.T.S., U.C. Freshies were victorious over Senior Vic by a score of 31 to 30. The game was very closely contested all though, neither team being at any time more than one or two points ahead of the other.

U.C. were leading at the interval by a one-point margin, 24 to 23. From the first Eleanor Sedgewick was outstanding for Vic, and chiefly due to her fast, steady play, Vic were able to keep right behind the Red and White. After half-time U.C. tried hard to increase their lead, but the good work of the Vic guards prevented them from running up a larger score.

Mary Stuart at forward, and Eleanor Wallace and Hilda Layman on the defence were outstanding for U.C., while Eleanor Sedgewick and Dot Bishop led the Vic attack.

U.C.—Mary Stuart, Nookie Daly, Frances Weisberg, forwards; Eleanor Wallace, Grace Gristwood, Hilda Layman, defence.

KNOX TAKES PART IN SOCCER FINALS

Seven of Original Champions Star With Present Finalists

U.C. LINE FORMIDABLE

The first game of the final for the Arts Faculty Cup between Knox and University College will be played on the front campus this afternoon. Neither of these teams have suffered a defeat this season and a very close contest is expected. The defending champions, Knox College, have held the cup for two years and are slightly favoured to come out on top.

U.C., however, under the capable management of W. M. Gray, have a well trained, smooth working team. With the exception of Goldenberg, a full back, and Gray, at the half-line, they have no outstanding players, but their unselfish combination is a treat to watch.

Vic—Eleanor Sedgewick, Willa Mahoney, Betty Keyes, forwards; Kay Carscallen, Dot Bishop, Anne Storie, defence; subs, Mary Hamilton and Kay Jordan.

KEITH, GALLOWAY ATTACK EDITORIAL (Continued from Page 1)

At the beginning of the season the critics claimed that the Varsity team had never appeared in better form or more efficiently coached than this year. The rugby team are unanimous in their praise for Mr. Blackwell's coaching. They feel that they have greatly added to their football knowledge and have thoroughly enjoyed playing under his guidance. Careful critics who had attended practices as well as the games would have appreciated this fact.

We wonder if you fully understand the present coaching system and how it is suited for developing players and scouting for finds as you call them. There is not only a senior coach, but a board of coaches for the four university teams. Men with rugby ability who wish to play are asked to turn out in their freshman year for the freshman or junior team. The rest turn out primarily for the senior team. The coaches grade them according to their ability and allocate them to one of the teams. If during the season any of the players show sufficient improvement or unusual ability, they are immediately reported to the senior coach and asked to report to a higher team.

Apparently you have accepted as definite facts certain rumours that were abroad last spring concerning the coaching situation. The advisory board or athletic directorate did not make any offer to Mr. Breen nor did they receive one from Mr. Rodden.

Yours sincerely,
Robt. Galloway,
Sec. Rugby Club.
John D. Keith,
Captain, Senior Team.

KNOX TAKES PART IN SOCCER FINALS (Continued from Page 3)

Their whole team clicks very nicely, but it is just a question whether they can get going against the more experienced and heavier men of Knox. This team has set quite a record in Faculty Cup campaigns. It is three years since they have been defeated. During the present season they have scored 13 goals and have been scored on but once. Seven members of the present team are members of the original team which won the cup three years ago, namely, Grant Irving, goalie par excellence; Hugh Davidson, and Bill Jack, defence; Don Jack, Dave Rowland and Bill West, half backs, and Doug Davidson, centre forward.

These are all outstanding players and are quite able to wreck the goal-ward attempts of any team. Dave Rowland starred in the Senior Mercantile League last season and is considered the most efficient centre half around the university.

But despite this strong defence U.C. believe they can make Irving realize he has been in a ball game and to his sorrow. Knox men are just as resolved to keep the ball down in the Red and White end of the field.

No One Ducked, Yet Masquerade Is Satisfactory In Retrospect

By E. J. Delorme

Masquerade. Gala. Lights, shadows, women, perfume, music, food, wine, colour, laughter and carnival. In fact, everything but your own girl. But you can't have everything. She should have been all right. That's why the committee were there in full dress.

Do you recall the room where they didn't know the dance was over until the janitor came around? The disappointment of those couples who sat in the gallery of the pool all night and didn't see anyone fall in. The contingent of internees who were said to contribute considerably to the atmosphere of the evening. The man who accidentally dropped a full quart out of the window of the library and ran down to catch it. He was dressed, according to report, in a plaid skirt with tassels.

The hoop roll to Childs. The deluxe cabs that represented a certain great public utility. The driver who refused an asparagus tip with unnecessary bitterness. The human misce who hung his coat on your rented head-gear. The girl who said, "Sandwiches? Oh, I'll have just a club sandwich. Yes, that's what I said." The people who stood behind you waiting for your table and watched you as you tried to eat raw oysters. The shrinking-violet engineers. The ironic greeting of the morning newspapers as you emerged into the street. "Here you are! Big hold-up! Here you are!" The mental retort, "Thanks, just had one."

The voyage home to the tune of "Slumber on, my little Gypsy sweetheart." The saying good-night soberly and tripping over a prize potted plant on the way down the steps. The dawn stag party. The afternoon after. And the one after that.

Well, all in all, it was better than an hour-glass demonstration.

Medettes Try Hard to Stop the Team-work Displayed by Red and White

U.C. Juniors made sure of a tie in their group by defeating Meds 38 to 15 in their last scheduled game last night. Although Meds were decisively outclassed, they tried hard all the way and at times the play was fairly close. U.C. was able to work out their plays quite well, and flashed some speedy combination. Bessie Lowry was outstanding on the Red and White forward line and ran in 22 points. Margaret MacEachern accounted for the 15 Medette points, and Elaine Cunningham showed up well on the defence.

Meds—Margaret MacEachern, Margaret Bickle, Marge Davis, forwards; Ruth Bradley, Elaine Cunningham, defence; Chris Fraser, jumping centre; subs, Effie Winchester, Charlotte Small.

U.C.—Anne Cornfield, Anne Ramm, Bessie Lowry, forwards; Lorraine Harvey, Jean Bell, Marjory Wright, defence; sub, Muriel Atkin.

ST. MIKE'S CLASH WITH JR. SCHOOL (Continued from Page 3)

since Victoria were put out in the semi-finals by St. Mike's last week.

Both teams are confident of winning and are putting every effort in their workouts in order to emerge from the heap of interfaculty teams that swamped the season. Junior S.P.S. have swept aside all opposition in their league games this season and have proven to all that they can more than hold their own even against the senior teams in the school.

With such stars as Hewitt, Hallett and Mitchell, and behind the sensational booting of Lichty, the Engineers bid fair to overcome the more experienced Saints. Lichty has been booting the oval in great fashion all season and has been responsible for many of the School's points this year. After completing the regular schedule without a loss, Junior School disposed of Meds in the semi-final by 7-4. Lichty's kicking was a feature of the game. Although they only moved the yardsticks on five occasions, School had much the better of the kicking exchanges.

On the other hand, St. Mike's, who, in former years, took part in the Little Big Four, have been concentrating all their attention on winning the interfaculty honours this year. The Irish have run up large scores in all their games this year including many exhibition fixtures and fought their way into the playoffs by virtue of a 7-3 victory over Victoria last week. Nolan Schmidt, Sheehy and Cerre have turned in good performances while the rest of the team is a well balanced outfit. St. Mike's are consistent ground gainers both through the line and on end runs and the game may develop into an open field running affair. The game gets under way at two-thirty.

and years of experimental work required to accomplish such hydraulic feats, which are responsible for supplying the wheels of industry. Among these slides was a photo of the world's four largest pumps, situated near Dresden in Germany. The professor confined himself entirely to hydraulic developments in Europe.

REPORTED DEFAULT OF SENIOR MEDS INCORRECT

Owing to a misunderstanding it was incorrectly stated in yesterday's "Varsity" that Senior S.P.S. won their water polo game from Senior Meds by default. A default puts a team out of competition for three years and instead of incurring this suspension, Meds used three intercollegiate players. Meds won the game 7 goals to 1, but the ineligibility of three players cancels their score and makes Senior School winners by the score of 1 to 0.

under the influence of certain graduates with conservative tendencies, he stated. The danger of the larger faculties controlling the presidential elections could be minimized by adopting a system similar to that used in the U.S.A. to nominate the president of that country, he suggested.

J. W. Binning, Victoria, considered that the possibility of a college or a group of colleges controlling the election of an undergraduate president of the S.A.C. would be no greater than that of their controlling the election of a graduate president.

Three S.P.S. students emphatically declined to make any statements to "The Varsity."

DIETITIANS DEFEATED BY STRONG U.C. TEAM

An Off Night Gives Opponents Chance to Count Up Large Score

U.C. seniors overwhelmed Household Science last night by a score of 53 to 11. The Red and White showed almost a complete reversal of form from their last exhibition against Jr. Vic. They displayed great strength on the forward line, and were strong on the defence. Household Science were over-anxious and lost many chances to score through too-hasty shooting. Louise Crouch and Wilma Hazlett were particularly effective on the U.C. forward line, and Audrey Stevens scored most of the Dietitians' points.

MAIL FEARS PAID COACHES

Telegram Says Team Was "Too Weak and Had no Fight"

Three out of four of the downtown papers commented editorially yesterday in favour of the stand taken by A. C. Cochrane, Sports Editor of "The Varsity" on the need for coaching reform at the University of Toronto.

On the same page on which the editorial is quoted in full in a news story, J. P. Fitzgerald, sports editor of the Evening Telegram, makes the following comment in his daily column:

"Varsity", the University of Toronto publication, has its annual diatribe for a professional rugby coach. Far be it from this column to butt into the domestic affairs of Varsity rugby, other than to remark that the net result this year was certainly one of the weakest teams in years, and to add insult to injury they had no fight in them."

With the full text of the editorial printed in a prominent position and headed by Mr. Cochrane's name on the same page, W. A. Hewitt, sports editor of the Daily Star, in his sports column says

"The students' paper at the University of Toronto advocates a paid coach for the football team with a five-year contract. There is no doubt that there is more good football material at Varsity than in any other organization in Canada, but the present system of coaching does not permit it being properly developed. The honorary coaches who have been in charge in recent years have done very well considering their opportunities, but "Varsity" believes the time has arrived to change the system. A round-table conference by the U. of T. directorate and friendly critics might evolve something of definite value to University sport."

The sports column of the Mail and Empire has the following to say:

"A. C. Cochrane, sports editor of The Varsity, in yesterday's issue blames the lack of success of the University of Toronto football teams on the coaching, or rather the system of coaching, that has been in vogue at Varsity. He advocates a paid coach with a five-year contract which, he says, would give the man placed in charge a chance to get results. Mr. Cochrane is tramping on dangerous ground when he mentions anything of a professional nature up around Varsity, at least in some quarters. In (Continued on Page 2)

S.A.C. Refuses The Resignation Of Kenny Tendered at Meeting

Says "No Hell"

"I wish to have it known publicly that I did not say 'hell' in giving my opinion of 'The Varsity' as quoted in to-day's paper," George Watson told "The Varsity" yesterday. "Amends ought to be made," he said.

"They are part of a student's education," answered W. S. Ferguson, head of the Department of Accounting, when asked for his opinion on extra-curricular activities, including clubs, rugby, fraternities and dances. "A student can spend too much time on them and he can spend too much—that is, just enough. It's a training for the student's judgment to know how far to go with them."

In the opinion of Professor W. J. McAndrew, Registrar of University College, "the strong man has a sense of proportion. Some of the most likeable fellows I have ever had in my classes were athletes. Stollery always got his year. So did Peguener. Murray Snyder always got his examinations, and he participated in two major sports—hockey and football. If people divided their time a little more wisely, there would be fewer with grade C—and lower. No two people will waste their time in exactly the same way. The average student could afford to do a little more reading."

To the same question, Professor Jeannet of the French Department of University College responded, after a moment's thought: "I'm afraid I haven't an idea on the subject."

Lengthy Discussion as to the Legality of President's Position

By a vote of 15 to 7, the Men's Student Administrative Council, on a motion, refused to accept the resignation of Melvin Kenny as president, which he presented at the commencement of the meeting in the Hart House debates room yesterday.

A lengthy discussion preceded the vote on the motion, in which an amendment, questioning the constitutionality of Mr. Kenny holding the office of president, was ruled out of order and on appeal the ruling of the chair was sustained by a vote of 14 to 9. Owing to the fact that it was an adjourned meeting, "The Varsity" is unable to print how each individual member voted.

"As long as any doubt of my eligibility or validity remains in the mind of any member of the Council, it is my preference not to act as president," stated Mr. Kenny in placing his resignation before the meeting. D. B. Murray, as vice-president, then assumed the chair and Mel Kenny retired from the meeting.

A motion to refuse the resignation of Mr. Kenny was then moved by E. B. Joliffe of Victoria, discussion of which occupied the major part of the meeting. The question as to whether Mr. Kenny had the right to resign when he had never been legally seated, was raised by A. E. F. Allan, the editor of "The Varsity".

In reply to this it was brought up that for the last five years the constitution has been construed so as to permit a post-graduate, not actually registered at the School of Graduate Studies, to act as president and it was therefore maintained that by British legal law he was eligible by precedent.
